Gov. White said figures prepared by the Tuskegee Institute for Negroes showed that Mississippi had no lynchings last year. One doubtful case in Jones County was described as a homicide.

Lynch Probe Action Rests With Jurors

Montgomery Advertiser 2-6-37

Abbeville Sheriff, Father Heard During All-Day Investigation Of Case

J. Hubert Farmer told The Advertiser by telephone last night that the Henry County special Grand Jury would reconvene at 9 a.m., today, with a report expected, probably about noon.

ABBEVILLE, ALA., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Whether Henry County will take court action against mob members who lynched a 19-year-old negro this week, rested with a grand jury tonight following an all-day investigation.

Summoned into special session on orders from Gov. Graves, the jurors finished interviewing witnesses during the afternoon. Later it was reported unofficially members were "ready to begin drawing their report."

Sheriff Louis Corbett, who said he recognized several members of the 50-man mob when the negro was taken from jail here Monday night, was among the last witnesses called. He had no comment afterward, but previoulsy said:

"I'll identify those I recognized for a grand jury or in court."

The sheriff, threatened with impeachment proceedings by Gov. Graves, said after the negro's bullet-riddled body was found hanging from a tree Tuesday that he and his father, Jailer J. N. Corbett, were held prisoners by the armed mob while members forced open his cell with a crowbar.

Jailer Corbett went before the jury prior to his son's visit to the closely-guarded investigation room, as did two witnesses from Tumbleton community, where the negro, Wes Johnson, was accused of attacking a white woman last Saturday.

As the jurors convened, they were admonished by Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead "to sift not only circumstances about the lynching but to make a "sweeping, thorough and detailed investigation of the conduct of each and every officer charged with the duty of taking steps to prevent the lynching, including the judge of this court."

"Such crimes," Judge Halstead said, are a challenge to constituted authority and society."

He told the jury to "let the return to the court speak the truth as you have found it."

Among witnesses summoned before the jurors was Capt. Potter Smith of the Alabama Highway Patrol, on whose private report Gov. Graves based his special grand jury session order.

Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael did not file threatened impeachment proceedings against Sheriff Corbett today at Montgomery, although he said Thursday he had been ordered to do so by Gov. Graves.

ABBEVILLE LYNCHING PROBE NEARING END

Birmingham Ala. Post 2-6-37

Sheriff And His Father Are Questioned By Jury

ABBEVILLE, Feb. 6.—(Special.)—The special Henry County Grand Jury investigating the lynching of Wes Johnson, 18-year-old Negro, was expected to return as many as 15 indictments today.

Sheriff R. L. Corbett, of Abbeville, and his father, Jailer J. N. Corbett, were questioned by the jury yesterday. Both have said they were held prisoners in the jail while a mob of about 50 men took Johnson late Monday.

The Negro was accused of attacking a white woman last Saturday. His bullet riddled body was found near the scene of the alleged attack early Tuesday.

Capt. Potter Smith of the State Highway Patrol, Gov. Bibb Graves' special investigator in the case, and a number of citizens of Tumbleton, where the attack is said to have occurred, were summoned by the jury.

With indictments expected today, doubt was expressed in some quarters that a petit jury would convict.

Jury Fails To Return Bill In Lynch Death

Henry County Sheriff's Conduct Not Probed; Crime Is 'Unsolved'

ABBEVILLE, ALA., Feb. 6.—(AP)—The lynching of a 19-year-old negro farm hand went down today as an "unsolved crime" when a Henry County Grand Jury failed to return indictments in a special investigation ordered by Gov. Graves.

Besides reporting its failure to indict, the jury said it did not investigate conduct of Sheriff J. L. Corbitt but stated "officers of the court performed their duty promptly and fearlessly."

That part of the Grand Jury's report dealing with the Sheriff, stated: "Inasmuch as impeachment proceedings have already been ordered against the Sheriff of our county, we deemed it inadvisable to investigate his conduct—what he did or did not do to protect the prisoner, Wes Johnson, and to prevent his being taken from the county jail and killed and we therefore have nothing to report on this matter the one way or the other."

The negro, Wes Johnson, was taken from the Henry County jail here last Monday by an armed mob, estimated at 50 men. His bullet-riddled body was found hanging from a tree Tuesday in nearby Tumbleton community where Johnson was accused of assaulting a white woman three days earlier.

Gov. Graves, declaring at Montgomery that "lynch law shall not prevail in Alabama," ordered the special Grand Jury investigation and directed Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael to file impeachment proceedings against Sheriff Corbitt on grounds of "neglect of duty."

L. F. Hall, a former State senator returned the report as foreman of the jury, which promptly was dismissed by Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead, who charged it yesterday lynch law was "a challenge to constituted authority."

Among witnesses called by the jury was Sheriff Corbitt, who previously stated he recognized several members of the mob and would "identify them before a Grand Jury or in court." He remained before the jury 20 minutes.

The Sheriff, maintaining he "did all in my power" to prevent the mob getting the negro, had no comment to make on his jury appearance.

Following finding of the body Tuesday, Sheriff Corbitt said the mob appeared unexpectedly Monday night and held him and his father Jailer J. N. Corbitt, prisoners while members forced the negro's cell door with a crow-bar.

Attorney General Starts On Impeachment Papers

Inquiry last night brought the information that work has already been started on preparation of the impeachment proceedings that by direction of Gov. Graves will be filed by Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael in the Alabama Supreme Court, against Sheriff J. L. Corbitt, of Henry County. It is expected that preparation of the action will be completed, and the proceedings formally filed before the end of the present week.

In his letter to the Attorney General on Feb. 4, directing that the action be brought against the Henry sheriff, the Governor cited that during the night of Monday, Feb. 1, Wesley Johnson, a prisoner, was taken from the Henry County jail by unauthorized persons, and put to death.

It appeared from information received by him and from an examination which he caused to be made of the occurrence, the Chief Executive said in his letter, that the Henry County Sheriff was guilty of neglect, as sheriff, as a result of which the prisoner was unlawfully taken from the county jail and put to death; or was guilty of a grave fault in the conduct of his office of sheriff, as a result of which the prisoner was taken fro mthe county jail and put to death; or was guilty of willful neglect of duty in this matter; or that his acts in this connection "show that he is incompetent to discharge the duties of his office, as sheriff."

Immediately after the lynching was reported to him last Tuesday, Gov. Graves directed Chief Walter K. McAdory of the State Highway Patrol, to detail officers of that department to make a complete investigation of the occurrence. Capt. Potter Smith, Sergt. J. W. McClung, special investigator, and Sergt. T. J. Carlisle were assigned to that duty. Wednesday afternoon, Capt. Smith reported to the Governor and the Attorney General. The following morning the Governor directed the Attorney General to bring the impeachment action against the sheriff.

Following the convening of the Henry County Grand Jury in special session at Abbeville, Capt. Smith and Sergts. McClung and Carlisle appeared before that body.

State, County Begin Probe Of Lynching

Bullet-Riddled Body Of Negro Found On Tree Limb Near Headland

2-3-37

HEADLAND, ALA., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The lynching of an 18-year-old negro farm hand, accused of attacking a white woman, brought anti-mob action from two official sources today within a few hours after the victim's bullet-ridden body was found swinging from a tree near here.

The lynching was the first reported in the nation in 1937.

Sheriff Louis Corbett, who said he recognized some of the 50 men who took Wes Johnson from Henry County jail at nearby Abbeville last night, talked of a special Grand Jury investigation with Circuit Court officials at Dothan.

Gov. Graves, at Montgomery, ordered Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael to make "a special and thorough investigation," and directed the State Highway Patrol to assist the Attorney General all possible.

"The Attorney General," said the Governor, "is directed to file impeachment proceedings against any officer if he finds such proceedings warranted. Alabama, so long as I am Governor, never will tolerate mob rule."

No arrests had been made tonight.

Johnson was taken from Abbeville jail by the mob arriving in about 25 automobiles.

Sheriff Corbett said he and his father, Jailer J. N. Corbett, were held prisoners until the mob forced the negro's cell and drove away.

Apparently, officers said, the negro was shot before he was hanged, not far from the place of the alleged attack in Tumbleton community Saturday.

Johnson was arrested Sunday night.

The young matron, according to information given officers, was attacked by an assailant entering her home while she was alone. The negro worked on a farm in Tumbleton community.

Sheriff Corbett said the armed mob, which appeared unexpectedly, used a crow bar to force open the negro's cell. He said the mob threatened him when he refused to turn the negro over to them.

Probate Judge J. P. Mitchell said the woman allegedly attacked was reported under care of a physician today. He said the woman was the wife of a farmer of Tumbleton community, but did not give her name.

Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead, at Dothan, said late today he was awaiting a coroner's statement before deciding whether to call a special Grand Jury investigation of the lynching.

The statistical department of Tuskegee Institute at Tuskegee, Ala., which keeps records of lynchings, said the killing of Johnson was the first report of a lynching it had received in 1937. The department's 1936 report showed nine lynchings in the United States, none of which was in Alabama.

Governor Orders Full Probe Of Lynching

Though it was still uncertain at a late hour last night whether the Henry County grand jury will be called to investigate the lynching Monday night near Headland, of Wes Johnson, negro, following his arrest on a charge of criminally assaulting a white woman—prospects were, according to reports purporting to come from an official source, that such a call would be issued, and that the grand jury will be convened at Abbeville Thursday morning.

Advised of press dispatches announcing the lynching, which reached him at about noon yesterday, Gov. Graves immediately requested Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael to ascertain if impeachment proceedings should be brought against Sheriff Louie Corbett, of Henry County. The chief executive at the same time stated he was placing the State Highway Patrol at the Attorney General's disposal to make an investigation. Mr. Carmichael said later, that should facts developed justify it, he will file impeachment action in the Alabama Supreme Court.

By direction of the governor that he assign members of his department to investigate the lynching and report to the Attorney General under whose supervision they will function during the assignment—Chief Walter K. McAdory, of the State Highway Patrol, detailed to that duty, Capt. Potter Smith, Sergt. J. W. McClung, special investigator, and Sergt. T. J. Carlisle—all of whom arrived at Abbeville during the late afternoon. They are expected to make their first report some time today.

On receipt of information that the lynching had occurred, the Governor called Sheriff Corbett and had a brief conversation with him by long distance telephone. The sheriff told him, it was understood, that he was over powered by a band of some 50 men, who battered down the door, entered the jail, took the negro from the cell where he had been placed following his arrest, and carried him away with them.

Monroeville, Ala., Journal
February 4, 1937

State And County Begin Probe Of Lynching

The lynching of an 18-year-old negro farm hand, accused of attacking a white woman, brought anti-mob action from two official sources Tuesday within a few hours after the victim's bullet-ridden body was found swinging from a tree near Headland.

The lynching was the first reported in the nation in 1937.

Sheriff Louis Corbett, who said he recognized some of the 50 men who took Wes Johnson from Henry County jail at nearby Abbeville Monday night, talked of a special Grand Jury investigation with Circuit Court officials at Dothan.

Gov. Graves, at Montgomery, ordered Atty. Gen. A. A. Carmichael to make "a special and thorough investigation," and directed the State Highway Patrol to assist the Attorney General all possible.

"The Attorney General", said the Governor, "is directed to file impeachment proceedings against any officer if he finds such proceedings warranted. Alabama, so long as I am Governor, never will tolerate mob rule."

No arrests had been made Tuesday night.

Johnson was taken from Abbeville jail by the mob arriving in about 25 automobiles.

Sheriff Corbett said he and his father, Jailer J. N. Corbett, were held prisoners until the mob forced the negro's cell and drove away.

Apparently, officers said, the negro was shot before he was hanged,

(1)

Lanett, Ala. Times
February 24, 1937

"The filing of impeachment proceedings against an Alabama sheriff as the result of the lynching of a nineteen-year-old negro last week was an such variance with the customary procedure in such cases that it attracted nationwide attention. We congratulate Governor Graves for his quick action in summoning a special grand-jury session to investigate the crime but, in the light of past experience, we shall be surprised if anything happens to the members of the mob."—The New Republic.

Lynchings-1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Alabama.

5593

Dothan, Ala. Eagle
March 10, 1937

HENRY SHERIFF KEEPS SILENCE ON IMPEACHER

"Nothing to Say" Corbitt Reply to Query On Proceedings

HEARING MAY 3

Removal Writ Filed At Graves Behest

Sheriff J. L. Corbitt of Henry County had "nothing to say" Wednesday, declining to comment on impeachment proceedings on file against him in the Alabama supreme court at Montgomery at behest of Gov. Bibb Graves as sequel to the lynching Feb. 2 of Wes Johnson, 18-year-old Negro at Tumbleton.

The sheriff, reached at Abbeville by telephone declined to make any statement; hearing on the proceedings has been set for May 3.

The Negro was being held in the Henry County jail charged with assaulting a white woman Jan. 30.

The impeachment proceedings were filed late Tuesday by Attorney General A. A. Carmichael at the direction of Governor Graves.

A Henry County grand jury investigated the lynching but returned no indictments. The impeachment proceedings specifically charged Sheriff Corbitt with "neglect; grave fault in conduct of office, and wilful neglect."

Sheriff Corbitt said, shortly after the Negro's bullet-riddled body was found hanging from a tree in the Tumbleton community, that he "did all in my power to protect the prisoner."

Several members of the armed mob of approximately 50 men were recognized by him, the sheriff said, adding he would "name them before the grand jury or in court." He was among witnesses called before the grand jury that returned no indictments.

Sheriff Corbitt said the mob [illegible] and his deputies [illegible] and said them prisoners while the Negro's jail cell was forced with a crowbar.

The impeachment petition, covering more than 25 legal pages and couched in technical terms was in general language and repeated routine accusations to each of the three charges.

It termed the crime with which Johnson was charge as one "likely to provoke popular indignation and charged the sheriff took no unusual precautions to protect the Negro.

It further criticized failure of officers to remove the prisoner to a jail in another County, and termed the Henry County jail at Abbeville "not safe for the protection of a prisoner from mob violence."

The Negro's body was found hanging to a tree a few hundred yards from the home of the young matron whom he reputedly confessed assaulting.

NEW JURY WILL PROBE LYNCHING

Present One Is Deadlocked; Judge Is Determined To Obtain Indictments

5-14-37

By United Press.

DOTHAN, May 14.—A grand jury reportedly deadlocked on murder indictments drawn against leaders of a lynch mob, was expected to be discharged today and a new panel drawn. Birmingham, Ala.

In one of the most determined drives in the history of the South to obtain indictments against leaders of a lynch mob, Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead of Henry County said he would instruct the new jury to investigate the lynching several weeks ago of Wes Johnson, young Negro who was accused of an attack on a white girl.

The present grand jury has been deadlocked nearly a week. It reportedly stood 11 to 7 in favor of indicting leaders of the mob, but under Alabama law the vote of not less than 12 members of the jury of 18 is necessary to indict.

Judge Halstead was understood to have written Atty.-Gen. A. A. Carmichael asking him to enter the investigation as a prosecutor.

Johnson was taken from the county jail at Abbeville by a mob of more than 50 white men. Sheriff J. L. Corbitt said he was overpowered and helpless in the face of the mob.

Gov. Bibb Graves, who has urged grand jury action, asked impeachment of the sheriff for negligence and hearings on charges filed by the attorney-general have been set for June 3.

JURY NAMING DELAYED IN ALABAMA LYNCHING

DOTHAN, Ala., May 14.—(UP) Impanelling of a new grand jury to investigate the lynching of a negro here last February today was delayed indefinitely pending a conference between Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead and Attorney General A. A. Carmichael.

Halstead said he was waiting to hear from the attorney general before taking action. He previously had announced that the present grand jury, reportedly deadlocked on indictments against the lynch mob, would be dismissed and a new one drawn.

State To Ignore Grand Jury In Henry County

Attorney General Says Sheriff's Ouster Will Be Pushed Vigorously

5-21-37

Recommendation contained in the recent report of the Henry County grand jury, that impeachment proceedings against Sheriff J. L. Corbitt, of that county, be dismissed, will have no effect whatever upon the petition which is set for hearing before the Alabama Supreme Court on June 3.

After a conference last night with Gov. Graves, Atty. Gen. Albert A. Carmichael announced the Governor at whose request the impeachment proceedings was filed, had directed him to pursue and prosecute the proceedings vigorously, and that he will do so.

The action was brought following removal from the county jail at Abbeville and lynching by a mob, of Wesley Johnson, negro farm hand, held on a charge of criminally assaulting a white woman.

As to the grand jury's recommendation, Gov. Graves said yesterday: "Nothing that a grand jury can say, in my opinion, can affect jurisdiction of the State Supreme Court, before which the impeachment proceedings already have been filed. It appears up to the courts now, in my opinion."

Following his conference with the Governor, the attorney general issued the following statement:

His Statement

"I have conferred with Gov. Graves about the recent report of the Grand Jury in Henry County. Gov. Graves knew about the Grand Jury report at the time of our conversation. The Gov. directs me to pursue and prosecute the impeachment proceedings in the Supreme Court vigorously. To say that I will do this is putting it mildly.

"Just here, let me say this: Immediately after the lynching, Gov. Graves conducted a most careful investigation of the lynching. While the Governor was conducting an investigation I was also conducting an investigation. After a most exhaustive and painstaking investigation, we were both convinced that the sheriff ought to be impeached. If Gov Graves had not been thoroughly convinced that the sheriff ought to be impeached, the Governor would never have directed me to institute impeachment proceedings. The Governor does not carelessly, and without much investigating, direct the impeachment of an officer. My personal investigation of the circumstances and conditions under which the lynching took place convinced me beyond doubt that impeachment proceedings should be instituted. The recent report of the Grand Jury will not have the slightest effect on the impeachment proceedings now pending in the Supreme Court of Alabama. The impeachment proceedings will proceed and will be prosecuted with as much vigor as the office of the attorney general is capable of putting forth.

"The framers of our Constitution did not accidentally provide that a sheriff should be impeached by the Supreme Court.

Feels Keenly

"I want to take this occasion to say that the Governor of Alabama and the attorney general of Alabama feel very keenly about this matter; that we are most anxious that the outside world know that the Alabama State officials who are responsible in law for prosecuting cases of this character, are doing their duty and will continue to do it.

"To say that lynching has anything to do with protecting womanhood in Alabama is pure poppycock. The answer to this is that a petit jury would require about 30 seconds to reach an electrocution verdict for the perpetrator of such a crime as this. Those unlawful hoodlums who imagine themselves heroes when taking part in lynchings have a distorted idea of patriotism. Only lawless hoodlums and the enemies of government take part in mob law. As the chief law enforcement officer of this State I condemn it and make known that as long as I am the attorney general of this State, those persons who think they are more important and powerful than the law and who take the law in their own hands, will be prosecuted promptly and most vigorously, and in this I want to say that I will have the entire resources of this great State at my command."

LYNCH GRAND JURY BALKS PROSECUTION

Second Body Was Named to Alabama Case.

ABBEYVILLE, Ala., May 19.—(UP)—One of the most determined drives in southern history to obtain murder indictments against lynch mob leaders ended in a report of "no bills" by a grand jury tonight.

Investigating the lynching of Wes Johnson, negro accused of attacking a white woman, the grand jury reported to Circuit Judge Halstead it found no grounds for handing up indictments.

The jury recommended further that Sheriff J. L. Corbitt, whose impeachment was sought by Governor Bibb Graves, be exonerated of any blame in the lynching. A previous jury, reportedly deadlocked 11 to 7 in favor of indictments, was discharged when it was unable to make a report. Convening of the second grand jury, impaneled today after failure of the first to act, attaches said, virtually is without precedent in such investigations in the south.

Johnson was taken from custody of Corbitt by a mob of about 50 white men early this spring and hanged.

Governor Graves reportedly was instrumental in impanelling of the second jury when the first one failed to report indictments.

Grand Jury Clears Sheriff in Lynching

ABBEVILLE, Ala., May 20. (AP)—Recommendations for dismissal of impeachment proceedings against Sheriff J. L. Corbitt, charged with negligence in the lynching of Wes Johnson, Negro, had been made today by a Henry county grand jury.

The proceedings were brought against the official before the state supreme court by Attorney General A. A. Carmichael upon instructions from Gov. Bibb Graves. Sheriff Corbitt was charged with "cowardice and negligence" when a mob of approximately 100 armed men lynched the Negro accused of attacking a white woman.

The grand jury investigating the three-month old lynching yesterday in making its report to Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead, reported it had considered all available evidence in the case and returned a "no bill."

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution
May 20, 1937

LYNCH GRAND JURY BALKS PROSECUTION

Second Body Was Named to Alabama Case.

ABBEYVILLE, Ala., May 19.—(UP)—One of the most determined drives in southern history to obtain murder indictments against lynch mob leaders ended in a report of "no bills" by a grand jury tonight.

Investigating the lynching of Wes Johnson, negro accused of attacking a white woman, the grand jury reported to Circuit Judge Halstead it found no grounds for handing up indictments.

The jury recommended further that Sheriff J. L. Corbitt, whose impeachment was sought by Governor Bibb Graves, be exonerated of any blame in the lynching. A previous jury, reportedly deadlocked 11 to 7 in favor of indictments, was discharged when it was unable to make a report. Convening of the second grand jury, impaneled today after failure of the first to act, attaches said, virtually is without precedent in such investigations in the south.

Johnson was taken from custody of Corbitt by a mob of about 50 white men early this spring and hanged.

Governor Graves reportedly was instrumental in impanelling of the second jury when the first one failed to report indictments.

Mobile, Ala., Register
May 19, 1937

New Grand Jury Probes Lynching

Inquisitorial Body To Be Organized By Court At Abbeville Today

By The United Press

ABBEYVILLE, Ala., May 18.—A new grand jury to investigate the lynching of Wes Johnson, negro accused of attacking a white woman, will be organized tomorrow at 9 a.m., Circuit Judge D. C. Halstead announced tonight.

The judge's order for impaneling of the new jury of 18 members automatically discharged a previous jury which reportedly had voted 11 to 7 to return murder indictments against unnamed leaders of the lynch band.

Under Alabama law, 12 votes are necessary before an 18-man grand jury can hand up a murder indictment.

Johnson was taken from jail by a masked mob which intimidated

Sheriff J. L. Corbitt. Corbitt's impeachment since has been asked by Atty.-Gen. A. A. Carmichael and the sheriff will appear before the Alabama Supreme Court on June 3, for a hearing.

The order for convening of the new jury was believed almost without precedent in Southern investigations of lynchings. Gov. Bibb Graves reportedly is exerting pressure for grand jury indictment of men responsible for the violence.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
May 22, 1937

A Fine Statement

There need be no doubt in anyone's mind that Gov. Graves and Atty. Gen. Carmichael are going to do everything in their power to get at the facts in the Henry County lynching case. Despite the recommendation of two Henry County Grand Juries that the case be dropped, the governor has directed the attorney general to push impeachment charges against the sheriff and leave no stone unturned in an attempt to convict those guilty.

After conferring with the governor, Mr. Carmichael issued the following statement, which deserves to be read:

I have conferred with Gov. Graves about the recent report of the Grand Jury in Henry County. Gov. Graves knew about the Grand Jury report at the time of our conversation. The governor directs me to pursue and prosecute the impeachment proceedings in the Supreme Court vigorously. To say that I will do this is putting it mildly.

Just here, let me say this: Immediately after the lynching, Gov Graves conducted a most careful investigation of the lynching. The recent report of the Grand Jury will not have the slightest effect on the impeachment proceedings now pending in the Supreme Court of Alabama. The impeachment proceedings will proceed and will be prosecuted with as much vigor as the office of the attorney general is capable of putting forth.

The framers of our constitution did not accidentally provide that a sheriff should be impeached by the Supreme Court.

I want to take this occasion to say that the governor of Alabama and the attorney general of Alabama feel very keenly about this matter; that we are most anxious that the outside world know that the Alabama state officials who are responsible in law for prosecuting cases of this character are doing their duty and will continue to do it.

To say that lynching has anything to do with protecting womanhood in Alabama is pure poppycock. The answer to this is that a Petit Jury would require about 30 seconds to reach an electrocution verdict for the perpetrator of such a crime as this. Those unlawful hoodlums who imagine themselves heroes when taking part in lynchings have a distorted idea of patriotism. Only lawless hoodlums and the enemies of government take part in mob law. As the chief law enforcement officer of this state I condemn it and make known that as long as I am the attorney general of this state, those persons who think they are more important and powerful than the law and who take the law in their own hands, will be prosecuted promptly and most vigorously, and in this I want to say that I will have the entire resources of this great state at my command.

The Age-Herald congratulates the attorney general on this forceful statement. When our public officials take determined stands like the governor and attorney general have taken in this case we may rest assured that the law will be upheld. The attorney general's statement should be read by everyone in this and other states. It is reassurance that Alabama will not tolerate lynching.

Lynching Case Re-Opened By Grand Jury Investigation

Abbeville, Ala., Herald
May 20, 1937

Judge Hal-Stead Gives StrongCharge

As entirely new venire of grand jury was summoned by Judge Halstead which convened at Abbeville on Wednesday morning reopening case the of Wess Johnson who was spirited away from the Henry County jail last February and killed. Judge Halstead gave a strong charge to the grand jury, emphasizing duty, integrity and impartial opinions in the matter of making the investigation and rendering their decision. Witnesses, both new and old, were called before the grand jury for questioning. Circuit Solicitor J. Hubert Farmer was to be in charge of the investigation, unassisted from the Attorney General's office in Montgomery.

Florida.

Lynchings - 1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5594

COMMITTEE TO PUSH
TAMPA KU KLUX PROBE

NEW YORK, Nov.--(CNA)- Incensed at the acquittal of eight former Tampa policemen involved in the kidnaping and murder of Joseph Shoemaker, white Tampa organizer of the Progressive Democrats, the Committee for the Defense of Civil Rights in Tampa announced this week its intention to conduct a national campaign for a federal investigation of Ku Klux Klan activities in this state.

Crusader News Agency

Declaring that "the murder of Joseph Shoemaker will not be solved, and its perpetrators will not be brought to justice unless public opinion inside and outside of Florida can force a federal investigation," the committee requested all progressive individuals, trade unions and organizations to send telegrams to Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., stressing the importance of an immediate investigation of the status of civil liberties in Klan-infested Florida. 11-1-37 New York Daily

The Committee pointed out that such an investigation will greatly benefit the Negro people, who more than any other group in the country have suffered from Klan terrorism. It urged Negro organizations to participate actively in the campaign.

INVESTIGATION ASKED IN TAMPA FLOGGINGS

LAKELAND, Fla., Nov. 13.—(UP)—An investigation by the senate civil liberties committee into the Tampa flogging cases was asked tonight by E. L. Callaway, former Republican candidate for governor of Florida.

Callaway's request preceded resumption of legal activity in the Tampa cases scheduled for Monday. Judge Robert T. Dewell of Bartow county criminal court is expected to hear the cases for assignment to trial in the January court term.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Florida.

5595

Florida Governor Asked to Probe Newest Lynching

NEW YORK—Governor Fred P. Cone has been asked by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the American Civil Liberties Union to institute a special investigation into the shooting and killing of Stafford Dames, Jr., on July 27th by three Miami policemen.

The N. A. A. C. P. also has asked the Mayor of Miami to direct a reopening of the case and full prosecution of the officers involved.

Testimony brought out at the coroner's inquest indicated plainly that young Dames was killed in cold blood on the thin excuse that he was attempting to enter a Catholic church where he had been altar boy for six years.

Witnesses at the inquest, all Negroes, testified that young Dames had spent the evening visiting friends, had stopped at a confectionery store testified that "within a few minutes" after the purchase of the peanuts, he heard shots. Another witness testified that he was sitting on his porch when young Dames walked from the confectionery store and that a police car drew up to the curb and the police started shooting at young Dames without saying anything. The witness declared the Dames boy started running toward h's mother's house, but the hail of bullets from the police guns cut him down practically at his mother's front porch. A colored woman testified that she saw Patrolman B. Simpson, one of the officers involved in the killing, plant a gun on Dames after the boy fell to the sidewalk. All three policemen, including a sergeant, fired at young Dames.

A neighbor of the Dames' household told the coroner's inquest that one of the policemen answered a question from Mrs. Dames by saying: "I don't know if th's is your son, but if he is, come out and see the son of a ..... die."

The physicians testified at the inquest that young Dames had been shot in the back. The assertion that he was trying to rob the church by climbing in a window is regarded as pure invention by the policemen since Dames had access to the church and did not have to climb in a window. The only rebuttal to this testimony by denial of the three officers, and yet the coroner's jury brought in a verdict exonerating them, declaring that they had killed young Dames "in the performanze of duty."

EIGHT HELD IN DEATH OF FLORIDA MAN

Joseph Shoemaker and Two Others Kidnaped, Tarred Feathered in 1935

By SANDERS S. MASON

TAMPA, Fla., 1937 Eight former policemen will face second degree murder charges when the second trial in the famous Shoemaker flogging case opens in Bartow, Fla., on October 5, States Attorney Farrior said this week.

Five of the men are former officers of the law in Tampa. Three are of Orlando, Fla.

Eleven men originally were indicted in the case which attracted nation-wide attention several years ago, but no criminal court action was filed against Manuel Menedez, former police stenographer accused as an accessory, and all charges against R. G. Tittsworth, former police chief, and Robert Chappell were dropped by prosecuting attorneys.

Hopes to Convict All

The case has been a continuous sore spot on the criminal annals of Tampa, and it is rumored Farrior is anxious to dispose of the whole thing, however the verdicts convictions in the cases.

Tittsworth and Chapell went on trial in the Poulnot kidnaping case with which the five former policemen are still charged, but were acquitted on directed verdicts by Judge Dewell.

The five tried with them who face charges in the second trial, were convicted and sentenced to four years each but the Supreme court reversed the convictions.

They are C. A. Brown, John P. Bridges, F. W. Switzer, C. W. Carlisle, and Sam E. Crosby. The three Orlando men facing trial are Edward Spivey, Arlie Gullian and James Dean.

Mr. Farrior made his announcement regarding those to be tried at the second trail in accordance with instructions from Judge Dewell, allowed the state's attorney until a month before the trial to notify denfense attorneys of the defendants.

The second trial in which Mr. Farrior announced the defendants will face charges of second degree murder in the death of Joseph Shoemaker, will be held at Bartow under a charge of venue granted by Judge Dewell for all proceedings on the motion of defense attorneys.

The case grew out of the kidnapping of three men held as prisoners in the city jail in 1935 by a group of city policemen.

The men were nabbed from the steps of the city hall as they were reputedly turned free, after a raid on their home disclosed some socialist literature.

Painfully Tortured

The three men were Eugene Poulnot, F. R. Rogers, and Joseph Shoemaker. They were taken to the woods, tarred, feathered and poked with red hot iron rods.

Shoemaker died a few days later as the results of this beating. It was believed a few days after his death that he had named Chief Tittsworth and several officers as his abductors, but this was not verified, the public of Florida demanded a conviction of these so called defenders of the law, who had grabbed these helpless men from the steps of the jail and whisked them to the outskirts of the city to attempt violence.

Behind the powerful public sentiment aroused throughout Tampa a Hillsboro county grand jury indicted the chief of police and all his cohorts. They were immediately placed under bond, the case has attracted more international publicity than this little quiet town has ever seen. Attorney Pat Whittaker, millitant youthful Tampa attorney, represents the defendants.

GOVERNOR ORDERS LYNCHING INQUIRY

Five Hooded Men Take Negro From Sheriff in Florida and Body Is Found Later

MILTON, Fla., Oct. 4. (AP)—Hooded men took a Negro prisoner from Sheriff Joe Allen of Santa Rosa county during the night and shot the Negro to death on a highway near Fort Walton in neighboring Okaloosa county.

The Negro, 30-year-old J. C. Evans, was to have been tried here today on a charge of criminally attacking a 12-year-old white boy and robbing a filling station.

It was Florida's third lynching of the year and the eighth in the South during 1937.

A coroner's jury at Crestview, Fla., said the Negro met "death at the hands of a party or parties unknown."

From his office in Tallahassee, Governor Fred P. Cone ordered a complete investigation with full punishment for the guilty parties. State Attorney E. Dixie Beggs, Jr. of Pensacola said, "We are doing all we can to solve this thing."

Sheriff Allen told the jury he and Deputy Sheriff Aubrey Martin drove to Panama City, Fla., last night to get the Negro who had been held in the Bay county jail there "six or eight weeks" to safeguard him against "high feeling."

Near midnight, Allen testified, a car forced his automobile to stop and five men wearing black hoods covered him and Deputy Martin with guns. "We want that nigger," the Sheriff said the men told him.

Leaving the deputy in the sheriff's car, the hooded men told Allen and the Negro into their automobile and drove down the road about a mile. Then they put Allen out of the car and handed him the keys to his own automobile. The sheriff walked back to his car.

About three miles from the spot where the men took the Negro, the sheriff said, he found the prisoner's body sprawled on the edge of the road. The Negro had been riddled with buckshot and hit several times with pistol bullets.

Sheriff Allen said neither he nor Deputy Martin recognized any of the five hooded men. He insisted he believed no one in Milton knew of his plan to transfer the prisoners here last night.

The Tuskegee, Ala., Institute said in addition to Florida's three lynchings this year there have been two in Mississippi and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

The lynching victim was tried and sentenced to life imprisonment on a robbery charge in Panama City Saturday. He was convicted of holding up Joe Ansley of Panama City last July 10.

It was during his transfer to Santa Rosa county for trial on the other charge that the band took him from the sheriff.

Murder Is No Crime In Florida

An outrage has just been committeed in Florida which is of national significance.

The six defendants who were convicted of murdering the labor organizer and militant Socialist, Frank Shoemaker, have just been acquitted in their second trial.

The second trial, granted by the State Supreme Court, was a farce, and a triumph for the Ku Klux Klan, whose members killed Shoemaker in cold blood in the notorious flogging and kidnaping case which stirred the country.

The judge kept out of the second trial three-quarters of the evidence which convicted the well-known killers in the first trial, permitted the Ku Kluxer's lawyers to raise an anti-labor hysteria in the courtroom, and finally directed the verdict of acquittal.

Every one in Bartow, Florida, knows who flogged Shoemaker to death in a secret night raid. But the Ku Klux Klan has managed to free its killers.

The Klan celebrates its victory by boldly warning that it will extend its violence and lawlessness against the CIO trade unions should they begin any labor organization in Florida. A New York Times dispatch quotes prominent Ku Kluxers as saying, "we will meet CIO frightfulness with Ku Klux Klan frightfulness." These words are the bloody boastings of political gangsters who are determined to keep Florida's workers, of plantation, turpentine, camp and factory, in prison-like subjection.

American labor and the American people face a serious challenge in the Ku Klux triumph in the Shoemaker verdict. organizer, no American worker who believes in unionism, is safe from attack or worse. If Shoemaker was murdered with impunity, no progressive American, no labor

Six Are Again Acquitted Of Lash Slaying

Second Tampa Case Is Ended With Directed Verdict

BARTOW, FLA., Oct. 14.—(AP)—The second of the Tampa flogging trials ended in a directed verdict of acquittal today, freeing six former policemen of charges they killed Joseph E. Shoemaker.

Defense Atty. Pat Whitaker, expressed confidence two kidnaping cases still outstanding against the six would prove similarly ineffective and said he hoped for early trials.

Shoemaker, a labor organiser, and two of his associates, Eugene F. Poulnot and Samuel J. Rogers, were abducted from a door of the Tampa police station the night of Nov. 30, 1935, taken to a woods and whipped, tarred and feathered.

Nine days later, Shoemaker died. Physicians testified pneumonia and exposure were the causes. Prosecutors filed second degree murder charges.

Judge Robert Dewell directed the verdict finding the State had failed to prove its charges that the defendants were principals in the flogging.

Testimony mentioned five of them in the abduction of Rogers and Poulnot, but the judge found no evidence linking them with the kidnaping of Shoemaker. The court held it was incumbent upon the State to show the defendants' presence, either "actual or constructive," at the scene of the crime and that "this was not done."

Five of the men were convicted last year on a charge of kidnaping Poulnot, but the State Supreme Court reversed the verdict on a technicality. They were C. A. Brown, Jr., Sam Crosby, C. W. Carlisle, F. W. Switzer and John P. Bridges. The sixth man at the present trial was Arlie Gilliam, of Orlando, Fla.

Shoemaker, Poulnot and Rogers were associated in "The Modern Democrats," a third party movement at Tampa.

Arrested by police at a meeting, they were questioned concerning communistic matters, then released. The abduction and whipping followed. Accused officers were dismissed.

Jack Shoemaker, of Knoxville, Tenn., brother of the victim, said his words when he found him in the woods were:

"I didn't know any men could be so mean."

IDENTIFY ACCUSED IN FLOGGING TRIAL

Police Captain, Patrol Driver, Ex-Officer and Reporter Pick Out 3 of 6 at Bartow, Fla.

ANOTHER TERMED KLEAGLE

Man Who Once Prosecuted Him in Similar Case Is Now Defending Him

Copyright, 1937, by NANA, Inc.

BARTOW, Fla., Oct. 11.—State Prfosecutor J. Rex Farrior produced a police captain, a patrol wagon driver, a former policeman and a newspaper reported today to identify three of the six defendants now on trial here for second degree murder as having participated more or less vigorously in the events that aided a band of men to flog Joseph Shoemaker to death in a lonely wood fourteen miles outside of Tampa.

Testimony at a previous trial of five of the present defendants was to the effect that Shoemaker, former Vermont manufacturer, who had organized the Modern Democrats to oppose the two dominant political factions of Tampa, was murdered after he refused to obey the Ku Klux Klan's orders to get out of town.

Two other leaders of the Modern Democrats flogged at the same time were Sam J. Rogers, country physician, and Eugene F. Poulnot, Florida chairman of the Workers Alliance.

Klan Link s Uncovered

All six of the defendants are former members of the Tampa Police Department. It was learned today that one of them, Arlie Gilliam, of Orlando, who traveled 100 miles to become a special deputy in the turbulent Tampa elections that preceded and precipitated the flogging, is Kleagle of the Orlando Klavern of the Ku Klux Klan.

A beady-eyed burly, ruddy man, Gilliam was once investigated in connection with a flogging incident in Volusia County near Deland, but never brought to trial.

A second time he was indicted in a flogging and acquitted. On that occasion he was prosecuted by the then State attorney, Chauncey Boyar, the 1912 Olympic weight-lifting champion. Mr. Boyar is at present defense counsel for Kleagle Gilliam and employs Gilliam on his citrus farm.

Reversals of Testimony

Today's testimony centered on what occurred at the police station. H. L. Russell, then a uniformed police officer, at present steward on a boat, testified that he saw John Bridges and Sam E. Crosby, two of the defendants, with Poulnot in the car in which the flogging victim says he was delivered to the men who flogged him, Bridges holding his hand clapped over Poulnot's mouth.

He admitted previously stating that he did not "remember any of them," but said that "the general attitude around the station house at the time was that anybody who was employed by the city of Tampa who knew anything about the case was out."

M. L. Williams, patrol-wagon driver, also admitted to having sworn falsely numerous times during both investigations, "because I had the fear I'd lose my job if I told that I knew."

What he knew, he swore today, was that he saw one of the defendants, C. W. Carlisle, special deputy and nominally an assistant tax collector, leading Poulnot out of the police station.

"Thirty or forty seconds after they got out the door, I heard hollering and screaming," he said. "I rushed out and saw Bridges holding Poulnot in the car. Poulnot was rearing and tearing."

Russell said today that he decided to tell the truth to the committees after "an obstacle" had been removed. Objections by the defense prevented him from identifying the "obstacle," but, later, Williams, under questioning by Solicitor Manuel Glover of Polk County, who is assisting Mr. Farrior, said:

"I was under fear of losing my job until R. G. Tittsworth was removed as Chief of Police. When I read in the papers that he had been dropped I hurried down and told the truth."

Tittsworth was indicted as an accessory after the fact in the flogging case, but the indictment was dismissed for "lack of evidence."

NEW EVIDENCE IN TAMPA LASHINGS

Witnesses Testify to Seeing Poulnot Forced Into Car at Police Station

PROSECUTION RESTRICTED

Court Excludes All Testimony Presented at Previous Trial Last Year

Copyright, 1937, by North American Newspaper Association, Inc.

BARTOW, Fla., Oct. 9.—A jury of six and one alternate, composed of elderly farmers, a grocer, a well-driller and an unemployed man, was impaneled today by the capsule story to which the state has been limited in its attempts to convict six former Tampa policemen of flogging Joseph Shoemaker to death after he had refused to get out of the city when told to do so by the Ku Klux Klan.

The State, by ruling of Presiding Judge R. T. Dewell, has been forced to start its case near the end of the events that occurred Nov. 30, 1935. Deciding a plea of double jeopardy, the judge has excluded all the evidence presented during the trial last year of five of the present defendants on charges of conspiring to kidnap Eugene F. Poulnot, chairman of the Florida Workers Alliance and one of the three men who were arrested, abducted, tarred and whipped the night Shoemaker was flogged to death.

Poulnot, Shoemaker and Dr. Samuel J. Rogers, a country physician who makes his living now as a tree surgeon, were leaders of The Modern Democrats, an organization composed of opponents of the two dominant political factions of Tampa.

The State prosecutor, J. Rex Farrior is a member of one of the dominant political factions while the chief defense counsel, Pat Whitaker, is a leader in the other.

Detective Chief Testifies

The jury heard D. D. Bush, chief of detectives of Tampa, and John Riegel today. Then Judge Dewell, to the bewilderment of all except the defense, recessed court until Monday because a friend of Kate Carver, the court stenographer, had been injured in an automobile accident and was calling for her.

"No gentleman can object to this act of mercy," said the judge.

Bush was the first to bring before the jury the name of C. A. Brown Jr., one of the six defendants. C. W. Carlisle, Arlie Gilliam, F. W. Switzer and John Bridges have been previously identified from the stand. The sixth defendant, Sam E. Crosby, has not figured in the testimony.

Yesterday Poulnot swore that, screaming and struggling, he had been forced out of the City Hall police station in Tampa by Carlisle and into a car, where Bridges was waiting to clap his hand over his mouth and force him into silence.

Saw Poulnot Seized, He Says

Bush testified today that while sitting in his office he heard "a hollering and ran downstairs" in time to see "Brown and Carlisle push shut the door of a car angle-parked in front of the main entrance to the station house."

Riegel declared that while in a police station on the night of Nov. 30, he heard a noise, ran outside and "seen C. W. Carlisle putting Eugene Poulnot in a car. I seen Johnny Bridges sitting in the back seat of the car holding his hand over Poulnot's mouth and Poulnot was trying to make an utterance."

After the car had driven away, Riegel continued, he saw a pair of eyeglasses on the sidewalk, picked them up and delivered them to the desk sergeant, H. Carl Tompkins, who subsequently was reported to have died as a result of a fall from a hospital window. Poulnot has testified to the loss of his glasses during the scuffle at the station, but they have disappeared.

Riegel testified that when he saw Bridges with his hand clapped over Poulnot's mouth, the policeman was wearing Badge 39 and that when he saw Bridges a few weeks later he was wearing Badge 140.

Defense counsel was attempting to develop on cross-examination how much money Riegel had received in witness and subpoena fees from the State when court recessed.

Lynchings—1937
& Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Florida

5596

Tampa Flogging Case Suffers New Setback

IT IS disappointing to learn that the supreme court of Florida has reversed the verdict of guilty against five of the eleven policemen indicted in the notorious Tampa flogging case. The sentence of four years imprisonment was set aside and a new trial ordered. The case has already dragged out for an intolerably long time, particularly as each new delay makes it less likely that any of the participants in this brutal crime will be brought to justice. Four of the indicted men have never even been tried and not one of them has spent a single day in jail. And nearly twenty months have passed since the beating of Poulnot and Rogers and what amounted to the murder of Shoemaker occurred! The supreme court deliberated for six months on the appeal of the condemned men and in the end took action apparently only because of a statewide demand that something be done. Its decision in effect puts things back where they were and the whole fight must be waged again. This method of defeating justice by delaying it has usually proved effective and only a strong and persistent public opinion can prevent its succeeding in this case. Fortunately, there are signs that such a public opinion exists and the fact that indictments against the policemen have been secured puts a strong weapon into its hands, which it will not fail to use. Meanwhile, it will be as well for individuals and groups outside Florida to recognize their responsibility. Florida is perhaps as sensitive to public opinion elsewhere as any other state and surely the nation has a stake in this case. It will be a blow to more than Florida justice if the men who were responsible for the death of Shoemaker manage to get off.

BULLETS EXAMINED IN PROBE OF LYNCHING

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 21.—(U.P.)—The bodies of two lynched negroes—Richard Hawkins and Ernst Ponder—were exhumed here today and bullets were removed from them as a step in the search for their slayers.

Ballistics experts were asked to check the slugs against others fired from guns of Tallahassee police and county officers.

PROBE FLORIDA LYNCHING

"Inside Job" Theory Expressed as Guns of Officers Are Checked

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 21.—(UP)—Authorities tonight probed the possibility of an "inside job" in the lynching of two negro prisoners Sunday, checking the pistols of law enforcement officials with slugs taken from the bullet-riddled bodies.

The latest turn in the investigation was the result of testimony by County Jailer Robert Maige at a coroner's inquest that the four men who snatched Richard Hawkins and Ernest Ponder from authorities apparently "knew their way around" the prison County Jail.

State's Attorney Orion C. Parker ordered all officers to register the calibers and serial numbers of their revolvers.

Hawkins and Ponder, held on a charge of stabbing Policeman V. F. Kelly, were taken from the jail by four men wearing paper sack masks.

PROBE BEGINS IN TWO LYNCHINGS

Florida Governor Orders Inquiry; Bodies Will Be Exhumed

By United Press.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 21.—Gov. Fred Cone ordered a "thorough investigation" today into the slaying of two Negroes by a mob. He called it "plain murder."

The bodies of the victims, hastily buried only a few hours after they had been found, were ordered exhumed. Surgeons will remove the bullets for possible use in tests to identify the pistols that fired them.

The Negroes were lynched because one was alleged to have stabbed Policeman J. Vernon Kelly when he attempted to arrest them last Sunday. They were taken from the County Jail by four masked leaders of a small mob, driven several miles from town and killed.

An inquest into their deaths was held almost as quickly as the bodies were buried. Police Chief G. Powledge and Sheriff Frank Stoutamire testified that the lynching had "surprised" them. Policeman Harry Fairbanks, who surrendered the prisoners, said he had offered no resistance, but did ask the mob leaders if they knew what they were doing.

"It looks to me like there has been a lot of carelessness around here," Governor Cone said.

Fairbanks told the coroner's inquest that he could not identify the abductors. He said he was so confused and excited he could not remember details of the mob leaders' appearance, except that they had worn overcoats or raincoats and had used paper sacks as masks. He did not obtain the license number of their automobile.

• • •

Florida Lynching Brings Southern Total To Six

By United Press.

TUSKEGEE, July 21.—Lynching of two Negroes in Tallahassee, Fla., yesterday brought the total of such slayings in the Deep South to six since Jan. 1, officials of Tuskegee Institute said today.

Only one of the six was charged with criminal assault. He was Wes Johnson, taken out of an Abbeville, Ala., jail by a mob of masked men and hanged to a tree near where he was alleged to have attacked a young white planter's wife. Sheriff J. L. Corbitt of Henry County, from whose jail he was taken, was later tried on impeachment charges by the State Supreme Court for neglect of duty but was acquitted.

Tallahassee, Fla. Democrat
July 21, 1937

OFFICERS SEND LYNCH BULLETS TO BE CHECKED

Police Guns Also Fired For Ballistics Test By an Expert

Test bullets fired from guns of every city policeman and county officer were sent to ballistic experts for comparison with pistol balls taken from bodies of two negroes lynched near here yesterday morning, Sheriff Frank Stoutamire said today.

State Attorney Orion C Parker, jr, checked the calibre and serial number of officers' pistols yesterday at a coroner's inquest as he dug into the slaying of Richard Hawkins and Ernest Ponder, who had been jailed on a charge of stabbing Patrolman V F Kelly during a robbery attempt Sunday.

Had Good Night

Meanwhile, the hospital reported that Kelly "had a good night, and is resting more comfortably today."

Sheriff Stoutamire said he had questioned every prisoner at the county jail and that only one of them reported hearing anything during the night of the lynching until they were awakened by Policeman Harry Fairbanks calling for the jailer after he had worked himself free from a gag tied around his mouth by the lynching band.

That prisoner said he had heard a little commotion, but didn't think anything of it, the sheriff reported.

Bullets in Evidence

Four bullets picked up by the sheriff and other officers near the bodies of the negroes about three miles from Tallahassee a few yards off the Jacksonville highway were shown as evidence at the inquest yesterday.

Six other bullets—three from each negro's body—were obtained yesterday afternoon when the bodies were exhumed and an additional autopsy was performed by Dr George Gwynn.

County Judge W May Walker recessed the coroner's jury of six men yesterday until further evidence could be supplied by the state attorney.

Would Identify Four

Parker, at the inquest, was seeking to identify four men who forced Fairbanks, night police sergeant, to supply them with keys opening jail doors. Fairbanks said the men stuck a gun into his back and told him they wanted "no —— foolishness."

Keys which opened jail doors to deliver the two negroes, were obtained from police headquarters.

Police Chief Gid Powledge told the coroner's jury that only policemen and sheriff's officers knew the police headquarters had a set of keys. The keys were used, he said, so that city prisoners could be placed in the combination county-city jail at night without waking Jailer Robert Maige.

Parker questioned city and county officers, called before the coroner's jury, about the caliber and numbers of their guns, and some who did not have their guns at the time were todi to bring in the information.

Sheriff Stoutamire testified he picked up four bullets at the spot where the riddled bodies of the negroes were found. Two, he said, were .38 caliber, and two were .32 caliber. The sheriff said he carried a .32 caliber revolver, and Chief Powledge said they policemen had .38 caliber pistols.

The coroner's jury met after Governor Fred P Cone said:

"This was not a lynching. It was murder."

Governor Cone said he would have special investigations made, and added: "I'm going to prosecute anybody we get to the limit of the law."

Parker said he checked on police pistols "so that if policemen are implicated we can establish it and if they are not implicated the evidence will clearly exonerate. We don't have many clues to work on, but we are doing the best we can and a report will be furnished to Governor Cone. We will have another session of the coroner's jury if and when we get some additional evidence.

"At the present time I have no idea who committed this deed."

Fairbanks said four men entered police headquarters where he was alone, pointed a gun at him and said: "We want the jail keys and we don't want any —— foolishness."

When they told him that, he said, "I got up and gave them to them." He offered no resistance. Nor did he call for help when the men made him use the keys to open the jail door and get other keys which would open a series of doors between the jail office and the cell blocks where the two negroes were held.

So quietly did the men operate that Robert Maige, county jailer, and Harry Morrison, fingerprint officer, asleep in the building, were not awakened until Fairbanks began calling for help after the negroes were removed. Fairbanks said he had not called out earlier because of the gun pointed at him and because the men bound and gagged him before leaving.

The negroes, he said, offered no outcry as they were taken from their cells.

Fairbanks said he saw the negroes in their cells Monday and "knew about where they were" when the men forced him to open the doors. He went to the jail he said to see the men. He is the city fingerprint officer, but he did not make fingerprints of them.

"Did you have any trouble finding them?" asked Parker of Fairbanks.

"No, sir," came the answer.

Maige testified a person would require "quite a bit" of knowledge about the key and lock system to get into and out of the jail. The mobsters, he said, used Fairbanks' knowledge of the key system to get the prisoners. He also said several other city policemen were familiar with the locks and the keys.

Sheriff Stoutamire and Maige said eight doors, operated by six keys, had to be opened to get into the negroes' cells.

Fairbanks said he could not identify any of the men who accosted him, nor did he know the license number on the car in which they took him about seven blocks from police headquarters to the jail.

Sheriff Stoutamire and Chief Powledge said they had no idea of the identity of the killers.

Bodies of the negroes were buried by sheriff's deputies here yesterday without ceremony.

Florida Sheriff Ends Mob Probe

TALLAHASSEE, FLA., Aug. 2—(AP)—Sheriff Frank Stoutamire said today the failure of Federal ballistic experts to connect police guns with the bullets that killed two negro mob victims virtually ended his investigation of the slayings.

The sheriff received a telegram from the Federal bureau of investigation in Washington stating sample bullets from the guns of every Tallahassee policeman did not show the same markings as bullets taken from bodies of the two negroes.

State Attorney Orion C. Parker, Jr. was not available for comment on the investigation he has been directing.

Police Sergeant Harry Faircloth said he was forced by four masked men early on the morning on July 20 to provide keys to the county jail where the negroes were held on a charge of stabbing Patrolman V. F. Kelly.

The negroes were taken to a spot alongside the Jacksonville-Tallahassee highway and shot to death.

County Judge W. May Walker said he would call the coroner's jury into session again if Parker requested it, to consider the ballistic report.

Tampa, Fla., Times
August 7, 1937

LYNCHERS UNPUNISHED.
(From the Sarasota Herald)

Because a coroner's jury adjourned without fixing blame for the Tallahassee lynching two weeks ago, the state investigation probably will fold up. Orion C. Parker, state attorney assigned by Governor Cone to investigate the crime, gave an idea of what may be expected when he remarked "that just about ends this thing."

Without all the records in view, and compelled to base an opinion on published accounts of the investigation, it must appear to all lay observers that the state has at best made but a half hearted effort to discover the perpetrators of this crime. The tendency seems to have been to keep it quiet, to hush it up, to let as little as possible about it get abroad.

Despite Mr. Parker's assertion, the adjournment of the coroner's jury without deciding who killed the two Negroes, does not "just about end the whole thing." It leaves a blot upon the state and a stigma upon the state's police agencies that no amount of covering up can ever hope to remove.

Florida Drops Double Lynch Probe

Boy Disappears; Nurse Shot; Special Policemen Thought to Shot Teacher

TALLAHASSEE (CNA)—State Attorney Orron C. Parker, Jr., said the probe into the lynching of two youths taken from jail here three weeks ago "would continue," but added that adjournment of a coroner's jury without a verdict "just about ends this thing."

Bullets from police pistols and slugs taken from the bodies of the mob victims were checked by Federal experts, but there was no similarity, the State Attorney said. Contrary to the State Attorney's claims, experts of the Federal Bureau of Identification reports that the bullets which killed the two youths corresponded with the bullets fired from pistols of the Tallahassee police.

"It's all so indefinite," Parker said of the coroner's jury's adjournment, "that just about ends this thing.

The two murdered youths were Ernest Ponder and Richard Hawkins, both 18 years old. They were taken from the jail and their bodies riddled with bullets in the morning of July 20.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—The recent double-lynching of two youths here climaxed a virtual state-wide campaign of race hatred and terror which has brought the number of Negroes murdered to eight, it was learned this week.

One of those killed was Fred Fitzsimmons, Workers Alliance leader and active church member, who was shot down in Jacksonville for "sitting on a bench in front of a chicken house." His slayer was released on a verdict of "justifiable homicide."

The lynch deaths of the two boys—taken from a jail within two blocks of the state capitol building—is the latest of a series of legal and extra-legal murders that began several weeks ago.

First of the acts in the reign of terror was the death sentence carried out on a Nassau County man accused of "rape" and given a typical hurried-up trial. Hardly a month elapsed between the accusation and the application of the lethal current in the state prison.

Axe-Murders Unfounded

Ocala, in the central part of the state, had already had two unexplained axe-murders of Negroes before the arrest about three weeks ago of a young boy accused of "assaulting white women." The boy was jailed and held while feverish efforts were made to accumulate eidence against him. When none could be found, he was finally released.

That is the last that the friends and family of the boy saw of him. Upon leaving the jail he was picked up by several white men in an automobile. Nothing has been heard of him since.

Robert Hines, 16, paid with his life for an alleged "attempted assault" on a white woman. The woman claimed she was picking blackberries, in broad daylight, near the Appalachiola airport when young Hines attempted to attack her. Hines was executed last Friday, still protesting his innocence.

Jacksonville contributed the two outstanding incidents to the reign of terror. One was the persistently repeated report of a young nurse-maid, accused of holding a troublesome baby over a gas-jet to quiet her, who was handed to the parents of the baby by police officials. Evidence points to the fact that she was taken into a lonely stretch of woods, shot several times, and while dying thrown into a river to drown.

Fred ONeil, a sixteen-year-old Sunday school teacher, met death at the hands of one of the hundreds of "special policemen" when he attempted to cross a corner of the city-owned white golf course. While his playmates ran at the order of the "special officer," O'Neil attempted to wait for his brother.

C. L. Robinson, the "special" officer, drew a high-calibred revolver on the boy and ordered him into a waiting automboile. Still unresisting, the youth entered the car and was driven to the home of the officer.

Wife Pleaded

Stories differ as to what happened here: one witness tells of having seen the wife of the officer pleading with him not to kill the boy. The evidence of the coroner later indicated that there must have been considerable torture of the boy before a single bullet ended his life, there were blue marks on his jaw where he might have been struck by the pistol barrel. The shot that finally killed him entered the boy's body at an angle that suggests that it might have been fired while he was lying on the ground. The "justice of the peace" jury returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide," and Robinson was released.

Outrages similar to these have been reported from Miami, Tampa, and other cities of the state. The failure of many of them to be properly described by police, however, and immediate whitewashes, when they are finally publicized, are believed to be the reasons that the number of known deaths in the terror reign have been only eight.

Lynchings-1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

General.

5597

The mistaken impression that lynchers always escape unpunished in the south is an encouragement both to lynching and to those who believe federal law the only way to prevent the crime. In the 30-year period ending in 1930, the records show that some 70 lynchers were caught and given prison sentences. In Georgia, in 1930, for example, two lynchers were sentenced to imprisonment for life. In the same year Texas imposed prison terms on two. And in Alabama, during the governorship of Thomas E. Kilby (1919-23) some 34 lynchers were caught and punished.

In other words, mob murderers can be punished and have been punished in the south. Not enough of them and not severely enough, it is true, but it seems important that all parties concerned should know the facts.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
June 9, 1937

Forum Of The People

ALABAMA'S RECORD IN PUNISHING LYNCHERS

To Editor, The Age-Herald:

For one of the relatively few times in history a state is taking determined steps to discover in orderly court the truth about lynching. Too often in the past investigations into mob activities have come to naught, and not infrequently the public was left with the impression that little serious effort was being made to discover the truth and punish the guilty. Today we have a different story to tell. Alabama is without doubt making a serious effort. . . .

You will recognize the above as an excerpt from your editorial of Saturday. A natural inference to be drawn from it is that this is the first time Alabama had ever made a "serious effort to discover the truth and punish the guilty."

Do you know that Alabama has been more successful in that direction, not only than any other state, but more than all other states of the union combined? Punishment of lynchers between 1900 and 1930 were as follows:

Texas, 1920, three—two years; Texas 1930, two—two years. Total five.

Georgia, 1922, three—one to four years; Georgia, 1926, two—four years to life; Georgia, 1930, two—life. Total seven.

Virginia, 1923, two—one and two years. Oklahoma, 1922, seven—life. Illinois, 11—indeterminate. Missouri, one — 10 years. Total 21.

Making a combined total of 33.

Alabama, 1900, three—10 years to life; Alabama, 1919, 28—$100 to 15 years; Alabama, 1920, three—$100 to three months; Alabama, 1930, three—15 years to life. Total 37.

Grand total, 70.

You will observe that all other states of the union over a period of 30 years punished 33 lynchers, whereas Alabama alone over the same period punished 37.

Note further that Alabama punished during two years 34 against 33 for the rest of the country during 30 years; and further, during the period under consideration, Alabama was the first state to get a conviction—1900.

These figures were taken from a publication called "The Mob Still Rides," furnished by the research and field secretary of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Atlanta, Ga.

E. A. DARDEN.

Wetumpka, Ala., Herald
December 16, 1937

STATE OF ALABAMA PROVIDES PUNISHMENT FOR LYNCHING

Alabama is one of the nine States that provides punishment for lynching. The others are Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia. The punishment prescribed in these States runs from one year imprisonment to the death penalty. There are two other States, Illinois and New Jersey, that provide sentences of from thirty days to five years for mob violence. Five others, (Connecticut, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, South Carolina) provide for fines for personal injury done by a mob, and still ten others (California, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, Rhode Island and Wisconsin) provide fines for damage done to property, but have no laws against lynching and no punishment is provided for injury done to a person by a mob. The other States have no laws dealing with lynching or mob violence.

Opp, Ala., News
December 23, 1937

Alabama is one of the nine States that provides punishment for lynching. The others are Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia, nad West Virginia. The punishment prescribed in these States runs from one year imprisonment to the death penalty. There are two other States, Illinois and New Jersey, that provide sentences of from thirty days to five years for mob violence. Five others, (Connecticut, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, South Carolina) provide for fines for personal injury done by a mob, and still ten others (California, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, Rhode Island and Wisconsin) provide fines for damage done to property, but have no laws against lynching and no punishment is provided for injury done to a person by a mob. The other States have no laws dealing with lynching or mob violence.

Georgia.

Lynchings-1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5598

5598

Four Bound Over In Flogging Case

Five Justices Hear Complaints in Dawson

DAWSON, Ga., Aug. 20. (AP)—Four men were bound over to Terrell superior court on $2,000 bond each at a hearing before five justices of the peace here this morning after they had been held on a charge of fatally beating Will Gatewood, Negro, Aug. 14.

The decision was allowed by the justices after an agreement had been reached by R. R. Jones, acting for the state, and Leon Ferguson, defense attorney, although they stated that no reduction on the charge of murder was made.

The justices sitting on the case were Mayor R. R. Martin ex-officio justice; Sam F. George of Parrott; W. M. Daniel of the Twelfth district; J. L. Hass of the Herod district, and Hohn McLendon of Sasser. They were named by Sheriff J. A. Turner.

The defendants were listed as A. D. Henry, Sid Herrington, Alton Fleming and Wilbur Timmerman of the Bronwood district.

Lynchings-1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Mississippi.

5599

MOB RULE CONDEMNED AFTER DUAL LYNCHING

Citizens and Officials Demand Punishment of Leaders in Winona Affair

4-15-37

By The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss., April 14.—Lynch law was condemned today as cowardly, brutal and lawless by officials and citizens who demanded punishment for mob leaders who yesterday tortured and killed two negroes, Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels, accused of killing George S. Windham, a white store keeper, at Duck Hill, Dec. 30, 1936.

The negroes were seized from Sheriff E. E. Wright and deputies of Montgomery County at the Winona courthouse just after they had been arraigned and pleaded innocent to murder charges.

Negroes Were Chained

The officers were overpowered in the courthouse yard by a hundred members of the mob and the two negro prisoners were chained about their necks by mob members and taken into the woods near Duck Hill and tied to trees.

There they screamed a confession of the killing under torture of blow torch fire as a crowd of an estimated 500 men, women and children looked on.

Townes was burned to death and McDaniels was killed by a pistol shot in the head. Another negro named "Shorty" was beaten severely by mob members and ordered to leave the county.

Governor White expressed official regrets over the double lynching and said he was taken by complete surprise by the violence.

White Boasted of Record

At the time the first report of the lynching was conveyed to him the governor had just finished addressing the Chemurgic Conference here and boasting that Mississippi had not experienced a lynching for 15 months.

The governor requested District Attorney Clarence Morgan at Winona to investigate the lynching fully and report to him.

In the meantime Chairman Sumners, Democrat of Texas, of the House judiciary committee, who is leading southern Democrats in opposing the proposed federal anti-lynching bill at Washington, wired Governor White that if Mississippi did not bring "these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment" the state could not in effect escape becoming an accessory after a fact to the crime.

Fight Is Hampered

The Duck Hill lynchings, Chairman Sumners said, "is the sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the states."

Governor White declared that the lynching was unjustified and said he deeply deplored the mob action.

"It was my understanding that the Townes negro had already confessed," the governor said. "I had absolutely no prior knowledge that any violence of any sort was threatened."

Similar statements were made by Judge John Allen, trial judge at Winona, who had just set Townes' trial for Thursday and by Sheriff Wright.

These officials said that every step had been taken to insure a regular and fair trial for the negroes and that counsel had been appointed to defend them. The sheriff said he was helpless before the mob.

The executive committee of the Mississippi Council, Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching issued a statement declaring that all Christian citizens of Mississippi were humiliated by the action of the mob.

GRAND JURY TO GET DATA ON LYNCHINGS

WINONA, Miss., April 14.—(AP) District Attorney Morgan said tonight he was pushing an investigation of the lynching of two negroes — Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels—at Duck Hill, Miss., yesterday.

"We will do everything we can," the prosecutor said, "but I am afraid nothing will come of the investigation.

"The grand jury is still in session, and the result of our investigation will be laid before that body."

Sumners Warns White Of State's Position

WASHINGTON, April 14.—(AP)—Chairman Sumners of Texas, of the House judiciary committee telegraphed Governor White of Mississippi today that state could not escape being an accessory to the Duck Hill lynchings unless it brings "these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

4-15-37

Terming the lynchings "as dastardly a crime as cowardice could devise and brutality execute," Representative Sumners said:

"It is the sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the state.

"It will be effectively seized upon as a demonstration of the inability of the states to govern. As one southern man to another, I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and that is that the State of Mississippi cannot escape this reflection upon its governmental capacity, in fact, cannot escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact unless it is able to and does bring these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Chairman Sumners is leader of southern Democrats opposing the Gavagan federal anti-lynching bill. Earlier, the measure's author, Representative Gavagan, Democrat of New York, predicted its passage by a safe margin.

Hattiesburg, Miss. American
April 14, 1937

Lynching Action Awaited

Governor White Withholds Comment on Burning of Negroes at Winona

(By Associated Press)

WINONA, Miss., April 14.—Montgomery county officers from whose hands two negroes were snatched by a highly-organized, fast-moving mob and lynched after being brutally tortured, were busy today preparing reports for Governor Hugh L. White.

The chief executive let it be known that he would not decide upon a course of action nor would he comment pending receipt of details of one of the state's most violent lynchings.

He notified Chairman H. W. Sumners of the house judiciary committee that he had requested court officials to make a full investigation.

The double lynching occurred while the house of representatives was debating the Cavagan anti-lynching bill.

White Speaking

Too, it occurred while Governor White was telling the farm chemurgic conference in Jackson that he was "justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in 15 months."

The words hardly had left the executive's lips before he was called by his secretary and notified that some 500 mobsmen had lynched Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels near Duck Hill, Miss., scene of a white storekeeper's murder last December for which the negroes had been arraigned just an hour before and had pleaded innocent.

Calmly and with precision the mobsmen pinned the arms of Sheriff E. E. Wright and his two deputies to their sides as they were transferring the negroes from the courthouse to the jail.

Into school buses the negroes were pushed and rushed to Duck Hill with other members of the mob trailing in some 50 automobiles.

Townes and McDaniels were tied to trees, stripped to the waist and tortured. Blow torch flames seared their twisting bodies. Townes died from the burns. McDaniels was shot to death after being burned.

Women, Children Attend

Reliable reports told of women and children witnessing the lynching.

Almost as quickly as it assembled the mob dispersed. Authorities here asserted they had been taken completely by surprise; that it all took place so quickly none of the mobsmen were recognized.

Judge John Allen before whom the negroes had been arraigned, said through a spokesman that "there was no indication that violence was impending." He added that "all had taken for granted that the law would be allowed to take its course."

Sheriff Wright said it was "most unexpected." He described the mob as "orderly," but said his pleas to let the law take its course fell on deaf ears. "I shall use every means possible to bring those responsible for the mob before the bar of justice," he said.

District Attorney Clarence Morgan said he "had no idea that we were having mob violence until all was over."

LYNCHING "HUMILIATING"

McCOMB, Miss., April 14.—The lynching of two negroes yesterday near Duck Hill, Miss., was declared humiliating to Christian citizens of Mississippi in a statement issued here today by the executive committee of the Mississippi Council of the Association of Southern Women for Prevention of Lynching.

The statement was made public by Mrs. L. W. Alford, of McComb, state chairman. It follows:

"The executive committee of the State Council of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching and all Christian citizens of the state of Mississippi are humiliated at the recent crime of mob murder in Montgomery county.

"We believe such acts of lawlessness are detrimental to government of our country, contrary to God's laws and handicap our mission work in other lands."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY ASKED TO PROBE CRIME

JACKSON, April 14—District Attorney Clarence Morgan has been asked by Governor Hugh White to fully investigate the lynching of two negroes at Duck Hill, Miss., yesterday.

Governor White said today he deeply regretted the mob action, and added that he saw no justification for it.

"It was my understanding that the Townes negro had already confessed."

The governor said he had had "absolutely no prior knowledge that any violence of any sort was threatened." The first information he had of the lynching, he said, was supplied by the press.

He said he did not even know the negroes were being brought to trial at Winona this week.

The chief executive grinned at the irony of his own boastful statement before a farm chemurgic conference here yesterday that Mississippi had not had a lynching in 15 months.

"Just as I made that statement," he said, " a big placard fell from the wall right at the speaker's stand. That must have been an omen of some kind. Right at that moment the negroes were being lynched.

Columbus, Miss. Dispatch
April 14, 1937

JACKSON, Miss., April 14—District Attorney Clarence Morgan has been asked by Governor Hugh White to fully investigate the lynching of two negroes at Duck Hill, Miss., yesterday.

Governor White said he deeply regretted the mob action, and added that he saw no justification for it.

"It was my understanding that the Townes negro had already confessed."

The governor said he had had "absolutely no prior knowledge that any violence of any sort was threatened." The first information he had of the lynching, he said, was supplied by the press.

He said he did not even know the negroes were being brought to trial at Winona this week.

The chief executive grinned at the irony of his own boastful statement before a farm chemurgic conference here yesterday that Mississippi had not had a lynching in 15 months.

"Just as I made that statement," he said, "a big placard fell from the wall right at the speaker's stand that must have been an omen of some kind. Right at that moment the negroes were being lynched."

WASHINGTON, April 14—Representative Gavagan (D-NY) author of a federal anti-lynching bill, predicted today his measure would pass the house by a safe margin.

The weekly meeting of the Cobate and vote tomorrow on the measure, which would impose heavy fines and prison terms on peace officers who permit a person to be taken from their custody and lynched. Similar punishment would be provided for members of lynching mobs.

The lynching of two negroes in Mississippi yesterday spurred republican and northern democratic backers of the measure. They called that incident a "timely" argument for the bill in the first round of debate yesterday afternoon.

On the other side, southern democrats, led by Representative Summers (D-Tex) marshalled their forces in an attempt to defeat the measure. They contend it is unnecessary and an unconstitutional invasion of states rights.

Columbus, Miss. Dispatch
April 13, 1937

WINONA MOB GETS TWO PRISONERS

Overpowers Sheriff, Deputies Takes Negroes Toward Duck Hill

JACKSON, Miss., April 13—(AP) The Jackson Daily News was informed by a correspondent that two negroes taken from the jail at Winona this afternoon were being burned at the stake by a mob. The correspondent said the mob was also seeking a third negro implicated in the slaying of Sam Windham.

Governor Hugh White could not be immediately located this afternoon, but Adjutant General John A. O'Keefe said he had received no request for national guard troops at Winona.

At winona a group of 250 men formed the mob, the correspondent said. Members of the mob threw the negroes into a school bus after overpowering the sheriff and his deputies, and the bus was driven to a point near Duck Hill, the correspondent said.

The negroes, it was reported, were tied to stakes, and their bodies seared by flames from blow torches.

One report said that while the negroes were tied to the stake, and were being tortued by the blow torch flames, they confessed to the Windham slaying, and named a third negro whom they said participated in the slaying.

This report said the two negroes were still alive at mid-afternoon, though near death, but that consumption of the mob's vengeance would await finding of the third negro.

Montgomery County officers said Townes confessed that he killed Windham, operator of a country store near Duck Hill.

Windham was shot as he stood in the doorway of his store. The shot was fired from ambush.

The Townes negro was sought for questioning immediately after the slaying, and was surrounded on one occasion, but succeeded in escaping after exchanging gunfire with officers.

WINONA, Miss., April 13—(AP)—H. A. Curtis, a deputy sheriff, said this afternoon that an angry mob overpowered the entire sheriff's force here about today, took two negroes accused of killing a white man from their custody, and sped off in the direction of Duck Hill, near where the white man's slaying occurred.

Southerner Is Flogged, Sues Lumber Company For $10,000

Man Says He Was Stripped and 'Unmercifully Whipped' by Two White Men.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 7—(ANP)—Charging that he was stripped and "unmercifully whipped" by two white men employed by the Pearl River Valley Lumber Company at Canton, Jesse Ficklin, colored resident here, has filed suit for $10,000 damages against the company in the U. S. District court.

Ficklin's bill of complaint alleges that he was flogged "at the point of a gun after attempting to move his sister's household goods from company's premises in a truck." He named Clarence Dorman and Harrison Rimmer as the two white employes of the lumber company who had assaulted him. He said they took him into the woods, forced him to remove his clothing and bend over a log, while they whipped him. It is said the company has not yet filed an answer to Ficklin's allegations.

NEGRO CHARGES FLOGGING

Sues Canton Lumber Company For $10,000 Damages

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 28.—(AP)—Jessie Ficklin, negro, charged today that he was stripped and "unmercifully whipped" by two men employed by the Pearl River Valley Lumber Company at Canton.

The negro asked $10,000 damages against the company in a suit filed in United States District Court here.

His bill of complaint alleged that he was flogged "at the point of a gun" after attempting to move his sister's household goods from company premises in a truck.

Lynchings-1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Mississippi.

5600

WHITE PLANS INQUIRY INTO DOUBLE LYNCHING

Mississippi Governor Calls Duck Hill Mob Action "Inexcusable"

Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

BY KENNETH TOLER

JACKSON, Miss., April 16.—Branding the Duck Hill torture-lynchings of two negroes as "inexcusable," Governor White today planned a personal investigation of the mob action.

"The lynchings were absolutely inexcusable as the court had assured the negroes a speedy trial, which on the basis of the confessions probably would have resulted in death penalties," the governor said. "Attorneys had been named by the court to represent the negroes and trial date had been set."

County Officials Active

Governor White had planned to visit the scene of Tuesday's lynchings this afternoon, but changed his plans to next week. Meantime, Montgomery County officials continued an investigation and will file their findings with the governor.

"The action of the mob does not meet with the approval of the citizens of Mississippi, the governor said in explaining that the action of a few people should not result in condemnation of the entire state.

Coming at a time when the federal anti-lynching bill is before Congress, the governor saw with its probable enactment an increase in the cost of law enforcement in the state.

"The bill, if enacted, will prove very costly to the state of Mississippi, the governor said. "No sheriff will take a semblance of a chance in the future and will call for troops whether threats are made or not.

"Enforcement of the act will require a standing army in Mississippi," he said.

Action Not Anticipated

County officials explained that no mob action had been anticipated and for that reason no request made of the governor for the use of troops during the trial. Governor White said he did not even know the negroes were on trial.

Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels were forcibly taken from Sheriff Wright Tuesday and lynched, after being tortured with a blowtorch. Townes, who had been arrested in Memphis earlier in the month, confessed shooting George S. Windham last December, and implicated McDaniels, who denied any connection until a confession was cried out during torture by a blowtorch as he was chained to a tree near Townes.

A third negro, "Shorty" Durham, implicated by Townes, denied any connection, but was severely beaten with small trees and forced out of the county. As he fled the mob, several pistol shots were fired at his feet.

Sheriff Wright and deputies, from whom the negroes were taken, said they did not recognize any of the mobsters, who met them as they came downstairs from the county courtroom.

LYNCHERS 'NOT RECOGNIZABLE'

So Says Sheriff As Probe Of Mississippi Double Killing Is 'Promised'

By United Press.

DUCK HILL, Miss., April 14.—A grand jury investigation into the lynching of two Negroes was promised today. Sheriff E. E. Wright and two deputies announced that they had not recognized any members of the mob that tortured the prisoners with blow torches before killing them.

Full details of the lynchings spread over the country-side today, though it was witnessed only by members of the mob. Details indicated that the Negroes had died slowly, under frightful torture.

They were Roosevelt Townes, 25, and "Bootjack" McDaniel, 26, accused of murdering George S. Windham, operator of a cross roads store near here, on Dec. 30.

Since their arrest, they had been held in the mob proof jail at Jackson. Yesterday they were taken to Winona, the county seat, for arraignment. They pleaded not guilty and Sheriff Wright and his deputies were about to take them back to Jackson when the mob of approximately 300 men surrounded them.

Wright said he pleaded with the mob in vain. It had a school bus and into the bus went the manacled prisoners. Thirty to 40 automobiles loaded with men followed the bus to a woods near the scene of the murder. There the Negroes were chained to trees. A mobster produced a blow torch and in a minute it was roaring above the pleadings of the doomed men.

The torch was applied first to McDaniel. He screamed for mercy and it was withdrawn. Asked to confess the murder, he refused, and the torch was applied again. He then agreed to confess. He said that Townes had killed the white storekeeper and that he had assisted. A volley of shots ended it, and McDaniel dangled in his chains, dead.

Drenches With Gas

Townes was invited to confess, then the torch was applied to him. It was a slow process, punctuated by screams and sobbing, and by the time he had confessed in the detail the mob wanted, he was but partly conscious, held up by the chains. Brush was piled around him. Someone came forward with a can of gasoline. Townes was drenched with it, as was the brush. The instant the match was applied a great sheet of flame shot up and Townes died in it.

On the way to the scene of the lynching, the mob picked up another Negro, "Shorty" Dorroh. Between the executions, the mob beat and kicked him until he confessed that he had helped the others plan the murder, but had not taken part in it. After watching the others die, he was beaten some more, then told to "get out of the state." He disappeared immediately and it was believed that he had obeyed.

Gulfport, Miss. Herald
April 14, 1937

PUNISHMENT OF LYNCHERS IS DEMANDED

Chairman of Judiciary Committee Says State Accessory to Duck Hill Violence Unless Offenders Punished

Washington, April 14—(AP)—Chairman Sumners (D-Tex) of the House Judiciary Committee telegraphed Governor White of Mississippi today that state could not escape being an accessory to the Duck Hill lynchings unless it brings "these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Terming the lynching "as dastardly a crime as cowardice could devise and brutality execute," Sumners said:

"It is the sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the states.

"It will be effectively seized upon as a demonstration of the inability of the state to govern. As one Southern man to another, I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and that is that the State of Mississippi cannot escape this reflection upon its governmental capacity, in fact cannot escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact unless it is able to and does bring these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Sumners is leader of Southern Democrats opposing the Gavagan Federal Anti-Lynching Bill.

REPORT ASKED

Winona, Miss., April 14—(AP)—Montgomery County officers from whose hands two negroes were snatched by a highly organized, fast-moving mob and lynched after being brutally tortured, were busy today preparing reports for Governor Hugh L. White.

The chief executive let it be known that he would not decide upon a course of action or would he comment pending receipts of details of one of the state's most violent lynchings.

He notified Chairman H. W. Sumners of the House judiciary committee that he had requested court officials to make a full investigation.

The double lynching occurred while the House of Representatives was debating the Cavagan anti-lynching bill.

Too, it occurred while Governor White was telling the Farm Chemurgic conference in Jackson that he was "justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in 15 months."

The words hardly had left the executive's lips before he was called by his secretary and notified that some 500 mobsmen had lynched Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels near Duck Hill, Miss., scene of a white storekeeper's murder last December for which the negroes had been arraigned just an hour before and had pleaded innocent.

Calmly and with precision the mobsmen pinned the arms of Sheriff E. E. Wright and his two deputies to their sides as they were transferring the negroes from the courthouse to the jail.

Into school buses the negroes were pushed and rushed to Duck Hill with other members of the mob trailing in some 50 automobiles.

TORTURED WITH FIRE

Townes and McDaniels were tied to trees, stripped to the waist and tortured. Blow torch flames seared their twisting bodies. Townes died from the burns. McDaniels was shot to death after being burned.

Reliable reports told of women and children witnessing the lynching.

Almost as quickly as it assembled the mob dispersed. Authorities here asserted they had been taken completely by surprise; that it all took place so quickly none of the mobsmen were recognized.

Judge John Allen before whom the negroes had been arraigned said through a spokesman that "there was no indication that violence was impending." He added that "all had taken for granted that the law would be allowed to take its course."

Sheriff Wright said it was "most unexpected." He described the mob as "orderly," but said his pleas to let the law take its course fell on deaf ears. "I shall use every means possible to bring those responsible for the mob before the bar of justice," he said.

District Attorney Clarence Morgan said he "had no idea that we were having mob violence until all was over."

Montgomery, Ala. Journal
April 16, 1937

White to Demand Data on Lynching

JACKSON, Miss., April 16.—(AP)—Montgomery county authorities will be presented with a formal request for a written report of the blowtorch lynching of two negroes near Duck Hill, Miss., Tuesday, Gov. Hugh White announced. Meanwhile, the executive received a protest to the mob action from more than 5,000 Methodist women in north Mississippi, who spoke through the officers of the north Mississippi missionary conference.

The following telegram, signed by Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Clarksdale, president of the conference, and Mrs. R. P. Neblett, Brooksville, secretary, was received by the governor: "The more than 5,000 members of the Woman's Missionary society of north Mississippi are shocked and humiliated at the brutal lynchings perpetrated by the mob at Duck Hill. We wish to register our protest and urge a thorough official investigation of the mob violence and the conviction of the guilty parties."

Greenwood, Miss. Commonwealth
April 14, 1937

OFFICERS WILL MAKE REPORTS ON LYNCHINGS

Governor White Requests Court Officials To Make Full Investigation

WINONA, Miss., April 14 (AP)—Montgomery county officers from whose hands two negroes were snatched by a highly organized, fast-moving mob and lynched after being brutally tortured, were busy today preparing reports for Governor Hugh L. White.

The chief executive let it be known that he would not decide upon a course of action nor would be comment pending receipt of details of one of the state's most violent lynchings.

He notified Chairman H. W. Summers of the house judiciary committee that he had requested court officials to make a full investigation.

The double lynching occurred while the house of representatives was debating the Cavagan anti-lynching bill.

Too, it occurred while Governor White was addressing the Farm Chemurgic Conference in Jackson that he was "justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in 15 months."

The words hardly had left the executive's lips before he was called by his secretary and notified that some 500 mobsmen had lynched Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels near Duck Hill, Miss., scene of a white storekeeper's murder last December for which the negroes had been arraigned just an hour before and had pleaded innocent.

Calmly and with precision the mobsmen pinned the arms of Sheriff E. E. Wright and his two deputies to their sides as they were transferring the negroes from the courthouse to the jail.

Into school buses the negroes were pushed and rushed to Duck Hill with other members of the mob trailing in some 50 automobiles.

Townes and McDaniels were tied to trees, stripped ti the waist and tortured. Blowtorch flames seared their twisting bodies. Downes died from the burns. McDaniels was shot to death after being burned.

Reliable reports told of women and children witnessing the lynching.

Almost as quickly as it assembled the mob dispersed. Authorities here asserted they had been taken completely by surprise; that it all took place so quickly none of the mobsmen were recognized.

Judge John Allen before whom the negroes had been arraigned, said, through a spokesman that "there was no indication that violence was impending." He added that "all had taken for granted that the law would be allowed to take its course."

Sheriff Wright said it was "most unexpected." He described the mob as "orderly," but said his pleas to let the law take its course fell on deaf ears. "I shall use every means possible to bring those responsible for the mob before the bar of justice," he said.

District Attorney Clarence Morgan said he "had no idea that we were having mob violence until all was over."

McCOMB, Miss., April 14 (AP)—The lynching of two negroes yesterday near Duck Hill, Miss., was declared humiliating to Christian citizens of Mississipi in a statement issued here today by the executive committee of the Mississippi Council of the Association of Southern Women for Prevention of Lynching.

The statement was made public by Mrs. L. W. Alford, of McComb, state chairman. It follows:

"The executive committee of the State Council of Southern Women for the prevention of Lynching and all Christian citizens of the state of Mississippi are humiliated at the recent crime of mob murder in Montgomery county.

"We believe such acts of lawlessness are detrimental to government of our country, contrary to God's laws and handicap our mission work in other lands."

Mississippi.

Lynchings-1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5661

SHERIFF IN COLLUSION WITH DUCK HILL MOB,
INVESTIGATOR SAYS
Press Service N.A.A.C.P.

Southern White Man Sent in by N.A.A.C.P.; Says Mississippians "Rather Pleased" With the Lynchings; That They Feared Evidence Was Not Strong Enough to Convict Men; and They Do Not Intend to Permit Anything To Be Done About the Lynchings

- - - - - - - - - - - -

New York, May 14.- Sheriff Wright of Montgomery County, Miss., in which the Duck Hill blow-torch double lynching was staged April 13, is generally believed to have been in collusion with the mob, according to a sensational report on the lynchings made to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People by a southern white man who investigated the double crime for the N.A.A.C.P.

It is recorded that Sheriff Wright did not call Governor White on the telephone until about two hours after the mob had taken the prisoners from him, and that when he did telephone, although he had never left the court house and presumably did not know what was happening, he reported to the Governor that there had been a lynching.

A leading citizen of Winona told the investigator: "There are a thousand people in Montgomery County who can name the lynchers."

After reciting the details of the lynching and pointing out the general indifference of the community, the report of the investigator to the N.A.A.C.P. concludes:

"It is generally held that the mob consisted primarily of the kinsmen of the murdered Windham and that citizens of Webster, Calhoun, Granada and Montgomery counties participated in the lynching.

"It is likewise generally held that mob action was expected and that the Sheriff was in collusion with the members of the mob; that he offered no resistance whatever to the mob when they seized the prisoner; that he took no precaution to protect the prisoners from mob violence as witness Governor White's testimony that no guards were asked for and that the sheriff made no effort to apprehend or stop the mob after they had departed from Winona.

"It is furthermore generally held that the members of the mob are widely known and that no effort will be made to apprehend or punish any of them and that further no investigation of the lynching will be attempted. .....

"The writer was told by citizens in Montgomery, Calhoun, Granada and Chickasaw counties that the reason Townes and McDaniels were lynched was due to the fact that the white people feared they would not be convicted on the evidence that would be presented against them. Particularly was this true in the case of McDaniels.

"A former mayor told the writer that, 'These people are just looking for a chance to kill and any serious charge against a man gives them a chance to say they are adding the law by lynching.'

"Of the scores of people with whom I talked not a single one greatly deplored the lynching. The citizens of Duck Hill seemed rather well pleased with themselves. The only feature of the incident displeasing to them was the pictures taken of Townes and McDaniel and widely circulated through the press."

Lynchings - 1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Mississippi.

5602

Greenville, Miss., Democrat Times
April 14, 1937

MONTGOMERY PREPARING T TWO LYNCHIN

GOVERNOR HAS NOT DECIDEI ON ACTION PENDING REPO

CAUSES SOLON DEBATE

Investigation of the Lynchings By District Attorney Is Ordered By Governor Hugh White—No Indication Any Violence Was Pending.

[By The Associated Press]

Winona, Miss., April 14.—Montgomery county officers from whose hands two negroes were snatched by a highly organized, fast-moving mob and lynched after being brutally tortured were busy today preparing reports for Governor Hugh L. White.

The chief executive let it be known that he would not decide upon a course of action nor would he comment pending receipt of details of one of the state's most violent lynchings.

He notified Chairman H. W. Summers of the House Judiciary Committee that he had requested court officials to make a full investigation.

The double lynching occurred while the House of Representatives was debating the Cavagan anti-lynching bill.

Too, it occurred while Governor White was telling the farm Chemurgic conference in Jackson that he was "justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in 15 months."

The words hardly had left the executive's lips before he was called by his secretary and notified that some 500 mobsmen had lynched Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels near Duck Hill, Miss., scene of a white storekeeper's murder last December for which the negroes had been arraigned just an hour before and had pleaded innocent.

Calmly and with precision the mobsmen pinned the arms of Sheriff E. E. Wright and his two deputies to their sides as they were transferring the negroes from the courthouse to the jail.

Rushed To Duck Hill

Into school buses the negroes were pushed and rushed to Duck Hill with other members of the mob trailing in some 50 automobiles.

Townes and McDaniels were tied to trees, stripped to the waist and tortured. Blow torch flames seared their twisting bodies. Townes died from the burns. McDaniels was shot to death after being burned.

Reliable reports told of women and children witnessing the lynching.

Almost as quickly as it assembled the mob dispersed. Authorities here asserted they had been taken completely by surprise; that it all took place so quickly none of the mobsmen were recognized.

Judge John Allen before whom the negroes had been arraigned, said thru a spokesman that "there was no indication that violence was impending." He added that "all had taken for granted that the law would be allowed to take its course."

Sheriff Wright said it was "most unexpected." He described the mob as "orderly," but said his pleas to let the law take its course fell on deaf ears. "I shall use every means possible to bring those responsible for the mob before the bar of justice," he said.

District Attorney Clarence Morgan said he "had no idea that we were having mob violence until all was over."

Lynching is Rapped

McComb, Miss., April 14.—The lynching of two negroes yesterday near Duck Hill, Miss., was declared humiliating to Christian citizens of Mississippi in a statement issued here today by the executive committee of the Mississippi Council of the Association of Southern Women for Prevention of Lynching.

The statement was made public by Mrs. L. W. Alford, of McComb, state chairman. It follows:

"The executive council of the State Council of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching and all Christian citizens of the State of Mississipp are humiliated at the recent crime of mob murder in Montgomery county.

"We believe such acts of lawlessness are detrimental to government of our country, contrary to God's laws and handicap our mission work in other lands."

Sumners Raps Lynchings

Washington, April 14.—Chairman Sumners (D-Tex) of the House Judiciary committee telegraphed Governor White of Mississippi today that state could not escape being an accessory to the Duck Hill lynchings unless it brings "these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Terming the lynchings "as dastardly a crime as cowardice could devise and brutally execute," Sumners said:

"It is the sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the states.

"It will be effectively seized upon as a demonstration of the inability of the states to govern. As one Southern man to another, I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and that is that the State of Mississippi cannot escape this reflection upon its governmental capacity, in fact cannot escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact unless it is able to and does bring these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Sumners is leader of Southern Democrats opposing the Gavagan federal anti-lynching bill. Earlier, the measure's author, Rep. Gavagan (D-NY) predicted its passage by a safe margin.

The House will conclude debate and vote tomorrow on the measure, which would impose heavy fines and prison terms on peace officers who permit a person to be taken from their custody and lynched. Similar punishment would be provided for members of lynching mobs.

The lynching of two negroes in Mississippi yesterday spurred Republican and northern Democratic backers of the measure. They called that incident a "timely" argument for the bill in the first round of debate yesterday afternoon.

Lynching Probe Ordered

Jackson, Miss., April 14.—District Attorney Clarence Morgan has been asked by Governor Hugh White to fully investigate the lynching of two negroes at Duck Hill, Miss., yesterday. Governor White said today he deeply regretted the mob action, and added that he saw no justification for it.

"It was my understanding that the Townes negro had already confessed."

The governor said he had had "absolutely no prior knowledge that any violence of any sort was threatened." The first information he had of the lynching, he said, was supplied by the press.

He said he did not even know the negroes were being brought to trial at Winona this week.

The chief executive grinned at the irony of his own boastful statement before a farm chemurgic conference here yesterday that Mississippi had not had a lynching in 15 months.

"Just as I made that statement," he said, "a big placard fell from the wall right at the speaker's stand. That must have been an omen of some kind. Right at that moment the negroes were being lynched."

Columbus, Miss. Dispatch
April 14, 1937

STATE LYNCHING REPORT PREPARED

Account of Killing of Two Montgomery County Negroes Will Go to White

WINONA, Miss., April 14-(AP)-Montgomery County officers from whose hands two negroes were snatched by a highly organized, fast-moving mob and lynched after being brutally tortured, were busy today preparing reports for Governor Hugh L. White.

The chief exucutive let it be known that he would not decide upon a course of action nor would be comment pending receipt of details of one of the state's most violent lynchings.

He notified Chairman H. W. Summers of the house judiciary committee that he had requested court officials to make a full investigation.

The double lynching occurred while the house of representatives was debating the anti-lynching bill.

Too, it occurred while Governor White was telling the farm chemurgic conference in Jackson that he was "justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in 15 months."

The words hardly had left the executive's lips before he was called by his secretary and notified that some 500 mobsmen had lynched Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" McDaniels near Duck Hill, Miss., scene of a white storekeeper's murder last December for which the negroes had been arraigned just an hour before and had pleaded innocent.

Calmly and with precision the mobsmen pinned the arms of Sheriff E. E. Wright and his two deputies to their sides as they were transferring the negroes from the courthouse to the jail.

Into school buses the negroes were pushed and rushed to Duck Hill with other members of the mob trailing in some 50 automobiles.

Townes and McDaniels were tied to trees, stripped to the waist and tortured. Blow torch flames seared their twisting bodies. Townes died from the burns. McDaniels was shot to death after being burned.

Reliable reports told of women and children witnessing the lynching.

Almost as quickly as it assembled the mob dispersed. Authorities here asserted they had been taken completely by surprise; that it all took place so quickly none of the mobsmen were recognized.

Judge John Allen before whom the negroes had been arraigned said though a spokesman that "there was no indication that violence was impending." He added that "all had taken for granted that the law would be allowed to take its course."

Sheriff Wright said it was "most unexpected". He described the mob as "orderly", but said his pleas to let the law take its course fell on deaf ears. "I every means possible to bring those responsible for the mob before the bar of justice," he said.

District Attorney Clarence Morgan said he 'had no idea that we were having 'mob' violence until all was over."

Hattiesburg, Miss. American
April 14, 1937

House Committee Chairman Exhorts State To Punish Lynchers

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Chairman Sumners, Democrat of Texas of the house judiciary committee telegraphed Governor White of Mississippi today that state could not escape being an accessory to the Duck Hill lynchings unless it brings 'these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Terming the lynchings "as dastardly a crime as cowardice could devise and brutality execute," Sumners said:

"It is the sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the states.

"It will be effectively seized upon as a demonstration of the inability of the states to govern. As one Southern man to another, I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and that is that the state of Mississippi cannot escape this reflection upon its governmental capacity, in fact, cannot escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact unless it is able to and does bring these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Sumners is leader of Southern Democrats opposing the Gavagan federal anti-lynching bill. Earlier, the measure's author, Rep. Gavagan, Democrat of New York, predicted its passage by a safe margin.

The house will conclude debate and vote tomorrow on the measure, which would impose heavy fines and prison terms on peace officers who permit a person to be taken from their custody and lynched. Similar punishment would be provided for members of lynching mobs.

The lynching of two negroes in Mississippi yesterday spurred Republican and northern Democratic backers of the measure. They called that incident a "timely" argument for the bill in the first round of debate yesterday afternoon.

MISSISSIPPI DAILIES DECLARE NOTHING WILL BE DONE ABOUT DUCK HILL
Press Service N.A.A.C.P.

New York, May 7.- Nothing will be done about the blow-torch double lynching at Duck Hill, Miss., on April 13, it was declared last week by the Indianola, Miss., Sunflower Tocsim.

"Nothing will ever come of any investigation the governor or anybody else will make and not one member of the mob will ever be arrested," the paper says in an editorial. "We do not condone lynchings, but if two persons ever deserved lynching, the two brutes at Duck Hill richly deserved what they got. We have no sympathy to waste on them. None whatever."

This editorial was cited by the N.A.A.C.P. as further proof, if any were still needed, that the southern states - particularly in the deep South - will not ever do anything to stop lynching and punish lynchers and that, therefore, a federal anti-lynching law is necessary.

The Jackson, Miss., Daily News of which the veteran Negro-hater, Colonel Frederick Sullens is editor, declared editorially that the outburst over the Duck Hill lynchings was "a lot of tommy-rot."

The Columbus, Miss., Dispatch declared eiditorially that it was "sick and tired" of the South being blamed for lynchings and also that it was"sick and tired" of some southern editors joining with the critics of the South.

These editorial expressions from Mississippi represent the opposite extreme from the editorials in more enlightened sections of the South. As a matter of fact, the Mississippi editorials and one or two from Alabama papers are the worst editorials in the whole country in favor of lynching. . .

Lynchings - 1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

North Carolina.

5603

Elizabeth City, N. C., Advance
February 20. 1937

Bill Would Provide For State Bureau Of Investigation

New Law Enforcement Department Would Be Created By Companion Bill To Reorganization Bill

POWER OF ARRESTS

Director of Bureau and Assistants Would Have the Same Power As Sheriffs of Counties In State

Daily Advance Bureau
Sir Walter Hotel

Raleigh, Feb. 20.—In discussion of transfer of the State highway patrol from the revenue department and reorganization of the patrol, a companion bill setting up a new State law enforcement agency with quite wide and comprehensive powers and duties has been somewhat overlooked.

The bill, introduced by Con C. Johnston, Iredell, and referred to his committee on roads, is entitled an act to establish a State bureau of identification and investigation and many of its provisions do little more than consolidate existing record keeping agencies under one head; but in addition the new bureau is given sweeping powers to act as a police agency.

First of all, the bill would create a bureau of identification and investigation under supervision of the division of public safety as part of the Governor's office.

The Governor would be given the juicy patronage plum of appointment of a director of this bureau, with a salary which would no doubt be fixed at a very substantial sum.

This director would then, in turn "appoint a sufficient number of assistants and stenographic and clerical help."

Nor would the work of these assistants" be confined to keeping identification records. The bill provides: "The director of the bureau, and his assistants, are given the same power of arrests as is now vested in the sheriffs of the several counties."

Here is plain authority for creation of a State police force of unlimited number.

These police officers, the bill provides, "shall give assistance" to regular police officers, "at the request of the Governor."

The bureau also shall "through its director and upon request of the Governor," investigate and prepare evidence in the event of any lynching or mob violence in the State, shall investigate all cases arising from frauds in connection with elections, "when requested to do so by the Board of Elections, and when so directed by the Governor."

On the record keeping and identification sides, the bureau would keep criminal statistics and receive reports now made to the Attorney General with respect to convictions. All records of the identification at Central Prison would be transferred to the bureau.

It would be authorized to establish laboratory and use facilities of State institutions for scientific analysis of evidence.

The sum of one dollar would be taxed in each criminal case, half to be used to create a benefit fund for the State and local law enforcement officers and half to help defray expenses of the bureau.

In the view of many observers the bill would establish a veritable "Scotland Yard" for North Carolina, under the personal command and at the beck and call of the Governor, through his appointed director. The provision regarding authority of the bureau assistants in the matter of lynching and mob violence would, many feel, make an impartial probe of such occurrences more likely. There are those who feel, however, that it would give the Governor—particularly a reactionary and anti-labor Governor—too much authority in the matter of outbreaks arising from strikes.

Nothing has been heard of the bill since it went to committee a few days ago, but it will likely be reported out the first of next week.

MAN INDICTED FOR COURTROOM ASSAULT

Two True Bills Returned Against Frank Anderson By Grand Jury At Marion.

(Special to Daily News)

Marion, Sept. 9.—True bills of indictment against Frank Anderson on charges of assault with a deadly weapon and obstructing justice, were returned by a grand jury in McDowell county Superior court yesterday as a result of an attack on Mann Smith, negro, while he was on trial for criminal assault early this week. Anderson, a plumber, was arrested by court officials after the court was thrown into confusion by actions. He was jailed by Judge Felix Alley, of Waynesville, on a contempt citation. The attack caused a mistrial to be ordered.

9-10-37

Trial of the charges against Anderson will not take place at the present term of the court since Judge Alley had disqualified himself as presiding judge when the cases are called.

County police today expressed themselves as believing that the presence of national guardsmen for the new trial would not be necessary. Governor Hoey, however, at the request of Judge Alley, has ordered a detachment of troops from Morganton to appear at Marion Monday when the case is called for retrial.

South Carolina.

Lynchings-1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5604

Greenwood, S. C. Index-Journal
March 1, 1937

Suit Against Greenwood County Alleging Lynching Is Dismissed By Judge Oxner In Civil Court

The case of Ada Thompson as administratrix of the estate of Bennie Thompson against Greenwood under the statute providing for a suit against the county alleging lynching was dismissed today by Judge G. Dewey Oxner, presiding over the March term of civil court.

Bennie Thompson, a Ninety Six negro, was beaten to death on the night of October 8, 1933 near Ninety Six and four young white men, Burley Leopard, Kenneth G. Morris, G. Howard Webb and Clarence Mays, charged with killing him, were tried and acquitted at the January, 1935 term of general sessions court.

Soon after the negro's death the woman through her attorneys Hicks & Johnston, of Greenville, filed suit against the county for $2,000, alleging that he had been lynched.

The motion was dismissed by Judge Oxner today on motion of County Attorney Rupert F. Davis, who set forth that he wrote attorneys for the plaintiff Feb. 22, 1937 that he would insist on trial at the present term of court.

Judge Oxner in his dismissal orders states: "The case was called by me and counsel for the defendant announced he was ready for trial. Counsel for plaintiff was not present and there was no appearance in court of anyone on behalf of the plaintiff. It is therefore order that the case is hereby dismissed."

Tennessee

Lynchings-1937
6
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5605

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
August 26, 1937

Reward For Lynchers.

Governor Gordon Browning of Tennessee has offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of the six men who recently lynched a Negro near Covington in Tipton County. The reward is to be paid "to any one lending that assistance to the authorities of our State that will lead to the apprehension and conviction of those guilty of this heinous offense."

"The station of the individual and the character of the offense he may have committed make no difference in this crime against society," Governor Browning said in a formal statement announcing the reward for the lynchers. "I condemn the act in the strongest possible terms and state that Tennessee thoroughly despises and condemns this form of lawlessness."

What Governor Browning condemns and what Tennessee despises was the act of the six men who took a Negro prisoner, accused of killing an officer of the law, from Sheriff Vaughan of Tipton County and brutally putting him to death. In addition to offering a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of these men, the Governor pledges "every other cooperation I can give to the prosecuting authorities in bringing them to justice."

It is encouraging to see Governor Browning take this attitude toward mob lawlessness in Tennessee. It is to be hoped that when the next Legislature meets he will urge the enactment of a law aimed at the suppression of the crime of lynching in the State. Such a law should class lynching as murder, it should make every member of a lynching mob liable to that charge, and it should provide an adequate penalty for Sheriffs and other officers who do not take proper measures to protect prisoners in their custody.

The reward which Governor Browning has offered for the apprehension and conviction of the men who lynched the Negro in Tipton County may not have the effect of bringing the mobsters to justice. But in the statement accompanying the announcement of the reward he indicates quite clearly his abhorrence of lynch lawlessness and his purpose to take a firm stand against it. That will hearten the law-abiding public of Tennessee, which deplores mob rule under any circumstances.

Covington, Tenn. Leader
August 19, 1937

Investigation Ordered By Judge Following Lynching Monday Night

Small Mob Took Albert Gooden From Sheriff Vaughan As Prisoner Was Being Returned to Covington From Shelby County Jail—Charged With Killing Mason Marshal.

A sweeping investigation has been ordered by Circuit Judge R. B. Baptist following the surrender by Sheriff Will Vaughan of his prisoner, Albert Gooden, 35-year-old negro, to a mob of only six men Monday night about 9:15 a short distance south of Brighton on the Jeff Davis highway.

Gooden, who had not been indicted by the grand jury, had been taken to Memphis for safe-keeping after his alleged slaying on the night of July 17, of Marshal Chester Doyle, of Mason. The sheriff states that he was returning the negro to Covington for trial.

John Winford, Covington haberdasher, was the third man in the car when the prisoner was seized. He states that he had merely accompanied the sheriff to Memphis upon the latter's invitation and had no knowledge of the officer's intention to return the negro until a short time before their departure from Memphis. He states that the sheriff merely informed him that he was going to the city for pump supplies, declaring that he would not have made the trip had he known that the officer had the return of the negro in mind.

Lynched

The negro was lynched, presumably a short while after his capture, at an iron bridge over the Beaver Bottom drainage canal on a dirt road between Wright's and Gainsville. The body, however, was not discovered until about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning, when Chief Deputy V. W. Pickens and Special Officer J. T. Scott, both of Covington, were searching the area and found the bridge-floor covered with cartridges. They also found lying on the bridge the sheriff's pistol, which was taken from him by members of the mob.

When found the dead negro was still hand-cuffed and was lying on the edge of the canal, his head in the water. A piece of frayed rope, which had either been shot in two or had broken when he was thrown or pushed from the bridge, was still tied about his neck. The other part of the rope was still tied to the bridge.

The negro had been riddled with bullets, several dozen bullet wounds being found. The head had been almost severed, apparently from a charge of buckshot. The bottom of the canal is about 15 feet from the top of the bridge railing, and it could not be determined whether his neck was broken before the rope parted or whether he died of pistol and gunshot wounds.

Forced From Road

Sheriff Vaughan was occupying the front seat of his automobile and had Gooden beside him on the ill-fated trip. The negro had never confessed the killing and the sheriff sought to obtain admission of guilt from him as they drove toward Covington.

Mr. Winford says he suggested to the sheriff that he ought to pull over and let a car pass. This was the opportunity their pursuers were evidently awaiting as, when the offier's car moved over toward the shoulder of the highway, the other car pulled diagonally over in front of them, compelling them to stop. Mr. Winford stated that as the pursuing car passed by before being stopped in front of them he could see the muzzles of several guns pointed out the window.

As both cars came to a stop five men, well masked with handkerchiefs, leaped out of their small sedan and surrounded the sheriff's automobile.

With the sixth man in the masked party still at the wheel of their car, one man ordered the sheriff from his car, disarming him. Another opened the door and ordered Mr. Winford to the road. The three others dragged Gooden from the car. It is said that he exclaimed that they were "Mason men" when the car pulled in front of them.

The negro was manacled, but he knocked one of his captors down and escaped for a few minutes, running down the road, where he was caught, slugged with the butt end of a pistol and forced to get in the car of his captors.

Sheriff Vaughan sought to induce the men to give the negro back to him.

"Men, you are doing the wrong thing. Give the negro back to me," he is quoted as saying several times, telling the masked men that he was certain to be given the limit for his crime, evidence of which was then in the hands of the grand jury. The ar. Winford states that the quintet was very nervous, that he was without a coat and wore summer clothing with his sleeves rolled up but that he was searched twice for weapons. He adds that he feared something might happen any minute to cause the men to begin shooting, because of their nervousness and his only conversatiton with them was to ask for permission to light a cigar-otte. He also says that the member of the mob who lighted a match for him, after refusing him permission to get one out of his pocket, turned his head away as the flare of the match lighted his face.

(Continued on have no heed to

Quick Get Away

For some reason the masked group left the keys in the sheriff's car as they got hastily into their car with their quarry and drove rapidly away to the north after warning the officer against pursuit.

It is thought they turned east at the first road leading through Brighton toward the scene of the lynching itself. Their car bore no license number, according to both the sheriff and Mr. Winford.

A few minutes after they had disappeared, Sheriff Vaughan started at high speed for Covington. He organized searching parties of officers who left at once for the south part of the county. He, Chief Deputy Pickens and Night Marshal J. A. Fredrickson made a hurried run to Mason, thinking the mob might return there to lynch the negro at or near the scene of his alleged crime.

They found, however, that few people if any in Mason were aware that Gooden had been taken and their visit occesioned great excitement. The search was continued after the sheriff's return to Covington, but the body was not found until 3 o'clock when, as stated, Deputy Pickens and Special Officer Scott found it under the bridge. The body was brought here by a colored mortician, the sheriff later turning the dead negro over to his brother, also a mortician.

Believe Gooden Guilty

Officers state that there is no doubt of Gooden's guilt. The grand jury secured affidavits from a negro woman known as Jennie Lou Yancey, containing statements of Gooden's alleged threats against Doyle. The woman stated that she was struck in the raid on the place on July 17 and that Gooden escaped through a window at the time, shouting that she would be the last woman Doyle ever struck. A few minutes later the shots were fired through a rear door that killed the marshal. The woman also stated that Gooden had come to the place armed with a shotgun.

Officers state that Allison Plummer, whom they are holding as accessory after the fact, corroborates the woman's testimony regarding Gooden being armed and at the place on the night of the fatal affray. Plummer is charged with aiding Gooden to hide after the shooting.

The lynching is the aftermath of a craps game raid on a place operated by Poney Gooden, a brother of the dead negro, and which is located to the west of Mason. Marshal Doyle, who was killed, was accompanied by Sheriff Vaughan. The former went on into a back room after entering he place, and it was there that he was shot. As he fell mortally wounded he was said to have emptied his pistol, killing one negro, Jack Bolton, 24, and wounding another, Oliver Twist, 25. The sheriff, who heard the shooting, was in the front of the place at the time.

Chief Deputy Vernon Pickens picked up Gooden and Plummer on Sunday, both being placed in jail here, Gooden being rushed to Memphis that night when the sheriff learned that a mob was forming in Mason to take him from the jail. Several carloads arrived Sunday night, but they were convinced that their quarry had been taken to Memphis and no effort was made to harm officers at the jail.

Nashville, Tenn. Banner
August 24, 1937

State Offers $5,000 Reward In Lynching

Gov. Gordon Browning today authorized the State's maximum reward of $5,000 for information leading to apprehension and conviction of members of the mob which last week took Albert Gooden, Negro prisoner, from the Tipton County Sheriff and lynched him.

In announcing the reward, the Governor issued the following statement:

"It seems that on an occasion last week in Tipton County in flagrant violation of law and order, certain individuals unknown as yet seized one Albert Gooden who was in the lawful possession of the Sheriff as a prisoner and lynched him.

"This is an offense against the name and decent feelings of our State. The station of the individual and the character of the offense he may have committed make no difference on this crime against society.

"I condemn the act in the strongest possible terms and state that Tennessee thoroughly despises and condemns this form of lawlessness.

"In order to be of the utmost possible assistance in bringing to justice those who were guilty of this heinous offense, under the authority given me by the code of my State, I hereby offer the maximum reward of $5,000 to anyone tendering that assistance to the authorities of our State that will lead to the apprehension and conviction of said individuals.

"And I further pledge every other cooperation I can give to the prosecuting authorities in bringing them to justice.

"GORDON BROWNING,
"Governor."

Louisville, Miss. Journal
August 27, 1937

ANOTHER JURY LYNCHING PROBE ENDS IN "NOTHING TO REPORT"

The Tipton county, Tennessee, grand jury charged with investigating the county's first lynching since the War Between the States, recesses with a statement that they had nothing to report.

Jurors say witnesses testified they "heard shots" but "saw nothing." No witness could identify any of the mob members.

The grand jury didn't call the sheriff but he had publicly stated that he could not identify any of them either.

The grand jury may resume the investigation when it reconvenes next month, but these statements indicate that it will meet the familiar fate of similar investigations, despite the circuit judge's demands that everybody connected with the lynching be indicted for first degree murder. And this will probably be duly emphasized when the anti-lynching bill comes up again the next session of congress, as come it will.

This lynching was of the wholly indefensible type. The crime of which the victim was accused was murder, not rape. His guilt had not been definitely established. He was in the hands of officers when seized, and speedy trial was assured. Neither did the mob members have the benefit of the plea of "suddenly aroused passions." The crime was committed a month before the lynching.

A few successful prosecutions of mobsters in such cases would do more than anything else to reduce lynchings, and to reduce the menace of federal anti-lynching legislation. But the difficulty of obtaining indictments in most such instances also illustrates the futility of the proposed federal legislation. Cases under it would have had to be tried in federal courts in the same districts, and the federal grand juries would be drawn from the same communities as the state grand juries which refuse to indict.—Clarion Ledger.

Just another evidence that there is but one way to reduce mob law, and that is for the Courts to function more promptly, and more justly against the criminal .The beginning point is for the more substantial element of our people to take a hand in Courts, from the Grand Juries down to the petit juries. Added to this must be the certain punishment for the criminal after he is convicted. In other words, let our American laws function as they should without fear or favor, and that must be done by real people who wish to see law and order enforced, and are willing to do their part, instead of throwing off on "George."

Jackson, Tenn. Sun
November 7, 1937

The Tipton county grand jury adjourned after a three-day session without considering the lynching in August of Albert Gooden, negro, accused of the slaying of Marshal Chester Doyle of Mason. The July grand jury, after three investigations, said it was unable to establish the identity of the guilty parties.

Lynchings-1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Tennessee

5606

Ten Witnesses To 7th Lynching Of Year Are Heard; Continue Case

COVINGTON, Tenn.—(ANP)—Another argument for enactment of a federal anti-lynching law was seen Wednesday when the Tipton county grand jury, ordered into special session to investigate the lynching early Tuesday of Albert Gooden, 35, recessed without making a report although 10 witnesses were heard.

The grand jury will reconvene Sept. 1 and it is expected they will continue their probe of the nation's seventh lynching this year, the first for 1937 in Tennessee and the first in this county since the Civil War.

Circuit Court Judge R. B. Baptist, who called the grand jury into special session seven hours after the victim's bullet-riddled body was found lying face down in a drainage ditch here, described the atrocity as "one of the most horrible and disgraceful crimes of Tipton county" and said he would be satisfied with nothing less than a sweeping inquiry.

"Every one participating, aiding or abetting in the lynching is guilty of murder of the first degree," he declared, "and it is the duty of the grand jury to make not a perfunctory but a full, complete and searching investigation and go to the bottom of this thing.

"If there is any man on the grand jury who feels he cannot do this he should notify the court of that fact."

Three witnesses were heard Tuesday and the other seven Wednesday. Several testified they "heard shots" but "saw nothing." Members of the jury said afterward the investigation had not produced a "worthwhile lead."

Sheriff W. J. Vaughn, from whom Gooden was taken by six masked men at 9:15 Monday night, offered to testify but he was not called. Appearing were Deputy William Hoffman of Brighton, assistant jailer here the night of July 18 when an earlier mob tried to get Gooden, two other officers and some men who live near the scene of the lynching.

The victim had been held in the Shelby county jail at Memphis for safe-keeping since July 19. He was charged with the killing of Chester Doyle, city marshal of Mason in a dice game raid July 17. Gooden allegedly objected to Doyle's manhandling of a Negro woman. However, he had never confessed the slaying.

Accompanied by John Winford, friend and businessman of Vaughn, the sheriff went to Memphis to return Gooden here to Covington jail.

Vaughn said he tried to make the trip secretly to forestall mob violence and Winford himself did not know where they were going until they arrived at the Memphis jail.

With the prisoner in the front seat, handcuffed, the trio started home. About a mile south of Brighton, just over the Shelby county line, a car in which six men were riding overhauled them and forced them to the side of the road.

Gooden, sensing what was about to happen, cried out, "Them's Mason men!"

Vaughn said one of the masked men leaped from the machine, stuck a gun in his face and took his revolver while another searched Winford. Despite the officer's pleas to "let the law take its course," the others dragged Gooden from the auto.

Their intended victim, struggling and screaming, almost got away when he suddenly straightened up and knocked one of his captors down, but he was quieted by a blow from a pistol butt. The men drove off, ordering the sheriff not to follow under pain of being fired upon, in their car from which license plates had been removed.

The officer and companion raced to Covington, got deputies, and began searching for the mob and Gooden. They discovered his body six hours later in the midst of a heavily populated colored area, nine miles from the spot where he had been kidnapped. It had been riddled with bullets and a noose was about the neck. Nearby was the sheriff's pistol, empty.

The body was turned over to Gooden's brother, an undertaker in Mason.

Under Tennessee law, Sheriff Vaughn may be indicted for negligence and if convicted may be fined, removed from office, and prevented from ever holding any other state office.

around the outer beam of the steel bridge, 12 miles south of here. The legs were bound together at the ankles. The hands, still in handcuffs placed by officers, also were bound by heavy wire. More than 30 bullets pierced the bleeding body.

The mobsmen crowded Sheriff Vaughan's car off the highway last night, disarmed him and seized the negro. The sheriff was bringing him to Covington to face a charge of slaying City Marshal Chester Doyle of Mason, Tenn., a month ago.

The negro had been incarcerated at Memphis in view of a previous attempt at violence.

Gooden's death was recorded as the seventh lynching of 1937, Tennessee's first since 1935.

"Every one participating," Judge Baptist said in an impassioned address to the grand jury, or even "aiding or abetting" in the lynching "is guilty of murder in the first degree."

Warning against a "perfunctory" inquiry, he said he wanted the investigation "full, complete and searching."

Any juror not in sympathy with such a course, he said, should so inform him. He cited statutes directing investigations to determine whether sheriffs "negligently and wilfully or by want of proper diligence," allow prisoners to be taken from custody.

Sheriff Vaughan said he kept secret the purpose of his trip to Memphis yesterday. He was about 300 yards from Brighton on his return when "a car crowded me off the pavement."

"Five men with handkerchiefs over their faces jumped out and covered us with pistols," the sheriff said, adding they dragged the negro from the car. When the negro jerked loose, he was hit with a gun, and dumped into the second car.

Judge Urges Strict Probe Of Lynching

Slaying Of Negro Taken From Sheriff Stirs Tennessee

COVINGTON, TENN., Aug. 17.—(AP)—Six masked men, who laughed and shouted, "to hell with the law," seized a terror-stricken negro from Sheriff W. J. Vaughan early today and left his body dangling at the end of a frayed plow line after riddling it with bullets.

It was the first lynching in Tipton County since the War Between the States. Circuit Judge R. B. Baptist, ordering the county grand jury to make a "real investigation" of the "disgraceful, horrible crime," demanded first degree murder indictments against the "night riders," if their identities can be established.

Albert Gooden's body lay on the edge of Beaver Creek when officers came upon it. The head was submerged. The rope had given way under the weight of his swaying form. One end of it remained twisted

Chattanooga, Tenn., Daily Times
September 4, 1937

FIND THE LYNCHERS!

The adjournment of the Tipton County Grand Jury Thursday without a report having been made on its investigation of the recent lynching of Albert Gooden, a Negro, indicates that a Southern community has failed again in the effort to enforce the law against mob violence. Sheriff W. J. Vaughan, from whom Gooden was taken on August 16 by a mob of six masked men, has said the investigation will be continued and that if additional information is obtained it will be placed before the jury when that body reconvenes October 1.

The fact that the jury has already heard the testimony of ten persons without discovering any information that would lead to identification of the lynchers gives little reason for hope that indictments will be returned. The longer the period of time that elapses between a lynching and a thorough investigation, the harder it is to reconstruct an accurate description of the crime.

Law enforcement officers are obviously at a disadvantage whenever such crimes are committed. For that reason, if for no other, it would seem that Sheriffs who have in their custody prisoners against whom enforcement officers have shown there is likely to be public feeling would take care to protect themselves against any mob. Records in a good many cases prove that lynching is rarely attempted when law

RIGHT O, GOVERNOR!

PRESS DISPATCH FROM NASHVILLE tells of the prompt announcement of a $5,000 reward for the lynchers of a Tipton county Negro, issued by Governor Gordon Browning, upon his return to Nashville from his vacation trip to Minnesota.

The governor's action in this connection is considered the proper means of bringing the cowardly mob members to justice and it is believed that those who pulled the defenseless, cringing Negro from custody of the high sheriff, laughing out the statement, "To Hell With the Law," as they sped away to kill their victim, are shaking in their boots as they realize the reward will bring about their capture.

Tennesseans who have always had faith in Governor Browning patiently awaited some word from him as to the terrible affair, and the offer of a sufficient amount as reward for the apprehension of the mob members, coupled with his emphatic denunciation of their conduct goes even to a greater extent in justifying their faith in him.

Cleveland, Tenn. Banner
August 25, 1937

GOVERNOR SPEAKS OUT

Governor Gordon Browning spoke his mind relative to lynch law in Tennessee Tuesday when he announced a reward of $5,000 for information leading to apprehension and conviction of members of a mob which last week took Albert Goden, Negro prisoner, from the Tipton county sheriff and lynched him.

Governor Browning asserted that "this is an offense against the name and the decent feeling of our State . . . the station of the individual and the character of the offense he may have committed make no difference on the crime against society. . . . I condemn the act in the strongest terms and the State of Tennesee thoroughly despise and condemns this form of lawlessness."

Lynch law is a crime against society and Tennesseeans should be proud of the fact that we have a governor who will speak out so courageously against lynching. The Negroe's crime would have been swiftly dealt with no doubt, and have saved the State the disgrace of having this lynching charged against its records.

Judges are to blame to a large extent for lynchings due to the fact that the courts grant long cont nuances of murder cases, cunning lawyers knowing that the longer a case is delayed the more likely an acquittal.

"LIVING MEMORIAL" FOR ROGERS

During the last days of the recent session of Congres, President Roosevelt sent in a veto mesage in connection with a Houe bill authorizing an appropriation of $500-000 for Federal cooperation with the state of Oklahoma in the construction of a permanent memorial to Will Rogers at Claremore.

The type of memorial contemplated was not set out in the bill vetoed and the constituted one of the objections to it cited by the President. His views of the sort of memorial which would commemorate Will Rogers and which the President thought the beloved humorist himself would most appreciate, however supplied an item of interest attaching to the veto.

"I am sure, as one who knew the depth of Will Rogers' love for his fellow man," the President said, "that he would have desired a living memorial—something that would carry joy and gladness into the hearts of hose he left behind.

"With these thoughts in mind I cannot forebear to mention Will Rogers' deep love of children. You and I who knew him through the years are well aware of his devotion to childhood. He contributed generously to the care of handicapped children and in providing education for boys and girls who could not afford it."

The President's views upon the proper sort of memorial for Will Rogers accord with those of countless American people. No towering pile of stone no matter where its location, or its theme, would commemorate the life of the immitable Rogers. He himself would have laughed such a project to scorn. A living memorial, contributing in some way to the general supply of happiness and particularly to the happiness of those none too well supplied with that commodity would be unquestionably the most fitting manner of commemorating the beloved figure now gone to the "last round-up". Any other type of memorial would be like dressing a statue of him in a Roman toga, or crowning a cowboy replica in of him with a top hat.

Clarksville, Tenn., Star
August 26, 1937

THE GOVERNOR AND LYNCHING

Thoughtful citizens of Tennessee will have nothing but commendation for Gov. Gordon Browning's action in offering a reward of $5,000 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of members of a mob which lynched Albert Gooden, Tipton County Negro, last week.

In offering the maximum reward allowed by the state law, Governor Browning has served notice on followers of lynch law and mob violence that he intends to do his part in upholding the good name of the State in law enforcement circles.

The Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching has compiled some highly significant facts on lynchings in the five years, 1931-35. During this period 84 lynchings were reported, 72 being in the 12 Southern States. Of the total number lynched 75 were Negroes. Of those lynched nine were accused of no crime and 25 others were accused of minor offenses.

As Dr. Howard Odum writes in the Nation:

"Lynching attains none of the ends for which it has been defended. It proves no superiority. It clarifies no issues. It brings no happiness. It cheapens human life and lessens respect for human liberty and personality. It defeats the ends of justice. It violates all the better traditions of Southern honor and ideals. It sets the strong brutally over against the weak. It negates the South's claim for excellence and genius in the science of politics. Its costs is frightful in money and men. It drains off energies and resources. It blackens the reputation of every state. It cripples a race and handicaps a region."

Huntingdon, Tenn., Democrat
August 27, 1937

STATE OFFERS REWARD $5,000 IN LYNCHING

Maximum Sum for Information Leading to Conviction of Members of Mob

Gov. Gordon Browning Tuesday authorized the state's maximum reward of $5,000 for information leading to apprehension and conviction of members of the mob which last week took Albert Gooden, Negro prisoner, from the Tipton county sheriff and lynched him.

In announcing the reward, the Governor issued the following statement:

"It seems that on an occasion last week in Tipton county is flagrant violation of law and order, certain individuals unknown as yet seized one Albert Gooden who was in the lawful possession of the sheriff as a prisoner and lynched him.

"This is an offense against the name and decent feelings of our state. The station of the individual and the character of the offense he may have committed make no difference on this crime against society.

"I condemn the act in the stronges possible terms and state that Tennessee thoroughly despises and condemns this form of lawlessness.

"In order to be of the utmost possible assistance in bringing to justice those who were guilty of this heinous offense, under the authority given me by the code of my state, I hereby offer the maximum reward of $5,000 to anyone tendering that assistance to the authorities of our State that will lead to the apprehension and conviction of said individuals.

"And I further pledge every other cooperation I can as to the prosecuting authorities in bringing them to justice.

"Gordon Browning, Governor."

The Governor Acts

THE promptness with which Governor Gordon H. Browning of Tennessee acted to speed apprehension of members of the mob who lynched Albert Gooden in Tipton County on August 17, by setting aside an award of $5,000 for this purpose, coupled with his executive indictment of their conduct, is indeed heartening to those who believe in law and order.

No governor who takes seriously his oath of office, and his moral responsibility to the citizens of his state to preserve the majesty of the law, could ignore such a challenge as that the Tennessee mob hurled at state and federal law enforcement agencies when it cried aloud, "To hell with the law."

Coming as it does after the governors of Florida and Mississippi failed objectively to bring the perpetrators of recent lynchings in their states to justice, Governor Browning's action is indicative of the kind of leadership so sadly lacking in mob-imbued states before public opinion lost faith in 'states rights' in its application to the lynching evil.

It is fair to assume that, had the Tennessee governor's conception of law and citizenship rights been the code of the South ere this, effective statutes to make lynching a major crime might have been the rule rather than the exception, and the universal demand for a federal law to curb lynching might not have been so profound.

Somerville, Tenn., Falcon
September 9, 1937

JURY FINDS NO CLUES IN LYNCHING

Jurors Make No Report In Investigation Of Mob Death

The second attempt of the Tipton County grand jury to uncover clues that might lead to conviction of members of the mob that kidnapped and lynch Albert Gooden Mason negro, proved futile when the jury adjourned last Friday without making a report to Judge R. B. Baptist.

Atty. Gen. George C. Watkins announced that the case was not closed and that the jury would resume its inquiry Oct. 1. "If our investigation uncovers witnesses they may be able to throw light on the matter, they will be called before the grand jury when it reconvenes," Gen. Watkins said.

Sheriff W. J. Vaughan said that he and his dpeuties would continue the investigation. The state has offered a reward of $5,000 for information leading to the conviction of members of the mob.

Ten witnesses, most of them residents of Mason, were called during the two-day jury session last week.

Gooden, accused of slaying Chester Doyle, Mason city marshal and deputy sheriff, in a raid July 17 on a Mason dive operated by Gooden's brother, was taken from Sheriff Vaughan on the night of Aug. 16. He was hanged from a bridge between Gainesville and Atoka and his body riddled with bullets.

Tennessee

Lynchings-1937

Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5607

Kingsport, Tenn. Times
September 3. 1937

GOING AFTER LYNCHERS

It is obvious that Tipton county, Tennessee, is making a real effort to bring to justice the members of the cowardly mob which on August 16 snatched a negro, Albert Gooden, from the hands of officers and lynched him.

The Tipton county grand jury is conducting what has the appearance of a bona-fide investigation of the lynching. Ten or more witnesses have been subpoenaed to appear before the jury.

There is no reason why members of a cowardly gang like this should not be apprehended and punished, just as a single murderer is hunted down by the law and sent to the electric chair. It can be done and it should be done. It would be a wonderful thing for Tipton county to point the way to the South's emancipation from the curse of lynching.

And this is the way in which lynching must be abolished—by a supreme effort on the part of the decent people of the southern counties themselves. The evil can never be eliminated by unjust and tyrannical federal laws forced through congress by men of the type of Senator Wagner of New York, who knows nothing of the South, has probably never been in the South, and who hates the Southern states in general with a profound and deep-seated hatred.

If Senator Wagner succeeds in forcing through his anti-lynching bill, the southern senators should retaliate by proposing a bill which will place a heavy federal fine on any county in which a racketeering or gang outrage occurs, or in which there is a case of white slavery. This would be just as fair as fining the innocent people of a county because of a lynching in that county.

But we hope and believe that neither an anti-lynching nor an anti-racketeering federal law will be necessary. We believe that by constant effort the decent people of the South and of the North will stamp out both evils.

Lynchings - 1937
Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

Tennessee

5688

GRAND JURY PROBES LYNCHING OF NEGRO

Tipton County Judge Denounces Death of Negro

8-16-37

FIND BODY UNDER BRIDGE

Sweeping Investigation Ordered Seven Hours After Mutilated Form of Albert Gooden Located Near Mason

By JOHN MONTGOMERY
Staff Correspondent

COVINGTON, Tenn., Aug. 17.—Seven hours after deputy sheriffs discovered the bullet-riddled and mutilated body of Albert Gooden, 35, negro slayer of a Mason peace officer, a packed courtroom in the Tipton County Courthouse today heard Circuit Judge R. B. Baptist denounce the lynching as "one of the most horrible and disgraceful crimes of Tipton County," as he ordered a sweeping grand jury investigation.

The mud and blood covered body of the negro was found at 3 o'clock this morning in a narrow drainage ditch about 12 miles southeast of here, half way between Mason and Atoka. He had been hanged with a frayed plow line from a steel road bridge, but the line had broken and it was evident that death was caused by the score or more of bullet wounds.

Seized By Masked Men

Gooden was kidnaped at 9:15 o'clock last night near Brighton by six men, their faces bound in handkerchiefs, who held up Sheriff W. J. Vaughan in whose car the negro was being returned to the Covington jail.

Judge Baptist ordered the grand jury to make a sweeping and unprejudiced investigation into the act, citing in detail the state law which holds a sheriff responsible for the safety of his prisoner. The lynching was Tipton County's first.

"Everyone participating, aiding or abetting the crime is guilty of murder in the first degree," the judge declared. "And it is the duty of the grand jury to make not a perfunctory, but a full, complete and searching investigation and go to the bottom of this thing.

"If there is any man on the grand jury who feels that he cannot do this he should notify the court of that fact."

Three Persons Heard

Attorney General George C. Watkins immediately went before the grand jury and was closeted with them for half an hour. When he reappeared he said:

"The grand jury has already begun an investigation of the matter and some of the evidence has been submitted. It is convened indefinitely to complete this inquiry."

The first three persons to appear before the jury this afternoon were John Winford, Covington business man who was with Sheriff Vaughan when the negro was taken last night; D. B. Rice, former sheriff and now jailer here, and J. T. Scott, former sheriff, who was with deputies when the body was found.

Mr. Rice, as jailer, showed a group of men through the jail here the night of July 18 when the negro was sought shortly after the sheriff had taken the prisoner to Memphis for safe keeping.

Sheriff Vaughan announced tonight he would make a request tomorrow that he be called before the grand jury to explain what happened and to aid in clearing up the matter.

"I am anxious to do all I can in settling the case properly," he said.

Sheriff's Duties Cited

The section of the code quoted by Judge Baptist concerns the duties of the sheriff. It reads:

"Any sheriff who, either negligently or wilfully or by want of proper diligence, firmness, and promptness in the use of all the powers with which he is invested by law, allows a prisoner to be taken from the jail of his county, or to be taken from his custody, and put to death by violence, shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor in office, and, upon indictment therefor and convicted thereof, shall be fined at the discretion of the court, and shall also, by the judgment of the court, forfeit his office, and be declared forever incapable of holding any office of trust or profit in this state."

The discovery of the body of the chocolate colored, slender negro climaxed a six-hour search for the slayer and the six masked men that occupied the attention of all deputies and peace officers in Tipton County, and kept a large part of Covington citizenry awake until dawn. The discoverers, Chief Deputy V. W. Pickens and Mr. Scott, were making a routine search of all roads in the vicinity of the kidnaping, when they noticed a pistol lying on the timbers of a bridge they were crossing.

Pistol Found First

Upon alighting they discovered the pistol to be that of Sheriff Vaughan. All six cartridges had been fired.

"We saw that the bridge was literally covered with exploded pistol and rifle shells," Mr. Scott said. "We began looking around with a flashlight and there below the bridge was the body of the negro."

The body lay face down in the ditch, the head in the water. Around the neck was knotted a double amateurish noose, connected to a line that passed around the hands, still bound with Sheriff Vaughan's handcuffs.

From a metal bridge grider hung the other end of the rope, its end frayed as though snapped.

Body Bullet-Riddled

The negro's body was literally punched with bullet holes, with no space as large as a man's hand unscathed. Deep gashes marked the head and face. He was dressed in flimsy jeans and singlet. He wore but one shoe, having lost one in his struggles when kidnaped.

Sheriff Vaughan ordered the body removed to the floor of the bridge where it lay, guarded by him, until a negro undertaker could be summoned from Covington. Later in the day he released it to the brother of the dead negro, an undertaker at Mason.

The site of the lynching is in the center of a large negro population, although many white farmers of comfortable means cultivate the fertile bottom lands.

Secrecy Guarded Trip

Seven hours before Sheriff Vaughan found the body at the bridge, he had removed Gooden from the jail at Memphis where he had taken him July 18 for safe keeping. He had tried to maintain an air of informal secrecy by going to Memphis without deputies, accompanied only by Mr. Winford, a local haberdasher, who until the sheriff had driven to the jail did not know of the plans to transport the prisoner.

With the negro in the front seat, handcuffed, and the sheriff driving, the trio started home. As they rode along Mr. Vaughan sought to make the negro confess to the shooting of the Mason marshal, Chester Doyle, but Gooden refused to commit himself.

About a mile south of Brighton, which is only a few miles from the Shelby County line, a car, in which six men were riding, overhauled them and forced them to the side of the road. The negro first sensed what had happened.

"Them's Mason men," he cried.

One man leaped from the moving car and thrust a pistol in the sheriff's face, disarming the officer and ordering him to keep his hands in the air. Another opened the door and ordered Mr. Winford to step out. The rest went over to the other side and began to drag the negro from the car.

Sheriff Vaughan pleaded with the men to "let the law take its course." He pointed out that Gooden was sure to be indicted the next day—when he appeared before the grand jury, the object of his return to Covington — and that the evidence against him would mean his execution.

"To hell with that," one of them exclaimed. "This is the ——— we want."

While Mr. Winford was being searched by one of the men, and another was holding off Mr. Vaughan with a pistol, the remainder fought with Gooden, dragging him, screaming and tussling, to the other car. At one point the negro, by suddenly straightening himself, knocked one of the men down and nearly escaped, but he was quieted by a blow with the butt of a pistol.

License Torn Off

The men then drove off in the direction of Brighton, first ordering the sheriff, under pain of being fired upon, to give them a chance for a getaway.

"As they drove off I tried to read their license plate," Mr. Vaughan said. "But they had torn it off. I could not identify any of the men; none of their voices were familiar."

The two men then raced to Covington where deputies were summoned and a routine search instituted.

Gooden was charged with killing the Mason marshal when sheriff's officers raided a craps game July 17, and the negro is said to have resented Mr. Doyle's treatment of a negro woman. He had twice been indicted for liquor violations and has a generally bad reputation around Mason.

State Officials Deplore Lynching

NASHVILLE, Aug. 17.—(AP)—State officials deplored today the lynching near Covington of Albert Gooden, 35-year-old negro. Governor Browning, who is on a vacation in Minnesota, was not available for comment.

His secretary, David V. Mankin, said: "Of course, any lynching, any time, anywhere, is unfortunate."

Atty. Gen. Roy H. Beeler commented: "I'm sorry it happened, in the State of Tennessee or anywhere else. The law should always be permitted to take its course.

Seventh Lynching In South In 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Aug. 17.—(AP)—The lynching today of a 35-year-old negro near Covington, Tenn., brought to seven the number of lives taken by mobs in the South in 1937.

It was the first for Tennessee, information at the Tuskegee Institute showed.

Other lynchings, all of negroes, listed by the Tuskegee department, were Florida, two; Mississippi, two; Alabama, one, and Georgia, one.

Orders Lynch Probe

Judge R. B. Baptist

LYNCHING PROBE JURY FAILS TO OBTAIN CLUE

Tipton Countians Recess Without Report

10 WITNESSES TESTIFY

Heard Shots, Saw Nothing, Is Trend of Answers in Investigation of Mason Negro's Killing

Special to The Commercial Appeal

COVINGTON, Tenn., Aug. 18.—Without making a report, the Tipton County Grand Jury recessed this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock until Sept. 1 after hearing 10 witnesses in connection with an investigation into the lynching early yesterday morning of Albert Gooden, 35-year-old negro accused of the slaying July 17 of Marshal Chester Doyle of Mason.

The jury, ordered into special session by Circuit Judge R. B. Baptist seven hours after the negro's bullet-riddled body was found in a drainage ditch 12 miles southeast of here, heard seven more witnesses today after three testified yesterday.

Decries Action

Judge Baptist told the jury yesterday the lynching was "one of the most horrible and disgraceful crimes of Tipton County" as he ordered a sweeping inquiry. The negro was taken from Sheriff W. J. Vaughan at 9:15 o'clock Monday night near Brighton by six masked men as he was being returned to Covington from the Shelby County jail at Memphis.

Several of the witnesses today said they "heard shots" but "saw nothing," leaving the jury as much in the dark as Sheriff Vaughan, who said he was unable to recognize any of the men who forced his car from the Jeff Davis Highway and took his prisoner.

The sheriff asked last night that he be allowed to appear before the jury, but he was not called today. Shortly after the jury recessed, he and Attorney General G. C. Watkins and Former Sheriff J. T. Scott went to the scene of the lynching to continue the probe.

Continue Inquiry

The jurors likely will continue their investigation when they reconvene, as the regular session of court does not meet again until November.

Appearing were Deputy William Hoffman of Brighton, assistant jailer here the night of July 18 when a mob sought to get the negro; Squire John M. Marshall of Mason, Kirk Vandergrif, night marshal of Mason; Sidney Murphy of Burleson, six miles south of Covington; and A. B. Cothran, his son, Ellis Cothran, and Robert Holden, who all live near the scene of the lynching.

Sheriff Vaughan said he could shed no light on the identities of the men who, he said, wore handkerchiefs over their faces. He said he thought the men were from the Mason locality because the terror-stricken negro shouted "them's Mason fellers."

Guilty of Murder

Judge Baptist told the Grand Jury that "every one participating, aiding or abetting" in the lynching is guilty of murder in the first degree," and he warned them against a "perfunctory" inquiry.

The lynching was Tipton County's first since the Civil War.

Members of the Grand Jury, in informal discussion at noon, said the investigation had not produced "a worthwhile lead."

Grand Jurors Baffled Over Lynching Case

Group Delays Report On Mob Slaying Of Tennessee Negro

COVINGTON, Tenn., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Witnesses who "heard shots," but "saw nothing" talked to the Tipton County Grand Jury today, leaving the jurors as much in the dark as ever concerning the identities of six masked men who strung up a bullet-riddled body with a frayed plow line early yesterday.

The grand jury adjourned at 4:30 p.m. until September 1, without making a report of its investigation into the lynching. Presumably the investigation will be continued then as the regular session of the body is not scheduled until November.

Immediately following adjournment District Attorney General George C Watkins, Sheriff W. J. Vaughan and former Sheriff J. T. Scott went to the scene of the lynching. They did not announce the purpose of the move.

Laughing at Sheriff W. J. Vaughan's plea that the courts be allowed to decide the prisoner's fate, the mobsmen, shouting "to hell with the law," snatched Albert Gooden, 35, negro, from the sheriff's custody, pierced his body with 30 bullet holes and left it suspended from a bridge 12 miles southeast of here.

The sheriff was removing the negro from a Memphis, Tenn., jail to Covington to face a murder charge for the slaying of City Marshal Chester Doyle of Mason, Tenn., July 17. The prisoner was incarcerated at Memphis immediately after his arrest when a mob formed at Covington.

Sheriff Vaughan was called before the jury. He told newsmen he could shed no light on the identities of the men, who, he said, wore handkerchiefs over their faces. He said he thought the men were from the Mason locality because the terror-stricken negro shouted "them's Mason fellers," when the prisoner saw them crowd the sheriff's car off the highway pavement near Brighton.

Circuit Judge R. B. Baptist told the grand jury that "every one participating, aiding or abetting in the lynching is guilty of murder in the first degree," and warned them against a "perfunctory" inquiry.

The lynching was Tipton County's first since the Civil War between the States.

Members of the grand jury told newsmen in informal discussion at noon the investigation had not produced "a worthwhile lead."

"We're checking every little tip we can get," one juror said, "but the witnesses we questioned said they knew nothing about the lynching."

Let Not Delay Aid Lynchers

It is to be regretted that the Tipton County Grand Jury found it necessary to adjourn until Sept. 1 instead of completing its investigation of the lynching of a negro accused of slaying Marshal Chester Doyle of Mason.

Suspicion of indifference often accompanies delay. Tipton has a blot on its escutcheon that requires immediate effacement. A long record for law enforcement has been shattered by six hot-heads who not only defied a sheriff but actually overpowered him and took his prisoner and arms.

We do not urge undue haste—the deplorable results of improperly considered action are brutally dramatized by the lynching itself. We do believe, however, that the Grand Jury of Tipton County could well afford to stay in session to pursue its investigation. The only hope now is that the intervening weeks will not lessen its zeal to seek out the culprits who dared to seize the majesty of the law with their own gruesome hands.

"We didn't find any whisky, not even an empty bottle," Mr. Pickens said upon his return. "We searched the place and also adjoining buildings."

LYNCH JURY ADJOURNS WITHOUT FINDING CLUE

Attorney General Says Case Will Not Be Closed

SESSION SET FOR OCTOBER

Investigators At Covington Apparently Baffled Over Death Of Negro Aug. 16 — Seized By Six Men

By MALCOLM ADAMS
Staff Correspondent

COVINGTON, Tenn., Sept. 2.—Apparently baffled in its investigation of the kidnaping and lynching of a negro accused of slaying a Mason peace officer, the Tipton County Grand Jury adjourned today until Oct. 1, without making a report to Circuit Judge R. B. Baptist.

Although no mention of the lynching was made by the grand jury, Atty. Gen. George C. Watkins immediately announced that the case was not closed and that the jury will resume its inquiry next month.

Courthouse Packed

"If our investigation uncovers witnesses who may be able to throw light on the matter, they will be called before the grand jury when it reconvenes," General Watkins said.

The courthouse was packed with spectators gathered for the trial of a negro on a criminal assault charge as Squire J. Lauderdale Richardson, grand jury foreman, made a report on several other matters considered during a two-day session.

"Gentlemen, you are excused until Oct. 1 at 9 o'clock in the morning," Judge Baptist said, without mentioning the lynching matter.

Special Probe Term

After adjournment of court at noon, Judge Baptist said that the lynching inquiry was not closed. Mr. Watkins pointed out that the next regular grand jury session is scheduled in November, and that the Oct. 1 session will be for the purpose of continuing the lynching probe.

Six men seized Albert Gooden, negro, accused of killing Marshal Chester Doyle of Mason, the night of Aug. 16. The suspect was taken from Sheriff W. J. (Will) Vaughan, who was returning him from Memphis, where he had been taken when a Mason group visited the jail in search of the negro on July 18.

Ten Witnesses Heard

Ten witnesses were heard by the grand jury during the two-day session. Bill Bone, carpenter, of Stanton, was the only person to appear before the jurors today on the lynching matter, Mr. Bone, who lives in Haywood County, declined to discuss the nature of his testimony.

Covington and Tipton County citizens were not surprised when the grand jury did not report today, since Judge Baptist had warned them against a "perfunctory investigation" of the abduction and slaying of the negro.

Jury Members Named

Members of the grand jury which will resume its inquiry of the lynching Oct. 1 are: J. W. Anderson, farmer; Robert Deverell, farmer; Josh J. Miller, retired farmer; W. B. Kent, farmer; Cdis Jones, farmer-merchant; Jim Hadley, transfer company owner; Will Reid, secretary of the Democratic Executive Committee in Tipton County; Squire R. G. Milton, J. L. Combs, farmer; R. L. Owen, farmer; Paul Shoaf, school principal; Squire G. P. French and Mr. Richardson, the foreman.

Sheriff Vaughan said that he and his deputies will continue their investigation of the lynching. Officials hope that the state's offer of a $5000 reward for the capture and conviction of the lynchers will aid in "breaking" the case.

"I have nothing to hide in this matter," Sheriff Vaughan said. "We will continue our investigation as best we can."

"Was Not Making Raid"

Sheriff Vaughan explained today that he was not making a raid on a gambling dive at Mason when Marshal Doyle was killed.

"I was called to Mason by Mr. Doyle and another officer, Kirk Vandergriff," the sheriff said. "Mr. Vandergriff, the night watchman, told me that Gooden had cursed him on the street.

"Mr. Doyle asked me to go down to a house with him. When we got there we discovered a negro craps game."

After Gooden's arrest on a charge of murder, a mob visited the jail on July 18, and the sheriff hurried the prisoner to Memphis.

Sheriff Vaughan reiterated his statement that other officers and even members of his family did not know he planned to return the negro to Covington from Memphis on the night he was lynched.

Slipped Away Quietly

"I didn't want to arouse any suspicions," he explained. "If I had left with several deputies there might have been something said about it. Instead I slipped away quietly."

The sheriff said he made only one stop between Memphis and the Texas.

Lynchings-1937

Legal Punishment of Lynchers.

5609

Texas Rangers Probe Flogging

DALLAS, TEXAS, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Texas rangers were ordered to Dallas today for the second time in recent weeks of labor trouble after the reported abduction and flogging of Edwin Bowen, who said he was a former employe of the Kansas City Ford plant.

Police said Bowen received a broken nose and numerous cuts and bruises when he was abducted by several men, taken to the outskirts of town, and severely beaten with a rubber hose.

In Austin, Gov. James V. Allred backed orders from Albert Sidney Johnston, chairman of the Texas public safety commission, who telephoned immediately after the abduction to order rangers sent here. Allred posted a $250 reward, "for information leading to the arrest and conviction of each person involved in this brutal flogging."

Dallas Police Chief R. L. Jones said he had assigned two of his best men to the case.

Bowen told a Dallas News reporter he formerly worked for the Kansas City plant of the Ford Motor Company, where he was a member of the C. I. O. He said his dues were not paid since August, and he had never been a labor organizer.

He said as he applied for a job here today he was abducted by two cars of men, taken near White Rock Lake, and beaten.

Bowen called police who took him to a hospital. He walked from there to the tourist camp where he was staying.

Gov. Allred sent rangers to Dallas recently during a milliners' strike to preserve order.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5671
5671

Anti-Lynch Scene Changes

Northern Democrats Now Push For Enactment To Hold Colored Support Taken From Republicans

BY GEORGE MORRIS

WASHINGTON, April 17.—During the past 20 years agitation for an anti-lynching law has amounted to little more than a formal bid for the northern negro vote. With Republicans controlling both branches of Congress by preponderant majorities most of the time, they might have passed almost any kind of anti-lynching law if they had been serious about it.

But the first appearance of a suggestion of a filibuster by opponents caused advocates of the measure to toss the towel in the ring and concede defeat. The battle seldom went beyond the first round before advocates of the bill admitted they were outwinded and the fight gone out of them.

Today the scene has changed completely. Northern Democrats have taken over leadership for enactment of an anti-lynching law. The negroes have shifted party allegiance from Republicans to Democrats, and the Democrats propose to hold them at any cost. The Republicans cannot be said to have become advocates of lynching, but since negroes have become Democrats they have at least adopted a more tolerant attitude toward it.

They might even admit under compulsion that there are provocations in which lynching of negroes would be justified on a wholesale scale, particularly in extreme instances where the negro holds the balance of power and exercises it by voting Democratic.

Direct Provocation Beclouds Essentials

Like any other issue in which the fundamentals are beclouded with hysteria, it is difficult to get away from the fallacy that those who vote for an anti-lynching law oppose lynching, and those who vote against it are in favor of lynching. Like other questions of vast implications, the real issue is lost sight of in favor of incidental provocation.

For example, the lynching of two negroes in Mississippi was stronger argument in favor of an anti-lynching law than the argument against its constitutionality or the decidedly more grave and far-reaching authority of the federal government to usurp the rights of states and assume authority over a specific crime.

Nothing could be more fallacious than to argue if a state, through its constituted authorities, fails to enforce its laws that it then becomes the duty of the federal government to step in and enforce them. Contrary to the usual conception, there are still a few rights reserved to the states. Formerly it was contended that the power of the federal government was limited to authority ceded it by the states, and in the absence of cession of authority, it meant that the authority was especially reserved to the states. An act of Congress was considered inadequate to vest the federal government with authority belonging exclusively to the states.

Present Congress Legislates Lightly

Undoubtedly that relation between the states and the federal government still exists, and no "increasingly enlightened view with reference to the Constitution" on the part of the Supreme Court could possibly escape that obvious fact.

One of the chief criticisms directed against the present Congress is its disposition to pass laws about which there are grave doubts as to their constitutionality. It is contended that it is better to pass a bill which in all probability is unconstitutional and take a chance with Justice Roberts, than pass no bills at all. That is one of the dangers the opposition conceives in the anti-lynching bill.

As a vote-getting bill, where votes determine election results, the anti-lynching measure has a powerful appeal. If the Constitution means what it says, Senator Borah and other constitutional lawyers can satisfy any reasonable person that the proposed act is without a leg to stand on. Passage would mean that Tammany would take over Harlem and numerous other former Republican strongholds would be made permanently Democratic, even though the act were held unconstitutional. The political advantage of passing the bill is obvious.

States Make Their Troubles

Inevitably there will be anti-lynching legislation. The Senate may be able to stop it this session with a filibuster, despite a majority in favor of it. The states brought the trouble upon themselves. Trials are conducted, if there are trials, in communities where lynching occurs, and when there is sufficient provocation to take the law into its hands it can hardly be expected that the community will convict itself.

Perhaps those states that feel that lynching is the only adequate punishment for given crimes could satisfy themselves by enacting laws providing for putting offenders to death by burning at the stake.

In Washington With

GEORGE MORRIS

South and Mobs

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Eastern newspapers, which have taken the trouble to analyze the vote on the anti-lynching bill in the House, have discovered that there are only three high-minded statesmen in the south, Representatives J. B. Carroll Reece and [illegible] Taylor, East Tennessee Republicans, and Maury Maverick, Democrat, of Texas, whose name is sufficiently descriptive. They were the only southerners to vote for passage of the bill.

More analytical minds might have concluded that a bill which could command the support of only two mountain Republicans and a Texas Maverick meant something was wrong with the bill, rather than with the entire southern delegation in the House, with three exceptions, two of whom consistently follow Republican leadership.

UNDER ORDINARY circumstances the disposition would be to suspect that there was something on the side of those who found sufficient reason for opposing the measure. It would have been easier and more logical to have taken that attitude than to clothe Messrs. Reece, Taylor and Maverick with the cloak of greatness and assume they voice the needs of the province to the south. But the commentators do not stop there. Every southern member of the House, they assume, with the three exceptions, favors lynchings. Everyone except Reece, Taylor and Maverick is out of step.

SHOULD THE BILL pass the Senate and receive approval of the president, which it will unless blocked by parliamentary strategy, the situation will be infinitely worse than it is now. That is why southern members opposed its passage in the House.

The south is making progress toward abolishing lynching. Left to its own devices lynching will be eradicated, as it was in the west when laws became adequate to deal with horse and cattle thieves without the necessity for stringing them up or otherwise disposing of them summarily. The only governor on record as indorsing lynching was not from the south, but from California. Today when a governor is known to be determined to prevent lynching and take the necessary steps to punish members of a mob, lynching has already come to an end.

AS A MATTER of fact, lynching had little influence upon those who voted for or against the bill in the House. Its advocates were composed largely of persons who have a conviction that the south is not capable of governing itself and relish an opportunity to register support of a return to carpetbag days with all its implications. Its opponents were those who resent intrusion of the federal government into matters belonging exclusively to the states.

The north was not sufficiently agitated over the Lindbergh kidnaping to abandon all restraint and go as far with legislation as it proposes to do with lynching. The "Lindbergh law" gives the federal government authority only when a person is kidnaped in one state and carried to another. Under the "Lindbergh law," the federal government would not have jurisdiction in a repetition of the Lindbergh kidnaping. It would be left to the authorities of New Jersey.

PAINS WERE TAKEN to make it clear that the anti-lynching bill was aimed at the south. For example, a person may enter a bank and shoot down and kill three tellers, emerge and be killed by a group of outraged citizens. The federal government would not be authorized to intervene and prosecute those who killed the robber. There is no law requiring the county to indemnify the family of the deceased murderer and robber. Cases of that kind happen more frequently in the north than in the south.

But if a rapist and murderer is captured and taken from officers and lynched, then, under the anti-lynching bill the whole power of the federal government is invoked to prosecute and convict members of the mob. The victim of the perpetrator of the crime is lost sight of entirely.

TO ILLUSTRATE by what might reasonably be a fair example, a child is brutally attacked and murdered. The perpetrator of the crime is arrested. Members of the family seek to avenge the crime against the child by taking the criminal away from officers and killing him. Thereupon the federal law says that the county, in which the parents of the child may be the principal taxpayers, must indemnify the family of the criminal in addition to being prosecuted.

In order to protect their gangsters, the authors of the anti-lynching bill were obliged to leave a loophole through which one could drive the proverbial yoke of oxen. The federal government can intervene only in cases where criminals are taken from the custody of officers. It was necessary to make this restriction to prevent the federal government from taking a hand in gang wars. But it serves to nullify the whole purpose of the proposed law.

It means where danger of mob violence is imminent, authorities simply will not make an arrest and assume responsibility for protection. They will save counties from indemnity by avoiding the formality of arrest. Sensible law-enforcing officers will leave the matter to the discretion of mobs and preserve states' rights.

Albany-Decatur, Ala. Daily
April 17, 1937

Anti-Lynch Bill

Advocates of the nefarious anti-lynching bill contend that its passage would serve as a protection to defendants, particularly to negro defendants in the South.

But would it?

Should the bill which passed the house this week finally become law, any officer who permits a prisoner to escape his custody and be injured by a mob would be subject to a fine of $5,000 and imprisonment for a term of from five to 25 years

...ty in which the prisoner was seized or put to death would have to pay the family of the deceased a sum ranging from $2,000 to $5,000.

Considering the chance that an officer runs when he makes an arrest in a particularly reprehensible case, what would his attitude be? Would he run the risk and make the arrest, or would he simply fail to take the prisoner into official custody and thereby permit the mob to wreak its vengeance without endangering himself?

In other words, would the officer decide the matter was of not sufficient concern to him to cause him to run the risk of paying a $5,000 fine and serving 25 years in jail, and fail to act, or would he make the arrest, take all the chances mentioned above and still have to run the risk of killing neighbors and being killed?

Whoever thought of the idea of a federal anti-lynching bill not only had no regard for the constitutional rights of the states of the union, but had mighty little knowledge of human nature!

Wilson, N. C., Times
April 2, 1937

RACE QUESTION COMES UP AGAIN

Some Southerners Are Fearful of Federal Aid Future As There Is Possibility Race Issue May Rise In Schools; Anti-Lynching Fight Soon.

Washington, April 2.—The race question, which has been to the forefront in the house of representatives in connection with anti-lynching bills which will come to a vote on the floor not later than April 12, is also expected to be indirectly at issue if and when the house ever votes on the bill providing grants to states for aid in conducting their public schools on which the house committee on education is now holding hearings.

Clyde A. Erwin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction for North Carolina, was scheduled to testify yesterday, but his testimony was postponed until today because of a large array of other witnesses, including C. E. Huston a Washington negro who is legal counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

North Carolina is particularly interested in the proposed bill because the unusually high proportion of children in the state would cause it to benefit to a considerably larger extent that would be the case were the apportionment made on the basis of the entire population instead of on the basis of the population of children of school age. North Carolina, with approximately one-fortieth of the country's population, would receive more than one-thirtieth of the fund; and while North Carolina ranks twelfth in population, its $3,154,615 out of the initial $100,000,000 for the first year would be the eighth largest allotment.

Throughout the hearings before the education committee, which began on Monday, there have been more negroes than whites in attendance, as the negroes expect the bill to result in substantial gains for them in southern states.

Although Mr. Erwin and Jule B. Warren, secretary of the North Carolina Education Association who is here with him, warmly approved the bill, the third member of the party, Lloyd Griffin, secretary of the North Carolina School Commission, has not committed himself either way and is regarded as luke-warm toward the proposition.

Columbia, S. C. State
April 19, 1937

Again a "Solid South"—Responsibility for Federal Anti-Lynching Legislation.

Who said the "Solid South" is but a tradition; a condition mythical!

Whoever he is, there is much, very much in his assertion. Call the roll on the once honored principle of the Democratic party, "tariff for revenue only," and whence now would come the supporting responses? To many Southern congressmen it would be something new, which they had not "digested." But many who understand it would be impelled to vote for protection; protection sugar-coated with the prefix "reasonable"—for some of their influential constituents "need" protection other sections are furnishing the fighters against high tariffs.

Call the roll on the question of states' rights on almost any imaginable issue but one, and the South would be found "scattering" in support. If the issue should be the sovereignty of the states on one side, and the surrender of that sovereignty in exchange for, say, $100,000,000, we greatly fear the noble phalanx at Washington representing the South—we do not claim they would be misrepresenting the South—would vote to "take the dough." Yet we believe that in days of old when Southern knights were bold—in the days long before the popular primaries—Southern statesmen not only had convictions on this issue but were ready to make any sacrifice to support those convictions.

Times have changed and Southerners have changed with them. But on one, and only one issue, is the South changeless. On one question do the representatives of the South vote with rock-like solidness.

When the roll was called in the house of representatives last week on the bill giving federal courts jurisdiction in cases of lynching, not one Southerner faltered in his sacred obligation to uphold the integrity of the sovereign states. On that one issue they are gloriously "solid for the constitution."

Speakers from the South charged Northern and Western Democrats with attacking the stronghold of their party; attacking the fortress where the spirit of the party was kept alive during the long years of political adversity. True, quite true. People are forgetful. Even Southern congressmen have forgotten that a supreme court, many of them have turned against, saved the South from that which would have been a thousand times worse than federal jurisdiction over lynching cases.

Again speakers cried: "Give the South a chance to clean before her own doorstep!" And that cry, per se, is certainly reasonable. But the reason that it now fails to be heeded is that Southerners have been crying to Southerners for a half century to do this very thing, and that in that long span of years not more than three candidates for governors or three candidates for congress in the "deep South" have gone upon the stump, made an issue of the crime against civilization, and denounced lynching and lynchers.

Right there is the trouble, gentlemen of the South. By side-stepping, pussy-footing, you, as leaders, have condoned that which you should have boldly condemned. Did any congressman—senator or representative—ever support The State's campaign against lynching, a campaign begun the day the paper was founded? When forty-one years ago a mass meeting denounced The State, and burned in effigy its editor, for denouncing an atrocious mob-murder, did any congressman give the then struggling newspaper one word of support or comfort? The answers are emphatically, "No."

The fact is, gentlemen, the fight against lynching has been persistently conducted in the South, in season and out of season, by a few, a very few, newspapers. One South Carolina governor, D. C. Heyward, made a valiant, open fight against the crime. One or two other governors made a stand against it. But although it was apparent that a national sentiment was rising in opposition, despite the decrease in lynching brought about by the public sentiment created by the press, congressmen, candidates for reelection, remained silent on the issue; they gave their people no warning.

If the South be "humiliated," as congressmen now declare, we charge them and their predecessors in office with responsibility by their long maintained failure to fight with real militancy for law and order.

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW PETITION IS VICTORIOUS

Bill to Come Up On Floor of House April 12

(Special to The Amsterdam News.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31.—The securing of the [illegible]t of the 218 signatures to Congressman Joseph Gavagan's discharge Petition No. 5 on his anti-lyinching bill here, Monday, has assured the taking of a vote on the bill almost immediately.

Presentation of the signed petition brings the bill before the House for limited debate and a mandatory vote on April 12.

The completion of the petition, hailed as a great victory by supporters of the bill, was also seen as a knockout blow to the recent desperate efforts of Congressman Clayton W. Sum[illegible] Democrat of the House Judiciary Committee, to block prompt and open consideration of the bill by announcing his committee would hold hearings on anti-lynching bills this week.

Texan, Mitchell Defeated.

Chairman Hatton's move, which also brought Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois, only Negro congressman, into an unfavorable light because of the latter's support of it, was characterized, when it was revealed, as a deliberate attempt to prevent the legislation from coming up on the floor of the House at this session. The filing of the petition, however, forces the bill out on the floor regardless of hearings, according to Walter White, secretary National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who is here.

Although the names of congressmen who signed the petition were not available, organizations actively engaged in support of the anti-lynching movement reported that a tremendous amount of volunteer work in visiting and interviewing congressman and their secretaries and in checking up daily on the progress of signatures on the Gavagan petition had been done.

Among those most actively engaged getting signatures and "jacking up" congressmen were Mrs. Roberta Hastie, mother of the newly-confirmed federal judge of the Virgin Islands, William H. Hastie; Mrs. Gertrude Stone, member of the executive committee of the District of Columbia branch of the N. A. A. C. P.; Mrs Dorothy Bristol, wife of a prominent Camden, N. J., pastor; Miss Marjorie Penney, executive secretary, Young People's Fellowship, Philadelphia, and Miss Elizabeth Eastman, Washington correspondent of the national board of the Y. W. C. A.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5672

Winston-Salem, N. C. Journal
April 13, 1937

Hancock Only Tar Heel Voting To Take Up Anti-Lynching Bill

By WALTER BROWN
(From The Journal's Washington Bureau)

Washington, April 12.—With the exception of Representative Frank Hancock, all members of the North Carolina House delegation today voted a loud "no" on the motion to discharge the rules committee and take up the Gavagan anti-lynching bill.

The motion carried by a vote of 281 to 108.

There was one other Southern Democrat besides Hancock who voted to discharge the committee. He was Representative Maury Maverick of Texas.

Although favoring federal anti-lynching legislation, Hancock will vote against the Gavagan bill. Maverick will go the whole hog and support the measure when it comes up for consideration tomorrow.

Hancock said he would support the anti-lynching bill sponsored by Representauve Arthur Mitchell, Negro Democrat from Illinois. The only difference between the Mitchell and Gavagan bills is that the former places the burden of proof of violation on the government, while the latter forces the county officer in custody of a person lynched to prove he was diligent in his duties.

Officers found guilty of negligence are subject to heavy fines and imprisonment and counties in which lynchings take place must pay between $2,000 and $10,000 to the family of the deceased.

The Gavagan bill is expected to pass the House tomorrow by as large majority as the vote today to discharge the committee.

Any effort to pass the bill in the Senate will be met by a well-organized Southern filibuster. Senator Josiah W. Bailey is among those who will help speak to death any effort to pass the legislation.

Charlotte, N. C. Observer
April 18, 1937

Anti-Lynch Bill Passed.

THE HOUSE PASSED by a vote of 276 to 119 and sent to the Senate Thursday night an anti-lynching bill introduced by Representative Gavagan, New York Democrat. The vote came after six hours of heated debate Thursday, which followed general argument on previous days.

Southern representatives generally, including those from North Carolina and South Carolina, put up a gallant fight against the measure but the opposition was overridden by more than the two-to-one vote which had been forecast.

The measure authorizes the Federal government agencies to intervene in mob crimes and prosecute the participants in the United States courts, whose juries are drawn from all over half a State or a third of a State and are not supposed to be subject to the influences of local sympathies for the members of the mob as juries drawn from the county where a lynching occurs and where the public is liable to be inflamed.

Such have been the arguments of advocates of a Federal anti-lynching law, together with the argument that lynchings are a blot and a disgrace upon the whole United States and not one county or State alone, and therefore the Federal government should have power to deal with the perpetrators. It was pointed out that the States will not or cannot—in many instances—bring members of lynching mobs to justice, and it was contended that therefore it is up to the Federal government.

On the other hand, opponents stressed the argument that such a law would invade States' rights and that Federal courts and authorities would not prove more effective in curbing lynchings than State and county courts and authorities, because the personnel of Federal enforcement must consist of citizens of the same State in each instance as the personnel of Federal juries and courts and law enforcement officers.

The Gavagan measure, which is the first of its kind to pass either house since 1922, would subject an officer who permits a prisoner to be taken from his custody and killed or injured, to a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to five years. Mob participants would be subject to from 5 to 25 years imprisonment.

Republicans generally joined northern Democrats in supporting the House bill.

Senator Borah meanwhile issued a statement condemning what he called an "effort to force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

House passage of the Gavagan bill by a two-to-one vote was predicted Thursday morning by Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn, both of whom expressed opposition to the measure, taking the same position as other southern Democrats opposed to the bill, that it is an unconstitutional invasion of the rights of the States.

Bankhead expressed the belief that the Senate would pass the measure if it came up for a vote in that branch.

The galleries were filled during the warm debate of the measure in the House, the spectators including many negroes.

Thursday there was talk of a filibuster to prevent a vote that day, but leaders asserted they would keep the House in session until it voted.

GOVERNOR HUGH WHITE of Mississippi notified Chairman H. W. Sumners of the national House judiciary committee Wednesday that he had requested court officials to make a full investigation of the torturing and lynching of two negroes in that state Tuesday.

The double lynching occurred while the lower house of Congress was debating the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, and while the Governor was telling the Farm Chemurgic conference in Jackson that he was "justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in 15 months."

LYNCHERS BURN VICTIM.

THE 218 HOUSE MEMBERS who had signed the petition to recall the Gavagan anti-lynching bill from the judiciary committee, and bring it to the floor for consideration, overran the opposition Monday in obtaining favorable action to force debate on the measure.

Consideration of similar bills had been denied for 15 years by the expedient of keeping them in committee. Ten days ago the anti-lynching bill introduced by the negro congressman from Chicago, Representative Mitchell, was killed by the committee.

Monday the House voted 281 to 180 to consider the bill introduced by Representative Gavagan, New York City's Harlem district congressman.

All the representatives from North Carolina except Frank W. Hancock voted against bringing up the measure for consideration, as did all South Carolina representatives. Hancock said he would vote against the bill, although he voted to bring it to the House floor.

Near Duck Hill, Miss., Tuesday afternoon two negroes were tortured and lynched by a mob of more than 100 white men within two hours after they had pleaded innocent in Montgomery county circuit court to a charge of murdering a white man. A third negro suspected of complicity was whipped severly and run out of the county, narrowly escaping the fate of the other two.

The two negroes were taken from Sheriff Wright and two deputies as they were being led from the court house to be returned to the jail to await trial Thursday. Handcuffed, the prisoners were placed in a waiting school bus, into which members of the mob piled while others followed in automobiles.

The caravan sped to the neighborhood where the white man had been killed. The negroes were taken to a wooded spot, stripped to the waist, chained to two trees. One was seared on the bare flesh with the flames of a blow torch while they were commanded to tell what they knew of the murder. Both were said to have confessed to the mob as the torch was used.

Dispatches from Berlin the same day said the entire German press appeared with banner lines atop "Horrible Details of the Negro Lynchings" in Mississippi.

Officially sponsored comment on the lynchings of two negroes by a Duck Hill mob of white men contrasted them with "humane German racial laws," but refrained from direct attacks on the United States.

German readers were told that "an outcry of disgust has swept the American public."

Huntsville, Ala., Times
April 16, 1937

The Anti-Lynch Bill

It is profoundly disturbing that the House should have passed, and by such a large majority, the anti-lynching bill last night.

It clearly has its origin in political consideration, for it is fathered and has been pressed by a Tammany Democrat, the majority of whose constitutents are negroes.

It was supported in the main by Northern and Eastern Democrats, who seek to forever wean the negro from the Republican party by their advocacy of it.

It is aimed directly at the South, despite the fact it has made strides in recent years in building up public sentiment against the horrible crime of lynching.

Where the negro used to be fair game for a "necktie party", on almost any pretext, he has been given increased protection in most states, and mob action is becoming more and more a thing of the past.

Lynching has decreased 5,000 per cent in the last 40 years.

Passage of such an extreme and unwarranted bill as the Gavagan measure would cause unbounded resentment and ill feeling in the South.

It would punish both the innocent and guilty in a county in which a lynching took place.

It would hamper local law enforcement, and throw upon the state the burden and expense of calling out the militia upon almost every occasion, when a crime of a violent nature, involving a negro, is committed.

In fact, it has been argued that it would even give the Federal government the power to prosecute a governor, if he failed to call out the state guard, in case of a lynching.

Lynching is indefensible, but it is not more so than this radical and unjust bill, which invades the rights and powers of the states, and threatens to make them cringe before the federal government.

Augusta, Ga. Herald
April 15, 1937

Brown Charges Federal Bill to Attempt Lynching Control Is Fop to North Negro Vote

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following address by Congressman Paul Brown covers the anti-lynching law proposed in Congress.

Mr. Speaker, we are concerned here with a proposition that the Federal Government be called upon to supervise the execution and administration of certain state criminal laws. The proposition is based on the promise that the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution empowers the United States Government to guarantee to the citizens of the several states "the equal protection of the law". Sponsors of the measure contend that this equal protection clause is sufficient to cover the purposes of the bill and that should it become law, its constitutionality would be upheld in the courts.

I did not rise, Mr. Speaker, to enter upon a technical discussion of Constitutional law. I do not wish to split hairs with my colleagues who apparently believe the Federal Government has the right to supervise the police forces of the various states, counties and municipalities of this country. I rose to discuss a broad question of policy and the broad underlying principle by which the Federal Government of the United States has contracted with several states of this Union to leave the administration of certain local affairs to the judgment and the will of the people within these local jurisdictions.

The Union was formed for the mutual protection of the states against outside aggression and to assure a peaceful and friendly intercourse among themselves. Definite rights, privileges and responsibilities were reserved to the states as sovereign entities.

PRESERVED TRADITION OF WORD "SOVEREIGN"

Throughout all our history as a united nation we have preserved the tradition of this word "sovereign". The question is "Do we, and shall we, preserve it in fact?" The Century Dictionary defines "sovereign" as "being above all others, or supreme, in character, excellence and importance". If this be true, it is from the sovereign states of this Union that the federal government derives its power as a sovereign nation. And it must be that surrender of rights and responsibilities of the states can be accomplished only by the will of the people of the states.

In the bill we have before us, it is proposed that, by Act of Congress, jurisdiction hitherto reserved exclusively to the states and their subdivisions be usurped by the Federal Government and that the acts of legally appointed state officers be supervised by the Federal Courts.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, classifies a certain type of homicide as lynching. It seems to find this type of murder more reprehensible than other forms of death by inflicted violence and, at least by inference, sets up the premise that certain of the Southern states are unable to prevent its occurrence. It proposes to inflict penalties in the Federal Courts on local officers unable to prevent mob violence against prisoners in their custody and to subject counties in which lynchings may occur to the payment of damages. You cannot enforce the judgment against a county. These provisions, it is argued, will have the effect of increasing the vigilance of local peace officers and have a tendency to create local public sentiment against lynch mobs.

FACTS DO NOT BEAR OUT THE CONTENTION

Now this is all very well, but the facts do not bear out the seeming necessity for Federal intervention of this character. Even if this proposal could be brought into harmony with the underlying spirit of the Constitution, which I believe it cannot, there still remains a record of steady decline in the number of lynchings as a result of steady improvement of state laws and state law enforcement. Addressing the Senate in 1935, Senator Wagner, of New York, co-author of a bill almost identical with the one here under consideration, cited figures which clearly show a marked decline in the number of lynchings in the United States

"There have been 5,071 lynchings in the United States since 1862," said the Senator, "and 280 since 1922". Now simple arithmetic would show that during the 40 years from 1882 to 1922, during which time the country's population doubted, the average was about 120 lynchings a year, but in the 13 years from 1922 to 1935 this average had declined to less than 22 a year. As a matter of fact, the whole trend of the record has been downward since the 1882 date, and in 1934 the number was fifteen, in 1935 there were 20 lynchings and in 1936 only 8. Does not this seem to indicate that state and local law enforcement agencies are handling this problem with effect?

VIRGINIA HANDLED ITS OWN PROBLEM

Some advocates of this measure have called attention to the action of various states in adopting anti-lynching legislation, particularly Virginia who passed an anti-lynching law in 1928, stating there has been no lynching in that state since the passage of the law and that the State of Virginia has suffered no loss by reason of the fact that it, by its own hands, has wiped out this form of lawlessness.

Now this is a very outspoken admission that the states themselves are entirely competent to handle their own police problems, regardless of whether or not there is any Constitutional inhibition to Federal interference. And Virginia is not the only state in which so-called anti-lynching laws exist. But every state has a law against murder; and it doesn't matter whether it comes from the poisoner's vial, the machine gun of the gangster, or the rope of a lynch mob, it is still murder, punishable according to the laws of the state in which it is committed.

The people of my state do not believe in lynching, notwithstanding she has been denounced in severe terms. The courts, the press, the pulpit, and the bar are all opposed to lynching in all of its forms. However, there is not a father in the South who would not infinitely prefer to see his daughter dead than for her to become the victim of a negro rapist, and of course under these circumstances it is not human for parents or relatives to control their feelings, and I feel that parents and relatives in all other sections of the country would have the same feeling for the helpless victims of such brutes.

"THIRD DEGREE" CITED AS BIG PROBLEM

I dare say that no one in this House condones the illegal use of "third degree" methods, for which police of large cities have become notorious. But would anyone here suggest that this particular scandal would be sufficient reason for adoption of Federal legislation to supervise the police of our large Northern cities? The "third degree" is manifestly illegal and a violation of the Constitutional rights of citizens. And it is not perpetrated by an outraged citizenry. It is perpetrated by peace officers themselves!

If this Congress undertakes to set up Federal supervision over state statutes applying to one particular form of crime, then this or succeeding Congresses could pass laws providing for the supervision of any other or all state statutes. This bill, if enacted into law, can easily become an opening wedge to complete domination of state and local laws by the Federal Government.

So we come to the real point of the issue. The record shows that under state jurisdiction lynchings are becoming fewer and further apart, even though the population of this country has been increasing very rapidly. But in the past, a great number of the lynchings which have taken place in Southern states have been of negroes. In the meantime, some of the large cities have developed big negro populations, groups sufficient in size to become political considerations. These groups have been organized by politicians and their votes have become important factors in local, and even national, elections.

THESE FACTS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that these facts speak for themselves. The practice of lynching is almost entirely disappearing from existence in this country, and this has been brought about by local law enforcement within the states. The sudden demand for Federal anti-lynching legislation can, therefore, be little more than an emotional appeal to large groups of negro voters in the North. I, for one, know that the Federal Government cannot improve upon the law enforcement practiced by the states and I am confident that this proposed usurpation of states' rights was never contemplated by the Constitution. The real friends of the negroes, when they remain in their place, are still in the South, and every one, with the exception of a few political leaders, will admit this.

Mitchell Votes For Gavagan Bill But Calls It Unconstitutional

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Although after supporting by vote the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill, the Hon. Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois in a speech in the House Of Representatives on Wednesday attacked the Gavagan legislation as a poorly-drawn bill and strongly scored the activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Walter White.

Congressman Mitchell said, in part:

"In my judgement, the Gavagan Bill is unconstitutional. I believe that my bill, H. R. 2251, is constitutional and is the best bill out of the 69 or more that have been introduced this session of Congress. This situation places the Republicans in an even more strategic position than otherwise. They, the Republicans, can say to the Negro voters in the next election:

"We killed H. R. 2251 because we wanted to get you a strong bill.

"They will omit to mention, of course, that outstanding legal authorities are almost unanimous in believing that the Gavagan bill is unconstitutional. Bear in mind also that it is quite unlikely that a Supreme Court test of the constitutionality of this legislation will have been secured by the time of the next election. Thus, it seems that from this fracas the Republicans will be the only real winners—and they will be the winners because they cunningly contrived to use the Northern and Border State Democrats who did not realize they were being so used.

"For my part, I believe now, as I have always believed, namely, that some legislation to make lynching a crime against the Federal Government should be enacted. As I have also said many times before, I am firmly of the opinion that my bill is the best bill on the subject; and I believe, moreover, that convictions could be obtained and money-judgements awarded under my bill. I do not believe this would be true under the Gavagan bill unless it is amended in many important respects. Nevertheless, I think a poorly drawn bill on this subject—even the Gavagan bill—is better than no bill at all. Since my bill will not be considered again, I shall work wholeheartedly and unreservedly for the Gavagan bill. I have said this before; I repeat it now.

"In conclusion, I should like to remind the House that no more vicious and false propaganda has ever been directed against a bill in Congress than has been perpetrated against H. R. 2251. All manner of false, vicious and unwarranted statements and releases have been sent out by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. These documents have all been characteristic of the secretary of that organization. I greatly fear that by this false propaganda and this idiotic manoevering they have severely hurt the cause of anti-lynching rather than helped it. I wish I could belive otherwise but I cannot.

"My final word on the subject is this: I sincerely hope that some kind of anti-lynching bill will be passed by this House without further ado."

Elizabethton, Tenn., Star
April 18, 1937

Lynching Bill

Upper East Tennessee has gone on the records of congress as favoring strict measures to halt lynching through the voting of Congressmen B. Carroll Reece and J. Will Taylor on the Gavagan bill which next comes up for debate in the Senate after passage by the house.

Although this bill is by no means the first bill which has proposed Federal intervention in the cases of mob violence with death as the object, this bill has, perhaps, followed on the heels of the most wide-spread denunciation of this type of "punishmnt" for wrongs or charged wrongs.

Although a bloc of Southern senators is vigorously opposing what they call an infringement of state rights, many newspapers of the South have seen fit to denounce lynching and societies have been formed in Dixie to prevent this type of mob rule.

Whether administration leaders will risk a further split in the Democratic ranks by allowing the bill to go through is problematical. Even at the best a rocky road in the senate is seen for the measure which would provide a heavy fine and prison sentence for officials who allow a lynching to take place in their jurisdiction.

Tifton, Ga., Gazette
April 17, 1937

Just a few years ago, we were told that we "must" vote the Democratic ticket, else the Republicans would enact an anti-lynching law that would discriminate against the South. Did you notice that the overwhelmingly Democratic House passed an anti-lynching bill by a vote of 227 to 119? Have all the Republicans turned Democrats?

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5673

5673

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL PETITION IS SIGNED BY 202 CONGRESSMEN

SIXTEEN MORE NEEDED

Press Service of the N.A.A.C.P. 3-26-37 New York City.

In Desperate Move to Block Gavagan Petition and Delay Action on Bill, Chairman Sumners Publicly Announces He Will Hold Hearings on Anti-Lynching Bill March 31

- - - - - - - - - -

Washington, March 26. - Up to last night, a total of 202 congressmen had signed the Gavagan petition No. 5 which will make the anti-lynching bill a special order of business and bring it out on the floor for a limited debate and vote. The petition requires 218 signatures.

In a last desperate move to block the Gavagan petition and to delay prompt consideration of the anti-lynching bill, Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, chairman of the House judiciary committee, arose on the floor of the House March 24 and announced personally that his committee would hold hearings on anti-lynching bills on Wednesday, March 31.

If the 218 signatures can be secured before the holding of hearings the bill will come out on the floor regardless of the hearings.

This announcement by Chairman Sumners reverses his previous position, for he has declared repeatedly that he would never hold a hearing on anti-lynching legislation and would do everything he could to block it in this session of Congress.

Chairman Sumners was driven to hold hearings not because he now favors anti-lynching legislation, but because he is hoping by holding hearings and delaying a report to block any consideration of anti-lynching bills in this Congress. Chairman Sumners decided to hold hearings only when it became plain that the Gavagan petition might secure the 218 signatures necessary and thus force the bill out on the floor.

Assisting Chairman Sumners in his effort to block the Gavagan petition is Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois, only Negro member of the House. Shortly after the Gavagan petition was introduced, Mr. Mitchell announced that Chairman Sumners had promised him (Mitchell) that hearings would be held on the anti-lynching bill "within the next month." Despite this announcement, congressmen continued to sign the Gavagan petition and on March 24 when the number of signatures had reached 190, Mr. Sumners became desperate and announced the date for a hearing. It is said here that it is unprecedented for the chairman of a committee to make personal announcement on the floor of the date of hearings. Usually such notice is sent through the regular channels and is given to the press in a interview.

Among the signers are members of all parties - Democrats, Republicans, Farmer-Laborites and Progressives.

The feeling among supporters of the anti-lynching bill toward this hasty announcement that hearings will be held is that it is a political trick and, as one member declared: "The committee can hold hearings and then decide to study the proposition until next September."

Wilmington, N. C. Morning Star
February 23, 1937

FEDERAL LYNCH LAWS

The Morning Star is still sufficiently southern to believe in a modicum of state's rights hence when the matter of federal lynching laws is made, we are reminded of the child labor amendment.

On this score such noted educators as the heads of Harvard and Columbia are listed among the opponents. They argue, and convincingly that such an amendment would wrest control of youth from the home.

These gentlemen and their compatriots might use the same arguments just as convincingly against a federal anti-lynching law.

The northerners who urge it, and the southerners who sometimes applaud, overlook the various offenses that would come under such laws when an attempt is made to define lynching by federal statute.

Perhaps the Richmond Times-Dispatch, as quoted by the New York World Telegram might be surprised if it followed the sentiments of the following:

"The usually wise Representative HATTON SUMNERS of Texas has argued against a Federal anti-lynching law less convincingly than an Alabama mob has just argued for one.

"Representative SUMNERS says that lynchings have declined under State enforcements from 3.4 victims per million persons in 1892 to about .07 per million in 1936. But last week 50 men broke an Alabama jail, hanged and riddled with bullets an 18-year-old negro and escaped without arrest. It was the first lynching of 1937, that's true, and the first in Alabama for five years. But last year there were nine lynchings, and in the last 50 years there were 5,000. How much the threat of a Federal law agitating Congress for the last four years has had to do with the decrease no one can tell, but doubtless it has been an important factor. What would happen if that threat were removed by shelving the pending WAGNER-VAN NUYS bill?

"More impressive than statistics is the conclusion of an influential Southern paper, The Richmond Times-Dispatch that there is 'no hope of ever wiping out lynching, the greatest crime against Southern civilization, except through Federal action.'

"We are stamping out kidnaping with the help of Federal G-men, and no State or section considers this a reflection on itself. Why should any State plead for the rights of lynch mobs to besmirch its name?"

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL APPEARS DOOMED AGAIN

House Vote Is Assured, But Chances Are Senate Will Kill Measure

By Ruth Finney
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Although the House probably will soon pass the anti-lynching bill, defeat in the Senate appears equally likely.

Every session of Congress for 20 years has considered anti-lynching legislation without apodting it. Several times the House has voted favorably. In the Senate each time, a vote has been prevented by a filibuster of Southern Democrats.

Two years ago Southern senators filibustered for a week against a motion to take up the Wagner-Costigan bill for a vote. The motion which finally shelved the bill was made by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic floor leader. It carried 46 to 32. Democrats supporting it 43 to 14 and Republicans opposing it 17 to four.

In the House last year a discharge petition to force the bill from committee for a vote was signed by a sufficient number of members, but it was too late in the session for a vote. It is a similar petition, signed by a majority of the House membership, which now assures a vote this year.

Most of the anti-lynching bills introduced in the past 20 years have provided penalties for officials who fail to protect prisoners in their custody, and other penalties for persons injuring a prisoner. They fix fines for countries in which mob violence occurs.

And they provide that Federal courts shall try any member of a lynching mob if local prosecution is lax or if jurors in the local courts are manifestly opposed to punishing members of mobs.

Senator Borah (R., Id.) believes such legislation would be unconstitutional. Proponents of the legislation argue that a lynched prisoner has been denied due process and equal protection of the law as guaranteed by the Constitution.

In recent years lynchings have averaged 25 a year. Before 1900 the number was 100 or more a year.

Says Mitchell's Note Confuses Mob Bill Work

WASHINGTON

Despite intensive work being done by supporters of the Wagner-Van Nuys Antilynching Bill to get Congressmen to sign the Gavagan petition, No. 5, which will make antilynching legislation a special order of business, Congressman Mitchell (Dem., Ill.) has "gummed up the works," the NAACP charges.

Everything was progressing smoothly on the petition, the association states, the first few days it was on the Speaker's desk until Congressman Mitchell announced that Rep. Hatton W. Sumners (Dem., Texas), chairman of the House judiciary committee, had promised Mitchell that he would hold a hearing "within the next month" on antilynching legislation.

Wrote to Each Congressman

Mr. Mitchell, the association continues, then wrote each Congressman a letter, stating that Chairman Sumners had promised to hold a hearing "in the next few days." This announcement, it is said, greatly confused the Congressmen and caused many to hesitate about signing the Gavagan petition.

They reasoned that if the committee was going to hold a hearing on antilynching legislation, there was no necessity for a petition to get the bill out of the committee's hands.

Of the 218 signatures necessary on the petition, 164 Congressmen have already signed. Supporters of the bill, and especially NAACP officials, believe that Chairman Summers is trying to delay the hearings as long as possible.

HOUSE BODY APPROVES ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

WASHINGTON, April 6.—(AP)—The house judiciary committee approved late today a federal anti-lynching bill introduced by Representative Mitchell, Illinois Democrat. The vote was 17 to 7.

The committee will ask the rules committee for an early date for house consideration.

Going With the Wind

The action of 218 members of the House of Representatives in discharging its committees and forcing a vote on the anti-lynching bill is significant of a changing sentiment in this country toward its occasional reversion to mob law that has shocked the civilized world. It appears certain now that the House will pass the Gavagan bill on April 12 and that only a filibuster will stop the Senate from passing its twin, the Wagner-Van Nuys bill. Both are identical with the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching measure, which fared so ill in former sessions.

Sentiment against a Federal anti-lynching law heretofore has been most vocal in the South, although the lynch evil is not a sectional or even a racial issue. But sentiment in the South appears to be changing. Recently the influential Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch said editorially that there is "no hope of ever wiping out lynching, the greatest crime against Southern civilization, except through Federal action." Representative Maverick of Texas, who is supporting the measure, found little feeling in his Southern district against his stand.

Enlightened Southerners know that the mobbing and lynching of Negroes is a survival of carpetbagger days. These days are gone, and with the help of the Federal Government lynch law, too should soon give way to the orderly processes of American justice.

ANTI-LYNCH BILL BACKERS PUSH SENATE

Bitter Fight Expected as Opposition Rallies—Negro Press Active

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Supporters of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill—the first to pass the House in 15 years—began preparations today for a bitter fight for passage of the measure in the Senate.

Filibusters led by reactionary Southerners have killed every previous attempt at favorable action on a Federal anti-lynching bill in the Senate. The Dyer anti-lynching measure, which passed the House in 1922, was soon after filibustered to death in the Senate.

Since 1922 no anti-lynching legislation had passed the House until the Gavagan bill passed yesterday by a vote of 277 to 119.

BORAH OPPOSED

Backing up the position of the reactionary Senate members that a Federal anti-lynching bill is a violation of "states' rights," is Senator Borah, "liberal" Republican, who regards all Federal anti-lynching laws as "unconstitutional."

Commenting on the passage of the Gavagan measure Borah called it an effort to "force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said that although anti-lynching legislation would not stop lynching "it would check lynching and encourage respect for the law."

Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, the House's lone Negro member, whose weaker anti-lynching measure was sidetracked, felt that the passage of the Gavagan bill would "encourage the Negro race."

Meanwhile, scores of Negro workers and progressive organizations, which had deluged the House with telegrams urging passage of the Gavagan bill, prepared to train their fire on the Senate. They hoped by rekindling the enthusiasm and support for the Gavagan measure to unprecedented heights to avoid the fate received by the Dyer bill 15 years ago.

The Gavagan bill, which is supported by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Negro Congress, many scores of Negro newspapers and progressive groups, provides penalties for officers who permit prisoners to be put to death or injured by mob violence. Such officers are subject to a maximum fine of $5,000 and a maximum prison term of from five to twenty-five years.

Mobsters would also be subject to similar punishment while the county in which the lynching occurs would have to pay the victim damages ranging from $2,000 to $5,000.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5674

Tried to Attain Glory at The Expense of His Race, Congressman Charges

PREDICTS PASSAGE OF STRONGER ANTI-LYNCH MEASURE SOON

Charges that Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell was guilty of a deliberate attempt to cater to the leadership of the House and claim for himself belated glory were made by Representative Joseph Gavagan, Democrat of New York, in reply to Mitchell's statement that the Gavagan anti-lynching bill was unconstitutional.

Mitchell was quoted in the press as making the following statement:

"I don't think any lawyer of judgment would say that the Gavagan bill is constitutional. There is no doubt in my mind that it is unwisely drafted legislation."

Irked because of this statement, Gavagan, interviewed in his office in the Tribune shortly after his victory on the floor Wednesday, said:

"The Negroes should be the last to raise the question of constitutionality of anti-lynching legislation. It isn't even the purpose of the House to determine the constitutionality of its proposed measures.

"Who is Mr. Mitchell" he asked, that he can take it upon himself to rule upon the constitutionality of any bill? It has been ruled constitutional by three previous committees of the Judiciary.

"The white people are working like dogs to bring this legislation to a vote, and Mr. Mitchell is practically canvassing and working with the Southern white congressmen to have my bill defeated.

f my petition to discharge my bill rom the committee. Wasn't successful we wouldn't have had this

Sold Out?

ARTHUR W. MITCHELL

mess this morning."

Continuing the representative said:

"Mitchell a Tool"

"Mitchell was used as a tool by the leadership of this House and other Southern members to bring his bill up for hearing and consideration to defeat my bill. After they accomplished their purpose they left Mitchell by himself and didn't even vote for consideration of his bill.

"Sumners, of Texas, whom Mitchell was claiming as his friend submitted a minority committee report stating the legislation wasn't necessary.

"Mitchell's attitude today is the same attitude he has exhibited ever since he has been a member f the House. He hasn't supported anything. When the Democratic Caucus was held on the subject in the Seventy-fourth Congress Mitchell gave only his physical presence. He never opened his mouth in support of an anti-lynching bill; not even his own bill.

"Mitchell's attempt to attain belated glory and win the favor of the Southern leadership of the House at the expense of his race was defeated," Gavagan declared, "and I predict that my bill will pass the House next Monday by a vote of more than 300."

Mitchell Bill Lost in House By 122 to 256

Bulletin

Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell's anti-lynching bill was shelved by a vote of [illegible] 22 in the House Wednesday by a filibuster coalition of Southern Democrats and northern advocates of strong anti-lynching legislation. The House agreed by roll call vote not to consider the measure.

The group of filibusterers had delayed Congressional business on the floor by forcing quorum calls and insisting upon the reading of the journal of the proceedings of the previous day.

By side-tracking the bill of the Illinois Democrat, which was fought by the NAACP, as well as many other colored groups and liberal Congressmen, the House is free to fight out the issue again next week when the more stringent bill of Rrepresentative Joseph Gavagan (D. N. Y.) comes to the floor under a vote-forcing petition signed by the necessary 218 Representatives.

The filibuster was led by Gavagan and Representative Hamilton Fish (R., N. Y.).

Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, who called the hearing on the Mitchell bill last Thursday, surprised some observers by sending in a minority report of the committee saying that no anti-lynching bill was necessary. In this report he gave a chart to show that lynching was on the decrease in the South.

Add to Story on Mitchell Bill Lost

Mitchell Bitter

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell took the defeat of his anti-lynching bill with bitterness it is felt by many who witnessed the House action. He accused Democrats of joining Republicans in killing the measure.

Mitchell said: "All manner of false, vicious and unwarranted statements and releases were sent out by the NAACP. These documents have all been characteristic of the secretary of that organization. I greatly fear that by this false propaganda and this idiotic maneuvering they havve severely hurt the cause of anti-lynching rather than helped it."

He added, however, that since his bill was defeated he will support the much stronger Gavagan bill when it comes up Monday.

High Point, N. C. Enterprise
April 10, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW SHOULD BE FEDERAL

THE House this week killed the Mitchell anti-lynching bill for the indicated purpose of enacting next week the more drastic Gavagan bill—but it remains to be seen whether the proposal will itself be lynched in specious pounding for States Rights on a matter that is and must be of national concern and action.

President Roosevelt some while back denounced lynching as "collective murder"; it is that and more. "We do not excuse those in high or low, places who condone lynch law," said the President in his vigorous rebuke of a California governor's endorsement of mob ruthlessness in that state.

It is more than a matter of individual state concern when out of 5,000 lynchings in this country since 1882, convictions have obtained in less than three per cent of cases—in other words thousands of murderers under the cloak of mob violence are free today in this land in which freedom is much-vaunted and much-flaunted.

Lynching is not primarily of Southern concern. True, most of the victims hame been in a dozen states; the accompanying table of states with as many as 100 lynchings is revealing:

State	Whites	Negroes	Tot.
Alabama	46	296	342
Arkansas	64	230	294
Florida	25	241	266
Georgia	34	474	508
Kentucky	62	151	213
Louisiana	60	328	388
Mississippi	45	500	545
Missouri	53	63	116
Oklahoma	116	44	160
South Carolina	5	154	159
Tennessee	44	196	240
Texas	143	349	492
Virginia	16	88	104
Total	513	3,314	3,827

Mose of the states have adequate law against such abuse of justice and law; but the states have been lax in their protection of individual liberty and safety in face of mobs, and the mob, as judge, jury and executioner, has made of justice and legal procedure mere mockery. We await with interest, but with little hope, passage of the Gavagan bill.

Decatur, Ala. Daily
April 8, 1937

Post's Inquiry

The Birmingham Post makes the following editorial inquiry:

"The names of democratic congressmen from the 12 southern states are conspicuously absent from the anti-lynching discharge petition which will force a record vote on the Gavagan anti-lynching bill next Monday.

"Not a congressman from Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina, Texas or Virginia signed. Tennessee's two republican representatives and Kentucky's one republican were the only exceptions in those two states.

"What are we to infer from the position taken by Alabama's congressmen, Boykin, Hill, Steagall, Hobbs, Starnes, Jarman, Bankhead, Sparkman and Patrick? Does their failure to sign the petition indicate that they will vote against the anti-lynching bill when the roll is called next week?

"We can not believe that any of the above gentlemen favor lynch law. Yet what are we to assume? Is it possible that they believe a majority of their constituents would directly or indirectly sanction mob violence? Or is it a question of little courage? If the latter be the case then ours is a sad state of affairs when such a small minority can wield so large an influence.

"Alabama has had but one lynching in two or three years and we are as proud of that record as any citizen. But there can be no excuse for even one lynching and any congressman who stands in the way of any move which would tend to discourage mob murder selects his own label and his own company.

"Jefferson county, and (many others for that matter, does not need the threat of penalty to make her officials and law enforcement officers more conscious of their duty on the question of mob violence. Her record speaks for itself. For that reason they need have no fear of the Gavagan bill.

"The measure itself may not discourage lynching. That cannot be told without trial. But the shadow of the long arm of the federal government does have a sobering influence and its courts do command respect even among thieves.

"There is no defense for mob rule and equally none for the man who aids and abets, directly or indirectly, its violence."

The Birmingham Post, having no southern background and, apparently little or no Southern understanding or interest, probably WOULD be the last to know why the names of Alabama's congressmen are not attached to the petition to bring up the federal anti-lynching bill.

For that reason, pardon us while we take time out to advise the Birmingham chain newspaper outfit that in The Daily's opinion the reason why the names of Messrs. Boykin, Hill, Steagall, Hobbs, Starnes, Jarman, Bankhead, Sparkman and Patrick are not found among the signers of the petition is that they are MEN, thank God, SOUTHERN MEN and entirely willing to risk either personal safety or political future when necessary to defend the South from such a damnable attack as is being attempted against us under the terms of the nefarious federal anti-lynching bill, which proposes an unwarranted, if not unconstitutional usurpation of the rights of the states to police their own people.

Shades of Oscar Underwood whose brilliant parliamentary tactics once before defeated such a rotten proposal—have we sunk so low in Alabama that a newspaper which bears the name of one of our proud cities should take to task the successors of those earlier illustrious Alabamians because they fail to obey the dictates of a negro congressman from Chicago and the Scripps-Howard chain of so-called newspapers!

Bainbridge, Ga., Post-Searchlight
April 8, 1937

Congressman Hatton Sumner, Texas Democrat, contends that the enaction of a federal anti-lynching law would only irrate rather than help local governments in dealing with the problem. The congressman is right. Lynching is on the decline because people are becoming educated to a respect for law and order. If federal bayonets could not prevent lynching, how would a mere law do it?

Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal
April 18, 1937

Anti-Lynch Scene Changes

Northern Democrats Now Push For Enactment To Hold Colored Support Taken From Republicans

BY GEORGE MORRIS

WASHINGTON, April 17.—During the past 20 years agitation for an anti-lynching law has amounted to little more than a formal bid for the northern negro vote. With Republicans controlling both branches of Congress by preponderant majorities most of the time, they might have passed almost any kind of anti-lynching law if they had been serious about it.

But the first appearance of a suggestion of a filibuster by opponents caused advocates of the measure to toss the towel in the ring and concede defeat. The battle seldom went beyond the first round before advocates of the bill admitted they were outwinded and the fight gone out of them.

Today the scene has changed completely. Northern Democrats have taken over leadership for enactment of an anti-lynching law. The negroes have shifted party allegiance from Republicans to Democrats, and the Democrats propose to hold them at any cost. The Republicans cannot be said to have become advocates of lynching, but since negroes have become Democrats they have at least adopted a more tolerant attitude toward it.

They might even admit under compulsion that there are provocations in which lynching of negroes would be justified on a wholesale scale, particularly in extreme instances where the negro holds the balance of power and exercises it by voting Democratic.

Direct Provocation Beclouds Essentials

Like any other issue in which the fundamentals are beclouded with hysteria, it is difficult to get away from the fallacy that those who vote for an anti-lynching law oppose lynching, and those who vote against it are in favor of lynching. Like other questions of vast implications, the real issue is lost sight of in favor of incidental provocation.

For example, the lynching of two negroes in Mississippi was stronger argument in favor of an anti-lynching law than the argument against its constitutionality of the decidedly more grave and far-reaching authority of the federal government to usurp the rights of states and assume authority over a specific crime.

Nothing could be more fallacious than to argue if a state, through its constituted authorities, fails to enforce its laws that it then becomes the duty of the federal government to step in and enforce them. Contrary to the usual conception, there are still a few rights reserved to the states. Formerly it was contended that the power of the federal government was limited to authority ceded it by the states, and in the absence of cession of authority, it meant that the authority was especially reserved to the states. An act of Congress was considered inadequate to vest the federal government with authority belonging exclusively to the states.

TAKES ISSUE WITH MORRIS

To The Commercial Appeal:

It is unfortunate that Mr. George Morris' views on lynchings are so muddled.

On April 18, 1937, he says that "during the last [illegible] for an anti-lynching law has amounted [illegible] than a formal bid for the negro vote."

Now, when language like this is used in a local newspaper, and in a community to which I owe some obligations as a citizen, you will pardon me perhaps if I insist on the humble right to protest.

The Institute of Public Opinion recently conducted a poll of the south on sentiment for a federal anti-lynching law, and the result, as published in the Washington Post, disclosed a 65 per cent majority in favor of such a measure. Would Mr. Morris say that these people are motivated by a desire to capture the negro vote? Would he say that this is the motive of the Federal Council of Churches and church organizations, north and south, which have endorsed the same thing? Would he contend that the Richmond Times-Dispatch, and other great newspapers in the south which have openly urged the enactment of the present Gavagan bill, are likewise controlled by a desire to capture the negro vote?

I submit, with all due respect to Mr. Morris, with whom personally I have never had the slightest difficulty, that the time has come for some straight thinking on this subject.

I am opposed to the pending Gavagan federal, anti-lynching bill which has just passed the House. It has grave defects, and would undoubtedly aggravate the situation. I believe, with Hatton Summers, chairman of the House judiciary committee, that the responsibility is up to the state, and the states must assume it. We don't want federal interference with our police powers. That is the beginning of dictatorship—but, and it is an important one, let us not assume that agitation for a federal anti-lynching law is based, in the main, on anything else than the failure of the states to assume their governmental responsibilities. If we ever get a federal law it will be because we refuse to execute the duty which civilized government imposes on us.

I submit the time has come to stop beclouding the issue by blaming everything on the northern politicians, hysteria, etc., and try a little straight thinking. Let's start now. We can be fair, at least, about our responsibility.

HUGH RUSSELL FRASER.
Memphis.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5675

Chattanooga, Tenn. Times
April 17, 1937

The South and Mob Violence

Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The argument is sometimes made that the enactment of a federal antilynching law would be an affront to the south. Why? The south has had decades in which to break up lynching, and it has not done so. Hence the only hope of achieving that result lies in the trial of local officers who permit lynchings to occur, in the federal courts.

We are pleased to note that many Virginians favor a federal antilynching bill, despite the fact that lynching has been wiped out in the Old Dominion as a consequence of the enactment of a strong state law during Gov. Byrd's administration. A number of leading Virginia papers are supporting federal legislation, including the Norfolk Virginia-Pilot, the Petersburg Progress-Index, the Bristol Herald Courier and the Portsmouth Star.

The precise provisions of any federal antilynching bill are debatable, of course. It may be unwise to penalize a county where a lynching occurs with a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000, the money to go to the heirs of the person lynched. It may be best to confine federal action to prosecution of derelict peace officers, and not to attempt prosecution of members of the mob in the federal courts. But some sort of effective federal law, which will call for the federal trial of culprits, if the state authorities fail to act, is, to our way of thinking, essential.

Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Sincere purpose to abate lynchings is almost entirely absent from the present propaganda for a federal antilynching law. Back of that movement—as every literate adult knows—are four elements.

First—The remnant of the old republican party machine seeking desperately to recover the Negro vote in the northern states, through which it ruled the nation from the election of 1868, in which that vote first swung the balance.

Second—The democratic political machines in big cities bidding against the r. o. p. for the same bloc vote.

Third—The communist groups who have sought for more than fifteen years to stir up racial strife north and south.

Fourth—The strangely assorted groups of psychopaths who take a morbid interest in lynchings and in characteristic crimes that lead to lynchings. These groups include many queer fish and epicene neurotics who swim in the stagnant social pools which have collected back of some of the great foundations and other endowments set up by doddering old men and women who had more money than sense.

The latter elements are not motivated at all by any desire to abate lynchings. The heavily financed propaganda against the social order of the south which was manifested in the Scottsboro case in Alabama and in the Herndon case in Atlanta are a dead giveaway as to that. An orderly court trial in the south stirs up the degenerate martyr complexes of these people as much as a lynching.

In view of the south balting that accompanies all the agitation for federal antilynching laws it is incumbent upon southern senators and representatives to make these facts clear upon the floors of the houses of congress, and to demand that any extension of federal police powers be made to cover the gang mobsters of the city as well as the rural mob.

The Baltimore Sun.

It is a melancholy coincidence that while southern representatives in congress were arguing in the house against federal antilynching legislation, a Mississippi mob took two Negroes from county officers at Duck Hill, Miss., and tortured them to death under circumstances as revolting as any which attended the Salem witch burnings. The arguments which the south offers against a federal statute to deal with lynching are highly persuasive on legal and constitutional grounds. It is an unhappy business when Washington undertakes to step in and deal with a purely local evil such as lynching. Those matters are much better left to the localities to deal with and, until the localities do their duty, it may be doubted if they will ever be stopped.

But the south does not come into court with clean hands to argue this case. When southern white men are disposed to flout the law and put Negroes, even guilty Negroes, to the torture with blow torches, southern spokesmen in congress are in poor position to plead the constitutional case against federal antilynching laws. Those who want to advance such pleas ought first to clean their own house.

The first test of the south's willingness to face up to its responsibilities in this matter will come in connection with the Duck Hill outrage. If the decent and enlightened citizens of Mississippi awake to the seriousness of their situation and if they deal with the officers and mobsters in a way to indicate a desire to stamp out lynching, the spokesmen of that state in Washington can again have a claim on the attention of the nation in their opposition to the antilynching bill. Lacking such a manifestation in this and in other similar cases which may occur, the south need not be surprised if its pleas are treated lightly.

The Washington Post.

The latest lynchings in Mississippi are an effective stimulus to the demand for enactment of the Gavagan bill, now under debate in the house. The proposed antilynching law would allow the federal government to take over the case if, after thirty days, the state has not indicted and prosecuted the lynchers. Because of the extraordinary hideousness of the Duck Hill crime, even residents of that community might be expected to approve such intervention.

But sober analysis of the Gavagan measure as it would apply to lynchings generally raises doubt that it would accomplish its purpose. For, in addition to authorizing the federal government to proceed against lynchers and the officers who fail to restrain them, the bill would make any county in which a lynching occurs liable to suit for damages. In spite of its laudable purpose, this coercion of local government by federal action tends to make the proposal distasteful.

The reasoning advanced by Mr. Gavagan and his supporters is that the history of lynching shows local authorities generally unwilling to move against mob murderers, though every state has a law requiring their punishment. Under these circumstances, it is argued, it becomes necessary for the federal government to step in and insure the protection of citizens' lives. The implicit presumption, however, that jurymen in, say, the Duck Hill region will not indict when serving on a state panel, but would when sitting in a federal court seems open to considerable question.

Nor do all states with high Negro populations where lynchings predominate deserve the charge of inaction against the crime. Virginia is one notable exception; there has not been a lynching in Virginia for ten years. This is clearly the result of the fact that public opinion in Virginia has come to demand an end to lynching. And, to an appreciable extent, this same enlightenment is spreading through the south. At least, fewer than ten lynchings were recorded throughout the country last year, as against twenty in 1935.

The solution of the lynching problem seems to lie in this direction rather than in that proposed by the Gavagan bill, which might result in reviving the bitter emotions of reconstruction days. By a bitter irony, too, it is crimes of such extreme beastiality as that reported from Duck Hill which will hasten the reform in public opinion necessary to end them forever.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
April 17, 1937

The Anti-Lynching Bill

Representative Cavagan, Democrat of New York, has pushed through the House of Representatives a bill authorizing the federal government to intervene in mob crimes and to prosecute mobsters and negligent police officers. Any officer from whom a prisoner is taken would be subject to a fine of not more than $5,000 and a prison sentence of not more than five years. Participants in the mob would be subject to from five to 25 years imprisonment. And the county in which the prisoner was seized or put to death would be subject to a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000.

Most of the opposition to the Cavagan bill has been from Southern Democrats. They have argued that the bill is aimed directly at the South, which it undoubtedly is—for nearly all the lynchings are in this region—and that it is an undue invasion of the state's police power. They point out further that Northern Democrats and Republicans are for the bill because their Negro constituents want federal action taken against lynching.

Certainly this newspaper would be for the bill if it were sure that its enactment would put a stop to lynchings and that such enactment would provide the only means for attaining that result. It is not certain that those things are true. Legislating from above without the wholehearted support of the people most affected is seldom wise, and it is difficult to feel any certainty that the effects of passage of the Cavagan bill would be more beneficial than otherwise.

Senator Borah has condemned this "effort to force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional, and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure." Surely there is more than reasonable doubt as to the bill's constitutionality, for police powers are reserved expressly to the states.

Everything feasible should be done to bring about an end of lynchings in this country. Encouraging progress has been made by the states, and while that progress has not been so rapid as most of us would like, it has been fairly constant. In 1936, for example, Alabama had no lynchings. Six times, however, mobs gathered in this state and threatened to lynch Negroes suspected of crimes. In every instance the state took determined action to prevent the lynching. Mississippi had one lynching last year, but three times attempted lynchings were prevented by the state authorities. There were five lynchings in Georgia, and there were also five attempts to lynch which were foiled by the state. There were no lynchings in Virginia, the state being successful in preventing three mobs from reaching the prisoner.

One wonders whether the Virginia law, providing heavy penalties for counties in which lynchings occur—a feature of the Cavagan bill, also—is not responsible for much of the progress in that state in eliminating lynchings.

When states are uniformly successful, or practically so in preventing lynchings, there is undoubtedly a highly favorable reaction among the masses of the people. Certainly a much sounder situation would prevail if lynchings are eliminated by action of the local authorities than when such progress is due solely to federal intervention.

About the only way to prevent enactment of the Cavagan bill is quick action in Mississippi to determine the identity of the recent lynchers and then to punish them adequately for their crime against Mississippi, the South and our whole American civilization. Only in such fashion can the Southern states hope to retain their right to deal with this problem, for if the Cavagan bill fails in the Senate this year, it, or a similar measure, will be passed before very long, unless our Southern states not only prevent most lynchings, but deal out punishment to those who take part in such lynchings as do take place.

Eight of the nine Alabamians in Congress voted against the Cavagan bill. A long fight is faced in the Senate, where there is stronger opposition to the measure.

This newspaper is unable to take a dogmatic position and say that a federal law would or would not be likely to stop lynching. It realizes that the federal government would be more effective than the state in running down the mobsters who this week lynched two Mississippi Negroes. But the Cavagan bill gives the federal government no authority to take steps to prevent lynchings

The states must be the ones to act if lynchings are ever prevented, and they can only be entirely successful when local public opinion is for law and order.

Enlightened public opinion in the South seems largely to center on the idea that lynchings should be eliminated, preferably by the states, but that it is a crime that must be stopped and if action by the federal government is the only way it can be stopped, then action by the federal government is desirable.

Marshall, N. C., News-Record
April 22, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW PASSES HOUSE

In the last week, the lower house of Congress passed an anti-lynching law, the vote being 276 for the measure and 119 against. We notice that southern congressmen generally opposed the measure on the ground that this act would be invading the rights of the states. There is some merit in the arguments produced by opponents of the act, but we believe there is too much "passing the buck" from national to state responsibility and vice versa. Whenever we read of a lynching, we feel that if anything can be done to prevent it, whether by state or nation or both combined, it should be done. It is a disgrace on the name of America that lynchings should ever occur in this enlightened age. Usually the victim is some defenseless negro boy who, though guilty of the charge, is hardly responsible for his mental attitude. At any rate he should have the privilege of a fair court trial. If lynching were outlawed by the federal government as well as the states, people would doubtless be a little more inclined to think before joining a mob for such a rash act as lynching; for there is no doubt but people stand more in fear of federal officers than state or local. Moreover state lines should be obliterated when it comes to crimes of this sort. We favor the federal anti-lynching law.

Monroe, N. C. Journal
April 16, 1937

LYNCHING BILL IS PASSED BY HOUSE

Aimed at South to Make Negro Vote in New York Safe For Tammany

The House overrode bristling southern opposition last night to pass the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. It would authorize the federal government to intervene in mob crimes to punish participants and negligent officers.

After more than six hours' hectic debate, it voted 276 to 119 to approve the measure and sent it to the Senate, where, sponsors agreed, it faced sterner opposition.

Even as the House voted, Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, issued a statement condemning what he called an "effort to force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional, and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

In general Republicans joined with northern Democrats in supporting the bill.

Holds Officers Liable

The measure, the first of its kind to pass either House since 1922, would subject an officer who permitted a prisoner to be taken from his custody and injured or put to death to a fine ranging up to $5,000 and to as much as five years in prison.

Likewise, participants would be subject to from five to 25 years' imprisonment.

Asserting the bill was aimed at the South, opponents from this section sought in vain to strike from the bill provisions that would subject counties in which a prisoner was seized or put to death to damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000. The money would go to a victim's family.

The opponents succeeded once in deleting the sections, only to be reversed by a 232 to 139 vote just before the measure passed.

Describing these provisions as the "heart of the bill," its author, Representative Gavagan, Democrat of New York, who represents a New York City district with a large negro population, told the House the measure would not be "worth the paper it's written on" without them.

Legislation Called Invalid

While much of the debate centered on constitutionality of the legislation such issues as partisan politics, President Roosevelt's court reorganization program and centralization of governmental authority were injected.

Denying the legislation's constitutionality, as did Senator Borah, Chairman Sumners, Democrat, of Texas of the House judiciary committee warned colleagues:

"This bill would give the Federal government power to prosecute a governor if he did not call out the militia in case of a lynching."

Flushing with emotion, he demanded of sponsors:

"Why don't you let us in the South alone and give us a chance to show what we can do about this situation.'

He then cited figures to show that lynchings had declined 5,000 per cent since the peak in 1892.

One of the few Republicans opposing the bill, Representative Hoffman of Michigan, asserted its object was to give the "Democratic party in New York more negro votes."

Voicing similar views, Representative Rankin, Democrat of Mississippi shouted at Gavagan:

Negro Pleads For Bill

"You want to make Harlem safe for Tammany."

A plea for the bill was made by Representative Mitchell, Democrat of Illinois, only negro member of Congress, whose own measure was sidetracked last week. He told colleagues of his own experience with a mob. He said that once when he was teaching in Alabama a mob "marched within three miles of my schoolhouse to lynch me because I had stopped payment on a $20 check obtained from me through fraud.

"The best thing you can do to encourage the negro race is to pass this legislation," he declared.

Although he urged anti-lynch legislation, Representative Robison, Republican of Kentucky, said the Gavagan bill might cause an increase rather than decline in mob crimes.

Pointing out that penalties would apply only after a prisoner was taken from custody, he asked:

"What inducement is there for an officer to take an accused person into custody? He would subject himself to indictment and his county to damages."

Representative Cox, Democrat of Georgia, bitterly accused northern Democrats of turning against the South.

"For more than 100 years the South has kept the Democratic party alive. Now that it has grown fat and powerful, it proposes to turn upon the South and deal it this wicked blow.'

Albany-Decatur, Ala. Daily
April 24, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill

Congressman Sam Hobbs, who has distinguished himself more than once since he entered the house of representatives about three years ago, made a valiant, if futile, fight against the passage of the anti-lynching bill in the house.

We trust that both Senator Black and Senator Bankhead will lend their great influence to the fight in the senate which, it is admitted by all observers, will be much closer than was the case in the house.

Because the president's court proposal has divided the senate almost equally and because of other political considerations, there is a splendid chance that the new anti-lynching bill, likes its predecessors, will be maneuvered out of position and passage prevented.

Alabamians are particularly proud of the ringing speech Congressman Hobbs made against the measure in the house and The Daily is glad to reprint the following excerpts from his remarks:

"This bill is a rape of justice. This bill is itself the rope with which this mob would lynch the constitutional guarantees which we have cherished through the years. This bill is not an anti-lynching bill. It is a prolynching bill. It will stimulate that dying, almost extinct, disgrace to our civilization-lynching. . . .

"All good citizens glory in the progress we have made towards the goal of a land completely cleared of the stigma of lynching. Even one is a disgrace to civilization. All of us feel that way. But while some have been risking their lives to prevent mob violence, others introduce bills. . . .

"There is not a man in this chamber, not a man in either branch of congress, who is not against lynching. Scarcely a citizen in the whole nation fails to condemn it. I respectfully submit, therefore, that this resort to mob violence to lynch the Constitution by the passage of this outrageous law should not be sanctioned and that the pending motion should be voted down. (Applause).

"Does the spirit of mob violence which is driving this bill through this house make it right? No. It is just as wrong as the hinges of hell; it is just as wrong as any action that was ever taken by a mob, judged by the morals of the situation. You have the votes; you have the power, but you have not the right! (Applause)

Talladega, Ala., Daily Home
April 24, 1937

South Is Angered by Anti-Lynching Act

SOUTHERN congressmen found they were no longer in the saddle when the house by a vote of 276 to 119 passed the anti-lynching bill. The debate was furious and the representatives from the South were deeply resentful.

The bill was sponsored by Representative Joseph Gavagan of New York whose district includes the big negro city of Harlem. It provides that any state officer who surrenders a prisoner to a mob shall be guilty of a felony and subject to prosecution and severe penalties. In addition, the county in which a lynching occurs shall be liable for $2,000 to $10,000 damages, to be paid to the family of the lynched person.

Proponents of the measure were greatly aided by a mob in Mississippi that took two negroes from a sheriff and tortured and burned them to death. The local authorities were supine and called the shocking affair a "closed incident."

Lynchings-1937
6
Legislation Relating to.
6
2

5676

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL IS PASSED BY HOUSE AFTER BITTER TALK

Times

Solid South's Protests Fail as Gavagan Measure Is Voted by 277 to 119

4-16-37

'END OF STATES' RIGHTS'

New York

Sumners Vainly Cites Mob Decline as Proponents Point to Duck Hill 'Atrocity'

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill was passed by the House, 277 to 119, today after a six-hour debate marked by sectional bitterness.

The vote was largely along Northern-Southern sectional lines, about 100 Southern Representatives losing their three-day battle to defeat the measure on the ground that it is an invasion of States' rights.

The measure provides for Federal fines or prison sentences for peace officers who permit a prisoner to be taken from them and injured or killed, and it also provides an injured person or his kin to institute suits against the guilty peace officers for personal damages.

The two sections containing the suit for personal injury provision were first stricken from the bill in committee of the whole, by a vote of 123 to 118, but they were restored in the House on a roll-call vote, 252 to 139.

Attempts to Amend Bill Fail

All other attempts to amend the bill failed, including that of Representative Frank E. Hook of Michigan, to include sit-down strikes in the definition of crimes to be punished under the bill.

Representative Joseph A. Gavagan of New York, author of the measure, and Representative Emanel Celler of New oYrk, asserted that only through a Federal law would lynching be curbed and that the measure would provide the means to stop recurrence of the crime described by them and others as "dastardly and cowardly."

Chairman Sumners of the Judiciary Committee, leading thet opposition, declared that the South "has a racial problem that most of you gentlemen know nothing of," and added that the bill would not only not prevent lynching, but might prove less of a protection to Negroes than its sponsors hoped.

The Texan pointed out that the bill was directed only toward the protection of persons in custody of officers.

Probably not in this session has the House listened with such avid interest to a speaker as to Mr. Sumners, who occupied the floor for about half an hour.

Sumners Points to Decline

Although he had about twenty volumes of law books on the committee table to cite court decisions aimed at the unconstitutionality of the measure, Mr. Sumners consumed most of his time in a stirring appeal to the House to let the South handle the lynching problem in its own manner.

"You men," he said, pointing to the table where sat Mr. Gavagan and Mr. Celler, "are sincere in your efforts to help protect the Negro race. But I tell you that you will not aid the Negro race with this bill, because it is unworkable.

"The South has reduced the crime of lynching more than 5,000 per cent in the last forty years, and that is proof that the tide of public sentiment will take better care of this situation than can any law you enact.

"You have the votes and you can pass this bill, but I tell you that it will not accomplish the purpose at which you are aiming. There are no people anywhere who are more sincerely opposed to lynching than are the better people of the South. And now you are seeking to cast aspersion on a people which has been laboring for seventy years to do the very things you think you are doing."

As he left the floor Mr. Sumners received an ovation, the members rising to their feet and applauding.

Wrong—"Federalitis"

Many Southern Democrats contended that the bill might have the effect of decreasing some of the protection now afforded persons who have committed brutal crimes. Mobs might contrive to seige a suspected before an officer took him into custody, in which event the officer would not be amenable to the law, they said.

Times

Mr. Sumners said that the measure would give the Federal Government power to prosecute a State Governor unless he called out the militia to suppress threatened lynchings.

He warned that the country was suffering from "Federalitis," or a movement to give the Federal Government more powers. This reference led to an exchange between him and Representative Clare E. Hoffman of Michigan that sent the members and the crowded galleries into prolonged laughter.

Mr. Hoffman asked him if he meant by "Federalitis" the sending "of 30,000 Negroes into Michigan just before the election last November."

"What's the matter," returned Mr. Sumners, "didn't they vote for your party?"

Rankin Hits at Gavagan

Representative Rankin termed the bill a "demogogic aspersion" on the South, and declared that proponents of the measure were attempting to make Harlem "safe for Tammany."

This was denied by Mr. Gavagan and others, who pointed to the two lynchings in Mr. Rankin's home State two days ago as evidence that the measure was "sorely needed," and was sincerely offered as a protection to the Negro race.

Mr. Rankin, pointing his finger at Mr. Cavagan, asserted that "you in New York will one day experience just what we have gone through with since the Civil War."

He recounted various crimes that led to lynchings in his State, and read from a recent magazine an article depicting a series of crimes which he described as an "epidemic" which followed an attack of a Negro upon a young white woman in Michigan recently.

"That's what you can expect," Mr. Rankin said. "We in the South have had a problem for 200 years, which grew out of slavery. And, you know, the slaves were brought to our shores in Yankee ships."

Fish Argues Need of Law

Representative E. E. Cox of Georgia said "this is the first of a number of bills we can expect to come in this House from the reformers of the North seeking to establish racial equality in the South."

In a choking voice Mr. Cox declared that "the South will never surrender its racial lines," and Southern members applauded.

Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, referring to the Duck Hill lynchings in Mississippi, said: "Judging from past experience, I doubt if the members of this atrocious, bloodthirsty mob will be convicted and imprisoned. Only time will tell. I am unwilling to believe that intelligent, law-abiding Southern people have any sympathy with mob violence, torture or with such bestial acts, and that they must see the need for Federal regulation."

Representative John J. O'Connor of New York, acting as chairman of the committee of the whole, ruled out of order two amendments offered by Representative Colmar of Mississippi, seeking to include gang murders and kidnapping in crimes to be punished under the law.

"Lynchings are on a par with gang murders," said Mr. Colmar, "and if it is constitutional to legislate in one field it is constitutional to legislate in another."

One Southerner for Bill

During one of his appearances on the floor, Mr. Hoffman asserted: "You Southern Democrats went to New York and married Tammany, and this bill is the offspring."

Times

Mr. Hoffman was one of the few Republicans who opposed the bill, but his speeches mostly taunted the Democratic side on its split on the anti-lynching issue.

The only Southerner supporting the measure on the floor was Representative Maverick of Texas, who said that he would vote to "remove the stigma" of lynching from "our country."

4-16-37

Representative Frank W. Towey of New Jersey also defended the measure, asserting the Federal judiciary was the only competent authority to determine whether State authorities failed in their duty to protect victims of mobs.

Aligned on the side of the opposition was Representative Wadsworth of New York, a Republican, who called the measure a snare and a delusion," and said that its enforcement was doubtful.

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois, only Negro member of the House, whose bill along similar lines was sidetracked by the House, made a strong appeal for the Gavagan measure, asserting that he knew "how morbs can operate." He recounted an experience while in his home State of Alabama when he said he and his wife kept guns by their sides a whole night while expecting the visitation of a mob.

House Is Orderly

The House was orderly during most of the debate, contrasting with the order of Wednesday, when the bill was first brought up, when the Speaker was forced repeatedly to warn the galleries not to evidence approval or disapproval of speeches or actions. The galleries were well filled during the entire seven hours the House was in session. Scores of Negroes witnessed the proceedings.

Although Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn opposed the bill on the roll-call they kept the House at work on the measure until it was passed. They had served notice on Mr. Rankin and others who sought to delay consideration that the House would be kept in session until the bill was disposed of.

That required seven hours and five minutes, and then the House adjourned over until noon Monday.

Mississippi Is Disturbed

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JACKSON, Miss., April 15.—That Mississippi should have provided in the Duck Hill lunchings of Tuesday a final argument for the passage of the Federal Anti-Lynching Bill has disturbed not only officials but also those thoughtful citizens who have seen the lynching problems on the way to being solved by local law enforement.

There seems to be little prospect of local court action in the Montgomery County lynchings. The Sheriff and his deputy said that they could not recognize any of the mob who tied two Negroes to trees and tortured them with a blowtorch before shooting them. The grand jury is "investigating," but if there are indictments it is generally admitted there will be no convictions.

Governor Hugh White, who has had great hopes for racial peace and the coming of new industry to Mississippi, has made no open move except to urge the county officials to make an investigation.

It is said that the Governor, who has received protests from Washington and many parts of the State, is helpless to act unless the local District Attorney requests it.

The lynchings could hardly have come at a more unfortunate time, in view of the Federal legislation, which is regarded here as a menace to State sovereignty.

White Slayer Gets Reprieve

Governor White had just made a speech to the Farmers Chemurgic Conference here, in which he had stressed the fact that there had been no lynchings in a year. Political and business leaders were out to hear the Governor speak.

Another instance of impartial justice was to have been acclaimed to the world from Coffeyville yesterday. This was the execution of William Clark Mitchell, former White Hill farmer, army man and torch murders of two Negroes in 1932. Not since 1889 has a white man been hanged for the murder of a Negro.

At the last moment a writ was signed by Judge R. B. Anderson staying the execution and calling for a sanity test of Mitchell. It was the fourth reprieve for Mitchell, who is in jail here.

His conviction was upheld by the State Supreme Court. The scaffold was erected last night, but, while Governor White was out of the State, Acting Governor John Culkin issued a reprieve.

With Mitchell's execution delayed indefinitely and "those red-necked hill billies from up North," as one official put it, staging a lynching when the law would have executed it, the Governor was in a jittery frame of mind.

Booneville, Miss. Independent
April 22, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL PASSES

A very drastic anti-lynching bill passed the lower house of congress on Thursday of last week by a vote of 277 for the bill and 119 against it, with 34 not voting. In support of the bill party lines were disregarded. It was introduced by Representative Gavagan, a Democrat, from New York City. The opposition to the bill was led by Representative Summers, of Texas, chairman of the Judiciary committee of the House. A bill somewhat less drastic and far-reaching in its provisions was introduced by Representative Miller, negro of Chicago, but in a roll-call vote of the House in committee of the whole the Gavagan bill was selected over the Miller bill and was pushed on to final passage. The bill now goes to the Senate where it will have strong support and likewise strong opposition. The chances are rather against its passage by the Senate, provided no more lynchings occur before the final vote is taken.

For many years efforts have been made by Republican members of congress to secure the passage of an anti-lynching bill and in 1922 Representative Dyer, of Missouri, passed a bill of this sort through the House but it failed in the Senate. In 1934 a Senate bill had a favorable report from the judiciary committee but was never brought to a vote. Again in 1935 strong efforts were made to get a bill before the Senate but Sen. Borah made a statement that he considered the bill un-constitutional and would oppose it on that ground and after his statement no further efforts were made to get action on the bill. The bill which passed the House last week was pending with uncertain fate, the discussion being at white heat, when news flashed to Washington that two negroes had been lynched, and tortured to death in a cruel and inhuman fashion at Duck Hill, and that made certain the passage of the bill. According to news reports [illegible] the negroes were slowly tortured after they had been chained to a tree.

Not in all the annals of crime, not in the jungles of Africa, not in the Dark Ages of sin and crime in the world anywhere has there been a more cruel, revolting and in-excusable murder than the Duck Hill lynching. These negroes had murdered a law-abiding and inoffensive citizen and deserved the supreme punishment of the law. Nowhere was there any sympathy for the negroes. They deserved none so far as the law applied to them. It seems that the officers of Montgomery county had been vigilant in running them down. They had been captured, indicted and admitted their guilt and in 24 hours longer they would have been, most certainly, convicted and sentenced to hang. No delay had been asked or contemplated. The law was moving swiftly to bring the murderers to justice. When court was adjourned for the noon recess the sheriff and his deputies started to the jail house with their prisoners. When they reached the ground they were met by a number of men, leaders of a mob, who took the negroes from the law officers without a scramble. They were hurried into waiting cars and rushed off toward Duck Hill where they were chained to trees and tortured to death by applying the intensive heat of blow torches to their flesh.

So far as newspaper reports indicate the sheriff made no effort to protect the law and did not even follow the mob and arrest the leaders. The judge and the district attorney were on the ground and so far as reports from that county reveal no detail of men was sent to identify the mob leaders. Gov. White was notified and his first impulse was to call a detachment of national guard from Grenada but was told, according to reports, that it was too late and would avail nothing. Yet the indications are that the soldiers could have reached Duck Hill in ample time to have arrested the leaders of the mob even before they had ceased to torture the negroes. If the national guard had been sent there under double-quick orders in two hours they could have filled the Montgomery county jail to the doors with members of the mob and in 24 hours they could have been indicted and tried and sentenced. Such an act as that would have won the praise and commendation of the civilized world, and put an end to mob violence in this state. But as it is the strong arm of the law has failed and no longer wields its scepter of control. Constituted authority means nothing in a crisis.

Mississippi could have been covered with glory in the name of the law but as it is the state is besmirched with shame. Down the ages of time to generations yet unborn the archives of history will proclaim this awful story. The Duck Hill mob passed the anti-lynching bill in the House last week. Gov. White can defeat it in the Senate. We believe firmly that the Governor will do something in this matter. If he has members of the mob arrested and indicted and swiftly punished it will be a great moral block in the Senate when the anti-lynching bill comes up in that body. The eyes of the world are on Gov. White now and will closely watch him through this matter. Mr. Summers, who was leading the fight on the anti-lynching bill in congress wired Gov. White just after the lynching and the Associated Press handled his wire in the following from Washington:

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Chairman Summers (D.-Tex) of the house judiciary committee, telegraphed Governor White of Mississippi today that the state could not escape being an accessory to the Duck Hill lynchings unless it brings "these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Terming the lynchings "as dastardly a crime as cowardice could devise and brutally execute," Sumners said:

"It is the sort of thing which makes it hard for us who are here trying to protect the governmental sovereignty of the states.

"It will be effectively seized upon as a demonstration of the inability of the states to govern. As one Southern man to another I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and subject to a heavy fine or[illegible] if the mobs would let people alone or both. It provides that[illegible] and let the law punish them as it should. family of a lynched per-In most cases in this state the law has ver a large sum of money[illegible]been well enforced against people com- nty in which the lynching[illegible]mitting murder and other high crimes. uld create a situation that[illegible]Except, of course, in the matter of lynch a sheriff to be afraid to[illegible]oing. ith a prisoner without the s, and as Gov. White has would require a standing state at a big expense to . All of this would be un- not a matter for any con-

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5677

ANTI-LYNCH BILL PASSED BY HOUSE IN BITTER FIGHT

Southern Congressmen Roar Insults at Negro People

By Alan Max
(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15.—While the Southern Democratic bloc roared the vilest insults against the Negro people, the House today passed the Gavagan anti-lynching bill by the overwhelming vote of 276 to 119.

Passage of the measure climaxed a 15 year old fight to bring anti-lynching legislation even for discussion.

The entire group from the South, including the solid leadership of the House, opposed the bill and participated in a revolting orgy of lynch hysteria.

The only representative from the deep South to vote for the bill was Rep. Maury Maverick of Texas.

The measure was immediately sent to the Senate, where Senator Josiah Bailey of North Carolina has already served notice that he would attempt to kill it with a filibuster.

RANKIN DROPS MASK

For the first half of the long debate today, the Southerners kept up their argument of "constitutionality," telling how much they really "loved" the Negro people and how they were waiting "to be greeted by the black arms" of their Negro nurses when they reached heaven.

Then without warning, Rep. John E. Rankin, Democrat of Mississippi, scene of Tuesday's acetyline torch lynchings, let the mask fall.

Only the robe was missing from Rankin's hand as he pranced around shooting the details of a series of supposed attacks on white women.

Once the rule had been given by Rankin, other Southerners fell in line, ranting as if they were already on a lynching-bee.

Rep. Eugene Cox of Georgia, shouted that the Gavagan bill was the only the "first of a series of measures to be inflicted on the South in order to bring about social equality."

Declaring that "the color line in the South is a permanent institution," Cox raved about "racial purity" and attempts to "mongrolize" the white race.

AMENDMENT FAILS

Rep. Ford of Mississippi, attacked the pending Koppleman bill to bar discrimination in the District of Columbia, and told the House: "When you talk about equality for niggers' in theatres and restaurants, every man with a wife or daughter, will arm himself to the teeth and go down the street and shoot every one he sees."

Talking directly to the Southern bloc, Rep. Maverick told them that he came from a "family of Confederate soldiers," but that he was going to vote for the measure, "for I think it is right."

An attempt to smuggle anti-labor provisions into a good bill, was again made when Rep. Hook, Democrat of Michigan, unsuccessfully tried to amend the measure so as to penalize sitdown strikes along with lynching.

A combination, of Northern Democrats, Farmer-Laborites, Progressives and a large part of the Republicans, defeated all efforts of the Southerners to block the bill.

The sharpest fight developed over an attempt to cut out the penalties on counties where police negligence results in lynchings. The move was defeated by a roll call. Vote was 252 to 139 after a teller vote showed 228 to 118 in favor.

HOUSE VOTES PASSAGE OF ANTI-LYNCHING BILL OVER DIXIE OPPONENTS

Northern Democrats Combine With G. O. P. In Adopting Measure, 276 To 119

BORAH DOUBTS VALIDITY

'Aimed at South,' Enemies of Plan Cry in H. Debate

PATH IN SENATE ROUGHER

'Let Us Alone!' Texan Demands in Denouncing Proposal To Make Mob Violence Federal Government Offense

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The House overrode southern opposition tonight to pass the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. It would authorize the federal government to intervene in mob crimes to punish participants and negligent officers.

After more than six hours of debate, it voted 276 to 119 to approve the measure and sent it to the Senate where, sponsors agreed, it faced sterner opposition.

Even as the House voted, Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, issued a statement condemning what he called an "effort to force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

Republicans Back Bill

In general, Republicans joined with northern Democrats in supporting the bill.

The measure, the first of its kind to pass since 1922, would subject an officer who permitted a prisoner to be taken from his custody and injured or put to death to a fine ranging up to $5,000 and to as much as five years in prison.

Likewise, participants would be subject to from five to 25 years imprisonment.

Asserting the bill was aimed at the south, opponents from that section sought in vain to strike out provisions that would subject counties in which a prisoner was seized or put to death to damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000. The money would go to a victim's family.

Action Reversed

The opponents succeeded once in deleting the sections, only to be reversed by a 232 to 139 vote just before the measure passed.

Describing these provisions as the "heart of the bill," its author, Representative Gavagan, Democrat, New York., who represents a New York City district with a large negro population, said the measure would not be "worth the paper it's written on" without them.

While much of the debate centered on constitutionality of the legislation, such issues as partisan politics, President Roosevelt's court reorganization program and general matters of governmental authority were injected.

Denying the legislation's constitutionality Chairman Sumners, Democrat, Texas, of the House judiciary committee, warned:

"This bill would give the federal government power to prosecute a governor if he should not call out the militia in case of a lynching."

Figures Cited

"Why don't you [illegible] in the south alone and give us a chance to show what we will do about this situation?" he continued. He then cited figures to show that lynchings had declined 5,000 per cent since the peak in 1892.

One of the few Republicans opposing the bill, Representative Hoffman, of Michigan, asserted its object was to give the "Democratic party in New York more negro votes."

Voicing similar views, Representative Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, shoulted at Mr. Gavagan:

"You want to make Harlem safe for Tammany."

Negro for Bill

A plea for the bill was made by Representative Mitchell, Democrat, Illinois, only negro member of Congress, whose own measure was sidetracked last week. He told colleagues of his own experience with a mob. He said that once when he was teaching in Alabama a mob "marched within three miles of my schoolhouse to lynch me because I had stopped payment on a $20 check obtained through fraud."

"The best thing you can do to encourage the negro race is to pass this legislation," he declared.

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, bitterly accused northern Democrats of turning against the south.

"For more than 100 years the south has kept the Democratic party alive. Now that it has grown fat and powerful, it proposes to turn upon the south and deal it this wicked blow."

Mission Leaders Wire Protest To White

Special to The Commercial Appeal

CLARKSDALE, Miss., April 15.—Voicing sentiment against lynching as recently expressed by Women's Missionary Societies of the North Mississippi Methodist Conference, in session at Aberdeen, Mrs. H. L. Talbert, of Clarksdale, president of the North Mississippi W. M. S., today wired Governor White, asking a thorough investigation of the lynching of two negroes near Duck Hill this week.

Mrs. Talbert, who conferred with Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of Brooksville, conference secretary, and Mrs. W. H. Ratliff, of Sherard, conference vice president, here today, said at least 5,000 women in North Mississippi voiced sentiment against lynchings in petitions presented at the Aberdeen conference by the various societies.

Mrs. Talbert said the campaign against lynching was part of the Christian social relations program which was discussed at Aberdeen.

The telegram follows:

"The more than 5,000 members of the Woman's Missionary Society of North Mississippi are shocked and humiliated at the brutal lynchings perpetrated by the mob at Duck Hill. We wish to register our protest and urge a thorough official investigation of the mob violence and the conviction of the guilty parties."

Mob Not From County, Says Prosecutor

WINONA, Miss., April 15.—(UP)—Montgomery County authorities, contending the torture-lynching of two negroes near Duck Hill was done by outsiders, tonight said they had no clue as to the identity of any of the mob.

"We have been unable to get anything definite," District Attorney Clarence E. Morgan said. "However, we are confident none of the parties in the mob was from Montgomery County."

The negroes—Roosevelt Townes, 25, and "Bootjack" McDaniel, 26, were taken to near Duck Hill. The mob tortured the negroes with a blowtorch and lynched them near a crossroads store, whose operator, George S. Windham, was accused of murdering and robbing [illegible]

He claimed he had "information that the mobsters were from the surrounding counties of Grenada, Carroll and probably Webster and Tallahatchie."

Sheriff E. E. Wright and two deputies, from whom the negroes were seized here, continued to maintain they had not recognized any of the mobsters.

Mr. Morgan said any grand jury investigation would be deferred "until we get something to go on." Circuit Judge John Allen had ordered the grand jury to investigate.

Governor White had not indicated whether state officials would intervene in the investigation.

"There is no evidence that there was even a leader to the mob," Mr. Morgan said. "The mob just came on us like an April shower, and no one was recognized—but the parties were not from Montgomery County."

UNCALLED FOR LEGISLATION

The passage by the house of congress of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill is regrettable. It is to be hoped that the measure will meet the defeat it deserves at the hands of the senate.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, correctly brands the bill "an effort to force through congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

The Georgia delegation vigorously opposed the bill both by their votes and on the floor of the house. For this they are to be warmly commended.

This iniquitous measure is aimed at the south. Particularly obnoxious, as pointed out by members of congress from various southern states, is the provision that any county in which a prisoner is seized by a mob or put to death may be subjected to a fine of from $1,000 to $10,000, the money to be paid to the victim's family. The possibilities in such a law are alarming to contemplate.

The chief iniquity of the bill, however, lies in the fact that it is the worst example, to date, of the growing tendency to force federal interference into affairs which are strictly matters for the states themselves to handle. The bill strikes at one of the most fundamental of state's rights, the right to exercise exclusive police power over its own citizens. Federal policing of crime in any state is a dangerous innovation and one that could easily lead to utter submergence of the states as governmental entities.

There can be no doubt that the charge, made by southern opponents of the bill, that it is aimed at the south, is true. Though the black record of lynching includes many mob crimes committed in other parts of the country, it is self-evident that, had there been no lynchings in the south, the measure would not have been introduced and would not have received the strange support of a temporary coalition of northern Democrats with the Republican minority.

That lynching is a frightful crime which cannot, on any grounds, be condoned, no intelligent person will deny. That it is a shameful blot upon modern civilization is not open to argument.

But, emphatically, the cure does not lie through federal interference with the sacred rights of the states. The cure, as for all social evils, lies in education, and is evident, to the unprejudiced, that education is steadily wiping out the evil.

The records reveal that, since the peak of [illegible], the number of lynchings in the country as a whole has decreased 5,000 per cent. The greater part of this improvement has taken place in the south.

Occasionally we are still shocked and horrified by the report of another mob outrage, but they become steadily less frequent. Public condemnation grows stronger and the day has passed when any man may safely boast that he was a member of a lynching mob.

Education is curing the evil. Education will perfect that cure in due time. Federal assumption of a duty that is emphatically a duty of the state is not the prescription for the disease.

It is to be hoped the senate will promptly scotch this evil proposal. If anti-lynching legislation is needed, it is certainly not of the type of the Gavagan bill.

ANTI-LYNCH BILL VOTED BY HOUSE

Even as Measure Is Passed Senator Borah Attacks It as Unjust, Unmoral.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—(AP) The house overrode bristling southern opposition tonight to pass the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. It would authorize the federal government to intervene in mob crimes to punish participants and negligent officers.

After more than six hours' hectic debate, it voted 277 to 119 to approve the measure and sent it to the senate where, sponsors agreed, it faced sterner opposition.

Even as the house voted, Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, issued a statement condemning what he called an "effort to force through congress an unjust, unconstitutional, and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

In general, Republicans joined with northern Democrats in supporting the bill.

The measure, the first of its kind to pass either house since 1922, would subject an officer who permitted a prisoner to be taken from his custody and injured or put to death to a fine ranging up to $5,000 and to as much as five years in prison.

Likewise, participants would be subject to from five to 25 years imprisonment.

Asserting the bill was aimed at the south, opponents from that section sought in vain to strike from the bill provisions that would subject counties in which a prisoner was seized or put to death to damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000, the money would go to the victim's family.

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, bitterly accused northern Democrats of turning against the south.

"For more than 100 years the south has kept the Democratic party alive. Now it has grown fat and powerful, it proposes to turn upon the south and deal it this wicked blow."

Borah Hits Bill.

While much of the debate centered on constitutionality of the legislation, such issues as partisan politics, President Roosevelt's court reorganization program and centralization of governmental authority were injected.

Denying the legislation's constitutionality, as did Senator Borah, Chairman Sumners, Democrat, Texas, of the house judiciary committee, warned colleagues:

"This bill would give the federal government power to prosecute a Governor if he did not call out the militia in case of a lynching.

"Why don't you let us in the south alone and give us a chance to show what we can do about this situation." He then cited figures to show that lynchings had declined 5,000 per cent since the peak in 1892.

One of the few Republicans opposing the bill, Representative Hoffman, of Michigan, asserted its object was to give the "Democratic party in New York more negro votes."

The entire Georgia delegation voted against the bill.

LYNCHINGS STIR DEBATE OVER FEDERAL MEASURE

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP) The house received reports of the lynching of two negroes near Duck Hill, Miss., today in the midst of debate over a federal anti-lynching bill.

Proponents immediately seized upon the mob actions as an argument in behalf of a proposal by Representative Gavagan, Democrat, New York, to impose heavy fines and prison terms on persons figuring in lynchings.

"This lynching is not an indication that the laws of Mississippi condone or approve such acts," declared Representative Miller, Democrat, Arkansas.

"Those participating in this lynching," he added, "have violated the law of Mississippi and the good citizens of the state will resent it. But it is not a case for federal interference."

A Mississippi Democrat, Representative Colmer, asked Representative Fish, Republican, New York, if the measure would apply to "gang murders for which your state is known."

Chairman Sumners, Democrat, Texas, of the judiciary committee and opposition floor leader, criticized proponents for "failing to point out" that southern states had virtually stopped lynchings.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
April 28, 1937

State Rights And Mob Rule.

While Southern Senators and Representatives in Congress are against a Federal anti-lynching law, and stand practically as a unit in opposition to the pending Gavagan bill proposing such a law, it is interesting to note that perhaps most of the Southern newspapers favor enactment of that measure, which has passed the House. These newspapers formerly opposed Federal legislation aimed at mob lawlessness, but as the years passed and lynching mobs continued to operate with impunity they have reached the conclusion that there is no other remedy for this evil, which afflicts the South particularly. Commenting on the attitude of Southern Congressmen who contend that the Gavagan bill would infringe State rights, the Louisville Courier-Journal says:

"While the country has been waiting for the States to prove their ability and will to deal with this question, and noting their failure to deal with it, lynchings have continued; and while some of the victims have been saved from mobs, the lynchers and mobs are not punished. In 1935 there were twenty lynchings, but nobody has been punished for them. Just before the House enacted the Gavagan bill there were two lynchings in Mississippi. Of the twenty victims of mob law in 1935, thirteen were in the hands of the law, five were taken from jails, six from law officers outside of jails, and two were shot to death in jails. The Gavagan law now proposes to turn over to the National Government the work which the State Governments have failed to do. That seems to be the only chance of getting it done at all."

The Herald Courier reached that conclusion some years ago and has advocated a Federal anti-lynching law in the belief that it would at least do no harm and in the hope that it might solve the lynching problem. There seems no possibility of any other solution. The States have failed either to prevent many mob murders or to punish the murderers and there is no more promise now than there has been in the past that mob lawlessness will be suppressed by the States. We are supposed to live under the rule of the law, but we live under the rule of the mob when the mob chooses to assert itself. The question is whether we shall tolerate mob rule from generation to generation or shall invoke Federal aid which may bring it to an end.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to

5678

Hendersonville, N. C., Times-News
November 26, 1937

WHAT IS THE ANTI-LYNCH LAW?

What is the federal anti-lynching law? The measure is before Congress with fair chances of being enacted. It is a new deal measure, opposed by an overwhelming majority of southern Congressmen and Senators and supported by a majority of northern Democrats and many Republicans. As far as the public has been able to determine it has the unqualified endorsement of President Roosevelt. Here is what Gen. Hugh Johnson says on the subject of the nature of the anti-lynching bill:

"It defines lynching as three or more people taking and injuring or killing a person charged with, suspected or convicted of a crime. When this happens, the responsible state or municipal cop who wilfully neglected his duty, or failed to arrest the lynchers, can be tried by a federal court and, if convicted, sent to the penitentiary as a felon. Also, in behalf of any person so injured or killed the U. S. Attorney General, using federal funds can bring a civil suit against any town where such a thing occurred and collect damages up to $10,000.

"Only once before during the life of our Constitution was it believed that the federal government could supervise the execution of state laws or officers or discipline local governments and officers. That once was the ravishment of the South by carpet-bag tyranny after the Civil war in the tragic Reconstruction Era—the most disgraceful period in our history."

Following the quoted paragraph, Gen. Johnson proceeds to tell who is supporting the anti-lynching bill and why they are supporting it. Here it is:

"Lynching and mob violence are particularly dangerous and despicable crimes. Few statesmen dare go against what the public has been bally-hooed into believing is an anti-lynching bill no matter how bad or dangerous it is on other grounds. Due to state action, lynching has almost disappeared—from hundreds of cases years ago, mostly in the South—to nine last year. This, besides being a bad issue, is a false issue. Why is it raised?

"The negro vote in the few pivotal states of greatest electoral votes is now large enough to swing any close election there and some of those states are large enough to be necessary in any national election. Negroes are all new new dealers. They have every reason to believe that this bill will keep them so permanently, and they care not a hoot for the objection of people who think our system of dual state and national government should be preserved.

"They don't want it preserved. They want a modified fascist front in a federal dictatorship based on discontents of all kinds. They want to break up the old Democracy of the Solid South and rebuild a Third New Deal party of negroes, the unemployed, aliens and all those who claim a class grievance—to break down the states and constitutional guarantees and centralize all political power where they can control it. This is just their dish.

Read that again. Negroes—northern negroes, at least—are all new dealers, Gen. Johnson says. They have been hooked by the new deal with government spending of money raided from the federal treasury and with various kinds of political and government favors and handouts. In the great population centers of the country in the States having the largest number of votes and electoral votes, in a close election, the negroes hold the balance of power. Their votes county heavily in any case. The purpose of the anti-lynching bill, Gen. Johnson says, is to permanently tie the negro voters to the new deal.

Then read again the last paragraph of Gen. Johnson's comment. In that paragraph will be found his estimate of the new deal and new dealers.

Washington D. C
N. S. B. News
Nov. 22, 1937

THE anti-lynching debate in Congress caused enterprising statisticians to sharpen their pencils and produce data to show that 3,679 individuals lost their lives through "lynch law" in the United States from 1882 to Sept. 1, 1937. Of these 700 were white; 2,979 Negroes. No lynchings are recorded in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont.

* * *

NEARLY three-quarters of all lynchings have occurred in eight States. Mississippi comes first with 455, then Georgia (469), Texas (354), Louisiana (342), Alabama (305), [illegible], Arkansas (241), and Tennessee (210). Far more Negroes than whites have been lynched in the South but the situation is reversed in the West and Mid-West, where the colored victims comprised only 13 per cent of the 257 in 17 States.

Columbus, Ga., News Record
November 25, 1937

They Don't Call it Lynching in Kentucky

IN THE Senate Tuesday Senator Connally of Texas made some remarks on the subject of the pending anti-lynching bill. It was a serious subject, but at times the senator's remarks were light hearted; indeed, we believe what he said will make very good reading for this editorial page, and so this extract is taken from Senator Connally's observations as conscientiously reported by The Congressional Record:

"The subcommittee came in one morning and said, 'We have the lynching bill.' The committee said, 'We are going to report it.' I said, 'Well, of course, you have the votes. I am against it!' so I do not know how it was put together. I do not know how the joiners and the carpenters put the thing together. I know they came in with a bill, but I was not in the chemical laboratory when they poured in the different potions and the different elements and the different chemicals to make up this structure.

"I wish I could quote that reference of Shakespeare in Macbeth about the witches' dance, when they put in the frogs' toes, and the newts' eyes, and the owl's wings, and the entrails of the snake, and the bitterest part of the polecat (laughter), and all that sort of thing. I should like to be able to put that in the Record, and I suspect that the official reporters can do it, because I have found out that the official reporters who report these debates know much more about Shakespeare and other things than Senators who try to quote them; so all I ever do is just to sort of hit the quotation, trusting that they will go to Shakespeare and get it correctly.

"I fancy that is somewhat the way this bill was compounded. One of the Senators said, 'Well, we shall have to do something about this. There are a lot of voters like this in my State. There are some people down in Florida or somewhere else; and we shall have to reform those fellows.' Then probably the Senator from New York said, 'Well, now, wait a minute, boys. I am for that, but we shall have to look after our own people here. We shall have to let the racketeers out of this bill. We cannot get hold of the gangsters, because while I shall probably forty or fifty thousand colored votes with the bill, if I do not exempt the gangsters I shall lose a hundred thousand gangsters' votes.' (Laughter). He probably said, 'Now, I know that may be regarded as expediency. That may not be regarded as a great fundamental principle; but, you know, we here in New

"The leadership—and when I say 'leadership' I do not mean simply the Senator from committee, or if the meet-Kentucky (Mr. Barkley); I mean the little subcommittee room, I suppose a Charlie McCarthy—this little group that rather try to make him appear to little committee room like had the meeting the other bill. I do not know. I am they telephone me to come want my vote. (Laughter). over here. I never know in going to happen in the Sen-ing; and I have no objection to his being a colored man. I am not prejudiced against colored men. I protect them in my State. I have defended many a one against a white man, and won his lawsuit, too. I cannot say what I heard (laughter), but there was a colored man up here, a fellow named White. He runs the Association for the Advancement of Colored People. I do not know what happened; I cannot say what happened, because I was not there. Frankly, I was not called in on this bill.

5678

"It is a great pleasure, though, to be in the rear ranks. You know, if you are a general or a colonel, you have a lot of responsibility. I see before me a distinguished gentleman who was a colonel during the World War. But if you are just a private, God knows you do not have to think. You do not have to worry about strategy or questions of supply. You do not have to bother about logistics, or tactics, or the line of supply, or communications. All you have to do is just do what they tell you. You just take your place in the near ranks and do what they tell you to do. There is no trouble at all. You may have to get up a little earlier than the other fellows. Of course, you have to get up earlier than the colonel does, and you have to work harder than the colonel does, and you do not get much pay. The colonels and the generals get the pay; but, then, you do not have any responsibility.

"So as to this bill I am just a private. I am not considered or consulted as to what we want or what the opponents of this measure want. We are like Tennyson's Six Hundred who charge ddown at Balaklava. It is not our 'to reason why'; our 'but to do and die.' So I am not complaining. I am glad I was not consulted. I am glad I was not in that little conference. I do not know who the white men were who were there, but I know that this colored man was there. I know the President was not there, but his requests were there. The President's request that we take up the farm bill and the President's request that we take up reorganization were both there, because here they are in the Record. Then there was a colored man there, and the colored man won out over the President. What the colored man wanted done was done, and the President's requests were thrown into the waste-basket.

"Do you blame me for talking plainly here?

"Let us see what Kentucky did about this thing. Why, Kentucky did not have a single lynching in 1936, and this provision will let out all the feudists in the mountains of eastern Kentucky. They are not eligible. They can kill all the people they want to if they will do it under the name of a feud in Kentucky. I am amazed that my good friend, the beloved leader here, the senior Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Barkley), should sponsor this bill. They do not have any lynching in Kentucky. They do not call it 'lynching' there. They call it just a little disagreement. (Laughter). They have a little social disagreement over in the mountains of eastern Kentucky, and they just get out their old Enfields and shot all the insides out of half a dozen fellows, and that is just a feudists' dlisagreement. It is not a lynching.

"But if there is one little lynching down in the South, these Kentuckians from their mountain tops adjust their legislative telescopes and point the finger of scorn at us and say, 'Oh, it is terrible. We have to have a Federal law on them.' Those ravines over in eastern Kentucky are just full of feudists. Have you an open season where you allow them to shoot so many a month? (Laughter). We have quotas in nearly everything, and I thought probably there was a quota in Kentucky for certain months or certain periods. (Laughter)."

Bristol, Va., News-Bulletin
November 24, 1937

Senator Bailey Miscues

In the course of a speech in the Senate which began with opposition to the anti-lynching bill and spread out to many aspects of the Roosevelt administration, Senator Bailey cited the incident several months ago in Morehead City, N. C., in which two union organizers were run out of town. As quoted in a long verbatim account in the Raleigh News and Observer, Senator Bailey said, in the course of his speech, those words:

"The people in the town just did one thing. They got hold of those two fellows, put them on a bus and said, 'You clear out of here; and if you do not clear, we might need a lynch law down here.' And they cleared out. Pretty rough of them, pretty strong of them, but sometimes you have got to do something when people come dwn to break up your civilization."

The Congressional Record has a different version "They got hold of those two fellows," it quotes Senator Bailey as saying, "put them on a bus, and said, 'You clear out of here', and if they had not cleared out, I do not know what would have happened; but they cleared out." In the first instance, Senator Bailey was quoted as saying that the Morehead City people threatened the two union organizers with a lynching. In the second instance no reference to lynching appears.

How this discrepancy arose we do not know, nor which version is correct, although it frequently happens that what Senators have said in the heat of debate they tone down on the written report before it appears in print in the Congressional Record. It is to be hoped that a mistake has been made, because the first version reveals a Southern Senator, in the midst of a speech against the anti-lynching bill, quoting with approval a threat of lynching.

But regardless of that, and accepting the Congressional Record version as correct, one is forced to the conclusion that Senator Bailey at least approves, and said so on the Senate floor, an act which was a direct and serious violation of civil rights. Whether the organizers could bring economic salvation to shirt factory workers is beside the point. Whether they would have a contrary effect is also beside the point. The point is that they had a legal right to be in Morehead City and that anybody who put them on a bus and sent them rolling out of town was violating the law.

If Senator Bailey were run out of Raleigh in this manner, he would carry the case, if necessary, to the Supreme Court, and he would win. It is astonishing to hear him defending such action.—Norfolk Virginian Pilot.

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times
November 26, 1937

There have been 7 lynchings since first of the year. In that same time there have been 200 killings in Chicago. And yet the Illinois members of Congress are all very much in favor of the anti-lynching bill. Isn't there something said somewhere about cleaning up around your own doorstep?

Greenville, S. C. Piedmont
November 23, 1937

Senator Smith's Complaint

SPEAKING in opposition to the anti-lynching bill the other day Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina declared that the movement for its passage "is the most opprobious, the most uncalled for, and the most vicious attack upon a section of the country that has ever been made in our history."

He said that it comes "from the party to which my section has given allegiance during all the disappointing years following the War Between the States."

And at another point he stated:

"What galls me more than anything else is that it comes from the so-called Democratic party, which we have loved and which, in the dark days of Reconstruction, was our pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night.

"I wonder sometimes what is the purpose of the treatment being accorded the South.

"The two-thirds rule in national conventions was abolished and we were eliminated from any participation in the naming of a president.

"You are about to pass and perhaps will pass an hours and wages bill which, in the recrudescent state of my section, will crucify it.

"Now you come along and say, 'You are not competent to protect your prisoners'; and so the great purified, sublimated, glorified, crime-ridden New York . . . must shed its light on poor benighted South Carolina and the rest of the South and send its gifted peace officers down there to help eliminate lynching and promote racketeering."

A growing number of southerners, Senator Smith, are wondering with you about this changing attitude on the part of the national Democratic party toward the South, wondering about it and worrying, too.

The New Deal, 1937 model, has many points of excellence but it has some of the other kind, too, and a number of them unhappily step on the toes of the South.

This wouldn't be true except for the fact that under our one-party system everybody knows that before a campaign starts the South already is in the bag for the Democrats.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5679

OLD HOSTILITY FLARES OVER ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Senate Opponents Are Reconciled to Passage, but They Hold That High Court Is Certain to Intervene

By HENRY N. DORRIS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—All the animosity, bitterness, bantering and even hilarity that have marked the thirty-year campaign for a Federal anti-lynching law were evidenced again this week in the revival of the legislation in the Senate. Nevertheless, proponents of the Gavagan-Wagner Anti-Lynching Bill now see victory ahead. Even opponents of the measure concede that in the near future it will be on the statute books, but they contend that it will be an empty victory because of a long line of Supreme Court decisions which they believe has established the principle that such legislation violates the rights of the States.

The chief innovation in the oft-repeated arguments produced by this week's debate is the assertion by Southern Democrats, traditionally opponents of the legislation, that even though they have lost from the Senate floor one of the most vigorous fighters against the Anti-Lynching Bill, they have gained in the person of Associate Justice Hugo L. Black a friend on the Supreme Court to further bolster their claim that the legislation will be thrown out on the first test case. Justice Black, during the 1935 debate on a similar bill, stated his opposition on the ground of its unconstitutionality.

Proponents Taunted

Because of their confidence in the claims of unconstitutionality, Southern Democrats have adopted the tactics of taunting Senators Wagner, Van Nuys and Clark, Senate sponsors, contending their sole purpose is to garner the votes of Negro constituents.

The present measure, introduced in the House by Representative Gavagan of New York but re-written by the Senate Judiciary Committee, provides that a person injured by a mob or, in the event he is killed, his heirs may bring suit in a Federal court having jurisdiction against the State subdivision responsible, and recover damages of not less than $2,000 or more than $10,000. The officer found guilty of permitting a prisoner to be taken from him is subject to a $5,000 fine, or five years' imprisonment, or both. The bill defines as a mob three or more persons who take from an officer a prisoner suspected of, charged with, or guilty of a crime and injures or kills him.

Based on Amendment

The basis of the bill is the Fourteenth Amendment, which says that "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of any citizen of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law; or deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law." Section 5 of the amendment says: "Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

In the penalty proposed against a political subdivision, proponents feel that they will bring the support of the taxpaying public to bear against lynching. If a Federal court, under the law, returned a judgment against a subdivision in favor of an injured party, the Attorney General would be given authority to proceed to collect such judgment, which of course would be out of the tax funds.

In proposing the legislation, its authors have anticipated arguments of opponents by saying:

(1) Lynchings are not due to legal delays.

(2) Charges of crimes against women are among the less frequent causes of lynching, and many of the alleged offenses for which persons were lynched have been "shockingly trivial."

(3) Medical opinion leans now to the view that lynchings spring from a sadistic type of madness, which can be repressed by community influence, but which, if not repressed, is satisfied only by acts of savagery.

State Laws Cited

In addition, proponents cite the fact that eleven States have enacted anti-lynching legislation, with results considered excellent. North and South Carolina are among these States, and both were free of lynchings last year.

Proponents also assert that a line of Supreme Court decisions support their contention that the legislation is constitutional and enforceable.

Opponents take two main lines of reasoning to argue their case:

The first, coming from the South almost wholly, is that public sentiment has been aroused in great degree in the past sixty years against the crime of lynching, and that lynching has decreased year by year, as a result almost solely of enlightened public thought. Statistics show that in 1888 sixty-four white persons and forty-nine Negroes, or a total of 113 persons, were lynched. The largest number of lynchings on record was in 1892, when 231 persons met death at the hands of mobs. But as the population of the country has increased, opponents of the bill point out, the number of lynchings has materially decreased, until last year there were only nine. These same opponents contend that if the South is allowed to care for the problem it will eventually stamp out the crime.

Effect on Officials

The second principal argument is that, if a local official is made responsible for the safety of a prisoner, in many instances he will "look the other way" and not take into custody a person suspected of a crime which might result in mob violence.

Critics say also that it is grossly unfair to provide that the United States bring suit against a county or city to punish the entire citizenship for the act of a few persons. They assert that the overwhelming sentiment of the citizenship everywhere is opposed to lynching, and they insist that if the law is to be enacted it so define a mob that communities permitting gang or racketeer murders may be made subject to the same punitive provisions. Gangsters and racketeers are specifically exempted in the bill.

In view of this week's filibuster the Anti-Lynching Bill may have to go over until the regular session of Congress in January, but opponents have already conceded there is not the remotest chance of preventing a vote than

Anti-Lynching Bill For Votes Alone

The Anti-Lynching Bill has passed the House and the Senate has the votes to pass it. Southerners oppose the bill because it is unconstitutional. Northerners favor it for the same reason. It is a punitive measure aimed at Southern states by Northern Democrats and Republicans in their contest for the Northern negro vote. The Anti-Lynching Bill was originally sponsored by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. That was in the day when the Republicans had the negro vote. Now that negroes have gone Democratic a Northern Democrat sponsors the bill. The Northern Republicans will vote for the passage of the bill in the hope that some day the negroes will return to the party of Abraham Lincoln, who was the last President they can refer to with pride or with the hope of applause. They would like to say a kind word for Theodore Roosevelt for oratorical effect but it would be interpreted as reference to the Bull Moose candidate who helped elect Woodrow Wilson president.

Congress Filibusters To Hide Aimlessness

The Anti-Lynching Bill was brought up at this time for the purpose of starting a filibuster and concealing the fact that the Congress has nothing to do. It has declined to follow the suggestion of the President and gone its several ways. It was known that Southern Democrats would oppose the passage of the bill to the point of exhaustion.

They haven't the votes to defeat it. Their only hope is the strength of endurance. If strength holds out the bill may be displaced when the Agricultural Bill is ready. The Northerners really are not interested in lynchings. Their sole concern is votes. The Southerners are opposed to the bill because they know that with the usual provocation it will result in lynchings. The bill provides that when a prisoner is taken from the custody of a sheriff and lynched, the county and officers in charge of the prisoner are subject to financial penalties for the benefit of the victim's family.

Southern congressmen know that if the bill is passed no sheriff will hold a prisoner in custody when a mob forms to lynch him. The prisoner will be turned loose and the officers will wash their hands of the case. The prisoner will be denied protection of the law. He will not be held in jail. He will be a hunted animal with the officers turning their backs, seeing nothing and hearing nothing. The risk will be too great to warrant arrest.

THE WAGNER-VAN NUYS BLUNDER

Referring to the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, which has been occupying the time of the United States senate despite that it was not included, directly or indirectly, in the purposes for which the special session was called, the Washington Post, in a recent editorial says:

Congress might better abandon all legislative efforts to minimize lynching than to indulge in such a blunder. (Enactment of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill.) Before this measure is again presented to the senate it should be thoroughly revised to a basis of co-operation between local and federal authorities. And if that is found to be impracticable, the only reasonable alternative is to abandon it entirely.

The lynching problem is, admittedly, a serious one. No intelligent, decent citizen condones or excuses this most barbaric of modern-day crimes. The senators and representatives, chiefly from the south, who have opposed the present bill, cannot, in any respect, be accused of favoring lynching.

Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, is typical of the southerners who have spoken against the measure. He is quoted by the Post, from his speech against the Wagner-Van Nuys bill, as describing mob violence as a "horrid, horrible, brutal outrage which no one defends."

The vast majority of southerners agree with Senator George. They agree with him also, however, in his opposition to this bill.

The bill takes the wrong approach to the lynching problem. Unlike the antikidnaping bill, it does not provide for co-operation between local and federal law-enforcement authorities, but seeks to impose federal penalties upon local representatives of the people. The provisions of the bill are not only in violation of the right of each state to exercise its own police powers, but are insulting to a free people. It is on this ground that southern opposition is based. The bill, in fact, might easily, by arousing sectionalism, encourage the very crime it seeks to prevent.

The south, with the rest of the nation, will welcome any just, constructive law which promises to wipe from the national records the black smirch of lynch law. Whether lynching occurs in the south, in the north, west or east, it is a degrading, outrageous affront to civilization.

But it will never be ended through such politically inspired, blundering, mistaken legislation as that proposed in the Wagner-Van Nuys bill.

Spartanburg, S C. Journal
November 22. 1937

Constitutionality Doubted

The opposition of southern members of congress to the anti-lynching legislation in congres is mainly based on states' rights. But the proposed bill carries grave doubt as to its consttiutionality. Some of its opponents familiar with constitutional law confidently predict it will not run the gamut of the courts.

Mob violence is as much opposed and denounced in the South as in any other section, and lynchings are by no means confined to the South, as the record clearly shows. After all is said and done relative to states' rights, and even if the proposed law were enacted and approved, convictions of lynchers would depend upon local juries. That means local sentiment determines whether lynching is upheld or abolished. The federal government has no business encroaching upon the police powers and regulations of a state. The clash of authority resulting does not tend to create respect for constituted authority, whether federal or state. Lynching, infamous and unjustifable in any instance, is a state's problem, and progress attained in stamping it out to date justifies the confidence that it will eventually be abolished without interference from the federal government.

Rocky Mount N C. Telegram
November 18, 1937

SOUTHERNERS MISUNDERSTOOD

The filibuster action of southern congressmen in fighting the anti-lynching measure at the national capitol is being misinterpreted in many circles to indicate that the southerners are upholding the ghastly, barbaric business of lynching. As a matter of fact, the southerners are merely trying to show their confidence in their courts and law-enforcement officers and their ability to deal with crime.

The anti-lynching bill, as worded now, would place a heavy responsibility upon the states and municipalities in which the crimes are committed. The southern congressmen do not want to see their communities penalized for the wrongful deeds of a few law violators any more than the representatives from some states having large cities filled with gangsters would want their states and local communities taxed with the costs of kidnapings, bank robberies, etc., which may occur there.

Lynching justly is deplored in the South where most of it occurs and more than one public official and many a newspaper have condemned on many occasions these outrages. The people of the South do not condone those who participate in lynchings. Neither do they uphold the crime itself. Lynchings for the most part are conducted by lawless mobs led by a few irresponsible, cowardly individuals, who could never be classed with the highly developed mobs ruled by efficient, heartless czars in gangland.

Besides the law, if passed, would have little effect upon mobs of the future because it would not be the mobsmen who would have to pay but the honest, law-abiding citizens who have never upheld the crime of lynching. It would seem that those who criticize southerners for opposing the measure are more interested in enforcing a penalty upon the areas where the crimes are committed than in breaking up lynching and punishing those who deal in this crime.

Law-makers at this special session of Congress could be more effective if they concentrate upon the business for which they were called, crossing their other bridges when they come to them.

Roanoke, Va., World News
November 19, 1937

The Lynching Record

Debate in the Senate over a proposed Federal anti-lynching bill seems to require two definitions. In the first place the Gavagan bill, already passed by the House of Representatives, does not make lynching a Federal offense or provide for prosecution of lynching mobs in Federal courts. What it does attempt is prosecution in Federal courts of sheriffs and peace officers who meekly surrender their prisoners. The bill is regarded as more for political effect than as an actual deterrent of lynching.

A second definition needed is just what constitutes the crime of lynching. It does not ordinarily include the racketeer killings of New York or the gangster murders of Chicago. Nor should it include the bona fide shooting of a prisoner attempting to escape. A Minnesota statute defines it as "the killing of a human being by act or procurement of a mob," which would seem to include many forms of mob violence. In a narrower and truer sense, it should be defined as an attack on the law itself—that is, the action of a mob in taking a prisoner away from arresting officers, jails or courts, and executing summary vengeance.

The origin of the term has generally been traced to an extra legal court presided over by Charles Lynch, a justice of the peace in Bedford County, Virginia, during the American Revolution. Lynch's court is said to have undertaken to punish many forms of lawbreaking, some of which could not be reached by legal processes of that day. The term originally was used for summary punishment without legal formality. Many summary hangings took place in the far West in frontier days, including lynching of horse thieves, cattle rustlers and other offenders.

Tuskegee Institute, in Alabama, and the National Association for Advancement of Colored People now compile statistics, the Tuskegee total usually being smaller and more restricted in its definitions.

On the basis of accepted data, 3,679 persons have lost their lives through "lynch law" since January 1, 1882. Of these, 700 were white persons; 2,979 Negroes. According to these records, no lynchings have occurred in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont, and ten other States have records almost as clear. There has been no lynching in Virginia in more than ten years.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings have occurred in eight States. Mississippi tops the list with 485, the others being Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. While more Negroes than whites have been lynched in the South, the situation is reversed in the West, where Negroes comprised only 12.4 per cent of the 257 individuals lynched in the 17 States of Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Through stress of public opinion, the number of lynchings has steadily declined in the last fifteen years, the high year having been 1883, with 158, and low, 1933, with only eight. Nine lynchings were recorded in 1936, and seven through September 30 of 1937. All victims of the last two years have been Negroes, and the lynchings occurred in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The record does not indicate that in a single instance the sheriff or arresting officer has been removed for surrendering his prisoner to a mob, or that in any instance members of the mob have been tried or convicted for the crime of murder of a defenseless and unarmed prisoner.

Lakeland, Fla., Ledger & Star Tele
November 19, 1937

RESPONSIBLE

While southern senators were waging a more or less hopeless fight on an anti-lynching bill designed to make local communities financially liable for deaths of persons by mobs, klansmen at Miami were staging a night show and northern newspapers were giving lawlessness in Florida and other parts of the south a big play. The raid on the Miami clubhouse was made to order for the advocates of the anti-lynching bill.

Senate investigations of deaths or kidnapings in this section are not unlikely, either.

States and communities should protect persons accused of crime and give them fair trials, and acts committed outside the law should be punished.

Failures in these things are responsible for the demand for national action.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5680

DAILY PAPERS SCORE FILIBUSTERING

Press Release of the N.A.A.C.P.
12-3-37 New York, N.Y.

New York, Dec. 3.- The daily newspapers of the nation are against the filibustering tactics of the senators who are opposing the anti-lynching bill and are condemning it in strong editorials, a survey by the N.A.A.C.P. revealed today.

Even southern daily papers are against the filibuster. Typical of the expressions from the south is this statement in the Durham, N.C. Herald: "It is too much to expect that it will silence the tongues of filibustering southern senators, but there is timeliness and maybe significance in the report of the American Institute of Public Opinion, published last Sunday, showing a majority sentiment in favor of federal anti-lynching legislation.

"Aside from the Institute poll and aside from the merit of plausibility in the position and argument assumed and offered, southern senators do violence to the principles of democracy they presumed to defend when they resort to filibuster tactics to forestall a vote on a focused issue. It is better that the congress enter questionable judgment than it be prevented from registering a held opinion by a dictatorial minority."

Also from the South from the Lakeland, Fla. Ledger and Star Telegram: "The southern senators and congressmen had as well realize that an anti-lynching bill is in the cards, to be dealt out sooner or later, and accept it as inevitable. Moreover, such a measure may be about the only way of hatling mob violence throughout the country. Our communities and our states have been impotent."

The Chicago Times has the following comment: "Regardless of its merits, its constitutionality or unconstitutionality, the proposed federal anti-lynching bill ought to be disposed of by congress so other business may be attended to.

"The tactics of alleged public-servants in filibustering at this time when the national good calls for orderly and speedy action by congress isn't going to be well received by the public."

And the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch: "The filibuster is a questionable legislative device at best, but when it is designed to thwart the will of majorities of better than 2-to-1 in both branches of Congress it is more dubious than ever. Now that the Federal anti-lynching bill is to be taken up as the next order of business in the Senate, it will be interesting to see how far southern senators are willing to go in defeating the will of the people."

Andalusia, Ala., Star
November 25, 1937

Senator Dixie Bibb Graves' Maiden Speech

Using as her theme "Find the Truth" Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves made her maiden speech in the senate Friday and she evidently made a big hit. The Associated Press report shows that she not only acquitted herself with credit, but that her plea made a deep impression. The AP report of her speech follows:

A turbelent filibuster against the anti-lynching bill calmed down for twenty minutes today while the Senate listened attentively to a quiet, emotional talk by Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves, the new Alabama Senator.

Mrs. Graves' address against the bill, her maiden talk in the Senate, drew applause—a rare compliment in the chamber.

Appointed by Governor Bibb Graves, her husband, to fill the Senate vacancy resulting from the resignation of Justice Hugo L. Black, Mrs. Graves attacked the anti-lynching bill on the ground that it would "strike down the sovereignty of indestructible States."

Attired in a simple black dress piped with white, the Senator used only the simplest gestures during her talk. Some watchers in the gallery thought they saw tears in her eyes when she told the Senate that some advocates of the anti-lynching bill had been misinformed about conditions in the South.

Very much at ease, she stood erectly at her desk. She spoke slowly and distinctly, with an extemporaneous fluency, envied by many a Senator. When she had finished, Senate rules were forgotten in a burst of applause and senators crowded about her with their congratulations.

"During the brief time that I shall be here," she had said, "I should like to make one plea—that you do not press down on the brows of your sister States this brand of shame (the anti-lynching bill)."

"I plead with the members of the Senate," she continued, "to seek and find the truth. You should seek the truth, know the truth and the truth will make you free."

Mrs. Graves said every section of the country had a heritage or extra-legal punishment. The South, by effective law enforcement, aided by an aroused public opinion, reduced lynchings in the last ten years, she said, and in another five years it will be wiped out entirely.

"Isn't that an amazing record?" she asked.

The Senator said she abhorred lynching, but added: "Only a compelling emergency, should cause this body to strike down the sovereignty of indestructible States. The situation is being solved. Would it be wise to change to another remedy—a remedy untried?"

When her short address ended, both Republicans and Democrats clustered about her desk to extend congratulations.

Ft. Pierce, Fla., News & Tribune
November 23, 1937

THE LYNCHING BILL

Biggest issue in Congress, it appears from early oratorical flourishes, is the anti-lynching bill to which the Senate has devoted the first full week of its special session, the Sanford Herald remarks. A strong group of eastern senators has been trying to cram this bill down the necks of Southern senators with the intention, so it is said, of helping to clean up the South's back yard.

While it could be argued that the New England senators would do well to devote their attention to their own trash cans, still we believe that substantial opposition to the bill can be successfully maintained on the strength of the theory that this particular measure instead of helping to reduce lynching in the South may actually increase it, and that under any circumstances it will have no beneficial results.

The anti-lynching bill provides that any county in which a lynching occurs shall be fined $10,000 and that any sheriff from whom a prisoner is taken and later lynched shall be criminally liable. In the event of such lynching the county commissioners of the county in which the lynching occurred would be required by federal law to include in their budget this item of $10,000 and collect the necessary taxes for it from the local taxpayers.

Overlooking the fact that there is no constitutional right given the federal government for fining any city, county, or state regardless of what it does, and that the federal government has no more power to fine a county, than a county has to fine the federal government, we get considerable amusement in speculating on just what would happen if such a bill finally were enacted into law and a subservient Supreme Court allowed it to stick.

Suppose, for instance, that there were a peculiarly vicious crime committed in Seminole county, and a mob were organized for the purpose of lynching the prisoner. Then suppose the taxpayers, aware of the penalties for such an offense and reluctant to pay the fine even under the exigencies of the emergency, finally succeeded in talking the mob into a fair consideration of their pocketbooks, and got them to disperse and go home.

But then suppose that a crowd in Orange county heard about it and decided that such a crime should not go unpunished any longer than it takes to stretch a rope, and aware of the fact that it would be Seminole County taxpayers under any circumstances who would have to pay the fine, got together, came over here, seized the prisoner, and lynched him. Seminole County citizens would be assessed a $10,000 fine just the same even though they did everything they could to prevent the lynching.

And the next time a peculiarly heinous crime occurred in Seminole County, what influence would the taxpayers then have in talking the mob out of hanging the prisoner? There would probably be some sort of agreement reached very shortly whereby Seminole County's prisoners would be taken over to Orange County and strung up there. Then Orange County citizens would have to pay the fine.

There are wonderful possibilities in this federal control of the lynching evil. We can envision all sorts of eventualities from the government's well meaning but ill considered plans to police the South.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Times
November 24, 1937

LYNCH LAW IN THE UNITED STATES

HIDEOUSLY indefensible as the institution or practice of lynching is, for more than half a century it has played a conspicuous part in the political history of the United States, and is still doing so, having the United States Senate at this time split into a chaos of fiercely warring factions over an anti-lynching bill now before that greatest legislative body in the world.

The origin of the word "lynching" is generally traced to an extra-legal court presided over by Charles Lynch, a justice of the peace, in Bedford county, Va., during the revolution. Lynch's court undertook to punish all types of law-breakers, many unreachable by more formal legal processes of that day. Whipping was the usual sentence, and the word "lynching" originally signified merely a summary whipping executed without customary legal formality.

No data has been compiled as to the number of "lynchings," (in the modern sense of the "killing of a human being by act or procurement of a mob," as simply defined in a Minnesota statute), prior to 1882. Many occurred during reconstruction days in the south, and during the wild and woolly frontier days of the west lynching was the punishment customarily meted out to horse thieves, cattle rustlers and other offenders.

Two organizations now make annual compilations of lynchings, the Tuskegee institute in Alabama and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. That all such statistics are somewhat unreliable is attested by the fact that Tuskegee totals are invariably smaller than those reported by the N. A. A. C. P.

Two factors, which counterbalance one another to some extent, figure in the potential inaccuracy of such statistics. One is that deaths sometimes attributed to lynchings may actually have followed bona fide attempts at escape. On the other hand, many genuine lynchings probably do not find their way into the records.

* * *

On the basis of the most conservative available data, 3,679 individuals lost their lives through "lynch law" in the United States from Jan. 1, 1882, through Sept. 30, 1937. Of these, 700 were white persons; 2,979 were negroes.

No lynchings have ever occurred, according to these records, in the states of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont, and 10 other states have records that are almost clean, Delaware, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Nevada, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Utah and Wisconsin.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings (72.3 per cent) have occurred in eight states. Mississippi tops the list with 485 recorded lynchings. In order, come Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241; Tennessee, 210.

* * *

Far more negroes than whites have been lynched in the south, but in the west and midwest the situation is reversed. Negroes comprise only 12.4 per cent of the 257 individuals lynched in 17 states, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. It is probable that many of the "white" victims is these states were Mexicans or Indians.

* * *

The six years, 1882-1887, inclusive, witnessed 752 lynchings, or 20.4 per cent of the 55-year total. The 15-year period, 1922-1937, inclusive, brought only 304 such crimes, or 8.2 per cent of the total. The "high" year was 1883, with 158 lynchings; and 1933 was "low" with only eight. Nine lynchings were recorded in 1936, and seven through Sept. 30, 1937. All the victims in the last two years were negroes, and the 16 lynchings occurred in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The South Atlantic and South Central states account for 88.3 per cent of all recorded lynchings.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to

5681

Need for Anti-Lynching Bill

It was unfortunate for those who oppose the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, which has passed the House by a substantial majority, that at the very time when Senator Borah was saying that the South was curbing this crime, two of the most atrocious lynchings in the history of the country took place in Mississippi. Charged with the murder of a Mississippi merchant, and not with the crime against a white woman which was used for so many years as a partial excuse for mob law, two Negroes were taken out and burned, while a howling mob of 400 persons looked on.

The South is duly grateful to Senator Borah and others who opposed the Gavagan bill partly on the ground that this section of the country was getting away from mob violence, but at the same time it should be set forth, to keep the record straight, that lynching is no longer peculiar to the South and perhaps never has been. There has been a reduction in the number of lynchings in the country as a whole over a period of years, but New York city and points in Illinois have furnished some of the most inhuman instances of mob violence against Negroes this country has ever seen.

The proposed bill follows a familiar pattern. It asserts that any state or political subdivision thereof which fails to afford protection to any individual from a mob shall be considered to have deprived such person of due process of law or of equal protection of the laws.

Section 3 declares that any officer blameable for such a crime to be guilty of a felony and subject to a fine not to exceed $5,000 or a prison term of not more than five years.

A clause also provides a term of from five to 25 years for any officer conspiring to deliver prisoners.

Section 4 gives a federal district court jurisdiction in such cases where an officer fails to do his duty or where jurors are so prejudiced that they are not likely to punish mob violence.

Sections 5 and 6 deal with the liability of counties for failure to take action and provide for damages in federal courts.

Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, was one of the most vigorous opponents of this bill and yet it was in his state that the latest of these crimes of mob violence took place.

Representative Hamilton Fish, a Republican, who, nevertheless, has generally been friendly to the South, called attention to the burning of the two Negroes in Mississippi and said the actual test of the ability of the southern states to protect colored citizens from violence is whether the members of the mob are arrested and convicted. If they are, he said, then there is no real need for federal anti-lynching legislation, but if they are not "then even the southern Democrats should vote for the bill."

This view seems to be entirely sound, but in the meantime we may add that thus far the members of the mob engaged in the burning of the Mississippi Negroes certainly have not been "arrested and convicted", and there is little likelihood that they will be.

As we have said, the usual defense of lynching has been that the crime thus summarily avenged has sometimes been an attack upon women, but when one of the most horrible instances of mob violence, with torture, took place a few years ago near Marianna, Fla., a number of the leading women in the state came forward and urged that the good name of the state should be cleared by bringing the members of the mob to justice.

We have great respect for the high authority of men like Representative Wadsworth and Senator Borah who contend that the law would be unenforceable. Senator Borah also holds that it would be unconstitutional. It goes without saying that no good citizen should advocate a law that is unconstitutional, but as the years go by mob violence is not punished in the South or in the North, and if an anti-lynching bill can be framed which will give the federal government power to intervene when and if the states have failed in their obvious duty, which is almost universally the case where a lynching takes place, then such a law should go on the statute books.

The very civilization of the South demands that this blot should be wiped out and that mob violence should be punished.

ALABAMA STATESMEN

Editor The Advertiser:

A Federal anti-lynching bill designed to usurp States' Rights and to destroy constitutional guarantees of freedom was introduced in the present Congress by Representative Gavagan of New York. After debate, this bill was passed in the House on April 15 by a vote of 277 for to 119 against.

To the honor of Alabama, every member of the House from Alabama voted against this unwise measure. To the honor of Alabama, the most notable speech against this bill was made by Congressman Hobbs who now wears worthily the mantle of Senator John Tyler Morgan. He would be an honor to the Senate as he is now an honor to the House.

Congressman Hobbs said in part:

"This bill is a rape of justice. This bill is itself the rope with which this mob would lynch the constitutional guarantees which we have cherished through the years. This bill is not an anti-lynching bill. It is a pro-lynching bill. It will stimulate that dying, almost extinct, disgrace to our civilization—lynching . . .

"All good citizens glory in the progress we have made towards the goal of a land completely cleared of the stigma of lynching. Even one is a disgrace to civilization. All of us feel that way. But while some have been risking their lives to prevent mob violence, others introduce bills. . . .

"There is not a man in this Chamber, not a man in either branch of Congress, who is not against lynching. Scarcely a citizen in the whole nation fails to condemn it. I respectfully submit, therefore, that this resort to mob violence to lynch the Constitution by the passage of this outrageous law should not be sanctioned and that the pending motion should be voted down. (Applause.)

"Does the spirit of mob violence which is driving this bill through this House make it right? NO. It is just as wrong as the hinges of hell; it is just as wrong as any action that was ever taken by a mob, judged by the morals of the situation. You have the votes; you have the power, but you have not the right!" (Applause.)

In these splendid final words, Congressman Hobbs speaks with soberness and with truth "the authentic voice of the best political thought of the English race." Thus Woodrow Wilson praised the immortal Edmund Burke who said likewise:

"The eternal rules of justice and reason are above not only the will of electorates, but above all orders of the State.

"The votes of a majority of the people, whatever their infamous flatterers may teach in order to corrupt their minds, cannot alter the moral any more than they can alter the physical essence of things.

"Neither the few nor the many have a right to act merely by their will in any matter connected with duty, trust, engagement, or obligation."

This is the wisdom of Edmund Burke, of Woodrow Wilson, and of Congressman Hobbs of Alabama.

HOPSON OWEN MURPHEE.

Prattville, Ala., April 19, 1937.

Winston-Salem, N. C. Journal
April 9, 1937

High Courage

During the years that Congressman Frank W. Hancock Jr. has represented this district in Washington, there have been many occasions when he has displayed a brand of courage which has been an inspiration to his friends—even to those who may have disagreed with him.

But at no time has Mr. Hancock shown more real courage, perhaps, than on Wednesday of this week, when he broke the ranks of the "Solid South" in opposition to federal anti-lynching legislation. By that act, Mr. Hancock served notice that, so far as he is concerned, this is one country, in which crime must be attacked as a national problem, without regard to sections.

Mr. Hancock declared that he looked with favor upon legislation that will make lynching a federal offense in the same way that kidnaping has been made a federal offense. There are, of course, two sides to this question.

The affirmative side presents the cold fact that most of the Southern states have failed to enact adequate and effective laws against lynching and are not likely to do so any time soon. Another point is that lynching is no longer a sectional problem but is nation-wide in its scope. Still another is that the federal authorities will move promptly and efficiently to bring mobster murderers to justice, while local officers, in many instances up to their necks in county politics, will often neglect this important duty. We had an example of this in Franklin county, near the capital of our own State, not long ago.

The negative argument is just like the anti-child labor amendment complaint. The law would send federal "snoopers" into the South to attend to the South's business. It would interfere with states' rights.

This argument has been worn pretty thin with relation both to child labor and the proposed anti-lynching legislation. If Congress were to pass an anti-lynching bill, federal G-men who are now being invited very freely to assist local officers in the solution of various crimes would simply go to work on their own accord as they do in interstate kidnaping and other cases. There would be no hullabaloo or particular fanfare. The G-men would merely make an effort to run down the mobsters and bring them to justice.

Lynching practices would not hold up long under this arrangement. If the Southern people could be made to see that such a law would react to the benefit of the South, and would mean the sacrifice of nothing save jurisdiction in cases wherein sentiment and prejudice otherwise render fair judgments almost impossible, hardly a doubt exists but that they would approve a federal anti-lynching law.

Anti-Lynching Legislation.

Signatures of 218 Congressmen on a discharge petition sufficed to stir the House Judiciary committee to a favorable report on the Mitchell anti-lynching bill. Notwithstanding the popularity of the petition, however, the committee vote was only 8 to 7. Obviously the proposed legislation, like its predecessors in this field, confronts hard sledding.

The Mitchell bill, as reported to the House, make it a Federal offense for an officer to surrender a prisoner to a mob. It would also provide damages, payable by the county involved, to the family of the victim. Deleted from the bill was a provision making a lynching prima facie evidence of criminal negligence on the part of the local authorities. In this and other respects, the bill differs from earlier bills the constitutionality of which has been subject to doubt. In spirit, however, the Mitchell bill follows closely the many which have been introduced at every session of Congress since the war. Only one of these, Dyer bill of 1922, ever passed the House; Southern Senators disposed of it in the Senate.

The lower chamber has always been the more sympathetic toward anti-lynching proposals. The Senate, with its rules encouraging filibusters is commonly considered the chief obstacle in their path. Thus the Wagner-Van Nuys bill today lies pigeonholed in the Senate Judiciary committee. Like the Mitchell bill, it is designed to avoid the constitutional criticisms which have proven the downfall of earlier measures. Most recent of these was the Costigan-Wagner bill which was reported favorably in the Senate three years ago but which, despite support from President Roosevelt, failed to reach a vote. The next year a motion to take up the bill again was defeated after a week's filibuster.

Supporters of anti-lynching legislation point out that if a governmental unit fails to protect a person from mob violence, or properly to prosecute his assailants, that person has clearly been denied the most fundamental of his constitutional rights. On the other hand it is argued that lynchings already go unpunished in spite of State laws and that if jurors in a State court will not agree to convict it is unlikely that jurors in a Federal court in the same locality would vote otherwise. A more cogent objection is that the worst evils of the reconstruction period might be revived by the precedent of a law encouraging Federal penalization of local communities.

The counter-argument is that enlightened public sentiment, notably in the South, demands Federal intervention as the only solution for an atrocious evil. This is not altogether convincing, however. Wherever public opinion is outraged by lynchings, it can and does insist that existing State laws be enforced. Undoubtedly rising public indignation was a powerful influence in reducing last year's lynchings to 9, as against 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934. The current Congressional debate, whatever its outcome, will be time well spent if it hastens the complete abolition of what can only be regarded as a national disgrace.

What Are We to Infer?

The names of Democratic congressmen from the 12 southern states are conspicuously absent from the anti-lynching discharge petition which will force a record vote on the Gavagan Anti-lynching bill next Monday.

Not a congressman from Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Texas or Virginia signed. Tennessee's two Republican representatives and Kentucky's one Republican were the only exceptions in those two states.

What are we to infer from the position taken by Alabama's congressmen, Boykin, Hill, Steagall, Hobbs, Starnes, Jarman, Bankhead, Sparkman and Patrick? Does their failure to sign the petition indicate that they will vote against the anti-lynching bill when the roll is called next week?

We can not believe that any of the above gentlemen favor lynch law. Yet what are we to assume? Is it possible that they believe a majority of their constituents would directly or indirectly sanction mob violence? Or is it a question of little courage? If the latter be the case then ours is a sad state of affairs when such a small minority can wield so large an influence.

Alabama has had but one lynching in two or three years and we are as proud of that record as any citizen. But there can be no excuse for even one lynching and any congressman who stands in the way of any move which would tend to discourage mob murder selects his own label and his own company.

Jefferson County, and many others for that matter, does not need the threat of penalty to make her officials and law enforcement officers more conscious of their duty on the question of mob violence. Her record speaks for itself. For that reason they need have no fear of the Gavagan bill.

The measure itself may not discourage lynching. That cannot be told without trial. But the shadow of the long arm of the Federal Government does have a sobering influence and its courts do command respect even among thieves.

There is no defense for mob rule and equally none for the man who aids and abets directly or indirectly, its violence.

Eufaula, Ala. Tribune
April 15, 1937

THE TORCH LYNCHING

The cause of those who believe that it is the obligation of the state and not the national government to protect the individual from mob action received a great setback Tuesday afternoon. The Mississippi torch lynching was a brutal, primitive and disgusting thing within itself, but it was extremely unfortunate that it had to come just as the house was debating a federal anti-lynch law.

This paper, mindful of the facility with which southern states have circumvented other federal statutes aimed at breaking down white supremacy, believes that a federal anti-lynch law would do little beyond antagonize the southern governments and breed further disrespect for law. Virginia has had notable success in doing away with mob action and has given the other southern states an excellent example to follow. However, a federal law, regardless of its supporters, will be regarded with suspicion and may delay effective control for many years.

We admit that this perverseness is hardly laudatory, but it is more or less a human trait and one especially prominent in the history of relations between southern states and the federal government since the middle of the last century.

So it is that we particularly regret the action of the crazed Mississippi mob. It will undoubtedly lead to federal action and a consequent further muddling of a problem which can be solved only through local initiative.

In Racketeria

A glance at the vote for the Gavagan anti-lynching bill discloses that it was supported by practically all the representatives in Congress hailing from those congressional districts in which mobster rule has most completely superseded constitutional state government, and the monopoly of the gangster racket has displaced economic equality.

The constitutional basis of the bill is the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment in which occur these words: "Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law; nor deny to any persons within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Just try to operate a handbook, a saloon or a night club in Chicago or New York under that "equal protection of the laws" gag and see how long you remain open. In many parts of those cities, and in many other cities, the operation of a laundry, a cleaning establishment, a fish market, a restaurant, a labor union, and countless other legitimate enterprises, cannot be carried on under "equal protection of the laws," and many more men have been deprived of "life, liberty or property" than have ever been lynched. There are quite a number of those urban belts in which the actual law is Sicilian lynch law, not American law.

If we are going in for the enforcement of the Fourteenth Amendment by federal penalties laid upon local communities and upon lax local officials, the place to begin is where the maximum violations of that amendment take place. It is conceivable that such federal intervention might even make those parts of America habitable for Americans. At present the American of colonial stock or the earlier migrations is a zoological curiosity in such areas, and for an American to try to do a local business there—why, it just isn't done, you know.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5682

When Votes Are Trumps the Game's More Interesting

An analysis of the recent House vote on the Gavagan federal antilynching bill shows that except in two or three instances, no Representative from States in which we have and exercise the right to vote as we think, opposed the enactment of the measure.

While there were one or two New Yorkers and Pennsylvanians who voted "nay," and while Missouri split 5-50 in the voting—five for and five against—the solons above the Mason and Dixon line, for the most part, registered in the "yea" column.

To show the effect of an enlightened and untrammeled electorate, seven West Virginia Representatives voted for the bill, while an equal number of Representatives from Virginia voted against it.

There's a reason in the fact that every Southern State, from Virginia to Texas, voted almost solidly for the continuance of lynching, for that's exactly what a vote against the Gavagan bill meant.

In his "Memoirs and Letters," Charles Sumner, noted statesman and abolitionist, wrote:

"Let the freedman vote, and he will have in himself, under the law, a constant, ever present, self-protecting power.

"Where the master knows he may be voted down, he will know that he must be just, and everything is contained in justice.

"To him who has the ballot, all things shall be given—protection, opportunity, education, a homestead. [He might have added also, a vote for an antilynching bill.]

"The ballot is the Horn of Abundance, out of which overflow rights of every kind, with corn, cotton, rice, and all the fruits of the earth . . ."

How well do these memorable words apply in the present crisis. With the Gavagan bill facing a stiff fight in the Senate, it is imperative that those Senators from States where we have an effective voting population be continually reminded of the obligation which they have to assure the success of the measure.

WRITE, OR BETTER YET, WIRE YOUR SENATORS TODAY, REMINDING THEM OF THIS OBLIGATION.

Even the gentlemen from the Deep South will find themselves changing their tune once the colored citizens of those States acquire and exercise the right to vote. And it is hardly presumptuous to say that many of their ilk may find themselves shut out of the Congressional picture forever.

Congressman Sam Hobbs's Views On The Gavagan Force Bill

Editor The Advertiser: 4-28-37
Please give me space enough to reply to the communication published in your edition of Sunday, April 25, signed "A. S. W."

"A. S. W." bewails "generalities", and "was impressed only by the fact that Mr. Hobbs gave no definite or—significant reason in defense of his stand", yet he, himself, notes that only a part of my speech was quoted by Col. Murfee in the article criticized!

My learned and beloved friend, Col. Hopson Owen Murfee, did me honor to expound my desert when he wrote his article "Alabama Statesmen". I am deeply grateful. I gather from his article that he had read my speeches in Congress on the subject of the Gavagan bill, which appear in the Congressional Record of April 12 and 13, 1937. I am equally certain that "A. S. W." has not. They are of public record, available to anyone. If "A. S. W." will refer to them in his local library, or give me his name and address so that I may send them to him, I think he will find his complaints pointless.

Col. Murfee announced his condemnation of the Gavagan bill—the so-called anti-lynching bill—the fact that it was passed by the House of Representatives, 277 to 119, and that all of the Representatives of Alabama had voted against it. He then quoted a part of what I had said in the debates, and also a fragment of a speech of Edmund Burke, both, to the point that majorities are not necessarily right. This, as I understood Col. Murfee, was the one thought he wished to emphasize and commend. He had no idea of presenting a constitutional argument, nor a full discussion of the demerits of the bill.

"A. S. W." either misses or ignores this plain meaning, and goes on to ask questions and make observations, which are as old as this controversy over the proposed Federal intrusion into the admitted realm of the police powers of the sovereign States. These have been answered in every debate of this subject since 1892. The most recent of these debates is no exception. But as "A. S. W." apparently prefers not to read the Record, I shall briefly, respond to his challenge.

First, however, let me say that the unconstitutionality of these so-called anti-lynching bills is no longer debatable. The Supreme Court of the United States has clearly passed on that point in the case of the United States vs. Harris, 106 U. S. Reports, page 629. This was a lynching case from Tennessee and this decision holds a Federal statute of exactly the same import as the pending bill, unconstitutional and void. The Riggins and Powell cases (which incidentally arose at Huntsville, Ala.) were also lynching cases and the courts reached in them the same conclusion as announced in the Harris case. So unless the Supreme Court reverses itself this pending piece of political demogoguery is headed for the graveyard of void acts.

"Why is the bill a rape of justice?" "A. S. W." asks. One of many answers is that punishment imposed without regard to guilt or innocence, does violence to every principle of justice. That is rape. This iniquitous bill does that—and much more! I quote from my speech in Congress (April 13, 1937, pages 4417 and 4418, Congressional Record): "Another outstanding feature of the Gavagan bill is that it provides for the punishment of counties by fines of not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000 as liquidated damages wholly without regard to the guilt or innocence of the citizen or officials of the counties. If every officer of a county had been killed by the mob while the officers were trying to protect a prisoner and if no citizen of the county had participated in the mob, nevertheless, such a county would, under the terms of the Gavagan bill, be fined up to $10,000 if that mob, after killing all the officers of the county, lynched the prisoner. Preposterous, but true. Equally abhorrent is the provision of the Gavagan bill punishing a county wherein a victim is seized by a mob and removed to another county before being lynched. This bill says that such a county, although not a one of its officers or citizens know of the seizure, may be fined up to $10,000.

It so happens that the dearest spot on earth to me, my home county, has had only one lynching within its borders in its long history. There we have 58,000 people living, 14,000 of whom are white. Yet we have no race trouble and no lynchings. The only lynching ever to occur in Dallas County, Ala., took place some 46 years ago, when a mob of infuriated citizens of another county pursued its victim into Dallas County and there lynched him without the knowledge or consent or participation of a single citizen of Dallas County in that crime. Yet, under the terms of the Gavagan bill, Dallas County would have to pay a fine up to $10,000 in such a case."

"A. S. W.'s" next question is: "In what State has a member or members of a lynching mob been indicted, convicted and executed for usurping State's rights, for committing murder?" The answer is that lynching is a crime which is not easy to detect and punish, but convictions have been had and punishment imposed on eight per cent of the cases. This is not a creditable percentage, but is said to be correct. I know of no case in which the death penalty has been imposed. But what, may I ask, has this question to do with the so-called anti-lynching bill? This bill doesn't pretend to touch that problem. It does not provide punishment for any mob, nor for any member of one.

His next question is: "Has Mr. Hobbs risked his life to rescue a victim or prevent mob violence. My answer is, yes! And in my speech I cited one case in particular as follows:

"There are plenty of words condemning lynching, both from the proponents and opponents of this bill. There are none condemning the causes of lynching. I remember the case of Clyde Thomas, who had been a servant in the household of a citizen of Alabama from the time a baby girl was born until she became 16 years of age. He plotted his crime; prepared the place in a plum thicket. He attempted his crime twice, but was thwarted by the fact the child had playmates with her. But on the third attempt he raped and killed her. Yet we risked our lives to save him from the noose of the mob, for the noose of the law. After all is said, without any extenuation whatever for the crime of lynching—there can be none—when a guilty man is lynched, the mob has done what the law says should be done! It has done it in an illegal and criminal way, but the end is the same. But no law ever said that a child should be raped." This rape and

...dication of the principles for which we joy to fight—State's rights and a government of law under the Constitution."

SAM HOBBS,
Representative, Fourth Alabama District.

Selma, Ala.
Gulfport, Miss. Gulf Coast Guide
April 23, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

THE passage of the anti-lynching bill in Congress would be a tragic thing for the South, to which section the law is directed.

There are conditions under which mobs in this country will take the law into their own hands, and no federal anti-lynching law can stop them. The truth of the matter is that if the anti-lynching law is passed and enforced there are parts of the South where snooping federal agents would be lynched as quickly as anyone else.

The rest of the country will never fully understand the South's side of the race question. The passage of the law is, however, an emphatic reminder of what we may expect in this part of the country when the president's supreme court measure passes.

Unmindful of it, perhaps, the party in power is promoting the spirit of civil war in this country.

Indianalo, Miss. Tocsin
April 22, 1937

The anti-ly...ning bill, which passed the House last week, will hardly become a law, at this session at least. Its passage by the House was partly a psychological matter, coming on the heels of a Southern lynching, and long before it reaches a vote in the Senate the fever of many of its proponents will have subsided. The south, or any other part of the country, can no more control lynchings, when the people are aroused, than it can prevent overflows when the Mississippi river goes on a rampage.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
April 28, 1937

Lynching Legislation And The South

WE commend to you an article appearing elsewhere on this page by Mark Sullivan, Washington correspondent for The New York Herald-Tribune.

Mr. Sullivan, an Eastern writer writing for an Eastern journal, has become increasingly sympathetic with the problems which confront the conservative South, and his commentary on the Gavagan anti-lynching bill should be of particular interest to all men and women who ...are interested in preserving a white Democratic Party, at least in Alabama.

In asserting that "if the federal government can do this (adopt an anti-lynching bill) there isn't anything it can't do within a state," Mr. Sullivan should go a little way toward stirring us from our lethargic attitude toward the Gavagan measure.

There can be little doubt that Jim Farley sold out the party last year, and left the South to foot the bill in the form of federal anti-lynching legislation, but we find no reason why our representatives and senators should be bound to a contract to which they had no part in making.

We do not share Mr. Sullivan's pessimism over the anti-lynching bill in the Senate. We feel that it can be defeated, and defeated with ease, if our Southern senators refuse to be compromised. It is only through an aroused public opinion, however, that we can impress upon these senators the importance of defeating this measure, and it is the duty of every man who believes in a White Democracy to lend his weight to this pressure.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
May 1, 1937

Unconditional Surrender or Fight

When the Northern "Democrats" in the house voted 189 for the Gavagan "anti-lynching" bill they put the Southern Democrats who voted 118 to one against it on notice that they purpose to draw the sectional line against the South on Southern questions and that they have the majority. The Northern Republicans with a few exceptions like James Wadsworth, Jr., voted with them.

These Northern Democrats represent the real New Dealers—the "liberals" or "radicals" who believe in "Socialization" and would destroy the states—together with the Tammany machines of the great cities and the negroes who in those cities have numerous votes and are often the balance of power in elections.

In the Northern and Western states are great numbers of substantial people who have no sympathy with these sectional politicians and are quite willing that the Southern states govern themselves. They are a minority—but they represent the same minority whose support made possible the return of the white Southern people to power in their states in 1876.

The Southerners in congress have their choice before them. They can accept the control and dictation of the Northern Democrats, and, thereby, obtain offices and allotments in number and amount that seem good to the Northern majority. That would be unconditional surrender.

Or they can fight, defend their states.

Glass, Byrd, Bailey, Smith and perhaps a dozen others excepted, the Southerners in congress are distrusted and held in contempt by the Northern New Dealers. When Stanley High said as much in The Saturday Evening Post he wrote the exact truth, nothing but the truth.

Men like Secretary Roper, Senators Robinson, Byrnes, Harrison, know this perfectly well, and equally well they know that President Roosevelt cannot protect them and the South without repudiating his Northern supporters, including John Lewis, Duffie, and the negro contingent.

Bennett Champ Clark, senator of Missouri, who is still young and should have a future, understands. Unless we miss our guess he will fight.

Harlem, Ga., News
April 29, 1937

Anti-Lynch Bill

Under the anti-lynching bill which has passed the lower house of Congress, if an arresting officer is overpowered and a prisoner is forcibly taken from his custdoy, that officer will be guilty of a felony and subject to a severe fine and penalty.

If a lynching should occur within a county, the county itself is liable to the family of the person lynched to the extent of ten thousand dollars damages, collectible under a Federal Court decree.

The south doesn't want an anti-lynching bill.

The passage of such a law will not stop lynching any more than the prohibition law prohibited the drinking and selling of liquor.

"Bootleg" murder would only supplant lynchings.

Savannah, Ga., Press
May 3, 1937

AGAINST PROPOSED LAWS.

The grand jury of the Superior Court of Tatthall county, in its general presentments, as read to Judge Grice a few days ago, handled two topics of national interest very concisely but effectively and convincingly. We quote:

We desire to go on record as opposing the passage of the pending anti-lynch law and the child labor law. We are of the opinion that both are unconstitutional, and believe this to be another effort to deal a death blow to states' rights.

We are quite sure the thinking people of not alone Tattnall county but all sections of Georgia will give approval to these sentiments presented so clearly and yet so tersely.

There is no occasion for the passage of a national anti-lynching law. It would not change the temper of the people in any section of the United States and lynchings would go on in all sections of the country just as they do now under sufficient provocation.

And as for the matter of child labor, the state is well qualified to protect the child in Georgia from the slavery of long hours and inadequate pay and the neglect of a child's education. This situation is getting better in Georgia all the time and there is no reason for national interference.

The fight against the anti-lynching law must be made in the Senate. We regret the wife of the President of the United States has expressed her belief in and her support of proposed legislation. We hope the President will not lend encouragement to its passage by the Senate, and we trust the same influence of leading Southern senators, that has prevented the enactment of a similar law in the past, will prevail when the showdown comes in the upper national house on this measure.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to

5683

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
April 22, 1937

Press Comments Of The Day

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

THE only plausible justification for the apathy shown by Southern representatives in Congress when the Gavagan anti-lynching bill was under considerations was the belief that the measure is palpably unconstitutional, and therefore it was unnecessary for modern spokesmen of the South to make the dramatic and spectacular fight against this kind of federal invasion into internal state affairs that was made by Senator Morgan and his colleagues in the days of old. Of course the Southern delegations voted against the Gavagan bill unanimously even though it passed the house by a vote of 276 to 119, but there was no evidence of that determined and concerted resistance which is expected to characterize a measure aimed so directly at the South's independence and good faith in dealing with an old problem.

Lynching is deplored in the South just as earnestly as anywhere else, but the Southern states now and ever, will insist upon preservation of their rights to deal with the subject just as other intrastate crimes are dealt with, and without direction from Washington. The Gavagan bill would impose fines upon counties in which lynchings occur, the fines to be paid to the families of the victims. So able a constitutional lawyer as Senator Borah has contended from the beginning that this bill is unconstitutional, that any Supreme Court would pronounce it so, and that it is useless for Congress to waste its time in enacting a measure as definitely not in accord with the organic law.

That is the South's prime objection to such legislation. It is an invasion of the state by the central government; it places certain crimes committed within the state in the hands of the federal courts and takes away jurisdiction belonging of right to the state courts. Furthermore, it is quite apparent that bills such as this Gavagan measure are designed primarily for political purposes. Neither the South nor the West, nor even New York, or anywhere else that a lynching may occur, desires to have the federal government given jurisdiction over the punishment of offenses committed within state borders. This Gavagan bill not only would punish the counties where in a lynching occurs but would punish innocent persons who as taxpayers might have known nothing of the crime and could have done nothing to prevent it.

In spite of the deplorable sporadic acts of violence that occur from time to time, remarkable progress has been made in this country in reducing lynching, largely because the crime for which lynching is resorted to is so much less frequent. Meanwhile it is unfortunate to see the subject become a political football in Washington in the face of declarations by the greatest constitutional lawyers that the proposed legislation cannot be sustained by the courts.—The Alabama Journal.

Augusta, Ga. Herald
April 21, 1937

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

(By RODNEY DUTCHER)

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Chances for a federal anti-lynching act are good unless the anticipated filibuster of a few Southern senators is supported by obstruction from the Senate leadership and apathy among the measure's friends.

Assuming passage, there will be one deficiency in the law if it follows the model of the Gavagan bill passed by the House. For the Gavagan bill applies its penalties only in cases where a prisoner has been taken into custody before being seized by a mob.

It carries an obvious incentive for local officers, discovering the possibility of mob action and fearing federal prosecution, to refrain from arresting suspects and then leave them to the mob.

The Wagner-Van Nuys bill, now with the Senate Judiciary Committee, extends to cover all cases of persons accused, suspected or convicted of crime, who are lynched or injured by mobs in denial of trial by the regular process of law.

The Gavagan bill, on the other hand, provides—as the Senate bill does not—for federal prosecution of members of lynching mobs in cases where local or state authorities have not acted within 30 days.

Supporters of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill think they can bring enough pressure on the majority leaders, Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas, and Pat Harrison of Mississippi, to give the measure a place on the calendar sooner or later. They will then be faced by a filibuster which will be led by "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina. Smith, Tom Connally of Texas, and Josiah Bailey of North Carolina, headed the filibuster which two years ago was used to sidetrack the Costigan anti-lynching bill. Smith is given to repeating that such legislation is a crime against Southern womanhood. His vehemence is counted as an asset by supporters of the bill.

WANT COLORED VOTE

In the background will be the desire of Northern Democratic leaders to hold the colored vote, which deserted the Republican party almost en mass in the last election. Most opposition speeches in the House were based on the Gavagan bill's alleged unconstitutionality, violation of state rights and interference with a purely Southern problem.

Aside from the difference previously noted, the House and Senate bills provide that officers who fail to make diligent efforts to prevent prisoners from being lynched shall be subject to a $5,000 fine and five years in prison; that officers who conspire with mobs may be imprisoned from five to 20 years; and that any county in which a prisoner is injured or killed by a mob may be sued by the victim's family for from $2,000 to $10,000.

SAY SENTIMENT INCREASED

Representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People say 60 senators have promised to vote for the Wagner-Van Nuys measure, and that sentiment for an anti-lynching law has vastly increased, especially in the South and among Southern women's organizations.

Among congressmen voting against the Gavagan bill were the three wealthy land owners who, as members of the House Agriculture Committee, were instrumental in burying the administration program to aid tenant farmers and share croppers—Kleberg of Texas, Coffee, of Nebraska, and Fulmer of South Carolina.

This coincidence is noteworthy because the N. A. A. C. P. recently showed that eight of the lynching victims of 1935 and 1936 had been accused solely of union activity in the organization of sharecroppers and tenants. Others were lynched for fighting with white men, drunkenness or disrespect.

Selma, Ala. Times
April 16, 1937

HOBBS AGAIN TO THE FRONT

Congressman Sam Hobbs of the Fourth Alabama District was paid another outstanding compliment by his colleagues in the House when he was selected to make the only speech in opposition to the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, which would be particularly obnoxious and unjust to the South. In this connection it has been pointed out that this is the second time recently that the Fourth District Representative has been thus honored.

It will be recalled that Hobbs was selected by the House to conduct the investigation of charges brought against Judge Ritter of Florida—an inquiry that resulted in the impeachment of the judge for misconduct in office and brought praise to the Alabama Congressman for his part in bringing out the damaging evidence in the case.

And in his speech against the anti-lynching measure, Congressman Hobbs acquitted himself with equal distinction and added further to his already enviable record in the House. In opposing the bill, he stressed the point that the only remedy for the lynching evil lies in enlightenment of the people and in creating sentiment against the crime of mob murder. He also emphasized the fact that the South is making progress toward the solution of the problem and cited figures to show the decrease in lynchings in the last half century.

Development of public opinion in the Southern states against lynching should be more rapid in the next few years with the growth in educational facilities. But it is necessary that negroes as well as whites be provided the opportunity to obtain an education and be thereby raised to a higher standard, which will tend to deter them from the crimes that have caused mob action in the past. Records show lynchings have occurred more often in communities in which a low average in intelligence and learning prevails, proving that a more wholesome attitude on the part of the citizens is the thing most needed to combat the mob spirit. They likewise attest the fact that education for negroes has a direct and important effect on the amount of crime. For example, it is said that no graduate of Tuskegee Institute has ever been convicted of an unjust measure to this praiseworthy proposal, or ion, an unmoral measure."

The Georgia delegation vigorously opposed crime and equally impressive results have been some other plan of similar merit, t shown by other schools for colored students in the form a service to the South that wo
South. do something constructive in the way
Therefore, the federal government really can aid the cause in which they profess to ha materially in eliminating lynchings by contributing interest.—Anniston Star. to the education of both white and colored in the Atlanta, Ga. Constitution Southern states. Federal funds for the schools in April 17, 1937 the South will enable us to make greater progress ward the development of an enlightened citizenship that is of such vital necessity in keeping us clear of racial troubles that have resulted in disgraceful acts of lawlessness in the past.

UNCALLED-FOR LEGISLATION

The passage by the house of congress of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill is regrettable.
It is to be hoped that the measure will meet the defeat it deserves at the hands of the senate.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, correctly brands
the bill "an effort to force through congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opin-

...ase, of the growing tendency to force federal interference into affairs which are strictly matters for the states themselves to handle. The bill strikes at one of the most fundamental of state's rights, the right to exercise exclusive police power over its own citizens. Federal policing of crime in any state is a dangerous innovation and one that could easily lead to utter submergence of the states as governmental entities.

There can be no doubt that the charge, made by southern opponents of the bill, that it is aimed at the south, is true. Though the black record of lynching includes many mob crimes committed in other parts of the country, it is self-evident that, had there been no lynchings in the south, the measure would not have been introduced and would not have received the strange support of a temporary coalition of northern Democrats with the Republican minority.

That lynching is a frightful crime which cannot, on any grounds, be condoned, no intelligent person will deny. That it is a shameful blot upon modern civilization is not open to argument.

But, emphatically, the cure does not lie through federal interference with the sacred rights of the states. The cure, as for all social evils, lies in education, and is evident, to the unprejudiced, that education is steadily wiping out the evil.

The records reveal that, since the peak of 1892, the number of lynchings in the country as a whole has decreased 5,000 per cent. The greater part of this improvement has taken place in the south.

Occasionally we are still shocked and horrified by the report of another mob outrage, but they become steadily less frequent. Public condemnation grows stronger and the day has passed when any man may safely boast that he was a member of a lynching mob.

Education is curing the evil. Education will perfect that cure in due time. Federal assumption of a duty that is emphatically a duty of the state is not the prescription for the disease.

It is to be hoped the senate will promptly scotch this evil proposal. If anti-lynching legislation is needed, it is certainly not of the type of the Gavagan bill.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle
April 17, 1937

News, Views and Reviews

CONGRESSMAN PAUL BROWN ON THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

"Addressing the Senate in 1935, Senator Wagner, ...author of a bill almost identical ...under consideration, cited fig... marked decline in the ...United States ...since 1892," said the Senator, "and 200 since 1922." How simple arithmetic would show that during the 40 years from 1882 to 1922, during which time the country's population doubled, the average was about 120 lynchings a year, but in the 13 years from 1922 to 1935 this average had declined to less than 22 a year. As a matter of fact, the whole trend of the record has been downward since the 1882 date, and in 1934 the number was 15, in 1935 there were 20 lynchings, and in 1936 there were 8. Does not this seem to indicate that State and local law-enforcement agencies are handling this problem with effect?

"Some advocates of this measure have called attention to the action of various States in adopting antilynching legislation, particularly Virginia, who passed an antilynching law in 1928, stating there has been no lynching in that State since the passage of the law, and that the State of Virginia has suffered no loss by reason of the fact that it, by its own hands, has wiped out this form of lawlessness.

"Now, this is a very outspoken admission that the States themselves are entirely competent to handle their own police problems, regardless of whether or not there is any constitutional inhibition to Federal interference. And Virginia is not the only State in which so-called antilynching laws exist. But every State has a law against murder, and it does not matter whether it comes from the poisoner's vial, the machine gun of the gangster, or the rope of a lynch mob, it is still murder, punishable according to the laws of the State in which is it committed.

"The people of my state do not believe in lynching, notwithstanding she has been denounced in severe terms. The courts, the press, the pulpit, and the bar are all opposed to lynching in all of its forms. However, there is not a father in the South who would not infinitely prefer to see his daughter dead than for her to become the victim of a Negro rapist; and, of course, under these circumstances it is not human for parents or relatives to control their feelings, and I feel that parents and relatives in all other sections of this country would have the same feeling for the helpless victims of such brutes.

"I dare say that no one in this House condones the illegal use of "third degree" methods, for which police of large cities have become notorious. But would anyone here suggest that this particular scandal would be sufficient reason for adoption of Federal legislation to supervise the police of our large northern cities? The 'third degree' is manifestly illegal and a violation of the constitutional rights of citizens. And it is not perpetrated by an outraged citizenry. It is perpetrated by peace officers themselves.

"If this Congress undertakes to set up Federal supervision over State statutes applying to one particular form of crime, then this or succeeding Congresses could pass laws providing for the supervision of any other or all State statutes. This bill, if enacted into law, can easily become an opening ...to complete domination of State and local laws by the Federal Government.

"So we come to the real point of the issue. The record shows that under State jurisdiction lynchings are becoming fewer and further apart, even though the population of this country has been increasing very rapidly. But in the past a great number of the lynchings which have taken place in Southern States have been of Negroes. In the meantime some of the large cities have developed big Negro populations, groups sufficient in size to become political considerations. These groups have been organized by politicians and their votes have become important factors in local and even national elections.

"I submit that these facts speak for themselves. The practice of lynching is almost entirely disappearing from existence in this country ,and this has been brought about by local law enforcement within the states. The sudden demand for Federal antilynching legislation can, therefore, be little more than an emotional appeal to large groups of Negro voters in the North. I for one know that the Federal Government cannot improve upon the law enforcement practiced by the States, and I am confident that this proposed usurpation of States' rights was never contemplated by the Constitution. The real friends of the Negroes are still in the South, and everyone, with the exception of a few political leaders, will admit this."—Congressional Record.

Three Southerners

Rep. Maury Maverick of Texas and Reps. Taylor and Reece of Tennessee were the only congressmen from the South who voted for the Federal antilynching bill. We speak here of the South as comprising Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

We are sure that the 99 other congressmen who represent the Southern states do not condone lynching, and that their votes against the bill were not motivated by any desire to protect lynchers. We are sure that they and a vast preponderance of their constituents look upon these mob crimes with horror.

Which seems a strange picture of statecraft. Since many of the lynchings that occur in this country occur in the South, it would seem reasonable to believe that the respectable elements in our section should welcome whatever help the Federal Government could give in stamping out the outrages which bring shame upon us.

The three gentlemen named above are the only Southern congressmen who, on the basis of the record, are above suspicion of worrying about what the not-so-respectable elements may think on the subject of lynching.

Today the majority viewpoint in the South condemns lynching and agrees with that vigorous Southern journal, The Richmond Times-Dispatch when it says editorially:

"The latest sample of what is sometimes called states' rights is the torture and murder of two Negroes by a Mississippi mob. Southern senators and representatives who have been vociferously opposing Federal anti-lynching legislation on the floors of Congress, on the ground that it would interfere with local self-government, had better produce some evidence that self-government is operative in certain parts of the South. They seem greatly concerned for the future of states' rights...but they are scarcely concerned at all for states' duties."

Winston-Salem, N. C., Sentinel
April 18, 1937

Keeping the Record Straight

We oppose lynching and believe the federal government should help bring mobsters to justice, just as the G-men are running down the kidnapers. But there are some features of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill as passed by the House last week, which we do not favor.

We do not believe any member of Congress should vote for this bill so long as it contains any provision to inflict punishment, either by fine or imprisonment, upon local officers who are overpowered by mobs and are forced to turn prisoners over to them.

No good can possibly come from this feature of the Gavagan bill, and much harm might result. In fact, we are convinced that it would hinder rather than aid law enforcement throughout the country.

It stands to reason that if a sheriff or other local officer knew that he would be subject to severe penalties if a mob should take a prisoner away from him, he would be slow to arrest any criminal in danger of mob violence.

Local officers should be encouraged to arrest criminals. But this bill would tend to discourage them in many instances in the performance of the duties of their office.

The most the federal government should do in dealing with the problem of lynching is to aid the local officers in apprehending and bringing members of the mobs into court to face trial for their crimes.

The Senate probably never will pass the Gavagan bill in any form. It certainly will not approve it without vital amendments, one of which would be to strike out the section inflicting punishment upon local officers.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5684

Memphis, Tenn., Com'rcial Appeal
April 10, 1937

Just Another Bloc?

Representative Hatton Sumners, Dallas, Texas, Democrat, has branded the 58 anti-lynching bills now before Congress as unconstitutional and affording "an inexcusable, dangerous extension of federal power not calculated to be helpful to the cause professed."

Without arguing about that, we would like to see some congressman get up on his hind legs and tell why there are 58 anti-lynching bills pending, but then everybody knows why. There are 58 congressional districts in which incumbent congressmen hope to get some votes by adding another factor to the complex game of racial politics by which most northern urban congressmen get elected to office. It is one of the grim jests of history that in the very areas of America where racial realities are most fervently denied, the real basis of politics and government is the exploitation of race consciousness.

It is doing the negro citizen no service to make him a pawn in this game of machine politics. It is in fact an affront to his citizenship to ask him to become just another alien racial bloc in gangster government.

It is the northern urban regions that stand to be harmed by anti-lynch laws, not the south. Lynching here is becoming an anachronism, at the same time that anarchism tempered by gang rule is becoming the actual mode of government in the urban north.

Dothan, Ala. Eagle
April 14, 1937

Most of the newspapers in the South heartily hate Federal anti-lynching bills that would, among other things, collect a fine from the county in which a lynching occurs; they don't like the proposed Youth Control Amendment which would take from parents and give to Congress control over their children under eighteen years of age; they oppose the spectacle of sit-down strikers seizing private property; they see great danger in Roosevelt's avowed determination to stack the Supreme Court with sycophants who would endorse his every desire to regiment the country. Yet these newspapers and most of the people who read them continue to shout hallelujah at the mention of the Roosevelt name. And the explanation is easy: Federal hand-outs in the form of patronage. Which means that Americans, like Italians and Germans and Russians, will readily sell their liberties to any convincing spell-binder.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Sentinel
April 18, 1937

Carolina Comment

THE WRONG BOAST

(Charlotte News)

"This bill," declared Representative Zeb Weaver, of the eleventh North Carolina district, yesterday with reference to the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. "is an insult and a challenge to the sovereignty of every state in the Union. I want to place in the record what we have done in North Carolina. I have before me the statutes. They were passed in 1893 and they provide rigid laws against lynching. Under those laws we have made a most magnificent record."

There is no gainsaying that North Carolina's lynching record, while perhaps not magnificent, is creditable. The old custom of lynching has almost gone out of existence. The vestige of it that remains hardly requires the attention of the central government.

But it wasn't laws that did it; not a bit of it. First of all, it was enlightenment, let us call it, and growing tolerance of the one race for the other: Those qualities combined to reduce the number of lynching attempts. And on those occasions, more or less rare, when mobs formed, it was the stout nerve of police officers that balked them. A sheriff with the guts to defend his prisoner is worth all the laws there are.

And in recent lynchings, the law and the courts, when finally they were invoked, displayed a shameful inability to function. For instance, though the Negro Govan Ward was taken in broad daylight from the sheriff of Franklin county and lynched, nobody ever was punished for it. The same inability to apply the laws was palpable in the Pender county lynching two years before. For those reasons, whatever credit North Carolina deserves for not stringing up its bestial criminals belongs solely to the people and the braver officers. State courts have failed miserably.

West Palm Beach, Fla. Post
April 18, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW

While lynching is looked on by many as an exclusive southern practice, any anti-lynching Federal law might be expected to have cause for operation in all 48 States save Maine, Vermont, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut—the only States in the Union that never have had a lynching since records were kept permanently, beginning in 1882.

However, before 1882, there were some legal lynchings at Salem, and among the Dutch New Yorkers some offenders were burned without benefit of clergy in those good old days, and an accurate record likely would show that some community now within each of these seven States at one time or the other indulged in what many northerners now believe is a southern pastime.

Since 1882, we have lynched in this country about 4,700 persons, of which more than 1,300 were white and more than 3,300 were negroes. Every State save the foregoing seven participated in the orgies. Until 1885, more whites were lynched than blacks, and it was not until 1924 and 1925 that there were no white lynchings, which resumed following those years. The best since 1882 was 1932, when but two white and six blacks were lynched. The worst year was 1892, when 69 whites and 162 blacks met death at the hands of mobs. For the last decade, lynchings have averaged 17 a year, and since 1882, the average has been about 87 a year.

Out of the total lynchings that have taken place since 1882, eleven southern States were responsible for more than 2,800, and the rest of the country for more than 1,800, or in the ratio of 14-9. However, if to this lynching record were added the deaths of those who died in race riots—in New York, Chicago, in Washington, D. C., and in other territory not strictly southern, it would be found that the North has been as flagrant as the South in this respect. There are few race riots in the South.

The House of Representatives has passed what is known as the Gavagan Act, aimed against lynching, by a vote of 276 to 119. It is now in the Senate. Congressman Gavagan is a New York Democrat, having a large Harlem constituency.

That the Federal government has any more to say in the way of law about lynchings than it has about the common run of homicides, is not clear. Senator William E. Borah characterizes the measure as unconstitutional, but in the light of last Monday's decisions in the Supreme Court, it may not be. The rope used no doubt would be affected with interstate commerce characteristics. Matches would probably come from Sweden. The guns would come from the New England locale, the ammunition from up that way, and the automobiles used probably from Michigan. Even the clothing worn by the victim and his assailants might have been made in Virginia.

Senator Borah is getting up in years. He belongs to the old school of lawyers who believe that a lynching is intrastate and not interstate, a local and not a Federal problem. He believes that those rights not conferred on the Federal government ar reserved to the States, which was true when he learned law, since which it has fallen into general disuse. A paternal government that gives board and room to the States must be paid in some way.

Nashville, Tenn. Banner
April 18, 1937

Topics of the Day

THE ANTILYNCHING BILL

It is profoundly disturbing that the House should have passed, and by such a large majority, the antilynching bill last night.

It clearly has its origin in political consideration, for it is fathered and has been pressed by a Tammany Democrat, the majority of whose constitutents are Negroes.

It was supported in the main by Northern and Eastern Democrats, who seek to forever wean the Negro from the Republican Party by their advocacy of it.

It is aimed directly at the South, despite the fact it has made strides in recent years in building up public sentiment against the horrible crime of lynching.

Where the Negro used to be fair game for a "necktie party," on almost any pretext, he has been given increased protection in most states, and mob action is becoming more and more a thing of the past.

Lynching has decreased 5,000 per cent in the last forty years.

Passage of such an extreme and unwarranted bill as the Gavagan measure would cause unbounded resentment and ill feeling in the South.

It would punish both the innocent and guilty in a county in which a lynching took place.

It would hamper local law enforcement, and throw upon the state the burden and expense of calling out the militia upon almost every occasion, when a crime of a violent nature, involving a Negro, is committed.

In fact, it has been argued that it would even give the Federal Government the power to prosecute a Governor, if he failed to call out the state guard, in case of a lynching.

Lynching is indefensible, but it is not more so than this radical and unjust bill, which invades the rights and powers of the states, and threatens to make them cringe before the Federal Government.—Huntsville Times.

Union, S. C., Times
April 16, 1937

A GRAVE SITUATION

The House, by a vote of 277 to 119, passed the Gavagan anti-lynching bill yesterday. The bill now goes to the Senate. Gavagan is a Tammany Democrat representing the negro school district of Harlem. The proposed law would make lynching a federal crime and subject peace officers having in custody accused prisoners, subject to fine and imprisonment and the county in which the lynching occurred will be heavily fined. For some time we have felt that one of the gravest questions involved in the loss of states' rights by encroachment of the federal government was the race problem. This outburst to take over the policing of the states by the federal government is proof that our contention was justified. It now appears that Senator Guffey knew what he was talking about when, during the last presidential campaign he made the assertion that the Democrats had to have the negro vote to win.

We now make this prediction: If the Senate passes this bill and it becomes a law, there will come a deluge of lynching that will overshadow any period we have yet had in this country. Throughout the South, and for that matter, other sections of the conutry, the officers will not attempt to protect prisoners, for the simple reason that they will not arrest them, and those charged with certain crimes will fall into the hands of mobs that will carry out the lynchings. Those charged with certain crimes will fall into the hands of the mob and never see the sheriffs nor their deputies. Lynchings in the South, if this bill becomes law, will increase to an astounding degree. To say that officers neglect their duty in such cases is to talk foolishness. You cannot prove that an officer is purposely absent, that his failure to arrest the alleged criminal was a premeditated act.
Under the present conditions in the South lynchings have decreased in a marked degree. In fact there are in other sections of the country almost as many lynchings as there are in the South.

that it neither here nor there:
this idea of white supremacy in the South is deeply rooted and it will be maintained to the utmost, we believe. Segregation of the black and white races. We will not tolerate social equality, intermarriage nor the opening of mixed schools. Under the present conditions the negroes of the South have made no small advance. Under a law such as Representative
Gavagan proposes the advancement of the negroes of the South will be set back a hundred years.
That's our prediction, and it is an honest expression, spoken without malice and with the best of good will towards the negro race.
You might with equal justification pass a national police law to protect Japanese, Chinese, or any other alien race. Specific punitive police laws should seldom be passed by the Congress. Such laws belong to the states, not the national government. But in this day when Congress is regimenting agriculture, industry and business —things commercial, it is not surprising that the attempt to regulate the social life of individual states should come to the fore. If the present administration presses too far in the crusade to beat down the traditions of the white people of the South, the white people of the South will abandon the Democratic party. There will be no solid South controlled by Democrats.

Lancaster, S. C. News
April 16, 1937

It Will Probably Pass

It looks rather certain that some sort of anti-lynching bill will be passed by this Congress. President Roosevet has said not a word to indicate what he would do if such a bill shall be enacted into law.

Lynching is a horrible thing. No one can excuse it. It has a degrading effect on any community in which it happens to be used.

For this reason it is easy to enlist endorsement or support of almost any proposal to attempt the abolition of lynching.

But this proposal to put into the hands of the Federal government the power to take over trials where ever "three or more persons" make an attack on another (the "three" being named so as to define a mob) as is now proposed, is an exceedingly dangerous proposal.

You may not have given any thought to the bill. You may feel such righteous indignation over the whole crime of lynching that you are ready to endorse this bill without even considering it. We share with you this indignation over lynching but we cannot help giving consideration to the consequences of such a bill should it become the law of the land.

One of the greatest troubles with our land today is that so often we refuse to consider the consequences of what we are about to do.

Congressman Pearson, of the State of Tennessee, last Friday pointed out some of the danger signals in this bill.

Read what he says carefully and reflect on the consequences of such legislation:

"Section one defines 'mob or rio-tous assemblage' as an assemblage composed of three or more persons acting in concert, without authority of law, to injure or kill any person in the custody of any peace officer with the purpose or consequence of depriving such person of due process of law or the equal protection of the laws.

"Section two is the 'green light' or 'go ahead' section, informing the courts that the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution justifies this legislaion and provides that if any State fails, neglects, or refuses to protect the life or person of any individual against a mob either by preventing or punishing the acts of such mob such State shall be deemed to have denied to such person due protection of law and equal protection of the law.

"Without the flicking of an intermediate 'yellow light' for clearing the way, sections three, four, five and six flash 'red', telling you and me to stop and think long and well before acting on this measure.

Section three provides first that any oficer of a State charged with the duty of protecting the life of any individual who is put to death by a mob or having such individual in his custody fails to make all diligent efforts to protect him shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or both, and secondly, that any State officer having in his custody a prisoner who shall conspire with any person who is a member of a moo to injure or kill said prisoner or to suffer such prisoner to be taken from his custody to be so treated, together with those who conspire with him shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be imprisoned not less than five nor more than 25 years.

"Section four gives the District Court of the United States of the district in which such person is injured or killed jurisdiction to try and punish in accordance with the laws of the State where the offense is committed, provided it appears that State officers whose duty it is to apprehend and punish such offender have failed to do so or that jurors obtainable in the State courts where the case is to be tried are so strongly opposed to such punishment that there is probability the offenders will not be punished in the State courts. If such offender is not apprehended or indicted or prosecuted within thirty days after the crime is committed, such failure shall constitute prima-facie evidence of failure, neglect, or refusal to do so.

"Section five renders any county in which such crime occurs liable to such injured person or his representative for a sum between two and ten thousand dollars and provides the method of recovering such damages.

"Section six provides that in the event such injured person is transported from one county to another after seizure and before death both counties shall be jointly and severally liable."

The only excuse for this bill is that the State cannot or will not attempt to check lynching and therefore the Federal government must step in and do the work.

But the States, regardless of whether they be Southern, Eastern or Western, will be giving up their last shred of sovereign power when they give to the Federal government the power to take over and try criminal cases involving "three or more persons" who may attack another."— Greenwood Index-Journal.

Bishopville, S. C., Messenger
April 8, 1937

SNAP SHOTS

In the house of the United States congress is a negro member from Illinois. He is the only negro in the body, having succeeded a negro congressman from the same state, the defeated member being a Republican.
This negro congressman has gotten up an anti-lynching bill which carries "a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine for any state, city or county officer who shall 'suffer and permit' a prisoner to be taken from his custody and injured or put to death." The bill had one provision which the house judiciary committee struck out before approving it. It was that a lynching was evidence that the officer allowed it. Of course this as well as other anti-lynching bills have been and are primarily meant for the South. Here is another that Southern people might take note of: A congressman, a white Democrat from New York, has also an anti-lynching bill. It is said that his bill is more drastic than the one the negro has gotten up. With the approval of the bill by the committee, it will go before the house for consideration. Of course no one knows what the house will do with it. It may become law or it may not be passed. One interesting thing about the late anti-lynching bills is that, first, they are born in the brains of Democrats. Second, one a negro and the other a white. Thirdly, they are, as all others of their stripe, aimed primarily at the south, which has the brains and strength of the Democratic national party. No Democrat can be elected president at any time except in times that are not normal, due to the fact that there are more Republicans than Democrats. Democratic success depends on Republican and Independent help. But without the aid of the South there would be no Democratic party worth considering. It would be the Republican party and some other party. So it is strange that seemingly a Democratic administration is standing for many things detrimental to the South such as social equality, in a way, child labor laws, anti-lynching laws. It could readily be understood if such was coming from Republican sources as they have in a certain way in the past, but coming from the party to which the South belongs, one is stumped to understand it. In justice to the house judiciary committee we will say that the vote was not unanimous as it stood 8 to 7. This is gratifying and encouraging if such could be so classed.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5685

Editorial Gives Attitude Of Southern White Press Regarding Anti-Lynch Bill

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 8 — The following is taken from the editorial page of the Item-Tribune, white daily, and gives an interesting slant upon the attitude of the southern white press regarding the Anti-Lynching bill:

LYNCHING LAW

We hear Congress expects to stage another rumpus over an anti-lynching bill. Opponents of such legislation may be able to block it again. Perhaps it should be blocked—we are still open to persuasion on this issue. But deeply as we deplore most Congressional debate which puts nothing tangible through the mill, wrangling about lynching may not be a waste of time.. Every debate on this subject in the national forum strengthens national feeling against lynching.

That puts responsibility in the matter squarely up to state and local authority in the territory which opposes Federal anti-lynch law. The issue always has been simple and still is. Either local authority must stop lynching or confess its impotence and make way for Federal action.. Thus far the states have refused to accept the responsibility and opposed acceptance of it by the central government. That dog-in-the-manger position can't be held indefinitely.

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW TO BE SOUGHT AGAIN

Group for Negro Advancement Renews Appeal to Congress for Federal Statute.

CHANCES HELD BRIGHTEST

Association Official Expects Aid of 250 in House—Resolution Ask Other Reforms.

Congress was urged to pass a Federal anti-lynching law in a resolution adopted yesterday at the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the officers and members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue.

Walter White, secretary of the association, reported that 150 members of the House of Representatives were committed to such legislation, while at least 100 others were "not hostile." The active support of sixty-two Senators, he said, could be expected.

"Prospects for the passage of such a bill are more promising than at any previous time," he declared.

An amendment to the Harrison-Fletchel bill for Federal aid to the States for education was also asked in order to eliminate the possibility of discrimination against schools for Negroes in States where separate schools are established by law for the two races. Enactment of a civil rights bill for the District of Columbia was urged in another resolution.

Joel E. Spingarn was re-elected president of the association. Other officers named to serve with him were Dr. Louis T. Wright, chairman of the board of directors; Miss Mary White Ovington, treasurer, and the following vice presidents: Miss Nannie H. Burroughs, Washington; Arthur Capper, Topeka, Kan.; Clarence Darrow, Chicago; Bishop John A. Gregg, Kansas City, Kan.; the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, James Weldon Johnson, the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, Arthur B. Spingarn and Oswald Garrison Villard.

New members elected to the board were Dr. Walter Gray Crump, Representative Caroline O'Day, James H. Robinson, Dr. N. C. McPherson of Nashville, Dr. Charles H. Thompson of Howard University, Washington, D. C., and Dr. Elizabeth Yates Webb of Vassar College.

Among members re-elected to the board were Miss Marion Cuthbert, Hubert T. Delaney, Mrs. Rachel Davis Du Bois, Lewis S. Gannett, James Weldon Johnson, Mrs. Grace B. Fenderson of Newark, Carl Murphy of Baltimore, Frank Murphy of Detroit and Dr. William Allan Neilson of Northampton, Mass.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
January 4, 1937

Maverick Favors Anti-Lynch Act

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Representative Maury Maverick (D., Tex.), who said his great-great-great grandfather was Col. Charles Lynch and responsible for the Lynch law, came out today for a federal anti-lynching act.

"I think it's time," he said, "that the south, as well as the north, condemns lynching, not only by speeches but by laws. Last year there was less lynching than at any time in the history of the United States, but all of it was in the south.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle
January 6. 1937

LYNCH BILL

Washington, Jan. 5 (AP)—Predicting "surprising support" from the South, Representative Thomas F. Ford, Los Angeles Democrat, introduced today an anti-lynching bill.

Jackson, Miss., News
January 8. 1937

FROM THE NESHOBA DEMOCRAT—Commenting upon the fact that an anit-lynching bill will no doubt again be introduced in congress, the Jackson Daily News well makes the point that a bill might just as well be introduced to provide a monetary penalty for any homicide.

It is just as unlawful to kill a man with a pistol, an ax or any other way, as it is to lynch him.

He is just as dead one way as another.

Some homicides are just as brutal, if not more so, than lynchings.

We read accounts of butcherings wherein legs and arms and heads are dismembered.

Yet half the time the killer escapes under the flimsy alibi of insanity.

The anti-lynching bill proposes to have the county in which a lynching occurs to pay $10,000 or other sum of money to the victim's family.

Why not provide a similar law for homicides?

There's just as much reason for it, as well pointed out by the News.

Lynch Descendant Seeks Lynch Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. [illegible] (AP)—Rep. Maury Maverick, Democrat, Texas, who said his great-great-great grandfather was Col. Charles Lynch and responsible for the Lynch law, came out today for a federal anti-lynching act.

"I think it's time," he said, "that the South as well as the North condemns lynching, not only by speeches, but by laws. Last year there was less lynching than at any time in the history of the United States, but all of it was in the South."

Texas Congressman Is For Anti-Lynch Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. [illegible] (AP)—Representative Maury Maverick (D., Texas), who said his great-great-grandfather was Col. Charles Lynch and responsible for the lynch law, came out today for a Federal anti-lynching act.

"I think it's time," he said, "that the South, as well as the North, condemns lynching, not only by speeches but by laws. Last year there was less lynching than at any time in the history of the United States, but all of it was in the South."

Athens, Ga., Banner-Herald
January 10, 1937

APPROVES AN ANTI-LYNCHING LAW

And now comes a congressman from the South, who deposeth and sayeth that he is in favor of the enactment of a national anti-lynching law with all the frills and furbelows necessary to please those who have been trying for years to enact some kind of legislation that would impose hardships on the people of this section of the country, right or wrong. This ambitious congressman, seeking fame, if not fortune, hails from the "Lone Star" state and bears the name of Maury Maverick. He is quoted by the Associated Press with saying: "My great, great, great, grandfather was Col. Lynch and responsible for the lynch law", all of which, no doubt is true.

We are not informed as to the provisions to be incorporated in the proposed bill to be introduced by Congressman Maverick, but if it contains, in principle, the features of former bills introduced in congress, we hope that it will be defeated, just as many other bills of that character have been side-tracked by congressmen from the South.

It is true, and practically all the people agree, that there should be found a remedy for the prevention of lynching, regardless of sections of the country, but to set up a piece of legislation containing discriminations would, indeed, be unfortunate, not only from a point of sectionalism, but it would defeat the very purpose for which it might be intended.

place a Federal anti-lynching law on the statute books has been launched anew with "prospects for its passage more promising than at any previous time," according to Walter White, its secretary.

Sympathetic as we are with the aims of the association, we cannot support such a measure because we cannot see how it possibly can help prevent lynchings or what good it will do to slap fines on communities where lynchings are perpetrated. In all lawful control of lawlessness that end, they can times past it may have been true that whole communities participated in these fiendish crimes against their duty, but if it ever to join with those civilization, but on only the rarest occasions, if ever hatred for a people that true today.

On the contrary, the good people of a community where a mob of men take the law into their own hands and murder a Negro suspected of crime without giving him an opportunity to defend himself or prove his innocence resent those outrages quite as

From time immemorial, representatives in congress, unfriendly to the South and its people have endeavored to secure enactment of anti-lynch legislation, but the provisions in the measures were so radical and unjust, the representatives from this section of the country have always succeeded in defeating the bills. However, the fact that the number of lynchings throughout the country, should be encouraging and hopeful for the better in the way of eliminating such crimes, be they in Georgia, California or Pennsylvania.

Our congressmen from the southern

Danville, Va., Register
January 7, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING LAW

The perennial campaign of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to

...does the association which would penalize the county or town where it was committed. Moreover, unless the members of the mob were identified, the courts would have no way of knowing whether residents of the community in which the crime was committed were responsible for it or not.

These difficulties in the way of administering an anti-lynching law as well as the manifest injustice of levying a fine on a large body of people for the act of a few force us to oppose enactment of such a measure. And we are inclined to believe that the persistence of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in advocating the law is doing their worthy cause much harm.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
January 18, 1937

...The Costigan-Wagner bill provides heavy fines, or imprisonment, or both, for officers failing to be diligent in apprehending and prosecuting lynchers, for those conspiring to kill a prisoner, and for those who allow a prisoner to be taken from them. The state is given 30 days after a lynching in which to act against the lynchers; the U. S. district court has jurisdiction. Counties in which lynchings occur may be fined $2,000 to $10,000, the money to go to the victim's family.

Mitchell Bill Still Fails to Hit Mob

Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell's anti-lynching bill, which drew criticism following its introduction in the last Congress, was re-introduced, Friday, without such revisions as would have made its penalties applicable to members of a mob.

Critics pointed out that the proposed measure was directed primarily at officers of the law who permit a prisoner to be taken from their custody and injured or killed, with no provision for punishing the actual lynchers.

It was further charged that victims seized by a mob without having been arrested were not covered, even though the bill provides for municipal liability to an injured victim, or to the legal representatives of one killed, if taken from an officer.

The Illinois Democrat's re-introduced bill provides the same penalties as formerly: A fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, for officer allowing mob to take victim; imprisonment from two to ten years if officer conspires with mob, and recovery of from $2,000 to $10,000 by victim or heirs by civil action.

Commission Bill Also Same

Also re-introduced on Friday was Mr. Mitchell's bill for creation of an industrial commission.

Its provisions likewise are essentially unchanged, calling for five members to be appointed by the President, with at least three of them colored, at salaries of $5,000 a year and $7,500 for the chairman.

A third bill which Mr. Mitchell again introduced would abolish the use of photographs as a means of identifying Civil Service applicants.

Atlanta, Ga. Georgian
January 15, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill Fought by Floridian

Denouncing proposed federal anti-lynching legislation, Dr. L. M. Bristol, head of the Department of Sociology at the University of Florida, Thursday told the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching:

"The South is capable of working out its own salvation with reference to race relations."

Dr. Bristol told the conference these laws were sponsored in Washington by the National Conference on Problems of the Negro and Negro Youth.

Norfolk, Va. Pilot
January 4, 1937

Lynch's Descendant For Anti-Lynch Law

Washington, Jan. 3.—(AP)—Rep. Maury Maverick, Democrat, Texas, who said his great-great-great grandfather was Col. Charles Lynch and responsible for the Lynch law, came out today for a Federal anti-lynching act.

Kingsport, Tenn. Times
January 20, 1937

ODIOUS ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, predicts passage of an anti-lynching law by the 75th Congress, provided the measure is not blocked by a senate filibuster.

That an anti-lynching measure will be presented to the present session of the national congress goes without saying. Just what form it will take is still uncertain. But whether it is of the radical nature of the before-defeated and odious Wagner Bill, or is of somewhat modified character, it is still objectionable and insulting to the southern states.

The senate filibuster is a weapon which is often unfairly employed, and the fact of its being possible is a sad commentary upon our system of enacting federal legislation. But if ever there were a time when a filibuster is justifiable it certainly is to be condoned in preventing the passage of a despicable anti-lynching bill.

In brief, the purpose of any anti-lynching measure which will be introduced will be to force the arrest and prosecution of lynchers by penalizing the counties and states in which lynchings occur. More probably the system employed would be to impose a federal fine upon a county in which a lynching might occur. In other words, the innocent taxpayers of a county would be penalized because of an act of lawlessness perpetrated in the county.

Obviously this would be utterly unjust and unfair. But why is an attempt to enact such odious legislation an insult to the south? Simply because, while lynchings occur from time to time in all parts of the country, they are more common in the southern states.

On the other hand, most of the kidnapings occur in the northern and western states, with California coming in for more than a fair share. Most of the gang atrocities and racketeering occur in New York and Illinois. Now would it be fair to impose a fine upon some county in California or Washington because a kidnaping occurred there? Would it be just to penalize Cooke county, Illinois, or New York county, New York, because of a gang murder or some racketeering in the great cities of those counties? Obviously not; yet such action would be just as much in line with fairness as to impose a fine upon a southern county because of a lynching.

If the senators and representatives who are promoting this anti-lynching legislation had any regard for the spirit of fair play they would see this. They should also see that the levying of reprisals on innocent taxpayers is in any event a dangerous precedent. Senator Wagner perhaps would not regard very complacently a measure to impose a fine of several hundred thousand dollars upon a state in which a "gang job" of killing, racketeering, or robbery might occur. He would say that was penalizing innocent taxpayers for the work of criminals. Yet he does not hesitate to seek the very same sort of legislation when it bears most heavily on the south.

When the Union of the United States of America was achieved it was not the intention of the founders of our country that the federal government should go into the several states and take out of the hands of these commonwealths the administering of justice. The individual states know best their needs and conditions, and on the whole it is best to allow them to administer their own justice.

We are just as bitterly opposed to mob violence and lynch law as Senator Wagner, or any legislator from the north. But we firmly believe that this is a problem for the individual states to solve, and is not at all within the province of the federal government. We hope and believe that if another such attempt is made to impose this insult and injustice upon the south the southern senators will filibuster the bill until Doomsday.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5686

NEW ANTI-LYNCHING BILL IS INTRODUCED

Revised Version of Costigan-Wagner Measure to Permit Federal Action Against Lynching is Sponsored by N.A.A.C.P.; Objections Raised in Debate Influence Changes

Washington, Jan. 29 - A new Federal anti-lynching bill, which is really a revision of the well-known Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill, was introduced in the House of Representatives this week under the sponsorship of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

It will be introduced in the Senate next week by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and a co-sponsor. The N.A.A.C.P. has requested representatives who are friendly to this legislation to introduce identical bills in the hope of arousing greater support for the measure in the House.

One of the objections which has been raised to the old bill was that it might be interpreted as applying to gang and racketeer killing and to clashes between factions in labor disputes. The new bill expressly provides that the term "lynching" "shall not be deemed to include violences occurring between members of groups of law breakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers, or violence occurring during the course of picketing or boycotting incidental to any labor dispute."

The new bill also broadens the Lindbergh federal kidnaping act to include interstate kidnapings and lynchings such as the Claude Neal lynching.

The new bill, like the Costigan-Wagner Bill, is not simply confined to those in the custody of peace officers. It covers cases in which victims are hunted down and lynched by mobs or so-called posses before they are ever arrested and formally charged with a crime.

The new bill does not attempt to punish private individuals but concentrates on punishment of peace officers and State prosecutors who fail to protect prisoners before lynching or prosecute the members of the mob after a lynching has taken place. It still provides for civil damages against the county or counties in which lynchings occur.

The new bill also differs from the Costigan-Wagner Bill in that it provides definitely for the conduct of an investigation of a lynching by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, better known as the G-Men. A brief digest of the bill follows:

The bill is entitled "A bill for the better assurance of the protection of persons within the several states from mob violence and lynching and from other purposes."

Section 1. A state shall be deemed to have denied to any victim of lynching equal protection of the laws of the state and due process of law whenever that state shall have failed to employ the lawful means at its disposal for the protection of that person against lynching or against seizure and abduction followed by lynching or violence in labor disputes.

Section 2. Defines a mob as three or more persons exercising by physical violence and without authority of law punishment upon a citizen in the custody of any peace officer or suspected or charged with a crime except that the term "lynching" shall not include gang wars or violence in labor disputes.

Section 3. Provides that any responsible peace officer who either fails, neglects or refuses to protect a prisoner from a mob or to make all diligent efforts to apprehend members of a mob shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or by both.

Section 4. Provides that the Attorney General of the United States, on the affidavit of a citizen that a responsible peace officer has failed to protect a prisoner or made no effort to apprehend lynchers, shall cause an investigation to be made to determine whether there has been any violation of the act.

Section 5. (1) Provides that a county shall be responsible for a lynching occurring within its boundaries and for a lynching occurring outside its boundaries if the victim is seized within its boundaries, in a sum not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000. The county, however, may escape liability if it can show that its peace officers took prompt action and exercised all diligence in their power and still could not prevent a lynching.

Section 5. (2) Provides that suits for damages may be brought in the United States district court by the Attorney General of the United States in the name of the United States for the use of the aggrieved party or parties, without prepayment of costs, and that the money recovered on the judgment shall not be subject to claims of creditors.

Section 5. (3) Gives the judge of the United States district court the power to designate the place in his district where such suits shall be tried.

Section 6. Broadens the interpretation of the Lindbergh Kidnaping Act to include lynching.

CONGRESSMEN START
INTRODUCING BILLS

Washington, Jan. 29.- The first three congressmen to introduce the Federal anti-lynching bill which will be sponsored by the N.A.A.C.P. are C. A. Wolverton, N. J., (H.R. 3785); Carl B. Mapes, Mich., (H.R. 3787); and John H. Tolan, Calif. (H.R. 3807). Other congressmen who have written the N.A.A.C.P. that they will introduce the bill are: Albert G. Rutherford, Pa.; Emanuel Celler, N. Y.; Samuel B. Pettingill, Ind.; Matthew Merritt N.Y.; Jesse P. Wolcott, Mich.; D. Layne Powers, N. J.; Edward O'Neil, N.J.; Charles D. Millard, N. Y.; James P. McGranery, Pa.; Leon Sacks, Pa.; George N. Segar, N. J.

Greensboro, N. C., News
February 3, 1937

FAVORS ANTI-LYNCH LAW.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 2.—(AP)—The Richmond Times-Dispatch says editorially it favors enactment of the federal anti-lynching bill introduced in the house of representatives because it "sees no hope of ever wiping out lynching the greatest crime against southern civilization, except through federal ac-

ANTI-LYNCH BILL DRIVE THREATENS PARTY RIFT

Constitution

Northern Democrats and Republicans Unite for Campaign.

2-22-37

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(UP)—A coalition drive for early passage of a federal anti-lynching law tonight threatened to split the heavy Democratic majority in congress along sectional lines over the issue of state rights.

Atlanta

Sponsors of more than 40 pending anti-lynch bills contend that federal intervention to punish local officers who fail to prevent mob violence is necessary to stamp out "mob murders."

Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, New York; Representative Joseph P. Gavagan, Democrat, New York, and numerous other Democrats from northern states have joined with Republicans in a drive to force congressional action.

Action Is Taken.

Gavagan introduced last week a resolution to discharge the judiciary committee from consideration of his bill. The committee's refusal to act bars a house vote.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, New York, author of a similar bill, launched another drive to force action by submitting a petition which, if signed by two-thirds of the house membership will call the bill out of committee. He believes there is enough Democratic support to assure passage.

Senator Wagner prepared to introduce the anti-lynching legislation in the senate and said "its passage at this session of congress seems assured."

Chairman Hatton W. Summers, Democrat, Texas, of the house judiciary committee, said he is opposed to the federal anti-lynching laws "because I am opposed to lynching." He charged that "federal intrusion into a governmental problem of the states" would halt progress being made by the communities in stamping out mob violence.

Reduced to Nine.

Summers said local action had brought a gradual reduction in the number of lynchings from 226 in 1892 to nine last year.

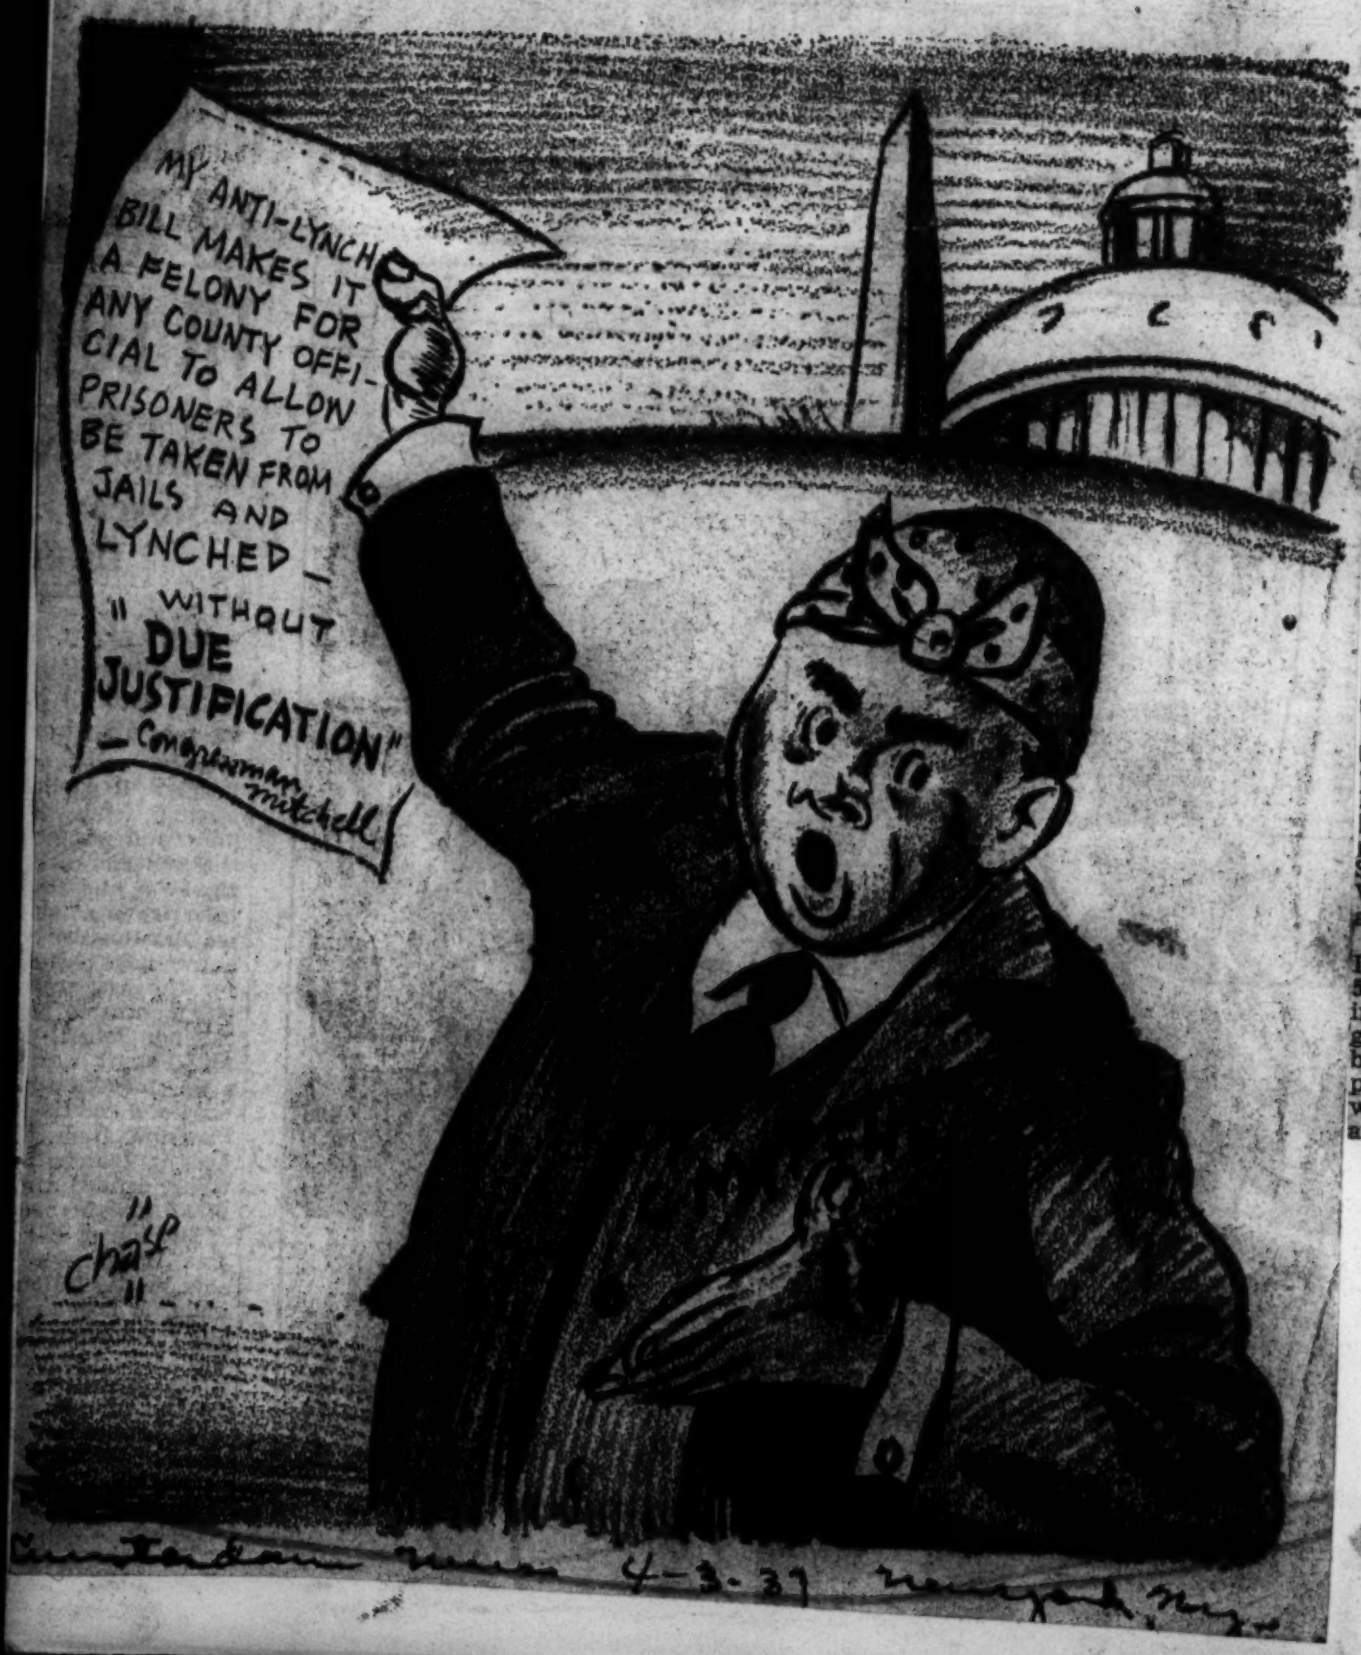
Most of the pending bills would authorize federal authorities to prosecute local officers who neglected to protect prisoners in their custody from mob violence or failed to make "diligent efforts" to apprehend and convict mob members. They provide a penalty of up to five years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine. They also would assess a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 against any county in which a lynching occurred.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5687

April Fool!

By CHASE



Whites Make up Third of Mob Victims in 55 Years

WASHINGTON

"More than five thousand men and women have been lynched since 1882, and almost a third of this number were white men," Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Dem., Ill.) declared in an address Monday over the Columbia Broadcasting Station WJSV.

Speaking on the topic, "The Necessity of the Passage of a Federal Anti-Lynching Law," the Congressman stated that he considered it safe to assume that out of the more than 5000 cases of lynchings there has been less than 3 per cent of convictions.

He pointed out that though lynching knows no section of the country, yet, the largest number of victims during the past forty years have been in perhaps twelve or thirteen States.

"Statistics showing that a total of 3,314 colored people and 513 whites were lynched from 1882-1930 in fourteen States: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia were given by Mr. Mitchell. Some of these States, particularly Virginia, he indicated, have passed anti-lynching laws.

Concluding he said: "I believe I have the best bill among the 59 which have been introduced in the House this session of Congres. I should like to see my bill become law but as I have said repeatedly, I expect to vote for whatever anti-lynching bill we are able to get before the House."

Anti-Lynching Measures of Mitchell, Gavagan Compared

A comparative analysis of the anti-lynching bills sponsored by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Dem., Ill.) and by Representative Joseph A. Gavagan (Dem., N.Y.), which gives at a glance the strong points and weaknesses of each, is presented herewith: Afro-American 4-10-37

The Gavagan measure, debate on which has been set in the House for April 12 is backed by the NAACP and is identical in substance to the Wagner-Van Nuys bill in the Senate.

A debate on the Mitchell measure, which does not have NAACP backing, has been set for April 7. The bills follow:

MITCHELL BILL	GAVAGAN BILL
Mob (No Definition)	"Mob or riotous assemblage," three or more persons acting in concert, without authority of law, to kill or injure any person in the custody of any peace officer. (Sec. 1)
Denial of equal protection, if an officer of State or governmental subdivision thereof, without lawful justification or excuse, suffers or permits prisoner to be taken from custody and injured or put to death, or to be unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody. (Sec. 1-a)	Denial of due process and equal protection, if a State or governmental subdivision thereof fails, neglects or refuses to provide and maintain protection to the life or person of any individual within its jurisdiction against a mob or riotous assemblage, whether by way of preventing or punishing the acts thereof. (Sec. 2)
Prima facie case, proof that prisoner unlawfully killed or injured prima facie evidence that officer suffered or permitted prisoner to be taken from custody and injured or put to death, or to be unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody. (Secs. 1-b and 2-b, deleted by Judiciary Committee)	Prima Facie case. (No Provision)
Felony, fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or both, if officer without lawful justification or excuse, suffers or permits prisoner to be taken from custody and injured or put to death, or to be unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody. (Sec. 2)	Felony, fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or both, if officer fails, neglects or refuses to make all diligent efforts to protect prisoner from being injured or put to death by mob or riotous assemblage; or
(No Provision)	if officer charged with duty of apprehending or keeping in custody, or prosecuting any member of mob fails, neglects or refuses to make all diligent efforts to perform his duty in apprehending, keeping in custody, or prosecuting to final judgment under the State law all mob members. (Sec. 3-a)
Felony, imprisonment not less than 2 years nor more than 10, if officer having prisoner in custody or control, conspires with any person to injure or put such prisoner to death, or to suffer such prisoner to be taken from custody to be injured or put to death. All conspirators guilty. (Sec. 3)	Felony, imprisonment not less than 5 years nor more than 25, if officer having prisoner in custody or control conspires with any person to injure or put such prisoner to death without authority of law, or to suffer such prisoner to be taken or obtained from custody or control to be injured or put to death by mob or riotous assemblage. All conspirators guilty. (Sec. 3-b)
(No Provision)	Prosecution of mob members in U.S. District Court of judicial district wherein victim injured or put to death, in accordance with laws of State where injury inflicted or homicide committed, provided (1) State officers charged with duty of apprehending, prosecuting, and punishing mob members have failed, neglected or refused to do so; or (2) jurors obtainable in State court having jurisdiction are so strongly opposed to such punishment that probability that guilty parties will not be punished in such State court. Failure for more than 30 days after commission of offense to apprehend or indict, or failure diligently to prosecute, prima facie evidence of the failure, neglect or refusal above. (Sec. 4)
Liability against governmental subdivision, not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000 to injured victim or legal representatives, against subdivision whose officer suffered prisoner to be taken from custody and unlawfully injured or put to death, or unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody (?) provided, if victim taken from officer of State who is	Liability against county in which victim seriously injured or put to death, not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000 as liquidated damages, to injured victim or legal representatives;

not officer of any governmental subdivision thereof, the county or governmental subdivision wherein victim injured or put to death liable as aforesaid;

Suit in United States District Court of judicial district wherein victim injured or put to death;

(No Provision)

(No Provision)

—judgment enforced, if not paid, by United States District Court levying execution on property of county, or mandamus or other appropriate process; any officer of county or other person who disobeys or fails to comply with any lawful order of the court in the premises, liable for contempt and other penalty provided by law therefor;

—proceeds of judgment exempt from claims of creditors of deceased;

(No Provision)

No abatement of action for injury if victim subsequently dies. (Sec. 4)

(No Provision)

Severability clause, in case any provision held invalid. (Sec. 5)

(It is understood that the Mitchell bill was narrowed by the House Judiciary Committee; the exact text as reported by the Committee is not available.)

—proceeds distributed according to laws of intestacy of State wherein death occurred. (Sec. 5)

Joint and several county liability as above provided, where victim transported by mob or riotous assemblage from one county to another, on county wherein victim seized and county wherein victim put to death.

United States District Judge of the United States District Court wherein prosecution or suit under this Act instituted may order prosecution or suit tried in any place in such district as he may designate by order. (Sec. 6)

Severability clause, in case any provision held invalid. (Sec. 7)

Anti-Lynching Measures of Mitchell, Gavagan Compared

A comparative analysis of the anti-lynching bills sponsored by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Dem., Ill.) and by Representative Joseph A. Gavagan (Dem., N.Y.), which gives at a glance the strong points and weaknesses of each, is presented herewith: ~~Both~~ 4-18-37

The Gavagan measure, debated on which has been set in the House for April 12, is backed by the NAACP and is identical in substance to the Wagner-Van Nuys measure, which has been set for April 7. The bills follow:

MITCHELL BILL	GAVAGAN BILL
Mob (No Definition)	"Mob or riotous assemblage," three or more persons acting in concert, without authority of law, to kill or injure any person in the custody of any peace officer. (Sec. 1)
Denial of equal protection, if an officer of State or governmental subdivision thereof, without lawful justification or excuse, suffers or permits prisoner to be taken from custody and injured or put to death, or to be unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody. (Secs. 1-a)	Denial of due process and equal protection, if a State or governmental subdivision thereof fails, neglects or refuses to provide and maintain protection to the life or person of any individual within its jurisdiction against a mob or riotous assemblage, whether by way of preventing or punishing the acts thereof. (Sec. 2)
Prima facie case, proof that prisoner unlawfully killed or injured prima facie evidence that officer suffered or permitted prisoner to be taken from custody and injured or put to death, or to be unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody. (Secs. 1-b and 2-b, deleted by Judiciary Committee)	Prima facie case. (No Provision)
Felony, fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or both, if officer without lawful justification or excuse, suffers or permits prisoner to be taken from custody and injured or put to death, or to be unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody. (Sec. 2)	Felony, fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or both, if officer fails, neglects or refuses to make all diligent efforts to protect prisoner from being injured or put to death by mob or riotous assemblage; or
(No Provision)	if officer charged with duty of apprehending or keeping in custody, or prosecuting any member of mob fails, neglects or refuses to make all diligent efforts to perform his duty in apprehending, keeping in custody, or prosecuting to final judgment under the State law all mob members. (Sec. 3-a)
Felony, imprisonment not less than 2 years nor more than 10, if officer having prisoner in custody or control, conspires with any person to injure or put such prisoner to death, or to suffer such prisoner to be taken from custody to be injured or put to death. All conspirators guilty. (Sec. 3)	Felony, imprisonment not less than 5 years nor more than 25, if officer having prisoner in custody or control conspires with any person to injure or put such prisoner to death without authority of law, or to suffer such prisoner to be taken or obtained from custody or control to be injured or put to death by mob or riotous assemblage. All conspirators guilty. (Sec. 3-b)
(No Provision)	Prosecution of mob members in U.S. District Court of judicial district wherein victim injured or put to death, in accordance with laws of State where injury inflicted or homicide committed, provided (1) State officers charged with duty of apprehending, and punishing mob members have failed, neglected or refused to do so; or (2) jurors having jurisdiction in State court have failed to obtainable in State court have failed, are so strongly opposed to such punishment that probability that guilty parties will be punished in such State court.
	Failure for more than 30 days after commission of offense to apprehend or indict, or failure diligently to prosecute, prima facie evidence of the failure, neglect or refusal above. (Sec. 4)
Liability against governmental subdivision, not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000 to injured victim or legal representatives, against subdivision whose officer suffered prisoner to be taken from custody and unlawfully injured or put to death, or unlawfully injured or put to death while in custody (?) provided, if victim taken from officer of State who is	Liability against county in which victim seriously injured or put to death, not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000 as liquidated damages, to injured victim or legal representatives;
not officer of any governmental subdivision thereof, the county or governmental subdivision wherein victim injured or put to death liable as aforesaid;	—proceeds distributed according to laws of intestacy of State wherein death occurred. (Sec. 5)
Suit in United States District Court of judicial district wherein victim injured or put to death;	—suit in United States District Court of judicial district wherein victim injured or put to death;
(No Provision)	—suit brought and prosecuted by United States attorney for such district;
(No Provision)	—judgment enforced, if not paid, by United States District Court levying execution on any property of county, or mandamus or other appropriate process; any officer of county or other person who disobeys or fails to comply with any lawful order of the court in the premises, liable for contempt and other penalty provided by law therefor;
(No Provision)	—proceeds of judgment exempt from claims of creditors of deceased;
(No Provision)	No abatement of action for injury if victim subsequently dies. (Sec. 4)
(No Provision)	Joint and several county liability as above provided, where victim transported by mob or riotous assemblage from one county to another, on county wherein victim seized and county wherein victim put to death. United States District Judge of the United States District Court wherein prosecution or suit under this Act instituted may order prosecution or suit tried in any place in such district as he may designate by order. (Sec. 6)
	Severability clause, in case any provision held invalid. (Sec. 5)
	(It is understood that the Mitchell bill was narrowed by the House Judiciary Committee; the exact text as reported by the Committee is not available.)
	Severability clause, in case any provision held invalid. (Sec. 7)

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5688

Athens, Ga., Banner-Herald
March 1, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

The anti-lynching bill has become chronic with some of the congressmen and senators, and at each session, such bills are introduced. However, the proposed measures have always been sidetracked before coming to a vote in either house. Two Democratic senators have introduced bills this year, but the unreasonable provisions in these bills will, no doubt, cause their defeat, as has been the fate of all such measures in the past.

The New York Herald-Tribune, a rank Republican newspaper, is advocating the passage of the bill. Its endorsement, we believe, will prove a liability rather than an asset. With prejudice and malice shown on the part of the advocates of the anti-lynching legislation, its shelving or tabling is bound to result.

Lynchings, not only in the South, but throughout the nation have been on the decline for the past several years, and if the subject is left alone, conditions will continue to improve and mob violence will no longer exist.

In this section of the country, it is seldom that lynchings occur for any crime save that of rape. When such crimes are committed, they are usually followed by lynchings whethey they occur in the South, East or West. It is not always a case of racial prejudice; it is the character of the crime that causes such outbreaks of mob rule or uprisings. If a white man commits the crime of rape, he is dealt with in the same manner as is the negro, no distinction being made.

We are hopeful that lynchings will cease in this country, but we are mindful of the enormity of such crimes that arouses the feelings of a civilized world and causes the red blood that flows in the veins of the true Americans to boil to a temperature that becomes uncontrolable. The crime of rape should be punishable with death sentences. With a uniform law throughout the nation, it would contribute more towards the elimination of lynchings than any other agency.

Tuscaloosa, Ala. News
February 25, 1937

Lynching Of Law Also Bad

IT is interesting to observe that there are a score or more of "anti-lynch" bills hovering about the Congress, all designed to create "greater respect for law in the South."

Meanwhile it is equally interesting to observe that not a single bill has been offered looking to greater respect for the law in those large portions of the nation outside of the South.

Not a single representative has arisen to suggest some means of ending the persistent lynching of the law in such states as Michigan, Ohio, and Illinois, where the law has been lynched to such a degree that few longer pay attention either to the law or the courts that seek to enforce it.

The South is making vigorous efforts to enforce the laws against lynching and is succeeding much better than are the officials in those states where contempt for the law has become commonplace, and the Congress could proceed with much more fidelity toward the institution of law were it to look upon the matter as a national rather than a sectional problem.

Lynchings of individuals are horrible and are frowned upon with as much severity in the South as in the North, but the fact should be borne in mind that the worst lynching of all is when the law itself is lynched, as it has become a daily occurrence in the North.

Rome, Ga. News-Tribune
February 28, 1937

Packed Court Would Validate Anti-Lynch Act, Cox Believes

Georgian Points To Dangers In Pending Measure, Which Would Expand Federal Authority In States; Measure Enlarged Court Is Expected To Approve

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—That the proposed enlarged Supreme court would validate one of the drastic anti-lynch bills now pending in Congress, whereas the present court would declare it unconstitutional, is the assertion of Congressman Eugene E. Cox, of Georgia.

The Georgia representative was referring to the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynch bill, which is being pushed with great fervor at this time and the adoption of which would place huge penalties upon counties where lynchings occur, while giving the federal government vastly greater authority in the states. In discussing the proposal, Congressman Cox said:

"The Wagner anti-lynching bill is a proposal to substitute federal power for state laws in the punishment of crime, a peculiar function of the states heretofore. Indeed, it is more. It proposes that the federal government shall compel the people of a county where a lynching takes place to pay the family of the victim up to $10,000, thus punishing the innocent for the acts of the guilty.

"The bill is unconstitutional as the law is construed by the Supreme court as now constituted. It is one of the measures that the court with enlarged membership is expected to validate. There is a long series of others of like character in the waiting which will be pulled out of the bag from time to time, all looking toward the complete destruction of state power and the centering of all control in Washington.

"I will, of course, fight this bill and all others of its kind."

Rome, Ga. News-Tribune
February 26, 1937

LYNCHING OF LAW ALSO BAD

IT IS interesting to observe that there are a score or more of "anti-lynch" bills hovering about the congress, all designed to create "greater respect for law in the South."

Meanwhile it is equally interesting to observe that not a single bill has been offered looking to greater respect for the law in those large portions of the nation outside of the South.

Not a single representative has arisen to suggest some means of ending the persistent lynching of the law in such states as Michigan, Ohio, and Illinois, where the law has been lynched to such a degree that few longer pay attention either to the law or the courts that seek to enforce it.

The South is making vigorous efforts to enforce the laws against lynching and is succeeding much better than are the officials in those states where contempt for the law has become commonplace, and the congress could proceed with much more fidelity toward the institution of law were it to look upon the matter as a national rather than a sectional problem.

Lynchings of individuals are horrible and are frowned upon with as much severity in the South as in the North, but the fact should be borne in mind that the worst lynching of all is when the law itself is lynched, as has become a daily occurance in the North.

Columbus, Ga. Enquirer-Sun
February 27, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL ATTACKED

Cox Challenges Constitutionality Of Pending Senate Measure

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26—(AP) Rep. Eugene E. Cox (D-Ga) issued a statement today challenging the constitutionality of the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill introduced in the senate yesterday.

The Camilla, Ga., congressman charged enactment of the measure would work the "complete destruction of all state power and the centering of absolute control in Washington."

He said the anti-lynching bill "is a proposal to substitute federal power for state laws in the punishment of crime, a peculiar function of the states heretofore. Indeed it is more. It proposes that the federal government shall compel the people of a county where a lynching takes place to pay the family of the victim up to $10,000, thus punishing the innocent for the acts of the guilty."

Savannah, Ga., Press
February 27, 1937

E. E. COX FIGHTING ANTI-LYNCH BILL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 27 (AP). Representative Eugene E. Cox (D., Ga.) was aligned against passage of the Wagner-Vany Nuys anti-lynching bill today after challenging the measure's constitutionality.

He described the bill as a "proposal to substitute federal power for state laws in the punishment of crime, a peculiar function of the states heretofore," in a statement issued yesterday.

The bill was introduced in the Senate Thursday.

Raleigh, N. C. Observer
February 22, 1937

ANTI-LYNCH LAW BATTLE BREWING

Northern and Western Groups Again Pressing Demand for Federal Legislation

Washington, Feb. 21.—(U.P.)—A coalition drive for early passage of a federal anti-lynching law tonight threatened to split the heavy Democratic majority in Congress along sectional lines over the issue of state rights.

Sponsors of more than 40 pending anti-lynch bills contend that federal intervention to punish local officers who fail to prevent mob violence is necessary to stamp out "mob murderers."

Senator Robert F. Wagner, D. N. Y., Representative Joseph P. Gavagan, D. N. Y., and numerous other Democrats from Northern states have joined with Republicans in a drive to override efforts of Southern Democratic leaders to block Congressional action.

Gavagan quietly introduced in the House last week a resolution to discharge the judiciary committee from consideration of his anti-lynching bill. The committee's refusal to act bars a House vote on the measure.

Would Force Vote.

Representative Hamilton Fish, R. N. Y., author of a similar bill, launched another drive to force action by submitting a petition which, if signed by two-thirds of the House membership, will call the bill out of committee for a House vote. He believes there is enough Democratic support to assure passage.

Senator Wagner prepared to introduce the anti-lynching legislatitor in the Senate and said "its passage at this session of Congress seems assured."

Wagner challenged "constitutional objections" that federal intervention would violate state rights. "Let those who raise these objections remember that our Constitution not only sets up distinct federal and state powers," he said, "but guarantees that all shall have the right to a fair trial and not be summarily put to death."

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, D. Tex., of the House judiciary committee said he is opposed to the federal anti-lynching laws "because I am opposed to lynching." He charged that "federal intrusion into a governmental problem of the states" would halt progress being made by the communities in stamping out mob violence.

Summers said local action had brought a gradual reduction in the number of lynchings from 226 in 1892 to nine last year. He charged that proposals to take away from the states exclusive responsibility for the problem which is being rapidly solved by them "are difficult to harmonize with an honest to goodness desire to have the offense of lynching disappear from this country."

Admits Improvement.

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, D. Ill., the only Negro member of Congress, asserted that "states fighting passage of a federal law are doing nothing themselves to stamp out lynching." He conceded that conditions are "gradually growing better," but said that federal action is necessary to eliminate the evil.

The only alternative, he said, is for all states to follow the example of Virginia which passed a law 10 years ago making lynching an offense against the state as a whole and empowering the governor to use all the state's resources in convicting guilty parties. Virginia has had no lynchings since the law went into effect.

Most of the pending anti-lynching bills are based on draft proposals submitted to all Congressmen by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has agitated the perennial fight for federal legislation.

Summers charged that the association's reports on the number of lynchings each year "are not dependable." He cited the Tuskegee Institute, famous Negro school in Alabama, as authority for his statement that only nine persons were lynched in 1936 in contrast to the association's report of 13.

The NAACP records list 25 lynchings in 1930; 14 in 1931; 10 in 1932; 16 in 1934; 26 in 1935 and 13 last year. One Alabama Negro has been lynched so far this year. Most of the victims were Negroes

It reported 133 lynchings since 1930. It listed these by states as: Alabama, 19; Arkansas, 3; California, 3; Florida, 11; Georgia, 20; Kansas, 1; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 10; Indiana, 2; Maryland, 2; Michigan, 3; Mississippi, 23; Missouri, 2; North Dakota, 1; North Carolina, 3; South Carolina, 6; Oklahoma, 2; Ohio, 1; Tennessee, 6; Texas, 11; West Virginia, 2.

The Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation, maintained by civic leaders of 13 Southern states, has advocated federal anti-lynching legislation in a resolution decrying that "in not one case in 10 is an effective effort made by the state or local authorities to identify and prosecute the members of lynching mobs."

The campaign for federal action has been waged in Congress unsuccessfully for more than 15 years. The House passed an anti-lynching bill in 1922, but it was killed in the Senate. Filibustering killed another effort for Senate action in 1935. The Democratic leadership beat down a strong move to bring a bill by Gavagan to a vote in the House last year.

Spartanburg, S. C. Journal
March 2, 1937

Smith to Fight Anti-Lynching Bill in Senate

Washington, March 2 (AP).—Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina, returning to the capital after a visit to the state, said he would oppose the anti-lynching bill now before congress "with all the power I have."

Smith aided in blocking consideration of similar proposed legislation during the last congress.

"Why can't they let well enough alone," he said in commenting on the measure to provide federal penalties to prevent lynchings..

"As I see it it is an attempt by outsiders to dictate to a distressed people what they should do about this situation," Smith said. "such a step would tend to increase lynchings rather than decrease them."

Gadsden, Ala., Times
February 25, 1937

LYNCHING OF LAW ALSO BAD

It is interesting to observe that there are a score or more of "anti-lynch" bills hovering about the Congress, all designed to create "greater respect for law in the South."

Meanwhile it is equally interesting to observe that not a single bill has been offered looking to greater respect for the law in those large portions of the nation outside of the South.

Not a single representative has arisen to suggest some means of ending the persistent lynching of the law in such states as Michigan, Ohio, and Illinois, where the law has been lynched to such a degree that few longer pay attention either to the law or the courts that seek to enforce it.

The South is making vigorous efforts to enforce the laws against lynching and is succeeding much better than are the officials in those states where contempt for the law has become commonplace, and the Congress could proceed with much more fidelity toward the institution of law were it to look upon the matter as a national rather than a sectional problem.

Lynchings of individuals are horrible and are frowned upon with as muc hseverity in the South as in the North, but the fact should be borne in mind that the worst lynching of all is when the law itself is lynched, as has become a daily occurence in the North.

Charlotte, N. C. Observer
April 6, 1937

Echoes From Press

THE TALK-DOWN STRIKE.

(From The Durham Herald).

The Charlotte Observer opines that another attempt is to be made to "ram" an anti-lynching bill through the congress and expresses the conviction and the hope that southern senators will head it off by a "talk-down strike." Then, in a challenging mood, The Observer dares all who like to undertake to disprove "the intelligent claim that if the laws of the states are ineffectual the laws of the Federal government against lynching will not become any more effectual."

Well, there is fresh congressional talk of an anti-lynching bill and maybe The Observer has cause to forecast that an attempt is going to be made to "ram" it through the congress. What constitutes "ramming" bills through legislative bodies is more than we are willing to say. The term is often used and we suppose it has measurable meaning. But usually the fellow who is on the losing side is one who does the defining and condemns the practice only when he is not with the "ramming" side.

As to the "talkdown strike," they are older in the senate than sit-down strikes are in American industrial centers and in our estimate as uncalled for, senseless and no less to be commended than sit-downs. Probabilities are, though, that The Observer will find plenty of southern senators ready to oblige with tongue and books, if and when the anti-lynching bill reaches the floor of "the most dignified body in the world."

On the point that laws of the states against lynching are as effectual as any anti-lynching law the Federal government can pass, proving the reverse is an assignment we decline. Fact is, it makes sense to say that a state law is as effective as a Federal law in a particular jurisdiction because the effectiveness of each depends on support the people give it. And it troubles us not a bit when southern, northern, eastern or western senators exercise their lungs in suppor of that proposition

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

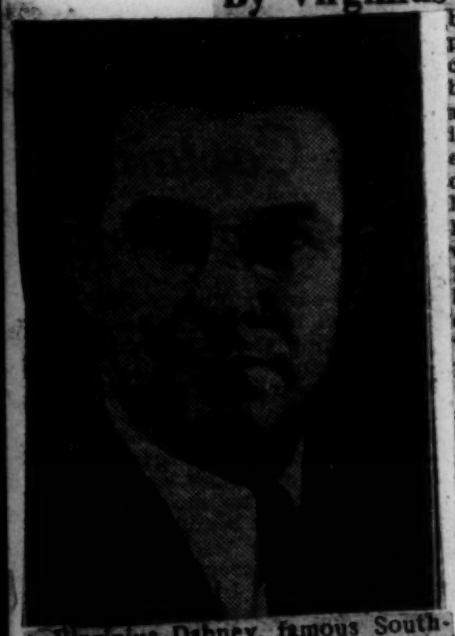
5684

Nashville, Tenn. Tennessean
February 21, 1937

THE SOUTH TODAY

The New Anti-Lynching Bill

By Virginius Dabney



Virginius Dabney, famous Southern editor, author and lecturer, and well-known to readers of this column, has, after serving two years as chief editorial writer on the Richmond Times Dispatch, recently been made editor of that paper.

EVER since 1922, when the Dyer anti-lynching bill passed the House of Representatives 230 to 119, and was then filibustered to death by a group of Southern senators, led by the late Oscar Underwood, agitation for legislation of this character has been more or less continuous. An anti-lynching bill sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has just been introduced in both branches of Congress. What are its provisions and is it likely to pass?

Apparently the likelihood that Congress will adopt an anti-lynching bill is greater now than ever before. The N. A. A. C. P. is putting on all the pressure it can command. It claims to have 261 members of the House and 62 members of the Senate already committed—a clear majority in each branch. The overwhelming preponderance enjoyed by the Democrats in Congress gives the members of the party from the North and West, where anti-lynching legislation is more favorably regarded, an immense numerical superiority over those from the South. In addition, many Republicans have always been inclined to favor a federal curb on lynching. Had it not been for a seven-day filibuster in the Senate in the spring of 1935, the Costigan-Wagner bill would almost certainly have been passed.

The bill just introduced, it should be noted, differs from the Costigan-Wagner bill in certain respects. It contains the following provisions:

Any officer who fails to make diligent efforts to protect a prisoner with the result that the prisoner is lynched, or who fails to make diligent efforts to apprehend the members of the mob, shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $5,000 or a prison term of not more than five years, or both.

Whenever a lynching occurs, and information on oath is submitted to the attorney-general of the United States that any officer charged with the duty of protecting the victim has neglected to make diligent efforts to do so, or to apprehend the members of the mob after the lynching, the attorney-general "shall cause an investigation to be made to determine whether there has been any violation of this act." If he finds that a violation has occurred, proceedings will be instituted against the officer or officers in the United States District Court. There is no provision for federal prosecution of members of the mob.

A governmental subdivision shall be responsible, under the bill, for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdicton, and also for any lynchng outside that jurisdiction, if the victim was seized within the jurisdiction. Such a subdivision is subject to a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000, unless it can show that proper diligence was used to protect the prisoner.

✦ ✦ ✦

SUIT for pecuniary damages under the act may be instituted in the United States District Court, and shall be brought by the attorney-general of the United States, or, if the claimant or claimants elect, by counsel employed by them. The next of kin of the person lynched is paid such damages as are awarded.

What are the principal objections to such a bill? In the first place, many regard it as unconstitutional. Conspicuous among the non-Southerners who are firmly convinced that it is in direct conflict with the organic law is Senator Borah, who has stated many times that it would annihilate the sovereignty of the state.

Another leading objection is that the enactment of the bill might mean a pronounced augmentation of interracial bitterness. The class of whites mainly responsible for lynching would resent the entry of the federal authorities into the field, and this resentment might find expression in more, instead of fewer, outbreaks of mob violence against the negroes.

It is also contended that the bill is a reflection on the South, and that it would interfere with the South's "protection of its womanhood." Senator Smith of South Carolina, in discussing the Costigan-Wagner bill in 1935, spoke of the "very humiliating necessity of going outside the laws at times to vindicate the sanctity of our fireside and the virtue of our women."

Some argue, too, that it is not likely the federal courts would be appreciably more effective in securing convictions than the state courts have been. Such critics point out that although a federal court could sit a good many miles away from the scene of the lynching sentiment among the whites there might not be greatly different from that which prevailed in the immediate vicinity of the crime. Opponents of the proposed legislation also cite the indisputable fact that although the horrible and ghastly lynching of Claude Neal in 1934 was an interstate crime, in that Neal was taken from an Alabama jail and lynched in Florida, the federal government took no action.

So much for the arguments against the bill. Whereas there are competent lawyers who question its constitutionality, others regard it as constitutional. Among these may be mentioned Charles H. Tuttle, who filed a brief on behalf of the Costigan-Wagner measure when it was up for passage in 1935, and Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn of the Columbia University law school. Mr. Tuttle contends that "nothing in our national constitution prevents our national government from undertaking such an act of self-preservation, and from protecting itself against the consequences of the breakdown of due process of law through state inaction and of wholesale discrimination in the effective protection of the laws, through the tyrannies of "mob rule." He cites the section of the constitution which says that the United States shall guarantee to every state "a republican form of government," as well as the fourteenth amendment, which provides that no state shall deprive any person of "life, liberty or property without due process of law." He likewise directs attention to the section of the same amendment which endows Congress with the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

✦ ✦ ✦

IT IS ALSO argued on behalf of the bill that the states have had decades in which to put a stop to lynchings, with few clearly discernible results. The reduction effected since 1920 is substantial, but for the past ten years the number of mob murders committed annually has remained approximately the same. It seems obvious that as long as the present method of handling lynchers—or of not handling them—is unchanged, lynchings will continue. Lynchers have been punished for only three of the eighty-four lynchings which took place from 1931 to 1935, inclusive, and the penalties in those three cases were right.

We have had such fiendish performances as the burning alive of Henry Lowry at Nodena, Ark., in 1921, and the savage and unprintable tortures of Claude Neal, who was put to death near Greenwood, Fla., in 1934, both lynchings having been announced in advance by the newspapers. Word of the Neal lynching was broadcast by radio and in the press fourteen to fifteen hours before it occurred, and a crowd of from 4,000 to 7,000 white persons from several states, including many children, gathered to witness the negro's prolonged agony. No one was punished.

Advocates of a federal anti-lynching bill see in such a measure the only hope of putting a stop to such barbarities. To the argument that lynchings are necessary to protect Southern womanhood, they retort that fewer than one-fourth of the persons lynched since 1890 have even been accused of assaults upon white women.

As a matter of fact, various groups of prominent Southern women have declared emphatically that they do not regard lynching as a defense of womanhood, but rather as a blot on Southern civilization. These include the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching and the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Methodist body endorsed the Costigan-Wagner bill at its annual session in 1934, but the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching opposed the measure. The commission of Interracial Cooperation, headed by Dr. W. W. Alexander, with headquarters in Atlanta, was skeptical for years concerning the value of federal intervention in lynchings, but in 1935 it voted unanimously in favor of a federal anti-lynching law. The Costigan-Wagner bill was indorsed by executive bodies of the Young Women's Christian Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Federal Council of Churches, the Protestant Episcopal, Congregational and Christian Churches, and the American Federation of Labor, as well as by other organizations.

It seems probable, in view of this widespread support, that the anti-lynching bill just introduced will pass. If so, its passage will be due primarily to the falure of most Southern states to stamp out the hideous crime which has disgraced them before the world.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle
March 2, 1937

SEN. SMITH OPPOSES ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Washington, March 1 (AP)—Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina, returning to the capital after a visit to the state, said today he would oppose the anti-lynching bill now before congress "with all the power I have."

Smith aided in blocking consideration of similar proposed legislation during the last congress.

"Why can't they let well enough alone," he said in commenting on the measure to provide federal penalties to prevent lynchings.

"As I see it is an attempt by outsiders to dictate to a distressed people what they should do about this situation," Smith said. "Such a step would tend to increase lynchings rather than decrease them."

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
March 4, 1937

When Mr Roosevelt Speaks

IT is to be hoped that when President Roosevelt makes his "fireside-talk" on March 9 he will give the fullest possible light upon the probable attitude of an enlarged Supreme Court on such issues as the vicious anti-lynching bills now pending in Congress, and the permanence of the South's laws out of which white supremacy has come.

An anti-lynching bill is practically certain to be adopted at the present session, in spite of the fact that its constitutionality is questioned by many representatives. Congressman Eugene Cox, of Georgia, is one among the many who hold that such a law would be declared unconstitutional by the present Supreme Court.

What would be the attitude of an enlarged Supreme Court, created for the specific purpose of validating congressional acts? This is a matter of tremendous importance to the South, because pending anti-lynching bills would not only give the federal government supreme authority in such matters but would place heavy financial penalties upon counties in which lynchings might occur. Thus if a small mob in this county should at any time commit an act of this nature, the whole citizenship of the county could be penalized as much as ten thousand dollars. Thus the innocent would be made to suffer along with the guilty.

These anti-lynching bills are in fact direct efforts to bring about a renewal of some such conditions as were witnessed in the South during the days of reconstruction when natives had no control of their government while carpetbaggers took charge. They constitute further attempts to crucify states' rights in the South in order to please negro voters who hold the balance of power in certain Northern and Mid-West states.

Would Mr. Roosevelt's enlarged court approve of such invasions of states' rights in the South? Many Southerners would like to have from Mr. Roosevelt some assurances upon this point.

Of even greater importance to the South is the question of the permanency of the laws which have been adopted, and which have been sustained by the present Supreme Court, under which white supremacy is maintained in the South.

These laws, made necessary by the terrible conditions that existed during reconstruction days, have been repeatedly attacked and undoubtedly the attacks will be renewed by the Association for the Advancement of the Colored Race should the Supreme Court be enlarged in the manner suggested.

The South would like to have some assurances from Mr. Roosevelt that his enlarged Supreme Court would not break down the barriers that have been erected with so much toil and the destruction of which would bring about a condition of utter chaos.

Again, if Mr. Roosevelt can assure the South that he will protect it in these matters, what assurance can he give that the South will be protected under succeeding administrations?

Clifton Forge, Va., Review
March 1, 1937

AN ANTI-LYNCHING MOVE.

Senators Wagner, of New York, and Van Nuys, of Indiana, have introduced a bill in the United States Senate, their object being to prevent lynchings in this country, and their hope is that the measure they are sponsoring will soon be enacted into law. If our memory is not at fault, and we do not believe that it is, there were less than a dozen persons lynched last year, a very small number, all things considered, and just why the two gentlemen named should be aroused over this limited number of deaths and as silent as the tomb when it comes to the thirty-six thousand who met their deaths on the highways in first one way and then another in the forty-eight States is something we cannot understand. In presenting the bill to put an end to the mob spirit, presumably aimed at the South, the two Senators made it quite plain that they are only concerned in bringing about a reform they regard as absolutely necessary. But granting that they are in dead earnest in their efforts to save human life, we are curious to know why they should become so upset over a lynching here and there and manifest no interest in the highway fatalities. It is within the power of Congress to bring about a change for the better in the matter of the thousands of fatal accidents on the public thoroughfares, but until this good hour nothing has been said or done to put an end to the annual slaughter.

If the New Yorker and the gentleman from the Hoosier State were in real earnest they would not quibble over the few lynchings that have been recorded in the forty-eight States in recent years, but would devote their best energies to solving the greater problem relating to the larger number of deaths that are taking place with no one making a move to remedy the situation. It is not always pleasant to impugn the motives of anybody, but it is dollars to doughnuts that if the occasional outbreaks which result in mob rule were confined to the North and West and not the South, Messrs. Wagner and Van Nuys would have been slow to introduce any measure bearing on this particular subject. For this reason we do not believe they are in the least sincere and therefore are not entitld to the consideration that would be extended them if they were really at work on a bill designed to benefit a larger number of people. Although not in sympathy with the mob spirit and openly opposed to Lynchings, this newspaper cannot see its way clear to endorse the move made by Senators Wagner and Van Nuys. And the reason is that they are straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. If these gentlemen desire to save human life let them secure the passage of a law that will reduce the accidents on the highways by requiring the manufacturers of automobiles and trucks to so gear these machines as to reduce their speed. For the Senators named to get all "het up" over a few lynchings and remain silent on the thirty-six thousand fatal tragedies on the highways of the United States leads to believe that they are playing to the galleries and are by no means in earnest.

The mob spirit is for those who best way to eliminate what is known as the mob spirit is for those who are the victims to quit their meanness. Fiends cannot run at large and commit all manner of crimes without being called to account and until this lawless element decides to reform the country at large cannot hope for the relief now being sought through some Federal law. And lastly, permit us to say that a law on this subject by the national government will not have any more effect than those statutes that are to be found in the various States, the two Senators named to the contrary notwithstanding. It is absurd on its face to think of two men of prominence in the Senate working themselves into a frenzy over the few deaths via the lynching route with not a word of condemnation anent the deaths by automobiles which in a large measure are due to violating the laws of the States in which they take place.

Hendersonville, N. C. Times
April 2, 1937

NEGRO OFFERS LESS DRASTIC LYNCHING BILL

Measure by Mitchell of Illinois More Moderate Than Govan's

WASHINGTON, April 2. (UP)—The house judiciary committee late yesterday voted 8 to 7 to report favorably an anti-lynching bill sponsored by Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, D., Ill., the only negro congressman.

The measure carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine for any state, city or county officer who shall "suffer and permit" a prisoner to be taken from his custody and "injured or put to death."

It is expected to supercede a more drastic bill sponsored by Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan, D. N. Y., which is scheduled for house debate April 12. This measure will be brought up through a vote-forcing petition.

The committee struck out of the Mitchell bill provisions which would have made proof of a lynching prima-facie evidence that the officer charged with custody of the prisoner permitted it to occur. The amended measure calls for punishment of local officers only when they give up their prisoners to mobs "without lawful justification or excuse."

It also provides that the county whose officers are blamed for a lynching shall be liable for a maximum of $10,000 damages to the victim's family.

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, D., Tex., of the judiciary committee, who personally opposes any federal intervention in the lynching problem, indicated the Mitchell bill would be brought up early next week.

Democratic leaders have attempted to sidetrack the controversial issue but were forced to action by majority support of the Gavagan bill petition. Mitchell is confident his measure will pass the house, but senate action this session is doubtful.

The judiciary committee's vote yesterday was the first favorable action on anti-lynching legislation since 1922. Filibusters have prevented senate action during the long fight.

Lynchings- 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5690

Alexandria, La. Town Talk Daily
March 13, 1937

At It Again

Two Democratic senators, Wagner of New York and Van Nuys of Indiana, have introduced a new federal anti-lynching bill in Congress. It is patterned after a measure in which the New Yorker was interested during the last Congress; that bill, sponsored by Wagner and Senator Costigan of Colorado, was blocked by opponents, largely from the South. The present bill should be defeated for many reasons: Primarily, it is intended to be sectional, which should be sufficient to beat it; beyond that, however, it is unworkable, it is useless and it is a direct assault upon states' rights, therefore unconstitutional.

The main features of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill, as in others introduced from time to time by congressmen seeking to curry favor with negro voters of Northern states, are: Punishment by federal law of any legal officer whose negligence leads to the lynching of a prisoner entrusted to his custody; a penalty of from $2,000 to $10,000, levied against any local subdivision of government which fails to protect and give fair trial to persons accused of crime. Such a law is useless because the states are able to do just as much to prevent lynchings as is the federal government. It is not workable, for the reason that the same citizens sit on federal juries as on state court juries and will render the same sort of verdict in one court as the other. Senator William E. Borah of Idaho is opposed to such legislation because it is violative of the constitution—and his opinion upon such a point will be accepted by Southerners as final.

Sponsors of the pending anti-lynching bill say it is not an assault upon states' rights, but that "it is an attack only upon mob rule." They know better. But they are counting upon the presence in Congress of a great many more Northern Democrats than ever before and hoping to use effectively the argument that many of them were elected with the aid of negro votes last November. The seventy-fifth Congress has many measures of real importance now pending—problems calling for the best thought and the most painstaking attention. It should not be asked to devote a lot of valuable time to such legislation as Messrs. Wagner and Van Nuys are trying to have passed. It is a time, though, when every Southern Democrat and every believer in states' rights should be alert to the peril the measure contains and be prepared to take whatever action may be required to keep the bill from getting to the Senate floor for argument and vote.—Shreveport Journal.

Sixteen More Needed

Source 4-5-37 Pittsburgh

Sixteen more signatures of Congressmen are needed to the Gavagan petition No. 5, in order to make the anti-lynching bill a special order of business and bring it out on the floor for limited debate and vote. Two hundred and eighteen signatures are required; 202 have been obtained.

Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, fanatical opponent of anti-lynching legislation, seeks to block the petition. We regret to hear that the only Negro member in Congress has seen fit to aid Congressman Sumners' efforts.

The 202 signatures already obtained represent hard work on the part of the N.A.A.C.P. lobbyists and fine co-operation on the part of public spirited individuals and organizations, aided by numerous white people of the same character. It is a fine example of interracial co-operation for the benefit of American civilization.

Illinois Solon's Measure Rejected By House Group

Daily Times 4-3-37
Augusta, Ga.

Representative Gavagan's Proposed Legislation To Be Presented This Monday; Has N.A.A.C.P. Support

WASHINGTON—(SNS)— An anti-lynching bill introduced by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, Democrat, of Illinois, was refused consideration by the U. S. House of Representatives Wednesday. Pressure had been brought to bear against its consideration from all portions of the nation, Atlantans figuring in the countless number of protests sent to representatives in the nation's capital.

Opponents of the Mitchell-sponsored measure joined with supporters of a bill offered by Representative Gavagan (Democrat, New York). The Gavagan measure is scheduled to come up for consideration Monday.

The defeat of the Mitchell measure came about after Representative Gavagan forced a quorum call before debate was scheduled to open on the Illinois solon's bill. The New York democrat, in forcing the call, said that Mitchell's measure was without "teeth." This was the same contention of the NAACP in asking organizations and individual throughout the country to ask opposition to the Mitchell measure.

Both the Mitchell and Gavagan measures would make a county liable for damages in event of a lynching, payable to the victim's family.

Southern members of the house oppose federal anti-lynching laws as an unnecessary invasion of states' rights.

WORTHY OF RESPONSIBILITY

Always a distinct pleasure to chronicle the aversion of threatened lynchings—the experience becomes all the more pleasing at a time when federal anti-lynching legislation is in the very process of receiving congressional attention. 4-3-37

Honors in the present instance go to a couple of our own North Carolina sheriffs. At Marion, Sheriff Grady Nichols—to quote an Associated Press dispatch, "spirited a negro youth out of the county [McDowell] early today after a crowd surrounded the jail here where the boy was held on a charge of ravishing a 12-years-old white girl." On the very same day came this dispatch from Laurinburg: "Scotland county's record of never having the discredit of the lynching of a negro was saved by sheriff's officers last night near Laurel Hill when a mob of negroes sought to catch and lynch a member of their own race for the rape of a negro girl." News 4-3-37

It has generally appeared that official indifference or neglect, if not downright connivance, has a prominent, and perhaps the leading, part in lynchings as they are motivated and perpetrated in the southern states. Officers know the type of crime which causes practically all lynchings; and it is an open invitation to the spirit of mobbery and its manifestation not to take every precaution, the safest being removal of the prisoner to a more distant and perhaps more impregnable jail, when the type of offender upon whom such visitation of fury is calculated to fall is apprehended. It becomes doubly indefensible when an officer makes public pronouncement not only of the capture but frequently of the prisoner's confession.

On the one side, it is true, these instances where lynchings are averted accentuate the indictment of officialdom, with its political rooting and acquiescence in the mob, if popular, spirit, and argue for a federal mandate which will force local authorities to meet their sworn responsibility or have Uncle Sam take it out of their hides.

The aversions, North Carolina's two of the immediate present, show what can be done when there is official will and intelligence. A meeting of responsibility is infinitely more effective for the retention of state's rights than are all the oratorical outcries which of themselves make the issue but a shibboleth.

Anti-Lynching Bill Assailed as Illegal

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(AP)—Representative John E. McClellan, of Malvern, Ark., said today no one had "seriously contended" the Gavagan anti-lynching bill was constitutional and "it is not expected that any impartial court will hold it to be."

He described the measure, passed by the House yesterday as one "to heap scorn and derision on one part of the country to pleasure and elation of another section." He said it was designed to gain negro political support but that proponents paraded "under the guise of wanting to blot out crime."

He predicted the law would neither stop lynchings nor promote law enforcement.

ACT IS AIMED TO HIT DIXIE, COX DECLARES

Counties in Which Mob Violence Occurs Would Be Fined Under Measure

LAW OFFICERS PENALIZED

Senator Borah Gives Notice of Stern Fight on Plan in Upper Branch

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP)—The house overrode bristling Southern opposition tonight to pass the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. It would authorize the federal government to intervene in mob crimes to punish participants and negligent officers.

After more than six hours' hectic debate, it voted 277 to 119 to approve the measure and sent it to the senate where, sponsors agreed, it faced sterner opposition.

Even as the house voted, Senator Borah (R., Idaho), issued a statement condemning what he called an "effort to force through congress an unjust, unconstitutional, and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

In general Republicans joined with Northern Democrats in supporting the bill.

Provisions of Bill Given

The measure, the first of its kind to pass either house since 1922, would subject an officer who permitted a prisoner to be taken from his custody and injured or put to death to a fine ranging up to $5,000 and to as much as five years in prison.

Likewise, participants would be subject to from five to 25 years imprisonment.

Asserting the bill was aimed at the South, opponents from that section sought in vain to strike from the bill porvisions that would subject counties in which a prisoner was seized or put to death to damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000. The money would go to a victim's family.

The opponents succeeded once in deleting the sections, only to be reversed by a 232 to 139 move just before the measure passed.

Sumners Warns House

Describing these provisions as the "heart of the bill," its author, Representative Gavagan (D., N. Y.) who represents a New York city district with a large Negro population, told the house the measure would not be "worth the paper it's written on" without them.

Denying the legislation's constitutionality, as did Senator Borah, Chairman Sumners (D., Tex.) of the house judiciary committee, warned colleagues:

"This bill would give the federal government power to prosecute a governor if he did not call out the militia in case of a lynching."

Flushing with emotion, he demanded of sponsors:

"Why don't you let us in the south alone and give us a chance to show what we can do about this situation." He then cited figures to show that lynchings had declined 5,000 per cent since the peak in 1892.

Cox Accuses Colleagues

One of the few Republicans opposing the bill, Representative Hoffman, of Michigan, asserted its ob-

Democrats Voting Yes

Here is the vote by which the house passed the Gavagan anti-lynching bill tonight:

Democrats for:

Aleshire, Ohio; Allen, Pa.; Allen, Del.; Anderson, Mo.; Arnold, Ill.; Ashbrook, Ohio; Barry, N. Y.; Beam, Ill.; Beiter, N .Y.; Bigelow, Ohio; Bloom, N .Y.; Boehne, Ind.; Boland, Pa.; Boren, Okla.; Boyer, Ill.; Boyland, N. Y.; Bradley, Pa.; Buck, Cal.; Byrne, N. Y. Casey, Mass.; Celler ,N. Y.; Champion, Ill.; Criton, Conn.; Claypool, Ohio; Cochran, Mo.; Coffee, Wash.; Golden, Cal.; Cole, Mo.; Connery, Mass.; Costello, Cal.; Creal, Ky.; Crosby, Pa.; rosser, Ohio; Crowe, Ind.; Culen, N. Y.; Curley, N. Y.; Daly, Pa.; Delaney, N. Y.; Dempsey, N. M.; Demuth, Pa.; Dickstein, N. Y.; Dingell, Mich.; Dixon, Ohio; Dockweiler, Cal.; Dorsye, Pa.; Drew, Pa.; Dunn, Pa.; Eberharter, Pa.; Ecker, Pa.; Edmiston, W. Va.; Eicher, Iowa; Ellenbogen, Pa.; Evans, N. Y.; Faddis, Pa.; Farley, Ind.; Fitzgerald, Conn.; Fitzpatrick, N. Y.; Flannery, Pa.; Fieger, Ohio; Fletcher, Ohio; Forand, R. I. Ford, Cal.; Frey, Pa.; Fries, Ill.; Gambrill, Md.; Gavagan, N. Y.; Gildea, Pa.; Gingery, Pa.; Goldsborough, Md.; Gray, Ind.; Gray, Pa.; Greever, Wyo.; Griswold, Ind.; Haines, Pa.; Harlan, Ohio; Harrington, Iowa; Hart, N. J.; Healey, Mass.; Hennings, Mo.; Higgins, Mass.; Hildebrandt, S. D.; Hill, Wash.; Hill, Okla. Honeyman, Oregon; Houston, Kan.; Hunter, Ohio; Imhoff, Ohio; Izac, Cal.; Jacobsen, Iowa; Jenckes, Ind.; Johnson, W. Va.; Johnson, Okla.; Kee, W. Va.; Keller, Ill.; Kelly, Ill.; Kelly, N. Y. Kennedy, Mo.; Kennedy, N. Y.; Kenney, N. J.; Koegh, N. Y.; Kirvan, Ohio; Kloeb, Ohio; Kniffin, Ohio; Kocialkowski, Ill.; Kopplemann, Conn.; Kramer, Cal.

Lamneck, Ohio; Lazetta, N. Y.; Larrabee, Ind.; Lea, Calif.; Lesinski, Mich.; Lewis, Md.; Long, Ill.; Lucas, Ill.; Luckey, Neb.; Ludlow, Ind.; Luecke, Mich.; McAndrews, Ill.; McCormack, Mass.; McGranery, Pa.; McGrath, Calif.; McKeough, Ill.; McLaughlin, Neb.; Magnuson, Wash.; Martin, Colo.; Maverick, Texas; Mead, N. Y.; Meeks, Ill.; Merritt, N. Y.; Mitchell, Ill.; Mosier, Ohio; Nichols, Okla.; Norton, N. J.; O'Brien, Mich.; O'Brien, Ill.; O'Connell, Mont.; O'Connell, R. I.; O'Connor, Mont.; O'Connor, N. Y.; O'Day, N. Y.; O'Leary, N. Y.; O'Malley, Wis.; O'Neal, N. J.; O'Toole, N. Y.; Palmisano, Md.; Patterson, Kan.; Pettengill, Ind.; Peyser, N. Y.; Pfeiffer, N. Y.; Phillips, Conn.; Polk, Ohio; Quinn, Pa.; Rabaut, Mich.; Ramsay, W. V.; Randolph, W. Va.; Reilly, Wis.; Rigney, Ill.; Robinson, Utah; Ryan, Minn.; Sabath, Ill.; Sacks, Pa.; Sadowski, Mich.; Schaefer, Ill.; Schulte, Ind.; Scott, Calif.; Secrest, Ohio; Shanley, Conn.; Shannon, Mo.; Sirovich, N. Y.; Smith, Conn.; Smith, W. Va.; Smith, Wash.; Snyder, Pa.; Somers, N. Y.; Stack, Pa.; Sullivan, N. Y.; Sutphin, N. J.; Sweeney, Ohio; Swope, Ohio; Thom, Ohio; Thompson, Ill.; Tobin, Calif.; Towey, N. J.; Transue, Mich.; Voorhis, Calif.; Wallgren, Wash.; Walter, Pa.; Wearin, Iowa; Wene, N. J.

Total Democrats for 189.

Republicans Voting Yes

Republicans for:

Allen, Ill.; Andresen, Minn.; Arends, Ill.; Bates, Mass.; Brewster, Me.; Burdick, N. D.; Carlson, Kan.; Case, S. D.; Church, Ill.; Clason, Mass.; Cluett, N. Y.; Crawford, Mich.; Crowther, N. Y.; Culkin, N. Y.; Dirksen, Ill.; Ditter, Pa.; Dondero, Mich.; Douglas, N. Y.; Dowell, Ia.; Engel, Mich.; Englebright, Cal.; Gifford, Mass.; Guyer, Kan. Gwynne, Ia.; Halleck, Ind.; Hancock, N. Y.; Hartley, N. J.; Hope, Kan.; Jarrett, Pa.; Jenkins, O. Jenks, N. H.; Kinzer, Pa.; Lambertson, Kan.; Lemke, N. D.; Lord, N. Y.; Luce, Mass.; McLean, N. J.; Maas, Minn.; Mapes, Mich.; Martin, Mass.; Mason, Ill.; Michener, Mich. Millard, N. Y.; Mott, Ore.; Oliver, Me.; Plumley, Vt.; Powers, N. J.; Reece, Tenn.; Reed, Ill.; Reed, N. Y.; Rees, Kan.; Rich, Pa.; Robison, Ky.; Rogers, Mass.; Rutherford, Pa.; Seger, N. J.; Shafer, Mich.; Short, Mo.; Smith, Me.; Snell, N. Y.; Stafen, Neb.; Taber, N. Y.; Taylor, Tenn.; Thomas, N. J.; Thurston, Ia.; Tinkham, Mass.; Tobey, N. H. Treadway, Mass.; Welch, Cal. White, O.; Wigglesworth, Mass. Wolcott, Mich.; Wolfenden, Pa. Wolverton, N. J.; Woodruff, Mich.

Total Republicans for 75.

Others Voting Yes

Progressives for:

Amlie, Bolleau, Gehrmann, Hull Sauthoff, Schneider, Withrow, all of Wisconsin; Havenner, Cal.

Total Progressives for 8.

Farmer-Laborites for:

Bernard, Buckler, Johnson, Kvale Teigan, all from Minnesota.

Total Farmer-Laborites for 5.

Total for 277.

ject was to give the "Democratic party in New York more Negro votes."

Voicing similar views, Rep. Rankin, (D., Miss.) shouted at Gavagan:

"You want to make Harlem safe for Tammany."

Rep. Cox (D., Ga.) bitterly accused northern Democrats of turning against the South.

"For more than 100 years the South has kept the Democratic party alive. Now that it has grown fat and powerful, it proposes to turn upon the South and deal it this wicked blow."

Democrats Voting No.

Democrats against:

Allen, La.; Atkinson, Tenn.; Bankhead, Ala.; Barden, N. C.; Bierman, Ia.; Bland, Va.; Brooks, La.; Brown, Ga.; Bulwinkle, N. C.; Burch, Va.; Caldwell, Fla.; Cannon, Mo.; Cartwright, Okla.; Chandler, Tenn; Chapman, Ky.; Clark, N. C.; Coffee, Neb.; Collins, Miss.; Colmer, Miss.; Cooley, N. C.; Cooper, Tenn.; Cox, Ga.; Cravens, Ark.; Deen, Ga.; DeRouen, La.; Dies, Tex.; Disney, Okla.; Doughton, N. C.; Doxey, Miss.; Drewry, Va.; Driver, Ark.; Duncan, Mo.; Fernandez, La.; Ford, Miss; Fuller, Ark.; Fulmer, S. C.; Garrett, Tex.; Gasque, S. C.; Green, Fla.; Hill, Ala.; Hook, Mich,; Jarman, Ala.; Johnson, Tex.; Jones, Tex.; Kerr, N. C.; Kitchens, Ark.; Kleberg, Tex.; Lamberth, N. C.; Lanham, Tex.; Leavy, Wash.; Lewis, Colo.; McClellan, Ark.; McFarlane, Tex.; McGroarty, Cal.; McMillan, S. C.; McReynolds, Tenn.; Mahon, S. C.; Maloney, La.; Mansfield, Tex.; Massingale, Okla.; May, Ky.; Miller, Ark.; Mills, La.; Mitchell, Tenn; Moser, Pa.; Murdock, Utah; Murdock, Ariz.; Nelson, Mo.; O'Neal, Ky.; Owen, Ga.; Pace, Ga.; Patman, Tex.; Patton, Tex.; Pearson, Tenn.; Peterson, Ga.; Peterson, Fla.; Poage, Tex.; Ramspeck, Ga.; Rankin, Miss.; Rayburn, Tex.; Richards, S. C.; Robertson, Va.; Rogers, Okla.; Romjue, Mo.; Sanders, Tex.; Smith, Va.; South, Tex.; Sparkman, Ala.; Spence, Ky.; Steagell, Ala; Sumners, Tex.; Tarver, Ga.; Taylor, S. C.; Terry, Ark.; Thomas, Tex.; Thomaston, Tex.; Turner, Tenn.; Umstead, N. C.; Vincent, Ky.; Vinson, Ga.; Warren, N. C.; Weaver, N. C.; West, Tex.; Whelchel, Ga.; White, Idaho; Whittington, Miss.; Wilcox, Fla.; Williams, Mo.; Woodrum, Va.; Zimmerman, Mo.

Total Democrats against 116.

Republicans VotingNo

Republicans against:

Cole, N. Y.; Hoffman, Mich.; Knutson, Minn.

Total Republicans against 3.

Total against 119.

Paired:

Gilchrist (R., Ia.) for, Starnes (D., Ala.) against; Eaton (R., N. J.) for, Hobbs (D.,Ala.) against; Binderup (D., Neb.) for; Pierce (D., Ore.) against; Parsons (D., Ill.) for, Hancock (D., N. C.) against; Bacon (R., N. Y.) for, Mouton (D., La) against; Sheppard (D., Calif) for, McGehee (D., Miss.)against; Holmes (R., Mass.) for, Boykin (D., Ala.) against; Harter (D., O.) for, Flanagan (D., Va.) against; Schuetz (D., Oil.)for, Andrews (R., N. Y.) against; Fish (R., N. Y.) for, Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) against.

Total paired 20.

Democrats for 189.

Republicans for 75.

Progressives for 8.

Farmer-Laborites for 5.

Total for 277.

Democrats against 116.

Republicans against 3.

Total against 118.

Paired 20.

Vacancies 4.

Not voting 15.

Total house membership 435.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5691

Negro Group Fighting Anti-Lynching Bil

NEW YORK, April 4.—(AP)—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today sent telegrams to congressional leaders warning them that efforts to bring the Mitchell anti-lynching bill to a vote April 7 will "be bitterly resented by supporters of effective anti-lynching legislation."

The Association described the bill as "emasculated, ineffective and virtually worthless" and characterized the action of the House judiciary committee in approving it April 1 as "an April fool's day trick."

The leaders were urged to insist on bringing up the Gavagan anti-lynching bill for debate on April 12 as provided by a discharge petition signed by 218 representatives.

Washington, D. C. Post
April 4, 1937

Anti-Lynching Legislation.

Signatures of 216 Congressmen on a discharge petition sufficed to stir the House Judiciary committee to a favorable report on the Mitchell anti-lynching bill. Notwithstanding the popularity of the petition, however, the committee vote was only 8 to 7. Obviously the proposed legislation, like its predecessors in this field, confronts hard sledding.

The Mitchell bill, as reported to the House, make it a Federal offense for an officer to surrender a prisoner to a mob. It would also provide damages, payable by the county involved, to the family of the victim. Deleted from the bill was a provision making a lynching prima facie evidence of criminal negligence on the part of the local authorities. In this and other respects, the bill differs from earlier bills, the constitutionality of which has been subject to doubt. In spirit, however, the Mitchell bill follows closely the many which have been introduced at every session of Congress since the war. Only one of these, Dyer bill of 1922, ever passed the House; Southern Senators disposed of it in the Senate.

The lower chamber has always been the more sympathetic toward anti-lynching proposals. The Senate, with its rules encouraging filibusters is commonly considered the chief obstacle in their path. Thus the Wagner-Van Nuys bill today lies pigeon holed in the Senate Judiciary committee. Like the Mitchell bill, it is designed to avoid the constitutional criticisms which have proven the downfall of earlier measures. Most recent of these was the Costigan-Wagner bill which was reported favorably in the Senate three years ago but which, despite support from President Roosevelt, failed to reach a vote. The next year a motion to take up the bill again was defeated after a week's filibuster.

Supporters of anti-lynching legislation point out that if a governmental unit fails to protect a person from mob violence, or properly to prosecute his assailants, that person has clearly been denied the most fundamental of his constitutional rights. On the other hand it is argued that lynchings already go unpunished in spite of State laws and that if jurors in a State court will not agree to convict it is unlikely that jurors in a Federal court in the same locality would vote otherwise. A more cogent objection is that the worst evils of the reconstruction period might be revived by the precedent of a law encouraging Federal penalization of local communities.

The counter-argument is that enlightened public sentiment, notably in the South, demands Federal intervention as the only solution for an atrocious evil. This is not altogether convincing, however. Wherever public opinion is outraged by lynchings, it can and does insist that existing State laws be enforced. Undoubtedly rising public indignation was a powerful influence in reducing last year's lynchings to 9, as against 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934. The current Congressional debate, whatever its outcome, will be time well spent if it hastens the complete abolition of what can only be regarded as a national disgrace.

Burlington, N. C. Times
April 2, 1937

OPPOSES ANTI-LYNCHING LAW

IT IS DISTRESSING to see a paper of the prestige and influence in the South of the Charlotte Observer taking a stand of applause for the Southern senators who, year by year, succeed in filibustering to death anti-lynching measures.

Taking its customary stand in favor of State's rights as opposed to further centralization of legal power in the hands of the Federal government, the Observer says in support of Senators Smith, Bailey and others who never vary from an anti-anti-lynching stand: "The South would expect them to stand their ground upon the intelligent claim that if the laws of the States against lynching are ineffectual, the laws of the Federal government against lynching will not become any more effectual."

We hate to say it, but this strikes us as pure sophistry. The laws of the various States are pretty emphatic on robbery and murder, but until the entry of the G-man on the scene, a nose-thumbing and hideous gangsterism was rife in Chicago, New York, Kansas City and other metropolitan areas. Most States have laws against kidnaping, but no one filibustered the Lindbergh kidnap measure to death because it was a "violation" of State's rights. Then again, the Federal Mann act has succeeded where the separate States failed.

The Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching law, which was defeated in the session of Congress before the present one, proposed to fine any county in which a lynching occurred $10,000, the money to go to the family of the victim. It proposed also energetic investigation of the circumstances of the lynching, and mandatory removal and punishment of officers who are proved to have been at fault, either through intimidation or cooperation, in the lynching.

It is perhaps harsh and in some respects unfair to exact a $10,000 toll from a county because of the weakness or cowardice of its law enforcement officers—but what has been done to the victim of mad mob action is even more harsh and unfair. Money is inadequate restitution for the still living victims of the lynching: the victim's survivors; but it is better than nothing.

Lynching will not stop until each State has explicit laws against it, phrased as severely and making action as mandatory as the Federal proposals which invariably are defeated. And can any Southerner, familiar with the sociological concept of the average Georgia or Alabama or Mississippi legislator, see these States enacting anti-lynching laws with teeth in it? Don't make us laugh.

The act of mass mob murder constituting lynching is of course the most sickening aspect of the crime. But there is one phase of the whole controversy just about as sickening as lynching itself, and that is the puling and hysterical verbiage of our precious Southern senators, who stand on the floor of that chamber and for days diffuse a noxious smoke screen of words about "State's rights", "defense of fair Southern womanhood", "the white man's burden", et cetera, ad infinitum, ad nauseam, until in despair sociologists wilt and surrender.

Raleigh, N. C. Observer
April 1, 1937

ANTI-LYNCH BILL HEARINGS AROUSE SECTIONAL ISSUE

Southerners Promptly Challenge Points Set Forth by Measure's Proponents

NEGRO CONGRESSMAN ARGUES FOR OWN BILL

Mitchell Measure Much Less Drastic Than Gavagan Proposal; Southerners Cite Sharp Decrease in Lynchings; Ask That States be Let Alone to Solve Problem

The News and Observer Bureau, 1232 National Press Building.

By ROBERT E. WILLIAMS.

Washington, March 31.—Sectionalism flared up in the House judiciary committee today as that body began hearings on the more than 40 anti-lynching bills before it.

The first witness today was Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, Illinois Democrat and the only Negro in Congress, who has a bill of his own.

Attention was centered on the Mitchell bill, which is less drastic than one by James A. Gavagan, Tammany Democrat, who represents a Negro district in New York City. A majority of the House has already signed a discharge petition for the Gavagan bill which will automatically come before the House on April 12.

Indications are that, forced to a choice between two evils and sure one of the bills will be sent to the Senate, where all such measures have heretofore been filibustered to death. Southern Democrats will cooperate in getting the Mitchell bill to a vote before the date set for consideration of the Gavagan bill.

Prompt Challenge.

Southern members of the committee promptly challenged the arguments set forth by the proponents of the legislation which boiled down the contention that it was the duty of the federal government to step in and guarantee citizens equal protection of the law when the states failed to prevent lynching.

Chairman Hatton Sumners, Texas Democrat, called to the attention of practically every witness the fact that lynchings in the United States had decreased from 235 in 1892 to eight in 1933 and with the states making such progress as this in dealing with the crime, he contended a federal law would only irritate rather than help local governments in dealing with the problem.

Mitchell, and those supporting the anti-lynching bill, took the broad position that the federal government should throw out the required protection to members of the Negro race because "most of the states have fallen down in the enforcement of anti-lynching laws."

"We ought to have a federal law as long as one person is lynched," the Negro Congressman asserted in reply to Sumners' statement showing the decrease in lynching.

Mitchell told the committee that most of the lynchings have taken place in the South where the Negro is struggling against the bitterness which is a relic of slavery and the Reconstruction period."

The Negro Congressman reviewed the various state laws which have been enacted to give all persons equal protection of the law and quoted a number of Southern governors, including former Governor Gardner of North Carolina and former Governor Richards of South Carolina, in showing Southern sentiment against lynching.

Hesitates to Speak.

Mitchell said that despite all of this, there were certain sections "where I, a member of Congress, hesitate to speak because I might be lynched."

A former Negro District of Columbia judge, James A. Cobb, was presented by Mitchell to argue the constitutional question involved in the legislation.

Both the Mitchell and Gavagan bills provide punishment, both by fine and imprisonment for any officer who allows a person in his custody to be lynched, and a further provision makes a county in which a lynching takes place liable for payment of a sum of from $2,000 to $10,000 to the family of the person lynched.

Several members of Congress appeared before the committee to urge the anti-lynching legislation and during cross-examination Southerners on the committee were caustic in airing their views on the legislation.

Sumners asked Representative Herman Kepplemann if he did not think in view of the record being made in wiping out lynching, the problem should not be left to the states. The Connecticut Democrat said he thought any state which had pemitted a lynching should ask for the Mitchell bill.

"Our people are getting ashamed of lynchings," Sumners said, "and we are stopping it. The only protection a man can get from a mob is in the community and not from the federal government. We want you people to appreciate our position. We are trying to build up sentiment against this crime and we are afraid of the effect of a federal law."

Kepplemann cited the Lindbergh kidnapping law as the effect of the use of federal power to wipe out crime. Sumners said the difference between that law and the Mitchell bill was that one was based on cooperation between the state and federal governments while the other provides punishment against a state and a county in which a crime took place.

At this point, Representative John E. Miller, Arkansas Democrat, made this observation:

"The trouble with you people is that you have been listening to the propoaganda of organizations which raise money by promoting such legislation as this. The best friend of the Negro is in the South. We will cure this problem if yiu will keep these agitators out. As prosecuting attorney in my state, I had more trouble with representatives of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People than any others in preserving the law."

Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman from Mississipi, spoke in favor of the Mitchell bill.

"Lynchings occurred in rural sections and we in the South know the people there fear the federal courts."

Howard said the South was ready for passage of a federal anti-lynching bill.

HOUSE SHOCKED AT LYNCHING DURING DEBATE

A telegram read on the floor of the House Tuesday informing the members of a double lynching in the state of Mississippi created a dramatic situation during the midst of the debate of the Gavagan Anti-lynching bill.

The message was read by Representative Michener (R), of Michigan who related how two colored men were taken from officers, tied to a tree and slowly burned to death with a blow torch. A third man was severely whipped and driven out of Montgomery County, Miss.

During the reading of the telegram a silence fell over the entire House including the packed galleries. A pin dropped could have been heard. The message was read during the heat of debate when foes and friends were arguing for and against the Gavagan measure which is designed to prevent just such a happening.

South Opposed

The South solidly opposed the bill claiming it would be an infringement of State's rights.

Representative Hamilton Fish (R), of New York, carried the brunt of the defense most of the afternoon, defending constitutionality of the measure and citing the need for such a piece of legislation, since certain states were unable to control mob violence. "Today we are trying to do justice under the law and under the Constitution to the colored people of America," Fish declared.

"Every time there is a lynching justice is undermined and blindfolded. Every time there is a lynching domestic intranquility is created. You drive the people out of the community. You terrorize them. You cause them to go to other states in the North. O Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name! Even to taking the lives of American citizens without due process of law.

Lynching Condoned

"The Federal Constitution is the greatest charter of human rights ever devised. It makes for our rights and liberties as a free people. Its aim is to safeguard the inalienable rights of the individual citizen. The preamble of the Constitution defines the principles of our government.

"It defines the reasons for the very existence of the government, and I say to you how, as I said the other day, this question is above and beyond the Constitution. To safeguard and protect the lives of our citizens is the reason for the existence of government itself."

Representative Sam Hobbs (D) of Alabama, one of the opponents of the bill went so far as to condone lynching. He said, "When a guilty man is lynched, the mob has done what the law says should be done! It has done it in an illegal way and criminal way, but the end is the same." He suggested that the bill include gangster killings and race riots.

Civil Rights Attacked

Representative Malcom C. Tarver (D), of Georgia, not only attacked the constitutionality of the Gavagan bill, but attacked Representative O'Connor (D), of New York, who announced his support of a civil rights bill for the District of Columbia. In denouncing the Kepplemann bill for civil rights for Negroes, Tarver said:

"There can be no objection to serious consideration, not alone of questions affecting Negroes, but of all questions affecting the American people. That is laudable.

"But when a high and responsible leader of the Democratic Party announces himself as opposing segregation of the races, which implies, in the way in which he uses it, would imply his favor of coeducation of Negroes and whites and for their coentertainment in hotels and theatres, and his opposition to their segregation in any way; and when an overwhelming Democratic House supports by a sectional vote such a legislative monstrosity as this Gavagan bill, it is time for the people of the South to ask themselves, 'What protection have we from constitutional interference with our handling of our race problems, except as protection may be afforded us by the Supreme Court in its construction of the Constitution?'"

Double Lynching

The lull in the debate created a tense minute when the Michigan member informed the House of the double murder of the two colored men in Winona, Miss. two hours after they had allegedly pleaded guilty to shooting a white man.

Roosevelt Townes, according to Sheriff E. E. Wright, confessed to killing George Windham, a country storekeeper. Townes was tied to a tree near Windham's store and tortured to death by flames from a torch. A second man, only identified as "Bootjack" McDaniels, indicted with Townes, was shot by the 100 members of the white mob when they became tired with the torture of the first victim.

According to dispatches from the scene of the crime, the prisoners were handcuffed and placed in a waiting school bus. Members of the mob piled into the bus and sped northward toward Duck Hill as the men screamed for mercy. The bus stopped near the small store where Windham was fatally shot through a window last December. Then the men were tied to a tree and burned.

Sheriff Alibies

Deputy Sheriff A. J. Curtis said he was helpless as the men came from behind him and pinned his arms. Although he said none of the mobbers wore masks he could not identify them.

Representative Michener interrupted a defense of the legislation by Representative Emanuel Cellar (D), of New York, to shout after the announcement of the Mississippi lynching, "this horrible incident proves that lynching has not ceased."

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners (D), of Texas, had contended that lynching has been on the decrease and no legislation was needed.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5692

STRANGE ANTI-LYNCHING MANEUVERS

There seems to be some funny business going on down in Washington in connection with the anti-lynching bill.

Congressman Gavagan, white Democrat representing the Harlem Negro district, introduced an anti-lynching bill WITH teeth in it, approved by the legal staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, chairman of the House judiciary committee, pigeon-holed the bill as he had always said he would do.

Congressman Mitchell, colored Democrat representing Chicago's Southside Negro district, introduced another anti-lynching bill WITHOUT ENOUGH teeth in it, and disapproved by the legal staff of the N.A.A.C.P.

Congressman Sumners refused to call hearings on the Gavagan bill, so Congressman Gavagan collected 218 Congressmen's signatures which forced the Texan's hand.

Congressman Mitchell, colored, sought to dissuade white Congressmen from signing the Gavagan petition, even though they were willing to do so, on the ground that HIS bill was due to be called soon.

Congressman Sumners of Texas, afraid of the STRONG Gavagan bill, hastily called hearings on Congressman Mitchell's WEAK bill. The judiciary committee voted favorably on it—after pulling out some of its few teeth.

Congressman Gavagan's petition becomes effective on April 12 when his STRONG bill MUST be called up for debate and vote.

Congressman Sumners has announced that the WEAK Mitchell bill will be called on April 7 for debate and vote, and hopes to pass it because it IS weak and thus more satisfactory to his kind.

It is not strange that Congressman Sumners, who has always been against an anti-lynching law, should suddenly fall in love with the WEAKEST bill.

It is strange that Congressman Mitchell should favor a WEAK law to stop lynching rather than a STRONG law, and try to prevent a vote on the latter.

It is strange that Republican National Committeeman Perry W. Howard, colored, of Mississippi, should rush to the House judiciary committee hearings and fight against the STRONG Gavagan bill in favor of the WEAK Mitchell bill.

It is strange that Mr. Mitchell of Illinois, Mr. Sumners of Texas, Mr. Howard of Mississippi, and Mr. Walter Chandler (Congressman from Memphis, Tenn.) should fight tooth and toe nail against a STRONG anti-lynching bill and in favor of a WEAK anti-lynching bill.

You would expect colored men, with the anguished screams of 5,000 mob victims ringing in their ears, to favor a STRONG bill outlawing lynching, but you are mistaken.

You would expect Southern Congressmen fired with the ideal of upholding white supremacy to favor a WEAK bill as the lesser of two evils, and you are NOT mistaken.

It is all very strange and confusing, but most ordinary Negroes know they want the strongest anti-lynching law possible, because it is the ordinary Negroes, not the exalted leaders, who get lynched.

Yes, these have been strange maneuvers down in Washington, almost unbelievable maneuvers, which posterity will find difficult to credit.

One things however, stands clear, definite and certain: lynching, like politics, makes strange bedfellows.

Charlottesville, Va. Progress
March 24, 1937

Against Lynching

Among the mass of bills yet to be acted upon by the Senate and House of Representatives is the anti-lynching bill introduced in February by Senators Wagner and Van Nuys. The time is opportune for the enactment of the measure since sentiment is rising steadily in favor of such legislation.

The bill is modeled after the Costigan-Wagner bill which the Senate debated at some length in 1935 and which was vigorously attacked by a group of Southern senators. By its chief provisions it would make punishable, by fines and imprisonment, any legal officer whose negligence leads to the lynching of a person entrusted to his custody or charged with or convicted of any crime. In addition, it places a penalty ranging from $2,000 to $10,000 against any local subdivision of government which fails to protect and give a fair trial to persons accused of crime.

"Encroachment upon States' rights," will be one of the vocal explosions when the bill comes up for legislative consideration. But rather than an assault upon the sovereignty of States it is an open attack upon mob rule. The bill will make possible action by the Federal government which the sober-minded citizens in all communities, North or South, have always wanted.

Those who are put to death and their families are not the only victims of lynchings. It is a menace to the whole community. There is a double breakdown of law—first in permitting the crime and secondly in failing to punish the perpetrators. This breakdown is further precipitated by the all-to-frequent placing of the community's stamp of passive approval on the action of a mob.

Anti-Lynching Bill

LONG awaited action on a Federal anti-lynching Bill takes place in Congress this week.

Bill H. R. 2251, sponsored by Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, will be presented to the House of Representatives for debate and vote on April 7. It is endorsed by the House Judiciary Committee.

Bill H. R. 1507, sponsored by Congressman Joseph A. Gavagan of New York, is scheduled to come before the House on April 12. It was forced to a vote through a petition signed by 218 Congressmen, supported by the NAACP and allied organizations. Passage of the Mitchell Bill (H. R. 2251) would kill the Gavagan measure.

Both Bills stipulate identical penalties against a county whose officers are blamed for a lynching, and against officers failing to protect their charges. However, fear that, if passed, the Mitchell Bill would be inefficacious in getting at the root of the evil has been expressed in some quarters.

It is pointed out that the Gavagan Bill is more drastic and provides more fully for all contingencies, whereas the Mitchell Bill, it is claimed, has been doctored by the Judiciary Committee which struck out some of its most important provisions.

When generals fall out over debatable points on the eve of an important battle the chances for an enemy victory are greatly enhanced. Making lynching a Federal crime is the prime objective of those who have sponsored over 60 Bills in the present Congress. Unity and understanding on the eve of Congressional action should be paramount.

Compromise in a perplexing situation sometimes paves the way for greater gains. Any Bill passed by Congress not strong enough to meet the situation can be amended later. The welfare of those exposed daily to mob law, and the gains made in mobilizing public opinion against lynching since 1922, should take precedence over matters of not so vital importance in the fight for federal legislation to curb the evil.

NATION SET ON PASSAGE OF MEASURE

Predictions Point To Fast Action This Week By House

The Defender

See Editorial on Page 5
Mitchell, Gavagan Bills, Page 8

WASHINGTON, D. C., Apr. 9—(Special)—Twelve of the 13 members of the Illinois delegation in Congress at a caucus Monday afternoon voted to support the Mitchell anti-lynching bill scheduled to be debated on the floor of Congress Wednesday of this week. Chicago, Ill.

Representative Kocialkowski is the only member who did not vote to support the measure. Others at the caucus who voted to support the Mitchell bill were Representatives McAndrews, Rigney, Long, Boyer, Arnold, Mitchell, Sabbath, Thompson, Lucas, Fries, O'Brien, and Meeks. 9/12/37

Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, sponsor of the bill which was reported favorably out of the house judiciary committee last Thursday declared he is doing all he can to secure passage of his bill, adding that whether it is his bill or not, he intends to vote for an anti-lynching bill to get through this Congress.

Supporters of the Mitchell and the Gavagan anti-lynching bills, which differ basically, are engaged in a bitter contest to have the House act on the measure which they respectively favor.

The first round was won by the supporters of the Gavagan bill. Led by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, they obtained 218 signatures to the motion of Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, Democrat, of New York, to discharge the House judiciary committee from consideration of his anti-lynching bill. The last signature necessary to a vote on the motion was obtained on March 29.

The forces supporting the Mitchell bill immediately countered with a vote by the House judiciary committee last Thursday to report that measure favorably. The vote was eight to seven.

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas, who has opposed anti-lynching legislation, was to report the Mitchell bill to the House on Friday with a recommendation for its enactment. But supporters of the Gavagan measure were not satisfied with the vote of the judiciary committee to report out the Mitchell bill and obtained from Mr. Sumners a promise to delay his report for a few days. The Defender

According to the supporters of the Gavagan bill, the House judiciary committee first voted to report out that measure. They say after the vote was taken, two members left the committee and later a vote was taken to reconsider the favorable report ordered on the Gavagan bill. It was then that the committee ordered the Mitchell bill favorably reported. Chicago, Ill.

The supporters of the Gavagan bill believe a majority of the House judiciary committee favor that measure. They will seek a reconsideration of the vote ordering the Mitchell bill favorably reported. If they fail, they plan to block passage of the Mitchell bill until April 12 when, under the rules of the House, the Gavagan motion to discharge the judiciary committee from consideration of his bill will be voted upon. If the Gavagan motion prevails, any member who signed it may move that the House proceed immediately to its consideration.

Hearings on the Mitchell bill were held by the House judiciary committee on March 31. Mr. Sumners presided and seemed concerned only with the question whether federal legislation was the best means of stamping out lynching.

Supporters of the Mitchell bill, while admitting it does not go as far as the Gavagan bill, yet they justify their position in fighting for the measure on the grounds it stands a much better chance of getting through both houses of Congress than the Gavagan bill. And, they add, what we want is an anti-lynching law on the federal statutes. It will be much easier to strengthen a law once it has been enacted than it is to enact a particularly offensive one.

Congressman Mitchell is optimistic about the bill. It is his prediction that it will be passed by the house of representatives this week. Quick action also is expected by the Senate, with the President's approval a practical certainty.

The NAACP, which has severely criticized Congressman Mitchell, charging he is being used by Chairman Sumners of the judiciary committee, is standing unflinchingly behind the Gavagan bill.

Nashville, Tenn. Banner
April 1, 1937

Tennesseans Back Antilynch Bill

Washington, April 1—(Special)—Representatives Carroll B. Reece of Johnson City and J. Will Taylor of LaFollette were revealed today as members of a House group organized to slash red tape and force consideration of a bill to make lynching a federal offense.

A rule of the House provides that members who are impatient with dilatory tactics employed by an unfriendly committee may take a bill from the committee and call it up for action without preliminary hearings. This requires the signed demand of 218 Congressmen, and Representatives Reece and Taylor helped make up the requisite number. The names are kept in confidence until the full 218 are affixed to the petition.

Representative Joseph Gavagan of New York City, who led the list, will move for consideration April 12, his office announced today.

The bill would penalize officials whose negligence makes a lynching possible. Both criminal and civil penalties are provided.

Greenville, S. C. News
March 31, 1937

WHATS HIS ATTITUDE?

The growing strength in the national House of Representatives in support of federal anti-lynching legislation is clearly indicated by the completion of a petition signed by the requisite 218 members to force immediate consideration of such a measure on the floor of the House.

This is the Gavan bill providing for prosecution in the federal courts of municipal and county officers who fail to protect prisoners from mob violence, along with other punitive provisions, including fines against the counties in which a lynching occurs.

Needless to say all such measures are regarded with detestation in numerous states, particularly in the South whose citizens logically look upon them as aimed directly at this section. Yet Democrats of other sections of the country are strongly urging such measures; and support of them is undoubtedly considered to be politically valuable for members from districts which have a substantial negro vote. The chances of the passage of a measure appear to be fairly good.

Southern people find a keen interest in the question as to what is President Roosevelt's attitude toward such measures. Although that question has been raised many times, no definite word has yet come forth indicating his position. If the President actually opposes this measure his influence would undoubtedly be effective in preventing its passage. But thus far, at least, there has been no evidence that he would like to see it rejected.

ANTI-LYNCHING LEGISLATION AND THE BILL OF RIGHTS

Daily Gazette

That a strong, genuinely enforced Federal anti-lynching law is needed to root out an evil which has shamed the Nation for two generations past, has been long evident to intelligent citizens both in the North and in the South. Express

The recent mob city in Mississippi—an exhibition of mob cruelty at its worst—undoubtedly influenced the House's vote (277 to 119) for the Gavagan Bill. Should the Senate concur—as appears likely—the effect would be to throw the Federal Government's weight into the scales against a social condition which persistently has defied State authority.

As the mob—like the underworld gang—has a healthy respect for the "G-men," the very existence of such a Federal law would suffice to prevent at least some lynchings. That is a sufficient reason for completing this legislation. 4-17-37

It is high time Congress acted. This measure, in essentially the form which the House approved—as the Dyer Bill, and later as the Wagner-Costigan Bill—has been before Congress since 1918. During that period 515 persons have been lynched, but except in a single Georgia case (where the victim was a white man) not one mob murderer has been tried and punished as befitted the crime.

Though State and local authorities have received ample warning—through the growing favor which the proposed Federal legislation has commanded in Congress and among citizens generally—they have consistently refused to heed the lesson.

In its latest survey of the record ("Can the States Stop Lynching?") the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reviews the 39 outrages in 12 States during 1935 and 1936. After each it enters with monotonous regularity the notation, "State action—none."

Unless all precedents shall be upset, when the official record of Mississippi's double lynching—revolting as it was—shall be complete, it may be summed up in the same words, "State action—none." For—shocked and stirred as they must be—Governor, trial judge, district attorney and sheriff probably dare not bring the perpetrators to justice, even if they could be identified, which is exceedingly difficult. To follow the dictates of duty under their official oaths in (modeled after the Lindbergh Anti-Kidnaping Law) giving the Federal authorities jurisdiction over mob crimes if local and State authorities failed to act immediately.

The effect would be to put the G-men on the lynchers' trail.

The very existence of that evil condition affords all the justification needed for Federal intervention. For that reason the injection of partisan or sectional issues into the debate on the Gavagan Bill is deeply regrettable. Fundamental human rights are at stake; the vindication of law and the most elemental principles of justice is involved.

Lynching is murder: the mob tram-

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5693

WAGNER, VAN NUYS INTRODUCE
ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Washington, D. C. Feb. 25.- Senators Wagner and Van Nuys today introduced in the Senate a Federal anti-lynching bill S. 1709 modeled upon but varying in some respects from the Costigan-Wagner bill of last year. Upon introduction, Senators Wagner and Van Nuys issued the following statement: P.m. 2-26-37 New York Times.

"With unremitting regularity, lynchings have decreased under every threat of Federal legislation upon the subject and increased whenever the hope of passing such legislation seemed dim. This is proof positive that Congressional action would be an effective check upon a crime which, both in its immediate effects and its potential evils, is one of the greatest threats facing American life and institutions.

"Those who are put to death, and their families, are not the only victims of lynching. In every case, there is a double breakdown of the law, -- first in permitting the crime and secondly in failing to punish the perpetrators. Such a suspension of law is a menace to the whole community concerned; and the menace is even greater in those all-to-frequent instances where the community puts its stamp of passive approval upon the outrages within its borders.

"The tragic events in other lands today teach us that the intolerance manifested by lynching must be quenched before it produces a conflagration; that extra-legal brutality must be stamped out before it grows into legalized brutality; that the defense of all that democratic institutions imply, if it is not to be too late, must begin as soon as the foundations of liberalism are attacked.

"During the past fifty years, five thousand men, women and children have died in orgies of torture surpassing the Inquisition, only because local authorities have failed to prevent and failed to punish. That is why sincere opponents of lynching have long advocated the passage of a Federal anti-lynching law.

"The bill now proposed is simple. It provides for the punishment, through Federal law, of any legal officer whose negligence leads to the lynching of a person entrusted to his custody, or charged with, suspected of, or convicted of any crime. In addition, a penalty ranging from $2,000 to $10,000 is leveled against any local subdivision of government which fails to protect and give fair trial to those suspected or accused of crime.

"This is not an assault upon states rights. It is an attack only upon mob rule. When the Federal government helps the localities to do what the sober element in the localities has always wanted to do, lynching will be stopped.

"The rising sentiment in favor of this measure is unmistakable. A recent nation-wide poll showed the same feeling in every section of our country. Never before have the prospects for the passage of a Federal anti-lynching law been so bright; and no action by the Congress could be more welcome to whose who treasure our century-tested standards of civil liberties."

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
February 21, 1937

THE SOUTH TODAY

The New Anti-Lynching Bill

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY

(Copyright, 1936, by Southern Newspaper Syndicate)

Editor's Note: Virginius Dabney, famous Southern editor, author and lecturer, and well-known to readers of this column, has after serving two years as chief editorial writer on the Richmond Times Dispatch, recently been made editor of that paper.

Ever since 1922, when the Dyer anti-lynching bill passed the house of representatives by 230 to 119, and was then filibustered to death by a group of Southern senators, led by the late Oscar Underwood, agitation for legislation of this character has been more or less continuous. An anti-lynching bill sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has just been introduced in both branches of congress. What are its provisions and is it likely to pass?

Apparently the likelihood that congress will adopt an anti-lynching bill is greater now than ever before. The N. A. A. C. P. is putting on all the pressure it can command. It claims to have 261 members of the house and 62 members of the senate already committed—a clear majority in each branch. The overwhelming preponderance enjoyed by the Democrats in congress gives the members of the party from the North and West, where anti-lynching legislation is more favorably regarded, an immense numerical superiority over those from the South. In addition, many Republicans have always been inclined to favor a federal curb on lynching. Had it not been for a seven-day filibuster in the senate in the spring of 1935, the Costigan-Wagner bill would almost certainly have been passed.

* * *

Differs From Former Bill

The bill just introduced, it should be noted, differs from the Costigan-Wagner bill in certain respects. It contains the following provisions:

Any officer who fails to make diligent efforts to protect a prisoner with the result that the prisoner is lynched, or who fails to make diligent efforts to apprehend the members of the mob, shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $5,000 or a prison term of not more than five years, or both.

Whenever a lynching occurs, and information on oath is submitted to the attorney general of the United States that any officer charged with the duty of protecting the victim has neglected to make diligent efforts to do so, or to apprehend the members of the mob after the lynching, the attorney general "shall cause an investigation to be made to determine whether there has been any violation of this act." If he finds that a violation has occurred, proceedings will be instituted against the officer or officers in the United States District court. There is no provision for federal prosecution of members of the mob.

A governmental subdivision shall be responsible, under the bill, for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdiction, and also for any lynching outside that jurisdiction, if the victim was seized within the jurisdiction. Such a subdivision is subject to a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000, unless it can show that proper diligence was used to protect the prisoner.

* * *

May Sue for Damages

Suit for pecuniary damages under the act may be instituted in the United States district court, and shall be brought by the attorney general of the United States, or, if the claimant or claimants elect, by counsel employed by them. The next of kin of the person lynched is paid such damages as are awarded.

What are the principal objections to such a bill? In the first place, many regard it as unconstitutional. Conspicuous among the non-Southerners who are firmly convinced that it is in direct conflict with the organic law is Senator Borah, who has stated many times that it would annihilate the sovereignty of the state.

Another leading objection is that the enactment of the bill might mean a pronounced augmentation of interracial bitterness. The class of whites mainly responsible for lynching would resent the entry of the federal authorities into the field, and the resentment might find expression in more, instead of fewer, outbreaks of mob violence against the Negroes.

It also is contended that the bill is a reflection on the South and that it would interfere with the South's "protection of its womanhood." Senator Smith of South Carolina, in discussing the Costigan-Wagner bill in 1935, spoke of the "very humiliating necessity of going outside the laws at times to vindicate the sanctity of our fireside and the virtue of our women."

* * *

No Federal Action Taken

Some argue, too, that it is not likely the federal courts would be appreciably more effective in securing convictions than the state courts have been. Such critics point out that although a federal court could sit a good many miles away from the scene of the lynching sentiment among the whites there might not be greatly different from that which prevailed in the immediate vicinity of the crime. Opponents of the proposed legislation also cite the indisputable fact that although the horrible and ghastly lynching of Claude Neal in 1934 was an interstate crime, in that Neal was taken from an Alabama jail and lynched in Florida, the federal government took no action.

So much for the arguments against the bill. Whereas there are competent lawyers who question its constitutionality, others regard it as constitutional. Among those may be mentioned Charles H. Tuttle, who filed a brief on behalf of the Costigan-Wagner measure when it was up for passage in 1935, and Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn of the Columbia University law school. Mr. Tuttle contends that "nothing in our national constitution prevents our national government from undertaking such an act of self-preservation, and from protecting itself against the consequences of the break-down of due process of law through state inaction and of wholesale discrimination in the effective protection of mob rule." He cites the section of the constitution which says that the United States shall guarantee to every state "a republican form of government," as well as the Fourteenth amendment, which provides that no state shall deprive any person of "life, liberty or property without due process of law." He likewise directs attention to the section of the same amendment which endows congress with the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

* * *

Few Results Obtained

It is also argued on behalf of the bill that the states have had decades in which to put a stop to lynchings, with few clearly discernible results. The reduction effected since 1920 is substantial, but for the past ten years the number of mob murders committed annually has remained approximately the same. It seems obvious that as long as the present method of handling lynchers—or of not handling them—is unchanged, lynchings will continue. Lynchers have been punished for only three of the 84 lynchings which took place from 1931 to 1935, inclusive, and the penalties in those three cases were light.

We have had such fiendish performances as the burning alive of Henry Lowry at Nodena, Ark., in 1921, and the savage and unprintable tortures of Claude Neal, who was put to death near Greenwood, Fla., in 1934, both lynchings having been announced in advance by the newspapers. Word of the real lynching was broadcast by radio and in the press 14 to 15 hours before it occurred, and a crowd of from 4,000 to 7,000 white persons from several states, including many children, gathered to witness the Negro's prolonged agony. No one was punished.

VIRGINIUS DABNEY

Advocates of a federal anti-lynching bill see in such a measure the only hope of putting a stop to such barbarities. To the argument that lynchings are necessary to protect Southern womanhood, they retort that fewer than one-fourth of the persons lynched since 1890 have even been accused of assaults upon white women.

* * *

Many Women Favor Bill

As a matter of fact, various groups of prominent Southern women have declared emphatically that they do not regard lynching as a defense of womanhood, but rather as a blot on Southern civilization. These include the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching and the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Methodist body endorsed the Costigan-Wagner bill at its annual session in 1934, but the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching opposed the measure. The commission of Interracial Co-operation, headed by Dr. W. W. Alexander, with headquarters in Atlanta, was skeptical for years concerning the value of federal intervention in lynchings, but in 1935 it voted unanimously in favor of a federal anti-lynching law. The Costigan-Wagner bill was indorsed by executive bodies of the Young Women's Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Federal Council of Churches, the Protestant Episcopal, Congregational and the American Federation of Labor, as well as by other organizations.

It seems probable, in view of this widespread support, that the anti-lynching bill just introduced will pass. If so, its passage will be due primarily to the failure of most Southern states to stamp out the hideous crime which has disgraced them before the world.

Patrick And Others Should Have Supported Bill, Reader Declares

Editor, The Post:

It is a great surprise that our Rep. Luther Patrick, the so-called liberal, has voted against the Gavagan anti-lynching bill.

Of seven Alabama representatives only one, Mr. Boykin of Mobile, did not vote for either side, while six voted against the Gavagan bill.

It is very surprising when they know that the majority of the people of the South and all the leading newspapers of the South favor the anti-lynching legislation.

The country spends millions every year for education, pushes the compulsory school attendance age constantly higher, and each June sees thousands of "educated" people come off the mass education belt. But how good is the product turned out in such large standardized quantities?

What percentage has learned common decency? It was in Owensboro, Ky., last year where the gallows were erected and from every direction came crowds filled with a carnival spirit, with shouts, hisses and a babel of noise.

The neck of a Negro was mapped and immediately after a mad scramble took place by souvenir hunters eager to snatch pieces of the hood placed over his head and the rope with which his life was snapped out.

Now comes the Mississippi lynching. This disgraceful crime that has blotted our history for many years should be wiped out, and our representatives should have voted for laws that would do it.

But we encourage cheap literature, we patronize entertainment designed for morons, we place a premium on scandal and vulgar sensationalism, we pass lightly over religion, we pardon any criminal whose lawyer gets sloppily sentimental. What, then, can we expect?

ELVIRO DI LAURA

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5694

5694

WEAK ANTI-LYNCHING BILL RUSHED OUT BY JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Hold Hearing March 31, Report Mitchell Bill Out April 1 To Call for Vote April 7

Press Service of the N.A.A.C.P.
4-2-37 New York, N.Y.

Washington, D. C. Apr. 2.- The House judiciary committee, which has been a stonewall against anti-lynching legislation for fifteen years, moved with blinding speed this week to rush a weak and ineffective anti-lynching bill to the floor for a vote on April 7.

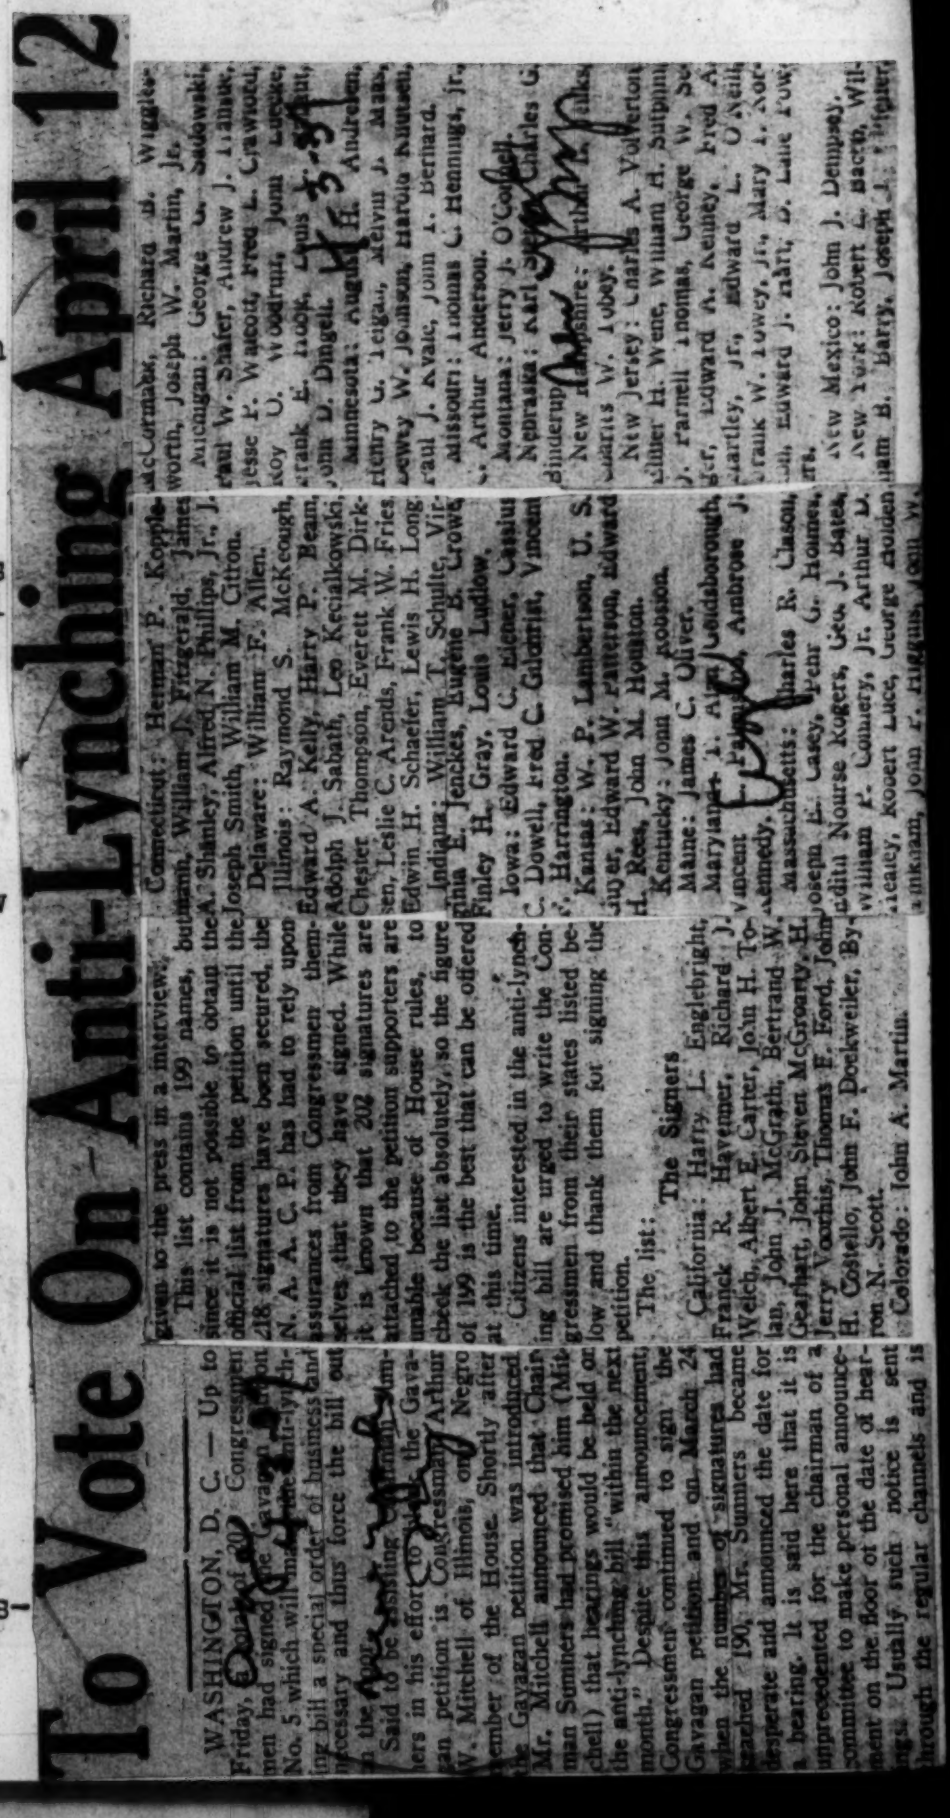
In an effort to block the much stronger Gavagan anti-lynching bill which will be voted upon April 12, Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, chairman of the judiciary committee, held hearings March 31 on the bill introduced by Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois, and upon other anti-lynching bills.

The next day, April 1, the committee voted 8-7 favorably on the Mitchell bill—with some of the teeth drawn out of it. The original bill was not a strong one, but the committee cut even that. Then it was announced that the weak Mitchell bill would be called up on the floor for a vote on April 7, under the House rules which allow the judiciary committee certain privileges.

All this haste is to kill off an effective bill—the Gavagan bill. The speedy action of the committee was caused by the fact that on March 29, Mr. Gavagan secured the 218th signature on his petition to discharge the rules committee and make his bill a special order of business. When the petition became effective, April 12 was set as the day when the Gavagan bill will be called up for debate and vote.

But, meanwhile, Chairman Sumners, steadfast opponent of the anti-lynching bill, drove forward with his hearing and instant report of the emasculated Mitchell bill. He hopes to pass the weak bill on April 7 and thus kill the stronger Gavagan bill. Congressman Mitchell has been working with Mr. Sumners and has even gone so far as to request congressmen not to sign the Gavagan petition.

The N.A.A.C.P. and other groups working for effective anti-lynching legislation are alarmed over the danger to a real bill and have called upon all interested persons to rush telegrams to congressmen asking them to oppose the emasculated bill offered by the judiciary committee and vote for the Gavagan bill April 12. The Gavagan bill is H. R. 1507.



Lynching April 12
To Vote On Anti-

...Clifton, Marcellus H...
...Evans, Andrew L. Somers, John J. ...
...Delaney, Donald L. O'Toole, Eugene ...
...Keogh, James A. O'Leary, Samuel ...
...Dickstein, Christopher D. Sullivan, ...
...William I. Sirovich, John J. Boylan, ...
...Theodore A. Peyser, Martin J. Kennedy, Sol Bloom, James J. Lanzetta, ...
...Joseph A. Gavagan, Edward W. Curley, Charles D. Millard, William T. ...
...Byrne, Bertrand H. Snell, Francis D. Culkin, Fred J. Douglas, George ...
...Kelly, Walter G. Andrews, Alfred ...
...Beiter, James H. Mead, Daniel A. ...
...Reed, Matthew J. Merritt, Caroline ...
O'Day.

North Dakota: William Lemke, Usher L. Burdick.

Ohio: Joseph A. Dixon, Herbert S. Bigelow, Byron B. Harlan, Arthur W. Aleshire, John F. Hunter, Thomas A. Jenkins, Arthur P. Lamneck, Dudley A. White, Dow W. Harter, Robert T. Secrest, William A. Ashbrook, Lawrence E. Imhoff, Michael J. Kirwan, Martin L. Sweeney, Robert Crosser, Anthony A. Pieger, John McSweeney, Harold G. Hosier.

Oklahoma: Wesley E. Disney, Jack Nichols, Lyle H. Boren.

Oregon: Nan Wood Honeyman.

Pennsylvania: Leon Sacks, James P. McGranery, Michael J. Bradley, Frank J. G. Dorsey, Michael J. Stack, Ira Walton Drew, James Wolfenden, J. Roland Kinzer, J. Harold Flannery, Albert G. Rutherford, J. William Ditter, Benjamin K. Focht, Guy J. Swope, Benjamin Jarrett, Don Gingery, Charles I. Faddis, Charles R. Eckert, Joseph Gray, Robert G. Allen, Charles N. Crosby, James L. Quinn, Herman P. Ebernarter, Henry Ellenbogen, Matthew A. Dunn.

Rhode Island: Aime J. Forand.

South Dakota: Fred H. Hildebrandt, Francis H. Case.

Tennessee: B. Carroll Reece, J. Will Taylor.

Utah: J. W. Robinson.

Washington: Warren G. Magnuson, Knute Hill, John H. Coffee.

West Virginia: Robert L. Ramsay, George W. Johnson.

Wisconsin: Thomas R. Amlie, Harry Southoff, Gardner R. Withrow, Raymond J. Cannon, Thomas O'Malley, Michael K. Reilly, Gerald J. Boileau, George J. Schneider, Bernard ...Gehrmann.

Signatures Promised

In adution to this list, the following members have promised to sign the petition but to date have not done so:

Ralph Brewster, Maine; Richard T. Buckler, Minnesota; Ralph E. Church, Illinois; D. Worth Clark, Idaho; Glenn Griswold, Indiana; Robert P. Hill, Oklahoma; Merlin Hull, Wisconsin; Ed. V. Izac, California; Kent E. Keller, Illinois; Charles H. Leavy, Washington; John Lesinsky, Michigan; Henry C. Luckey, Nebraska; James A. Meeks, Illinois; Charles A. Plumley, Vermont; Elmer J. Ryan, Minnesota; Lloyd Thurston, Iowa.

The following Congressmen pledged the N. A. A. C. P. in writing prior to the November election that they would do everything in their power to bring the anti-lynching bill to a vote and to vote for it, but they also have not as yet signed the Gavagan petition:

Noah M. Mason, Illinois; Leo E. Allen, Edwin V. Champion, Illinois; Samuel B. Pettingill, Indiana; Clyde H. Smith, Maine; Will Rogers, Oklahoma; Oliver W. Frey, Pennsylvania.

A news story appeared in Washington daily papers March 20 and was carried by International News Service to other papers quoting Rep. Patrick Boland of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip, as saying that the House would make history in the near future by passing an anti-lynching bill.

A tremendous amount of volunteer work in visiting and interviewing Congressmen and their secretaries and in checking up daily on the progress of signatures on the Gavagan petition has been done here by the following persons: Mrs. Roberta Hastie, mother of the newly-confirmed federal judge of the Virgin Islands, William H. Hastie; Mrs. Gertrude Stone, member of the executive committee of the District of Columbia branch of the N. A. A. C. P.; Mrs. Dorothy Bristol, wife of a prominent pastor of Camden, N. J.; Miss Marjorie Penney, executive secretary Young People's Fellowship, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Miss Elisabeth Eastman, Washington representative of the national board of the Y. W. C. A.

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL TO GET HOUSE VOTE

Judiciary Committee Favors Measure By 8-7

PRISON PENALTY INCLUDED

4-2-37

Legislation Would Provide $5,000 Fine for Government Agency Responsible in Act—Senate Feeling Doubtful

BY GARRETT D. HORNER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 1. — The House judiciary committee late today voted 8 to 7 to report favorably an anti-lynching bill sponsored by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, Democrat, Illinois, the only negro congressman.

The measure carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine for any state, city or county officer who shall "suffer and permit" a prisoner to be taken from his custody and "injured or put to death."

It is expected to supersede a more drastic bill sponsored by Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, Democrat, New York, which is scheduled for House debate April 12. This measure will be brought up through a vote-forcing petition.

Liable for Damages

The committee struck out of the Mitchell bill provisions which would have made proof of a lynching prima-facie evidence that the officer charged with custody of the prisoner permitted it to occur. The amended measure calls for punishment of local officers only when they give up their prisoners to mobs "without lawful justification or excuse."

It also provides that the county whose officers are blamed for a lynching shall be liable for a maximum of $10,000 damages to the victim's family.

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, Democrat, Texas, of the judiciary committee, who personally opposes any federal intervention in the lynching problem, indicated the Mitchell bill would be brought up early next week.

Senate Action Doubtful

Democratic leaders have attempted to sidetrack the controversial issue, but were forced to action by majority support of the Gavagan bill petition. Mitchell is confident his measure will pass the House, but Senate action this session is doubtful.

The judiciary committee's vote today was the first favorable action on anti-lynching legislation since 1922. Filibusters have prevented Senate action during the long fight.

Other congressional developments today:

Senator Lynn J. Frazer, Democrat, North Dakota, introduced a bill which would provide a three-year moratorium for home owners threatened with loss of their property through mortgage foreclosure.

It is patterned after the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act upheld by the Supreme Court Monday.

Anti-Lynch Bill Urged In Congress

WASHINGTON, April 13. — (AP) — The House received reports of the lynching of two negroes near Duck Hill, Miss., today in the midst of debate over a Federal anti-lynching bill.

Proponents immediately seized upon the mob action as an argument in behalf of a proposal by Representative Cavagan (D), New York, to impose heavy fines and prison terms on persons figuring in lynchings.

Peace officers who permit prisoners to be taken from them would be subject to punishment, as well as mob members.

Representative Michener (R), Michigan, interrupted a plea by Representative Cellar (R), New York, in behalf of the legislation to read press reports of the Mississippi mob action.

"This horrible incident proves," the New Yorker shouted, "that lynching has not ceased."

Southern Democrats, who branded the legislation as an unconstitutional invasion of the rights of the States, made no immediate reply on the floor, but in statements later denied the crime was a "valid" argument for the bill.

"This lynching is not an indication that the laws of Mississippi condone or approve such acts," declared Representative Miller (D), Arkansas.

"Those participating in this lynching," he added, "have violated the law of Mississippi and the good citizens of the State will resent it. But it is not a case for Federal interference."

A large gallery crowd, including many negroes, heard the debate. At one point Acting Speaker O'Connor (D), New York, halted proceedings after spectators applauded a remark by Representative Fish (D), New York, that he believed in placing "human rights above property rights." Visitors were warned against demonstrations.

Much of the debate centered around constitutionality of the measure. Foes asserted the Constitution did not give the Federal Government the right to intervene, while proponents countered the Government was "morally bound" to see that the constitutional guarantees were preserved where States failed.

4-13-37

Montgomery

condemning what he called an "effort to force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional, and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

In general Republicans joined with Northern Democrats in supporting the bill.

The measure, the first of its kind to pass either House since 1922, would subject an officer who permitted a prisoner to be taken from his custody and injured or put to death to a fine ranging up to $5,000 and to as much as five years in prison.

Likewise, participants would be subject to from five to 25 years' imprisonment.

Asserting the bill was aimed at the South, opponents from that section sought in vain to strike from the bill provisions that would subject counties in which a prisoner was seized or put to death to damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000. The money would go to a victim's family.

Action May Be Forced On House Lynch Bill

Substitute

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(AP)—House members completed a petition today designed to force action on an anti-lynching bill.

3-31-37

That action will permit Representative Gavagan (D), New York to call up April 12 a resolution providing that on the day after its adoption his anti-lynching measure shall be a special order of business.

The last of 218 signatures needed to call up the measure, without the necessity for committee approval, went on his petition just before the House adjourned this afternoon.

The anti-lynching bill would provide fines and imprisonment for state officers, found to have been negligent in protecting a person from injury or death at the hands of a mob or riotous assemblage.

Anti-Lynch Bill Passed By House

Substitute

Amendment

Southerners Overridden; Faces Senate Fight

4-10-37

WASHINGTON, April 15. — (AP) — The House overrode bristling Southern opposition tonight to pass the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. It would authorize the Federal Government to intervene in mob crimes to punish participating state officers.

Montgomery

Quadri

After more than six hours' hectic debate, it voted 276 to 119 to approve the measure and send it to the Senate where, sponsors agreed, it faced sterner opposition.

Even as the House voted, Senator Borah (R), Idaho, issued a statement

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5695

CONGRESSMAN MITCHELL

Unfortunately, there seems to "bob up" a controversy between Walter White, Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell again, over the proper procedure to secure favorable action on an anti-lynching bill, now before the Congress of the United States.

Those who watched the proceedings in the last Congress, will agree with us, we believe, that it was this same sort of controversy between Mitchell and White that had much to do with defeating action on the Anti-lynch bill during the Seventy-fourth Congress; and to have such a controversy brought to the fore at this time, we repeat, is unfortunate, indeed.

Judging upon the information we have in our possession, from both Mr. White and Mr. Mitchell, it looks to us as though it is a mere matter of opinion as to the proper procedure, or the best procedure in this case. We are loathe to charge either with insincerity. Therefore, the question naturally arises, which of the two are in the better position to determine the better course to pursue. By all the rules of the game, Mitchell, being a member of Congress, is in a better position to confer and bargain with his colleagues, than is White. At the same time, Mr. White is in a position to render a great deal of assistance, because he has the backing of the N. A. A. C. P.

In this latest controversy, White takes Mitchell to task because the latter has issued a statement that Chairman Sumners of the Judiciary Committee, has said he will hold hearings on the anti-lynching bills within a short while. Mr. White also expressed his doubts as to the sincerity of such a move on the part of the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. In the meanwhile, Mr. Mitchell has hailed Chairman Sumner's' decision to hold hearings on the anti-lynching bills as a "signal victory." as he is confident that the Committee will report favorably on one of the bills.

Assuming that Congressman Mitchell is telling the truth about this matter, we think we all will agree that a favorable report from the Judiciary Committee will go a long way toward solidifying action in the House. Evidently Congressman Mitchell thinks so. If the Congressman of the First Illinois District has succeeded in getting Chairman Sumners, of Texas, to change his mind, and grant hearings on anti-mob measures, we are inclined to give him credit for being a good statesman, for, after all, it is the man who gets things done who counts. We may further state, that it is our belief that Mr. Mitchell is just as interested in seeing an anti-lynching bill passed, as any other member of the Race. He most certainly understands what it would mean, not only to himself, but to the Democratic administration. Any charge or any inference that he is careless or indifferent to the interests of the Colored people of the United States, must be chalked up as having been born through political propaganda, and should be stamped as false. If, in the light of his experience and judgment, he elects to pursue a course which he thinks will get results, he, in the final analysis, must stand or fall on his own judgment; the public is only in an advisory position.

ST. LOUIS MO. GLOBE-DEMOCRAT
MAR. 7, 1937 M15

Antilynching Legislation

More than 40 antilynching bills are pending in Congress. Most of them would authorize federal authorities to prosecute local officers who neglect to protect prisoners taken into their custody from mob violence or fail to make "diligent efforts" to apprehend and convict mob members. They provide a penalty up to five years imprisonment and a $5000 fine and some of them also would assess a fine of from $2000 to $5000 against any county in which a lynching occurred.

Sponsors and advocates of the bills, among them Senator Wagner and Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, contend that federal intervention is necessary to stamp out these "mob murders." They predict that a coalition of Democrats and Republicans will pass antilynching legislation at this session. Another New York Representative, Joseph P. Gavagan, has introduced a resolution to discharge the Judiciary Committee from consideration of his bill. Mr. Fish's bill is also at rest in the committee, which refuses to act, and he has launched a drive to force action by submitting a petition which, if signed by two-thirds of the House membership, will call the bill out of the committee.

However, here again the Democratic majority is split over the question of state rights. Chairman Summers of the House Judiciary Committee explains that he is opposed to federal antilynching laws because he is opposed to lynching, and he says "federal intrusion into a governmental problem of the states" would halt progress being made in stamping out mob violence. He is from Texas and he expresses the feeling of nearly all Southern Democrats.

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, shows that lynchings have declined 90 per cent since 1887 with "growth of the humanitarian spirit of the American people." In the 10 years ending in 1896 there were 1583 victims of mob violence, in the next 10 years they numbered 1030, in the next decade 670 and in the 1927-1936 period 151 persons were killed by mobs. Among the major factors contributing to the decline he mentions the tendency of frontier characteristics in the South to disappear, the radio and paved roads and "increasing agitation within the South against lynchings." Newspapers of the South, which have waged a battle against this particularly shocking and brutal form of lawlessness, deserve much credit for the decline.

EARLY ACTION IS SEEN ON MEASURE IN HOUSE TO PREVENT LYNCHINGS

Bloc of 200 Members Prepare To Force Vote; Hearings Set for Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—(UP) House action on anti-lynching legislation within two weeks was indicated tonight under pressure of a bloc of more than 200 members, prepared to force a vote regardless of administration action.

Controversy centered on two major measures. One was the Gavagan anti-lynching bill calling for fines on counties permitting lynchings. The other, the Mitchell bill, would impose fines and jail sentences on law enforcement officers who "without justification" permit a prisoner to be taken away and lynched.

The house judiciary committee arranged hearings starting Wednesday on anti-lynching legislation—scores of proposals which have been politically explosive in recent sessions, and as yet failed to pass congress.

It was authoritatively learned that a major drive to complete a petition to force a vote on the Gavagan bill will be made in the house Monday. The petition, it was reported, carries nearly 200 names of members. A total of 218 is required to force action. Sponsors of the petition said today that they had been promised enough Republican votes to finish the petition Monday. If they succeed, the Gavagan bill will be the order of business in the house on Monday, April 12.

New strategy, however, was under way to block this. It was understood that efforts would be made to have the judiciary committee cut short its hearings so that a compromise anti-lynching bill could reach the floor before April 12.

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL FOES SET HOUSE HEARING

Gavagan Already Has 202 Signatures for Action Measure

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25.—Announcement of hearings on anti-lynching legislation was made today in a surprise move to hold off the last few signatures needed to bring the Gavagan bill to the floor of the House.

Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan of New York, sponsor of the anti-lynching bill which corresponds to the Wagner measure in the Senate, was working on the last batch of the 218 signatures necessary to get the bill out of committee.

Suddenly Chairman Hatton W. Sumners of the Judiciary Committee rose and announced that hearings on some 50 anti-lynching bills would begin next Wednesday.

Sumners is from Texas and is violently opposed to all anti-lynching measures.

Proponents of the Gavagan bill interpreted Sumner's move as an attempt to furnish those who had not yet signed the petition, with the excuse that there was no rush since the hearings would soon take place anyway.

202 SIGNATURES

By the time the House adjourned, there were 202 signatures on the petition with 18 to go. The House will not be in session again until Monday, at which time the backers of the bill hope to get the full quota despite Summers' action.

The House Judiciary Committee buried the anti-lynching bill during the last session of Congress. The 218 signatures were not obtained until the closing hours of the session.

It was too late then for the measure to come up on the floor.

Early passage of the bill by the House is required if any headway is to be made in the Senate. It is known that a bloc of some 20 Senators from the southern states is prepared to filibuster the bill to death. The earlier in the session the bill would come to the Senate, the less chance there would be for a successful filibuster.

Force Measure Before Judiciary Committee

Urge Your Congressman and Senators to support Anti-Lynching Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 2—The 218 signatures on the motion of Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan, necessary to discharge the house judiciary committee were announced this week by Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York. Under the house rules this makes debate and vote on the bill mandatory on April 12. However, Chairman Hatton W. Summers, of Texas, recently promised to begin hearings on the bill immediately if the petition, then being circulated, was called in.

Just prior to the announcement that the necessary number of signatures had been obtained, date for hearings on the measure was set for Wednesday. Whether this will be the procedure or whether the hearings will be delayed until April 12 under the petition, has not been revealed. Meanwhile, citizens and representatives from all over the country are crowding the city to testify before the committee.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 2. (Special)—Backed by Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, Democrat of Illinois, open public hearings by the full House Judiciary committee are scheduled to begin this week on one of the 69 anti-lynching bills sponsored by 54 members.

Hearings began at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Fear that the announcement of Rep. Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the judiciary committee of hearings on anti-lynch legislation, is a subterfuge to block any measure from reaching the floor this session, prompted backing by the N.A.A.C.P. of the move of Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan to discharge the committee.

In the meantime foes of any legal redress for the lynch evil by the United States, are girding themselves for a fight to the end against passage of any bill to outlaw mob murder.

For years the hostilities expressed by Southern representatives toward any bill or measure designed to advance the black man or to put him on a more equal footing as an American citizen have been actively felt, but this is one of the first instances where such hostility has come out into the open. Bitterness on the part of Southerners in defense of "state rights," which can be taken to condone lynching and other kindred evils, is being fought here by a determined cotorie of advocates of racial advancement.

Committee Split On Lynching Bill

Opposition Is Voiced by Several Members of House

WASHINGTON, March 31. (AP)—House judiciary committeemen split sharply over the question of anti-lynching legislation today when public hearings began.

Qualified opposition to the principle of writing federal laws against the crime was expressed by several committee members including Chairman Sumners (D., Tex.).

Representative Guyer (R., Kan.), ranking minority member, and others who had introduced some of the 69 anti-lynching bills now pending were outspoken in their support of such legislation.

Representative Hobbs (D., Ala.) declared it would be "utterly impossible" for the federal government to afford protection to persons threatened with mob violence.

Representative Mitchell (D., Ill.), the only Negro in congress, said he believed enactment of the proposed legislation would "stimulate the effort being made to stamp out lynching."

Mitchell Anti-Lynching Bill Hearings Held

House Subcommittee Hears Argument in Favor Of Law Against Mobs

An effective federal law to prevent lynching, yet so designed as to offer no offense to the South where the majority of the 5,135 lynchings have occurred since 1882, was presented to the House subcommittee on the Judiciary by a group of prominent persons Wednesday during hearings on the Mitchell Anti-Lynch Bill.

The bill named in honor of Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, of Illinois who introduced the measure was favored by all who testified except two who stated that they were supporting the Gavagan bill which is scheduled to come on the floor of the House April 12.

However, all of those to speak before the committee were in favor of legislation to effectively stamp out "America's most horrible crime."

Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advance of Colored People, and Charles H. Houston, chief of the legal staff of the same organization, said that while they are favoring the bill introduced by Representative Gavagan, they feel that some legislation passed by the present Congress is better than none.

They pointed out that they are of the opinion that the Mitchell bill which states that persons taken from peace officers and lynched is not sufficient for the officers may delay arrest of those who may be negligent so as to give a mob opportunity to take its course. Gavagan's bill corrects this possible happening.

Mitchell Introduces Witnesses

Mitchell opened the hearing with a statement in favor of his measure and introduced the witnesses. The first heard was Judge James Cobb who spoke of the constitutionality of the measure. He was followed by Attorney Perry W. Howard who spoke on the bill's practicality. Attorney William E. Dilly, Chicago was the third speaker. He followed Mrs. Vivian Mason, administrative assistant in the Emergency Home Relief Bureau, New York City; J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of Elks; William L. Houston, president of the Washington Bar Association; Hon. [illegible] Reynolds, former Pennsylvania State legislator; Judge Edward W. Henry, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, legislative assistant of the Women's League for Peace and Freedom, and Judge William C. Hueston, commissioner of education for the Elks, were others to testify.

Federal Law Threat

Walter White pointed out to the committee that the decrease in lynching during the past few years was due entirely to the vigorous agitation for Federal legislation and cited figures showing that in 1935 practically all of the lynchings occurred after Congress had recessed.

Representative Hatton W. Sumner, of Texas, chairman of the subcommittee, took exception to a statement by William L. Houston that 13 lynchings occurred in 1936. Sumner said he was accepting the figures of the department of research of Tuskegee Institute which recorded only nine. Houston was using figures compiled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

George H. Ryeraw, commander of the James Reese Europe American Legion, read a resolution of the District Department of the Legion and its national convention which opposed mob law.

The hearings will end today Thursday, and the committee will go into executive session.

punishment by self-appointed commission without trial by law.—Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary of the English Language.)—Editor.

THE APRIL FOOL BILL KILLED

The April Fool, "Mitchell Anti-Lynch bill" met with a crushing defeat in the House of Representatives on last Wednesday. This was a great victory for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which is advocating the enactment of the Gavagan bill, anti-lynching legislation with teeth in it. Congressman Mitchell in this instance, like in all others, ran true to form. We are surprised, however, once an Uncle Tom always an Uncle Tom.

The pity of the matter is that Negroes have to carry such burdens as Mitchell has proved to be.

"You Can Go to H . . ." Mitchell Tells Colleague

It was a much riled Arthur W. Mitchell, representative from Chicago, who strode from the House last Wednesday, after the defeat of his anti-lynching bill by a vote of 256 to 122.

So angry was Mitchell over the snub to his proposed legislation and the "deception" that had been practiced on him that when J. Burwood Daly, Democratic congressman from Pennsylvania, approached Mitchell the latter refused to talk with him.

"I thought you were a gentleman," remarked Daly.

"You can go to hell!" replied Mitchell.

Lynch Law

By JOHN H. ROACH—

May I commend you on your excellent article entitled "Lynch Law" which appeared in the issue of March 20. As a resident of San Jose, California, I know the "feel" of a lynch crowd. I watched men batter down the jail door as officials stood by helpless; I watched crowds of men, women and children pouring into town as news of the lynching spread.

It takes a great deal of will-power to resist the lynch feeling that drives a crowd to murder, and I saw many a "respectable citizen" succumb to it. I expected to see immediate steps being taken for an antilynch law in our State. Instead, our pitiful Governor commended the crowd on its inhuman murder.

Your article makes clear the issue. In your usual lucid and all-inclusive style, you have cleared up a great many doubts that were in my mind and have stated the whole question of antilynching laws plainly.

San Jose, California.

By DR. J. B. VIERS—

In the article "Lynch Law" in the issue of March 20, you state that Massachusetts and four other States have never known a lynching.

I have heard some bad things about a town called Salem. . . . Lusk, Wyoming.

The nineteen persons of Salem, Massachusetts, who were hanged as witches in 1692 were afforded the benefit of trial and sentence. Though the spirit of these hangings was much the same as more recent mob murders, they were not victims of lynch law. (Summary

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5696

FOR FEDERAL ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

From The Richmond Times-Dispatch:

The Times-Dispatch favors the enactment of the Federal anti-lynching bill just introduced in the House of Representatives and shortly to be introduced in the Senate. It sees no hope of ever wiping out lynching, the greatest crime against Southern civilization, except through Federal action.

If every state would enact an anti-lynching law similar to that which Virginia passed a decade ago, lynching could be, almost, if not wholly, obliterated. The Virginia law makes lynching an offense against the State as a whole, subjects all participants in lynchings to charges of murder, and authorizes the Governor to have the attorney-general take charge of prosecution and to spend any sum he (the Governor) deems wise in convicting the guilty parties. There has not been a single lynching in the Old Dominion since that law was placed on the statute books.

But it has become plain that few, if any, of the Southern States will follow Virginia's legislative example. Although the Dyer anti-lynching bill of 1922 and the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill of 1935 would almost certainly have passed, but for the filibusters of Southern senators, most Southern States seem to have learned nothing from these episodes. Southern senators on both occasions expressed profound resentment over the possibility that the Federal Government might be permitted to interfere in the affairs of the States, but they do not seem to have done anything to make such intervention unnecessary.

This newspaper's primary objective is to put a stop to the seemingly endless series of mob murders which have disgraced the South and America before the world. That impresses us as far more important than the preservation of something generally referred to as "State sovereignty" or "State's rights." As long as State's rights are appreciated by the States, and the administrative authorities of the States show that they recognize the duties which accompany the exercise of such rights, this newspaper believes in respecting those rights. But when the phrase, "the rights of the States" degenerates into a mere shibboleth behind which the State and local authorities can ignore and flout the law of the land by permitting lynchers to go unpunished year after year, then The Times-Dispatch believes that intervention by the Federal Government is not only desirable but necessary.

The bill just introduced in Congress provides for such intervention. It provides that any responsible peace officer who fails to make adequate efforts to protect a prisoner from a mob, or to make diligent efforts to apprehend the members of the mob after a lynching, shall be guilty of a felony, and be fined up to $5,000 or imprisoned up to five years, or both. When the attorney-general of the United States is advised through an affidavit from a citizen that an officer is guilty of either of these offenses, the attorney-general initiates an investigation by Federal G-men to ascertain whether the anti-lynching law has been violated. If the conclusion is in the affirmative, action is instituted in the United States District Court against the peace officer or officers. There is no provision for prosecution of members of the mob.

It also is provided in the bill that a county shall be responsible for a lynching occurring within its boundaries, and that a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 may be levied against the county by the United States District Court, and paid to the heirs of the person lynched. If a county can show that its peace officers exercised due diligence in the protection of the victim of the mob, it is not subject to this fine.

Such, briefly stated, are the terms of the act. Some constitutional authorities, including Senator Borah, regard the measure as destructive to State's rights, and hence unconstitutional. Others take the opposite view, and hold that the bill does not conflict with the fundamental law.

Professor Karl N. Llewellyn of the Columbia University Law School has studied the measure carefully, and has rendered an opinion that it is clearly constitutional. He says, in part:

"The Federal Government has the power and the implicit duty to assure to its citizens orderly, due, legal and even procedure in criminal cases at the hands of responsible officials. When States or officials or subdivisions of States are derelict in this regard, the Supreme Court, as one spokesman of the Federal Government will interfere to correct. Congress can intervene to prevent the need for correction, and especially to prevent such dereliction as is irremediable. The general scope of the measure has a clear basis in the due process and equal protection clauses."

On this, as on many other constitutional questions, there is room for difference of opinion, of course. Professor Llewellyn may be wrong, and Senator Borah may be right. But we should like to see the bill enacted and carried to the United States Supreme Court for a ruling. If the Supreme Court holds the law invalid, that will be unfortunate. But something must be done to end the present intolerable situation, and the measure just introduced seems the best way out.

We have seen no formal pronouncement of late on this subject from the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, with headquarters in Atlanta. In the spring of 1935, when the Costigan-Wagner bill was under consideration, the commission met, with its chairman, Dr. W. W. Alexander, presiding, and unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the enactment of Federal antilynching legislation. The commission, which is composed of 130 representative Southerners in 13 States, declared without a dissenting voice that "in not one case in 10 is an effective effort made by the (State or local) authorities to identify and prosecute the members of lynching mobs." It went on to say that "even in the rare cases in which such efforts have been made, indictments have seldom been obtained, and convictions have usually proved impossible."

It is clear, then, that lynching will not be wiped out until there is a new spirit abroad in the land, or until State and local authorities bestir themselves far more vigorously than they have done heretofore. We see no likelihood that either will occur in the measurable future.

One of the most convincing demonstrations that this is true was given in the autumn of 1934, when Claude Neal was taken from an Alabama jail and lynched in Florida. At least 15 hours' notice was given in the nation's press and over the radio that Neal was to be lynched, and from 4,000 to 7,000 white people gathered among them many small children. Neal was put to death with the most unspeakable and unprintable tortures. No one was even arrested.

As long as State and local officials are indifferent to these barbarities, they will continue to occur. We see no alternative but to enact a Federal law with teeth in it, and to let the G-men and the Federal courts go into action.

Negro Congressman Assails 'Lynch' States

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, Illinois Democrat, the only Negro member of Congress, asserted today that "States fighting passage of a Federal law are doing nothing themselves to stamp out lynching." He said Federal action is necessary to stamp out the evil.

A coalition drive of Senators and Congressmen who favor early passage of an anti-lynching law is being blocked in Congress by Southern Democratic leaders led by Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, Texas Democrat, of the House Judiciary Committee.

"STATES' RIGHTS" ARGUMENT

More than 40 anti-lynch bills demanding punishment of local officers who fail to prevent mob violence and mob murders are pending in the Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Robert F. Wagner, New York Democrat, Rep. Gavagan, New York Democrat, and a number of other Democrats from Northeastern states have joined with Republicans in an attempt to override efforts of Southern Democratic leaders to block Congressional action.

Rep. Sumners of the Judiciary Committee, which is sitting on the bills, said he was opposed to the Federal anti-lynching bills "because I am opposed to lynching."

He used the discredited argument that such laws violate state rights.

Wagner challenged "Constitutional objections" that Federal intervention would violate state rights. "Let those who raise these objections remember that our Constitution not only sets up distinct Federal and State powers," he said, "but guarantees that all shall have the right to a fair trial and not be summarily put to death."

Congressman Hits Number Introduced

Congressman Mitchell Says His Bill May Pass In First Session

2-25-37

The outlook for the passage of anti-lynching legislation looks favorable for this first session of the 75th Congress, according to Congressman Mitchell, if the legislative hopper is not cluttered up with too many anti-lynching bills.

Many Congressmen have received bills to be introduced, thereby dissipating the efforts of those endeavoring to concentrate upon a given bill, it was said.

Congressman Mitchell in an interview as to the outlook for the passage of an Anti-Lynch Bill by the House during the first session of the 75th Congress said: "There is no doubt in my mind but that there exists in the House sufficent friendliness and interest on the part of the membership to pass a bill! He said that he had personally interviewed practically half the membership already and found them very responsive to this legislation.

"The one danger" he pointed out, "is what I regard as the unwise tactics resorted to by Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People." He said, "In my opinion the manner in which Walter White is proceeding will tend to defeat the measure rather than to bring it strength. In that connection." He cited the fact that Mr. White is now doing what he did last year—sending any number of Anti-Lynching bills to the various members of the House, requesting them to introduce the bills. Mitchell added:

"The following is copy of a letter which one of the Congressmen has written Mr. White, and it is hoped that it will have the effect of bringing to him the necessity of seriously considering our effort and concentrating in such a way as to pass this legislation without further ado."

"I am in receipt of your letter of January 25. . . support of legislation for Federal aid to the states in stamping out lynching.

"I doubt the efficacy of introducing wholesale an anti-lynching bill in view of the fact that a similar proposal, H. R. 2251, by Mr. Mitchell of Illinois, will no doubt be given precedence by the House Committee on the Judiciary. I have worked along with Mr. Mitchell on this matter, and feel that he is getting somewhere in his effort to bring this bill finally before the Congress. I have every reason to believe that Chairman sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, will cooperate with Mr. Mitchell and afford hearings so that action can be taken. My only hope is that an effective anti-lynching bill will be reported. If there is anything further that you want me to do, I will be glad to co-operate.

Tallahassee, Fla. Democrat
February 26, 1937

Anti-Lynching Law Goes Up Again

Some of the Washington writers see a change in attitude in the south toward lynching as a new bill aimed at extra-legal executions comes up for attention. Prospects of the passage of this bill are considered bright but that is due not so much to a change of attitude in the south as to a change of subject matter in the bill.

What southern senators filibustered to prevent was not a statute to outlaw lynching, which already is contrary to law and subject to severe penalties, but a statute to penalize the entire citizenship of each county in which a lynching might occur. The present measure does not provide for such a penalty.

The objections to the former anti-lynching bill were obvious. It provided a penalty, as we recall about $10,000, to be assessed against each county in which a person was lynched. Such a provision is unjust. Frequently persons are lynched in one county by residents of other counties and most lynchings are carried out by small bands without the knowledge of the general citizenship until the act is done. Why then should the taxpayers of a county be fined to atone for the act of what may have been an irresponsible group of non-residents?

In the recent Marianna lynching the victim was taken from a jail in Alabama and few know in which county or even in which state he was lynched. His body was left in Marianna but that does not prove he was killed there. Would it be fair, under such circumstances, to penalize Jackson county?

The bill now under consideration [illegible] officers who, through their negligence or failure to act permitted lynchings. Our present laws are sufficiently broad to cover such points and the need for such a federal statute is not acute. However, there are fewer objections to such a statute.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
February 23, 1937

Their Contract With Negroes

Were The News and Courier a New Deal newspaper it would advocate federal anti-lynching legislation, so called, pending in congress.

The New Deal's central thought and move are to add to the federal power, the Washington power, and take power from the states. It is hostile to state government, it hates government at home by home people. This principle it would apply in practice in dozens of ways, and a law by which a county sheriff could be arrested for not preventing a lynching, fined $10,000 the county fined, the court house sold for the debt, all this in the United States courts is just one of the ways.

The Southern New Deal Democrats knew well what they were doing in Philadelphia last June.

The Southern senators who postponed the Wagner-Costigan bill by a filibuster knew that it was published that President Roosevelt favored the bill.

The Southern senators knew that Mrs. Roosevelt was an active supporter of the bill. In that she was within her rights. We censure no one for exercising the right of opinion and political action in this republic.

The Southern leaders have known always that the bill once passed would be approved by the Democratic president, or at least they have had every reason to believe it.

The Southern leaders in the Philadelphia convention saw Arthur Mitchell, Democratic negro congressman, prominent in the convention. They knew the intimate alliance between Chairman Farley, Senator Guffey, Governor Earle, Senator Wagner, Senator Van Nuys and their crowd on the one hand and the Northern negroes led by Mitchell, Rainey (son of a "Reconstruction" congressman of Georgetown, S. C.) and the Pittsburgh negro editor on the other.

Well, these Northern negroes delivered the goods November 3, didn't they? They turned in hundreds of thousands of votes for Roosevelt and Garner.

Shall not the Democrats pay their debt to the negroes? Shall they hold back the goods?

Hamilton Fish, Republican, white man, has introduced an anti-lynching bill. It has always been a Republican measure. Dyer, Republican, representing a "black district" of St. Louis, introduced the bill fourteen years ago. Where is the Republican, except Borah, or the loyal New Deal Democrat who is against this measure?

Were The News and Courier a New Deal Democrat it would, as A. B. Williams used to say, "stand to the rack, fodder or no fodder" and be loyal to its Northern Democratic allies and friends, white and black, Wagner, Guffey, Gavagan, Mitchell and the rest. They vote for the AAA. They vote for "soil conservation." They vote for whatever "benefits" South Carolina receives, WPA, PWA, relief, and so forth.

Senator Byrnes, Representative Fulmer, and other New Deal congressmen of South Carolina, from their point of view, would be entirely consistent and justified in supporting a so-called federal anti-lynching bill, and so would Governor Johnston.

The argument against the bill presented by the Texan, Sumners, is conclusive from The News and Courier's point of view—but The News and Courier is an outcast Southerner, not a Roosevelt-Ickes Democrat. Mr. Ickes is a member of the cabinet, and he told negroes in convention in Baltimore during the last campaign that Mr. Roosevelt is the first president since Lincoln to realize that the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments would as well not be in the constitution unless enforced.

Unless Secretary Ickes misrepresented Mr. Roosevelt that means that he would sign a "force bill," establishing federal control of Southern elections, if congress passed it.

Southern leaders in congress will have some support at home if they back the federal anti-lynching legislation. There are white people who believe in it. That The News and Courier believes it foolish as well as infamous does not make it so. There are also some Southerners who do not care what legislation is enacted as long as the "benefits" come and "trade is better."

The News and Courier has neither part nor lot with any Southern man in congress who supports this anti-lynching legislation but it will censure no New Dealer congressman who does. It will say that he is consistent and is doing his part in delivering the goods, the goods promised by Wagner, Farley, Mitchell, to the negro Democrats.

The News and Courier will not stultify itself by criticising New Deal Democrats of the South for refusing to stultify themselves.

His Own Fault

If Arthur W. Mitchell is believed to have played into the hands of lynching's defenders, it is his fault. When first elected to Congress, he made the mistake of leaning over backward to [illegible] being considered spokesman for his people, as his predecessor, Oscar DePriest, had been even though strictly speaking both men represented only the first Illinois district. It was but natural that Mitchell, as the only Negro federal legislator, would be looked to as the one to reflect his people's opinions on public matters.

Lynching is a national shame, as the United States realizes each time that Germany and other nations refuse its moral leadership because it is itself a lawless nation. For that reason, Mitchell, even with no mandate to speak for Negroes generally, is duty bound to oppose lynching with all his might for the sake of his district because both races are helped by law enforcement and hurt by disregard of it.

Mitchell's anti-lynching bill was used to forestall the Gavagan bill, the measure which has the support of the opponents of lynching. For that reason he will have a hard time explaining his indifferent support of the stronger bill and his cooperation with the Texan who refused to let any anti-lynching legislation come of his committee until a demand of 218 Congressmen forced him to act.

Having said he represents the first Illinois district, that is what Mitchell should do. If the past was coincidence and not intent, he has need to help the Gavagan bill which is in keeping with the principles and practices of the people of his district, both white and black. If he lets himself be the pliant tool of southern defenders of lynching, and stops with that decision and principle to escape its consequences. He must act with decision and principle to escape its consequences. He will be despised not only by those whom he has disappointed but also by those who have used him. That first announcement of his was a trap for his own

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5697

Concord, N. C. Herald Observer
February 6, 1937

FOR ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Lynching is one of the greatest crimes against Southern civilization, and The Herald-Observer favors the enactment of the Federal anti-lynching bill which is now before Congress. The measure has already been introduced in the House and will be introduced shortly in the Senate.

Such a federal law would already have been enacted had it had not been for the hue and cry raised by some of the Southern senators who took the position that such would be an invasion of "state sovereignty" or "state rights."

This newspaper believes in respecting state's rights when the States show appreciation of these rights, and when administrative authorities recognize the duties which accompany these rights. But when any State permits lynchers to go unpunished, and this seems to prevail in a number of Southern States, then it seems to us that intervention on the part of the Federal Government is not only desirable but necessary.

The bill now before Congress provides for Federal intervention. It provides that any responsible peace officer who fails to make adequate efforts to protect a prisoner from mobs, or to make diligent efforts to apprehend the members of a mob after a lynching, shall be guilty of a felony, and be fined up to $5,000 or imprisoned up to five years or both.

This bill also provides that a county shall be responsible for a lynching occurring within its boundaries, and that a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 may be levied against the county by the United States district court, and paid to the heirs of the person lynched. Of course, if a county can show that its peace officers did all in their power in the protection of the victim of a mob, it is not subject to this fine.

There are many eminent constitutional authorities who see in this bill a gross violation of state's rights. Nevertheless we think the measure should be adopted, and carried before the Supreme court for a ruling. If invalidated that will be unfortunate. At least it will be a fine start toward ending lynching.

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution
February 22, 1937

In the eight years since Virginia passed its anti-lynching law under spur of editorials for which Editor Louis I. Jaffe, of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, won a nobly deserved Pulitzer prize, there has not been a single lynching in Virginia. That is something for other southern legislatures now in session to consider as demand for a federal law become more and more widespread. Lynching is something which the south can and should defeat with its own force, law and intelligence.

LYNCH LAW: Congress Toys with Wagner-Van Nuys Anti-lynching Bill

3/28/37 Literary Digest

Laconic political observers often bemoan that whenever Congressmen flirt with liberalism, their initial gesture is to introduce an antilynching bill. New York Cit Submerged in Supreme Court speculation, the seventy-fifth Congress already has been swamped with such bills. Since the first Representative thumped into his seat early in January, more than fifty bills have wiggled into the House hopper, more are anticipated every day.

Unofficial statisticians in Capitol corridors list antilynch measures as "reg'lars" along with the bills annually introduced to make Pulaski day an annual holiday; often heard of, seldom followed through.

Presidents Wilson, Harding and Coolidge urged antilynch legislation. In 1933, President Roosevelt publicly reproved the late Governor Rolph of California for "approving disrespect of the law" in the San José mob violence.

At present, the Wagner-Van Nuys Bill is in the offing, stands a fighting chance. Like similar measures at other sessions, it is "a bill for the better assurance of the protection of persons within the several States from mob violence and lynching, and for other purposes."

Negro Vote—Reason for a possible switch in government sentiment for the 1937 proposal is that the Negro vote is now solidly in the Democratic column, can exercise wide political power. From the border States of the South, influential newspapers are likewise favoring its passage.

Government leaders expected to argue pro and con on the issue express divergent views:

Says Sen. Robert Wagner: "The rising sentiment in favor of a Federal anti-lynching law admits no sectional bounds."

Says Sen. William Borah: "I believe in the objective. I believe in what this bill would like to accomplish. But to my mind, this bill completely annihilates State sovereignty. . . . I do not regard it as a sectional bill, but I do regard it as in conflict with the most fundamental principles upon which this Republic rests, and in violation of the spirit and purpose of our dual system of Government."

Says Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, only Negro member of Congress: "States fighting passage of a Federal law are doing nothing themselves to stamp out lynching."

Says Sen. Henry F. Ashurst, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee: "I am opposed to lynching. I am in favor of legislation making lynching a Federal offense."

Says Rep. Hatton W. Sumners, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee: "I am opposed to the antilynching bills, not because I favor lynching, but because I am opposed to lynching. The progress being made under State and local

URGE SIGNATURES ON GAVAGAN HOUSE PETITION

Press Service of the N.A.A.C.P.
3-5-37 New York, N.Y.

Washington, Mar. 5.- All friends of the federal anti-lynching bill are urged to write their congressmen in the House urging them to sign the petition No.5 of Congressman Joseph A. Gavagan, of New York, filed March 3 seeking 218 signatures to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of his resolution No. 125. This resolution sought a special rule to make the Gavagan anti-lynching bill a special order of business on the floor of the House, and to take the bill out of the jurisdiction of the house judiciary committee, where it has been buried due to the hostility of the committee chairman, Congressman Hatton Sumners of Texas. Congressman Sumners has declared he will never grant a hearing on an anti-lynching bill. The Gavagan resolution seeks to circumvent Congressman Sumners by making the bill a special order of business on the floor of the House, without a previous hearing or vote by the judiciary committee. The resolution is property of the rules committee, which has not acted, therefore as his third move Congressman Gavagan has filed this petition No.5 to discharge the rules committee.

It is thought that the 218 signatures to Mr. Gavagan's petition will be secured quickly if voters back home will write their congressmen calling their attention to the Gavagan petition (No.5) and asking them to sign it.

This action will speed consideration of the federal anti-lynching bill which is receiving increased attention even in the face of the hot debates over the proposals for changes in the supreme court.

county responsibility in the development of public opinion and public purpose, is a most favorable indication with regard to crime suppression."

No Hearings—Like many other lawmakers from below the Mason and Dixon Line, the Texan does not want to see the authority for lex talionis taken from the South, placed in Washington. Sumners makes no bones about the fact that there will be no hearings on the Wagner-Van Nuys bill if he can help it. On the other hand, Rep. Hamilton Fish, Jr., has already started a petition to discharge the issue from committee.

According to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, unflagging supporters of antilynch legislation, 261 Congressmen have signified their support of adequate Federal jurisdiction in this question.

From this organization and the Department of Research at Tuskegee Institute further facts are available on the subject.

There have been 5,106 lynchings in the United States since 1882; ninety-nine victims have been women. From 1919 to 1936 inclusive, twenty-five persons were roasted alive and twenty burned after the victims were lynched.

Only one-sixth of the victims have ever been accused of any sort of sex crime. Approximately 200 victims have been proved to be innocent after their deaths.

In 99.2 per cent. of the deaths, no lynchers have been convicted.

So far, in 1937, there had been but a single lynching; an eighteen-year-old Negro at Abbeyville, Alabama. In 1936, there were nine: five in Georgia, two in Arkansas, one apiece in Florida and Mississippi. This is the smallest yearly number on record; the highest, 250, in 1892.

Texas, Georgia, Mississippi and Louisiana have been the leading sites, whereas New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Vermont have never known a lynching.

Virginia Law—A decade ago, Virginia passed a law making lynching an offense against the State as a whole, subjecting participants to murder charges. To bring about necessary convictions, the Governor may spend any sum he thinks advisable and enlist the Attorney General's aid. There has not been a single lynching in the Old Dominion since that law was placed on the State books.

Since 1887, the Federal Government, through the Department of State, has paid $1,000,000 to foreign countries for damages suffered by their nationals through mob violence here. On January 8, 1902, Rep. Edgar Dean Crumpacker, of Indiana, introduced a bill providing for a penalty for persons aiding in the lynching of an alien.

Such persons were to have been tried in Federal courts—a principal point in the 1937 Wagner-Van Nuys Bill. This would strike at the long string of cases decided by verdicts of "death inflicted by parties unknown to the jury" in localities where enforcement of State antilynch laws is not observed.

At first, any such bills introduced in Washington were attacked as unconstitutional because of invasion of State police power rights. Then advocates invoked the Fourteenth Amendment, Sec. 5. In more recent years, along with the definite establishment of a Federal police power right in certain cases, the Fourteenth Amendment clause has been dropped.

So far, however, several hundred antilynch bills have produced thousands of pages of committee proceedings and Congressional Record speeches, but not one Federal statute. Some of the bills wind up in the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate and are forgotten.

HOUSE TO CONSIDER ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP) The House decided today to call up the Gavagan federal antilynching bill for debate tomorrow. It voted, 281 to 103, to discharge its rules committee from further consideration of the legislation and then approved a resolution placing a measure introduced by Representative Gavagan, Democrat, New York, before the chamber tomorrow for six hours' debate.

The house last week refused to consider a less drastic bill offered by the only negro member of congress, Representative Mitchell Democrat, Illinois.

Keystone

At Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., morbid curiosity drew men, women and children to view the hanging body of Rubin Stacey, Negro accused of stabbing a white woman with a pen-knife . . . lynchings continue

Lake City, S. C., News
March 4, 1937

Week's News in Brief

Washington, Feb. 25—A federal anti-lynching bill, similar to that sponsored unsuccessfully for several years by former Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat, Colorado) was introduced in the senate today by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat, New York) and Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat, Indiana). Subject of controversy in the last two congresses, the program in the past has usually seen Southern congressmen lined up almost solidly against such legislation. In a joint statement, Wagner and Van Nuys explained the program would provide punishment for any legal officer "whose negligence leads to the lynching of a person entrusted to his custody". It would levy a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 against any political subdivision "which fails to protect and give fair trial to those suspected or accused of crime".

ANTI-LYNCHING BILLS

To The Commercial Appeal:

I note your editorial with reference to the anti-lynching bills which appeared in your paper and which is very much appreciated.

Somebody asked me the other day about these bills, and I said they are a little different, but have the same objective. You have located the objective. The distressing thing is to find some Southern editors, and organizations like the American Legion, Y. M. C. A., etc., indorsing these bills.

The only possible effect, aside from the demoralizing hurtful effect on lynching itself, is to move us very definitely and very far toward the governmental vassalage of the state and the small units of government in so far as independent responsibility is concerned. While that is important, the effect upon the governmental policy is far more important. The capacity to govern, like all other capacities, is dependent for its development upon its exercise. Nature will not only not give additional capacity when the capacity possessed is not exercised, but it takes away the capacity which is not used.

Fundamentally speaking, whether we are to have a free government or a dictatorial government in this country depends not upon what may happen to the words in our written Constitution, nor upon anything other than the governmental capacity of the people. If that is preserved the present Constitution could be utterly destroyed and we could formulate another constitution, but if governmetal capacity is destroyed our Constitution becomes of no more value than is the constitutional documents in the countries which have borrowed our Constitution, but which have never been able to operate a system of government under it; first, because the Constitution was not rooted in their governmental concepts; and second, because they did not have the governmental capacity to make its provisions effective.

Except by conquest, peoples who have the privilege to operate systems of self-government never fall under the government of the dictator until they have so degenerated in government capacity that they are not able longer to provide in themselves an agency through which the work of government can be done.

Since there has to be government, that fact having been fixed a human necessity, when the people fail, government with no other alternative lays its hand on a dictator.

We are moving very rapidly in that direction. There is a countercurrent which will win, some persons by looking wise and speaking positively may get credit for wisdom if fortune favors their guess, but it can be no more than a guess now. Nobody can see that far ahead now, but all persons may know with absolute certainty that if we continue shifting governmental responsibility away from the people, we will reduce governmental capacity to the point that in ourselves we no longer afford the government an agency that can do the work. Then the dictator.

HATTON W. SUMNERS.
Chairman House Judiciary Committee, Washington, D. C.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5698

Sanford, Fla. Herald
February 23, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bills

Further evidence of the increasing encroachment of the federal government upon the powers of the individual states is shown by the efforts now being made in Congress to secure the enactment by this session of various "anti-lynching bills." More than forty different measures designed for the alleged purpose of preventing lynchings, or to penalize a county or state in which a lynching has occurred, and bringing the punishment for lynching under the federal government, have already been introduced.

All of these bills differ in some respects from one another but in general they all have in common the main idea of transferring the responsibility for dealing with this problem from the local communities to federal authorities. And in most of them occurs the provision that in the event of a lynching in a given county, that county shall pay a fine of $10,000 (or a slightly larger or smaller sum, depending upon the particular bill) to the federal government.

Of course anything of this nature is strictly unconstitutional. The federal government has no more right to fine a county, than the county has to fine the federal government. Under our Constitution the rights and powers of the state are as important as those of the federal government. The federal government possesses only such powers as are expressly delegated to it by the Constitution; all other powers are reserved to the individual states. The problem of dealing with lynching is strictly a state function.

But whether or not a law is constitutional is no concern of those New Dealers in Congress who have long since relegated the basic law of the land to the ashcan, as far as their particular legislative whims are concerned. Sworn to uphold the Constitution, they not only defy it, but seek to destroy it. And if the Supreme Court is packed with men of similar ilk, their efforts will succeed.

Since this is a very grave possibility, it should be interesting to us to consider how this "anti-lynching bill" will work if it becomes a law. Would it be a good law if it were constitutional? Would it really serve to retard lynching? Would it increase respect for the law or would it promote lawlessness? What would be the economic effect of it and what additional burdens would it likely place on the taxpayers?

In the first place we do not believe it is a good law because it is not fair. It deals only with so-called "lynchings" a problem peculiar to the South. It does not prohibit gangland killings, putting a district attorney on the spot, kidnaping, or any of the crimes commonly identified with our northern cities. If a mob of Southern white men takes a wretched negro out and strings him up, that is a "lynching" under the terms of this law; but if a Chicago gang mows down a row of rival racketeers with machine guns, that's still purely a local problem.

Furthermore, a mob in the process of lynching a man is not likely to consider the additional burdens of the taxpayers as a consequence of its act, or whether it will bring a flock of federal agents down on its necks from Washington. Most lynching mobs are in a frenzy and are not likely to consider any of the more delicate aspects of the situation. They have but one thought in mind and all the laws in the world will not alter their course.

In the last quarter of a century tremendous strides have been taken by the local communities themselves in blotting out this evil, not by drastic legislation, but by the slower and more orderly process of education and social enlightenment. The annual lynching record has been reduced from several hundred a year, to the neighborhood of ten, and the good work is steadily continuing. The time for federal action, if there ever was any, has long since past.

However, a more just federal law than the one proposed must be found. As so many newspapers have pointed out in deploring lynchings, "two wrongs do not make a right." The same will hold true in the case of punishing an entire county for what a few lawless citizens may do.

Members of a mob should not go unpunished any more so than their victims if laws are to be respected. Lynchers destroy more than a person's life; they are tearing at the very foundation of freedom on which the Constitution was built.

In assessing punishment on an entire country, the proposed federal law would also be contrary to the tenets of individual liberty.

Dothan, Ala., Journal
February 19, 1937

PENDING ANTI-LYNCHING LAW IMPRACTICAL

The recent lynching of a Negro in Henry county has focused attention on an anti-lynching law now pending in Congress where it has been blocked for several years by Southern Congressmen and Senators who have vigorously fought its passage.

As the Henry county lynching went on record as the first in the nation this year, the first Southern newspaper to view the proposed law as an adequate check on mob violence openly urged its enactment. Since, it has been joined by other newspapers in the South.

Washington observers see in the support of the Southern newspapers an excellent opportunity for the bill to be passed, pointing out that Northern legislators heretofore only half-heartedly supported the bill as they felt it was putting them in a "holier-than-thou" attitude.

There are two outstanding features of the bill. One provides that the county in which a lynching occurs must pay relatives of the victim $10,000, while the other defines a mob as any group composed of as few as three persons.

For some time various states have had laws against lynchings and mob violence subsequently tended to decrease in recent years, but whether due to these laws is problematical. A federal law apparently is the only solution to the problem.

But a federal law such as the one now pending in Congress will not be a satisfactory one. Punishing an entire county for a crime committed by a handful could hardly be interpreted in any sense as fairness.

Under that provision the guilty and non-guilty alike would be punished and even then such an assessment against the county's treasury would not serve to discourage a lawless mob.

Equally unfair is the bill's definition of three persons as a mob. Any three persons could easily put a fourth out of the way and it would be a lynching with the relatives of the slain one becoming eligible for a $10,000 settlement.

There is nothing that can be said in favor of lynch law and this newspaper never has and never will condone the practice, although in the South the problem is entirely different than in other sections. It is a hang-over of Reconstruction Days and still evading a solution.

State laws have proven inadequate and a federal law probably would be effective in combating the practice of irresponsible groups seizing prisoners and stringing them from a tree without benefit of a trial to positively establish guilt.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
February 23, 1937

FOR FEDERAL ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

From The Richmond Times-Dispatch:

The Times-Dispatch favors the enactment of the Federal anti-lynching bill just introduced in the House of Representatives and shortly to be introduced in the Senate. It sees no hope of ever wiping out lynching, the greatest crime against Southern civilization, except through Federal action.

If every state would enact an anti-lynching law similar to that which Virginia passed a decade ago, lynching could be almost, if not wholly, obliterated. The Virginia law makes lynching an offense against the State as a whole, subjects all participants in lynchings to charges of murder, and authorizes the Governor to have the attorney-general aid in the prosecution and to spend any sum he (the Governor) deems wise in convicting the guilty parties. There has not been a single lynching in the Old Dominion since that law was placed on the statute books.

But it has become plain that few, if any, of the Southern States will follow Virginia's legislative example. Although the Dyer anti-lynching bill of 1922 and the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill of 1935 would almost certainly have passed, but for the filibusters of Southern senators, most Southern States seem to have learned nothing from these episodes. Southern senators on both occasions expressed profound resentment over the possibility that the Federal Government might be permitted to interfere in the affairs of the States, but they do not seem to have done anything to make such intervention unnecessary.

This newspaper's primary objective is to put a stop to the seemingly endless series of mob murders which have disgraced the South and America before the world. That impresses us as far more important than the preservation of something generally referred to as "State sovereignty" or "State's rights." As long as State's rights are appreciated by the States, and the administrative authorities of the States show that they recognize the duties which accompany the exercise of such rights, this newspaper believes in respecting those rights. But when the phrase, "the rights of the States" degenerates into a mere shibboleth behind which the State and local authorities can ignore and flout the law of the land by permitting lynchers to go unpunished year after year, then The Times-Dispatch believes that intervention by the Federal Government is not only desirable but necessary.

The bill just introduced in Congress provides for such intervention. It provides that any responsible peace officer who fails to make adequate efforts to protect a prisoner from a mob, or to make diligent efforts to apprehend the members of the mob after a lynching, shall be guilty of a felony, and be fined up to $5,000 or imprisoned up to five years, or both. When the attorney-general of the United States is advised through an affidavit from a citizen that an officer is guilty of either of these offenses, the attorney-general initiates an investigation by Federal G-men to ascertain whether the anti-lynching law has been violated. If the conclusion is in the affirmative, action is instituted in the United States District Court against the peace officer or officers. There is no provision for prosecution of members of the mob.

It also is provided in the bill that a county shall be responsible for a lynching occurring within its boundaries, and that a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 may be levied against the county by the United States District Court, and paid to the heirs of the person lynched. If a county can show that its peace officers exercised due diligence in the protection of the victim of the mob, it is dot subject to this fine.

Such, briefly stated, are the terms of the act. Some constitutional authorities, including Senator Borah, regard the measure as destructive to State's rights, and hence unconstitutional. Others take the opposite view, and hold that the bill does not conflict with the fundamental law.

Professor Karl N. Llewellyn of the Columbia University Law School has studied the measure carefully, and has rendered an opinion that it is clearly constitutional. He says, in part:

"The Federal Government has the power and the implicit duty to assure to its citizens orderly, due, legal and even procedure in criminal cases at the hands of responsible officials. When States or officials or subdivisions of States are derelict in this regard, the Supreme Court, as the spokesman of the Federal Government will interfere to correct. Congress can intervene to prevent the need for correction, and especially to prevent such dereliction as is irremediable. The general scope of the measure has a clear basis in the due process and equal protection clauses."

On this, as on many other constitutional questions, there is room for difference of opinion, of course. Professior Llewellyn may be wrong, and Senator Borah may be right. But we should like to see the bill enacted and carried to the United States Supreme Court for a ruling. If the Supreme Court holds the law invalid, that will be unfortunate. But something must be done to end the present intolerable situation, and the measure just introduced seems the best way out.

We have seen no formal pronouncement of late on this subject from the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, with headquarters in Atlanta. In the spring of 1935, when the Costigan-Wagner bill was under consideration, the commission met, with its chairman, Dr. W. W. Alexander, presiding, and unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the enactment of Federal antilynching legislation. The commission, which is composed of 130 representative Southerners in 13 States, declared without a dissenting voice that "in not one case in 10 is an effective effort made by the (State or local) authorities to identify and prosecute the members of lynching mobs." It went on to say that "even in the rare cases in which such efforts have been made, indictments have seldom been obtained, and convictions have usually proved impossible."

It is clear, then, that lynching will not be wiped out until there is a new spirit abroad in the land, or until State and local authorities bestir themselves far more vigorously than they have done heretofore. We see no likelihood that either will occur in the measurable future.

On of the most convincing demonstrations that this is true was given in the autumn of 1934, when Claude Neal was taken from an Alabama jail and lynched in Florida. At least 15 hours' notice was given in the nation's press and over the radio that Neal was to be lynched, and from 4,000 to 7,000 white people gathered among them many small children. Neal was put to death with the most unspeakable and unprintable tortures. No one was even arrested.

As long as State and local officials are indifferent to these barbarities, they will continue to occur. We see no alternative but to enact a Federal law with teeth in it, and to let the G-men and the Federal courts go into action.

Asheville, N. C., Citizen
February 16, 1937

THE TREND IS TOWARDS IT

That Southern resistance to a Federal anti-lynch law is weakening is evident. Since the Richmond Times-Dispatch came out in favor of such a law several other influential Southern newspapers have indicated that they are either in sympathy with such legislation or not prepared to oppose it.

The Citizen reports this development as perhaps symptomatic. We are not impressed with the arguments brought forward in support of such legislation. Our own view is that it may weaken that sense of local responsibility the development of which and exercise of which can alone develop and maintain a sound civilization. But the trend in this as in so many other matters is to rely upon the power of the Federal government.

O'CONNOR FLAYS JIM-CROW IN CAPITOL

Segregation and jim crowism "right in the shadow of the Capitol" were denounced in the House Monday by Chairman John O'Connor of New York, of the House Rules Committee, in opposing the method in which the Gavagan anti-lynching bill was brought to the floor.

"I should like to see the question of the Negroes in America, 13 million of them, seriously considered by the people of this country and by Congress," declared O'Connor, "and I would like to tell you where to start.

"Start in your capital, the District of Columbia. In the capital of the nation the Negro does not get a square deal. Right in the shadow of the Capitol you have segregation and jim crowism. If that were properly brought to the attention of this nation the people of the 48 states would never tolerate it," the representative said.

Civil Rights Bill Pending

Representative H. B. Konnlmann interrupted the speaker long enough to say that he had introduced a bill now before Congress "dealing with the situation in Washington." Kopplemann was referring to his civil rights bill for the District which would give colored persons the right to attend theatres, restaurants and other public places.

O'Connor objected to the Rules Committees being discharged from further considering the bill. The piece of legislation was forced to the floor by 218 members of the House signing the measure. This procedure automatically takes it out of the hands of the Rules Committee, of which he is chairman.

Procedure Opposed

Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, author of the bill, made the motion to have the committee discharged. O'Conor said "we are considering a motion to discharge the Rule Committee from a matter which was never before the Rules Committee."

In objecting to the parliamentary procedure, O'Conor added "As to the merits of the measure, that is another matter. I feel as keenly and as bitterly against lynching as any man in this House. I despise it; I detest it. I think only the lowest form of a coward that ever crawled the face of the earth would indulge in lynching.

"I would like to have seen this bill brought before the House in the proper orderly way so as to give us an opportunity to vote upon it in the regular parliamentary procedure. But I am talking now about the peculiar situation which confronts us.

"I would like nothing better than to devote the rest of my life to seeing that these 15 million, the largest racial group in the United States, get a square deal in this country."

Method Defended

Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, in defending the procedure said, "The only way we can bring the Gavagan anti-lynching bill before us for debate and vote is by the procedure adopted by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Gavagan).

"The American People are discussing the question of lawlessness arising from the illegal seizure of property through sit-down strikes, which we deplore, that human life is more important, and in this instance we are forced to have a federal anti-lynching law, because in certain sections of the country prisoners are taken away from the constituted authorities and are mobbed and lynched, and the rule of the rope and the faggot prevails.

"This bill has to do with the protection of human life, guaranteed by the Constitution.—The Constitution however, specifically states that no person shall be deprived of grace to our civilization—lynch-life, liberty, or property without ing—almost extinct, dis-due process of law and that is the purpose of the Gavagan bill."

Called "Rape of Justice"

Representative Sam Hobbs, of Alabama, called the bill "a rape of justice." "This bill is itself the rope with which this mob would lynch the constitutional guarantees which we have cherished through the years," Hobbs said. "This bill is not an anti-lynching bill. It is pro-lynching bill. It will stimulate

The result of the vote announced and debate is scheduled for Wednesday.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5699

THE SOUTH TODAY

The New Anti-Lynching Bill

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY

(Copyright, 1936, by Southern Newspaper Syndicate)

Editor's Note: Virginius Dabney, famous Southern editor, author and lecturer, and well-known to readers of this column, has after serving two years as chief editorial writer on the Richmond Times Dispatch, recently been made editor of that paper.

Ever since 1922, when the Dyer anti-lynching bill passed the house of representatives by 230 to 119, and was then filibustered to death by a group of Southern senators, led by the late Oscar Underwood, agitation for legislation of this character has been more or less continuous. An anti-lynching bill sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has just been introduced in both branches of congress. What are its provisions and is it likely to pass?

Apparently the likelihood that congress will adopt an anti-lynching bill is greater now than ever before. The N. A. A. C. P. is putting on all the pressure it can command. It claims to have 261 members of the house and 62 members of the senate already committed—a clear majority in each branch. The overwhelming preponderance enjoyed by the Democrats in congress gives the members of the party from the North and West, where anti-lynching legislation is more favorably regarded, an immense numerical superiority over those from the South. In addition, many Republicans have always been inclined to favor a federal curb on lynching. Had it not been for a seven-day filibuster in the senate in the spring of 1935, the Costigan-Wagner bill would almost certainly have been passed.

* * *

Differs From Former Bill

The bill just introduced, it should be noted, differs from the Costigan-Wagner bill in certain respects. It contains the following provisions:

Any officer who fails to make diligent efforts to protect a prisoner with the result that the prisoner is lynched, or who fails to make diligent efforts to apprehend the members of the mob, shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $5,000 or a prison term of not more than five years, or both.

Whenever a lynching occurs, and information on oath is submitted to the attorney general of the United States that any officer charged with the duty of protecting the victim has neglected to make diligent efforts to do so, or to apprehend the members of the mob after the lynching, the attorney general "shall cause an investigation to be made to determine whether there has been any violation of this act." If he finds that a violation has occurred, proceedings will be instituted against the officer or officers in the United States District court. There is no provision for federal prosecution of members of the mob.

A governmental subdivision shall be responsible, under the bill, for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdiction, and also for any lynching outside that jurisdiction, if the victim was seized within the jurisdiction. Such a subdivision is subject to a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000, unless it can show that proper diligence was used to protect the prisoner.

* * *

May Sue for Damages

Suit for pecuniary damages under the act may be instituted in the United States district court, and shall be brought by the attorney general of the United States, or, if the claimant or claimants elect, by counsel employed by them. The next of kin of the person lynched is paid such damages as are awarded.

What are the principal objections to such a bill? In the first place, many regard it as unconstitutional. Conspicuous among the non-Southerners who are firmly convinced that it is in direct conflict with the organic law is Senator Borah, who has stated many times that it would annihilate the sovereignty of the state.

Another leading objection is that the enactment of the bill might mean a pronounced augmentation of interracial bitterness. The class of whites mainly responsible for lynching would resent the entry of the federal authorities into the field, and the resentment might find expression in more, instead of fewer, outbreaks of mob violence against the Negroes.

It also is contended that the bill is a reflection on the South and that it would interfere with the South's "protection of its womanhood." Senator Smith of South Carolina, in discussing the Costigan-Wagner bill in 1935, spoke of the "very humiliating necessity of going outside the laws at times to vindicate the sanctity of our fireside and the virtue of our women."

* * *

No Federal Action Taken

Some argue, too, that it is not likely the federal courts would be appreciably more effective in securing convictions than the state courts have been. Such critics point out that although a federal court could sit a good many miles away from the scene of the lynching sentiment among the whites there might not be greatly different from that which prevailed in the immediate vicinity of the crime. Opponents of the proposed legislation also cite the indisputable fact that although the horrible and ghastly lynching of Claude Neal in 1934 was an interstate crime, in that Neal was taken from an Alabama jail and lynched in Florida, the federal government took no action.

So much for the arguments against the bill. Whereas there are competent lawyers who question its constitutionality, others regard it as constitutional. Among those may be mentioned Charles H. Tuttle, who filed a brief on behalf of the Costigan-Wagner measure when it was up for passage in 1935, and Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn of the Columbia University law school. Mr. Tuttle contends that "nothing in our national constitution prevents our national government from undertaking such an act of self-preservation, and from protecting itself against the consequences of the break-down of due process of law through state inaction and of wholesale discrimination in the effective protection of mob rule." He cites the section of the constitution which says that the United States shall guarantee to every state "a republican form of government," as well as the Fourteenth amendment, which provides that no state shall deprive any person of "life, liberty or property without due process of law." He likewise directs attention to the section of the same amendment which endows congress with the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

* * *

Few Results Obtained

It is also argued on behalf of the bill that the states have had decades in which to put a stop to lynchings with few clearly discernible results. The reduction effected since 1920 is substantial, but for the past ten years the number of mob murders committed annually has remained approximately the same. It seems obvious that as long as the present method of handling lynchers—or of not handling them—is unchanged, lynchings will continue. Lynchers have been punished for only three of the 84 lynchings which took place from 1931 to 1935, inclusive, and the penalties in those three cases were light.

We have had such fiendish performances as the burning alive of Henry Lowry at Nodena, Ark., in 1921, and the savage and unprintable tortures of Claude Neal, who was put to death near Greenwood, Fla., in 1934, both lynchings having been announced in advance by the newspapers. Word of the real lynching was broadcast by radio and in the press 14 to 15 hours before it occurred, and a crowd of from 4,000 to 7,000 white persons from several states, including many children, gathered to witness the Negro's prolonged agony. No one was punished.

Advocates of a federal anti-lynching bill see in such a measure the only hope of putting a stop to such barbarities. To the argument that lynchings are necessary to protect Southern womanhood, they retort that fewer than one-fourth of the persons lynched since 1890 have even been accused of assaults upon white women.

* * *

Many Women Favor Bill

As a matter of fact, various groups of prominent Southern women have declared emphatically that they do not regard lynching as a defense of womanhood, but rather as a blot on Southern civilization. These include the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching and the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Methodist body endorsed the Costigan-Wagner bill at its annual session in 1934, but the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching opposed the measure. The commission of Interracial Co-operation, headed by Dr. W. W. Alexander, with headquarters in Atlanta, was skeptical for years concerning the value of federal intervention in lynchings, but in 1935 it voted unanimously in favor of a federal anti-lynching law. The Costigan-Wagner bill was indorsed by execuutive bodies of the Young Women's Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Federal Council of Churches, the Protestant Episcopal, Congregational and the American Federation of Labor, as well as by other organizations.

It seems probable, in view of this widespread support, that the anti-lynching bill just introduced will pass. If so, its passage will be due primarily to the failure of most Southern states to stamp out the hideous crime which has disgraced them before the world.

VIRGINIUS DABNEY

Selma, Ala. Times
February 14, 1937

A FEDERAL ANTI-LYNCHING LAW

The usually wise Representative Hatton Sumners, of Texas, has argued against a Federal anti-lynching law less convincingly than an Alabama mob has just argued for one.

Representative Sumners says that lynchings have declined under State enforcements from 3.4 victims per million persons in 1892 to about .07 per million in 1936. But last week fifty men broke into an Alabama jail, hanged and riddled with bullets an 18-year-old negro and escaped without arrest. It was the first lynching of 1937, that's true, and first in Alabama for five years. But last year there were nine lynchings, and in the last fifty years there were 5,000. How much the threat of a Federal law agitating Congress for the last four years has had to do with the decrease no one can tell, but doubtless it has been an important factor. What would happen if that threat were removed by shelving the pending Wagner-Van Nuys bill?—New York World-Telegram.

Burlington, N. C. Times
February 13, 1937

SHOULD BE "MUST" BILL

ALTHOUGH THE VIRTUOUS head of State's rights will undoubtedly be reared by ardent Southern statesmen to quell it, still we believe that—just for the good of Dixie's soul if for no other reason—a new anti-lynching measure should be introduced in Congress.

It's hardly possible that such a measure would pass, of course, for the law-making flower of the South will play the tune of State's rights even to a crescendo of filibustering if necessary to defeat such an "insult to the South". And then the good old principle of State's rights, having served its perennial purpose as the best of political alibis for avoiding that which hints of liberalism, will again be interred until another child labor bill or anti-lynching measure or something similar is proposed and the old shibboleth has to be refurbished.

Lynchings seem to be on the decline in the South, to judge from statistics, and those who say that such a trend is a good thing are right. A decline in ynching is a good thing. But it isn't good enough. There must be a total cessation of lynching. And the only way to do it is by a Federal statute, phrased as either was the Costigan-Wagner bill which was repulsed last session, or phrased adequately to punish and punish heavily any county in which a lynching occurs.

The anti-lynching measure proposed by Senators Costigan and Wagner fined any county in which a lynching occurred $10,000—the money going to the family of the victim. It also proposed harsh strictures against law enforcement officers who give evidence of not having attempted to prevent a lynching to the best of their ability. But the bill didn't pass. Why? Ask those Southern gentlemen who orated passionately against it in the name of State's rights.

And what States, following the defeat of the measure because it interferred with State's rights, then turned around and enacted separate anti-lynching measures? Ask those same Southern gentlemen. You won't get an answer.

Examples of members of a lynching mob being punished for the criminals that they are, and of officers of the law who failed to prevent a lynching being deprived of their office and punished for the inexcusably lax officials that they are, are so rare as to be phenomenal.

Lynchings are not confined to the South. By no means. But the sad fact is—they predominate in the South. And it is from the South that a concerted drive to wipe out this bestial stigma and disgrace must originate, if not by individual State action, then by emphatic demand for a Federa anti-lynching measure.

Albany, Ga., Herald
February 12, 1937

This Is My Personal Column

By H. T. M.

ANTI-LYNCHING. For years South... BACK ... Senators ... and Representatives have bitterly resisted all attempts to enact an anti-lynching bill. They have resisted with argument and with parliamentary strategy. They have declared of those seeking to enact anti-lynching measures (and there have been many such moves): "They shall not pass!"

Now there is more likelihood of the enactment of a Federal anti-lynching law than there has been in years. An influential Southern newspaper has done the unheard-of thing of advocating such a law.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch, published for many years in the city that was the last capital of the Southern Confederacy, and in a state where Southern traditions are most strongly entrenched, recently printed a two-column editorial demanding of Congress that it pass a law to curb lynching. The editorial appeared on the very day that a mob took a Negro prisoner from a jail in Southeastern Alabama, strung him to a tree and riddled his body with bullets. The Negro deserved to die, but the white people of the county in which his crime was committed owed to him and to their state that he be given an orderly trial and punished as the law intends.

DEMANDED BY SOUTHERN PAPER

The argument the Richmond paper uses in support of its demand is that the Southern states refuse to deal adequately with the lynching evil, therefore the Federal government should take cognizance of a state of affairs which menaces law and order more seriously the longer it is ignored. Virginia enacted a drastic anti-lynching law ten years ago, and its effectiveness is proved by the fact that not a single lynching has since occurred in that state.

The bill now in Congress may not pass. The chances are against its early passage, but the fact that one of the South's leading newspapers takes a bold stand for something against which a united South has stood for many years is deeply significant. Other Southern papers will follow the Times-Dispatch's example, and states which have made no serious attempt to deal with the problem through their own courts will do well to do some solemn thinking—and be solemnly warned.

The New York Herald-Tribune is impressed with the significance of the Richmond paper's stand, which it sees as perhaps "the beginning of the end" of lynching as a crime. In the course of a thoughtful editorial, The Tribune-Herald says:

"There has been small hope of a Federal bill so long as it has seemed to represent a holier-than-thou attempt by a moralistic North to coerce the South into a solution of a Southern problem. But when the South itself begins to look at a Federal act as no more than a convenient mechanism to assist it in meeting the problem of its own accord the whole position changes. The Northern states had no hesitation in inviting the Federal government under the kidnaping law, to assist them in combatting that horrible crime. The editorial in The Richmond Times-Dispatch means that lynching is falling from its status as a sectional issue to that of an equally horrible crime, appropriate to similar treatment. And that, in turn, means the beginning of the end of lynching."

There should be no "alibying" by the South's spokesmen, in Congress or elsewhere. We want no Federal anti-lynching bill, but we have cordially invited it for fifty years.

In the eight years since Virginia passed its anti-lynching law, under spur of editorials for which Editor Louis I. Jaffe, of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, won deservedly Pulitzer prize, there has not been a single lynching in Virginia. That is something other Southern legislatures now in session to consider a demand for a federal law become more and more widespread. Lynching is something which the south can and should defeat with its own force, law and intelligence.

Sebring, Fla. Highland American
February 13, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING

The inflow of anti-lynching bills has swelled to 28, most of them identical. Representative Sacks of Pennsylvania noted that he introduced one "by request." His office informed us that it was at the request of the Association for Advancement of Colored People. Presumably each one introducing such a bill would be pledged to it.

The government printer estimates printing bills cost $4.75 a page. Each lynching bill has 8 pages total $38, or $1,064 for the 28 introduced.

In form these bills parallel the one filibustered to death two years ago by southern senators. Police officials in an area where a lynching occurs would be subject to prosecution in a federal court a $5,000 fine and five years' imprisonment. The victim or his survivors also could sue in federal court for $2,000 to $10,000 damages from the defaulting officials. The attorney general would be required to prosecute both the criminal action and the suit for damages unless the victim chose other counsel for the latter. No pre-payment of court costs would be required of the claimants, thus making it possible for impoverished negroes to get action.

Our ...ored Congressman

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell considers himself persecuted by his race—so he said in a recent speech. Perhaps by this time he has learned that his race considers him the persecutor.

Few, if any, newspapers or public utterances supported him in his fight to side-track the Gavagan anti-lynching bill for his own, a weaker one.

While the Congressman from Illinois decries his suffering at the hands of his own people and indulges in a martyr complex, he seems to be unmindful of the fact—or at least he does not admit it—that his people support him when they believe his actions are in keeping with the best interests of their racial group.

For instance, they supported the Representative when he named a young Negro, James L. Johnson, Jr., to the Naval Academy.

But in this case the Congressman seems to have lost his original intention and let the race down. For a while he had raised the Negro's hope and led him to believe that he would stage a fight-to-the-finish in the case of Johnson's dismissal.

Whether the young man was railroaded from the Navy school could have been proved only by the thorough investigation promised by the Congressman, who boasted of having a briefcase filled with evidence to present to the White House.

What happened to this evidence, only Mr. Mitchell knows. It seems that such evidence should have been made public, so that the public would know the facts involved in the case.

Mr. Mitchell went to the White House with the papers containing the evidence and after his trip there no more was heard of the matter. What happened? The last statement heard from him was that the Secretary of the Navy had upheld the actions of the Academy and he, therefore, washed his hands of the matter.

Persecution is often a delusion of those who feel that they have fallen short of what was expected of them.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5700

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
April 22, 1937

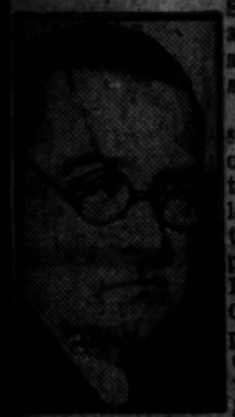
The Battle Over The Federal Anti-Lynching Bill

* * * * * * * * *

Dutcher Says Struggle May Center On Variance Of Two Measures Proposed

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON. — Chances for a federal anti-lynching act are good unless the anticipated filibuster of a few southern senators is supported by obstruction from the Senate leadership and apathy among the measure's friends.



DUTCHER

Assuming passage, there will be one deficiency in the law if it follows the model of the Gavagan bill passed by the House. For the Gavagan bill applies its penalties only in cases where a prisoner has been taken into custody before being seized by a mob.

It carries an obvious incentive for local officers, discovering the possibility of mob action and fearing federal prosecution, to refrain from arresting suspects and then leave them to the mob.

The Wagner-Van Nuys bill, now with the Senate Judiciary Committee, extends to cover all cases of persons accused, suspected or convicted of crime, who are lynched or injured by mobs in denial of trial by the regular process of law.

The Gavagan bill, on the other hand, provides — as the Senate bill does not — for federal prosecution of members of lynching mobs in cases where local or state authorities have not acted within 30 days.

Supporters of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill think they can bring enough pressure on the majority leaders, Senators Joe Robinson of Arkansas, and Pat Harrison of Mississippi, to give the measure a place on the calendar sooner or later. They will then be faced by a filibuster which will be led by "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina. Smith, Tom Connally of Texas, and Josiah Bailey of North Carolina headed the filibuster which two years ago was used to sidetrack the Costigan anti-lynching bill. Smith is known as repeating that such legislation is a crime against southern womanhood. His vehemence is counted as an asset by supporters of the bill.

* * *

Want Colored Vote

In the background will be the desire of northern Democratic leaders to hold the colored vote, which deserted the Republican party almost en masse in the last election. Most opposition speeches in the House were based on the Gavagan bill's alleged unconstitutionality, violation of state rights and interference with a purely southern problem.

Aside from the difference previously noted, the House and Senate bills provide that officers who fail to make diligent efforts to prevent prisoners from being lynched shall be subject to a $5000 fine and five years in prison; that officers who conspire with mobs may be imprisoned from five to 20 years; and that any county in which a prisoner is injured or killed by a mob may be sued by the victim's family for from $2000 to $10,000.

A who's who of the House leadership can be found in the list of those who voted against the Gavagan bill, which passed by 277 to 119. Among those voting nay were Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Chairman Bob Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee, Chairman Sam McReynolds of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Chairman Hatton Sumners of the Judiciary Committee and other southern leaders.

* * *

Say Sentiment Increased

Representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People say 64 senators have promised to vote for the Wagner-Van Nuys measure, and that sentiment for an anti-lynching law has vastly increased, especially in the south and among southern women's organizations.

Among congressmen voting against the Gavagan bill were the three wealthy land owners who, as members of the House Agriculture Committee, were instrumental in burying the administration program to aid tenant farmers and sharecroppers—Kleberg of Texas, Coffee of Nebraska, and Fulmer of South Carolina.

This coincidence is noteworthy because the N. A. A. C. P. recently showed that eight of the lynching victims of 1935 and 1936 had been accused solely of union activity in the organization of sharecroppers and tenants. Others were lynched for fighting with white men, drunkenness or disrespect.

FT DODGE IOWA MESSENGER
THURSDAY APRIL 15 1937

A LAW TO STOP LYNCHING

Congress again is considering legislation which would aim to put a stop to lynching. Anti-lynching proposals are nothing new for congressmen. They have seen them introduced in one form or another every year since the World war. But the senate—because of its rules encouraging filibusters—seems to be the stumbling block for successful passage of anti-lynching legislation. Advocates of such measures believe that the bills could be passed if only a vote could be obtained in the upper house. The greatest opposition comes from senators from the south. They fight to the bitter end and use any weapon available.

Southern opponents of anti-lynching proposals gain recruits from the followers of Senator Borah—Idaho's number one congressman stoutly insisting that such measures would be unconstitutional. Supporters of the laws, on the other hand, insist that if a political unit fails to protect a person against mob violence or properly to prosecute his assailants, that person has been denied due process of law and the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the constitution.

Still others who feel that such legislation may be held constitutional fear that it would be ineffective. They point out that lynchings go unpunished in states with anti-lynching laws, and that if state court jurors will not vote to punish the lynchers, probably federal court jurors in the same community would have the same experience. Records indicate, however, that recently state laws have been better enforced.

Tuskegee Institute reports 9 lynchings in 1936 as against 20 in 1935, 15 in 1934 and 28 in 1933. Since 1882 an average of about 85 persons were lynched each year, but before 1900 the number ran about 100 annually whereas since the World war the average per year has fallen under 25, thus showing a general tendency toward law enforcement.

The anti-lynching bills introduced in congress are almost identical. They penalize officials who neglect their duty of protecting an individual in their custody, or of prosecuting persons who injure him.

Counties in which mob violence occurs are to be fined. Federal courts shall try, under the laws of the state, any member of a lynching mob, if jurors available for local courts are manifestly opposed to punishing persons guilty of mob violence.

Admittedly the atrocities of lynching are horrible enough to arouse the emotions of the whole nation, but extravagant sentimentalizing will not relieve the United States of this blight on its system of justice. The solution to the problem lies in the hands of those persons who are in a position to intelligently examine the practice and to pass legislation in accordance with their discoveries. This power rests in congress.

Rome, Ga News-Tribune
April 14, 1937

TARVER BLASTS ANTI-LYNCHING BILL IN HOUSE

Seventh District Congressman Claims Gavagan Measure "Unconstitutional"

BILL "RABID PROPOSAL," HE SAYS IN STATEMENT

Fight For Enactment Intensified By Double Lynching In State Of Mississippi

WASHINGTON, April 14.—(INS) Supporters of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill today predicted that the Mississippi lynchings would "intensify" desire to pass the measure, but opposition forces said "it was beside the issue."

Rep Mitchell (D) of Illinois, only negro member of Congress, declared:

"The House is going to pass the bill anyway, but the Mississippi outrage will undoubtedly intensify interest, and to provide a direct appeal to the Senate to approve the bill.

Rep. Tarver (D) of Georgia, an opponent of the measure, asserted:

"While I very deeply regret the occurrence in Mississippi, as undoubtedly the whole nation does, it has no bearing on the fundamental question before the House in connection with this bill. The issue at stake is whether state authority or federal government is to control or punish this crime.

"As to the effect it will have on the House membership I don't think there will be any one way or the other."

Tarver warned the South to "pause to consider" what the attitude of new justices appointed by the President under his Supreme court plan would be on the constitutionality of the measure.

"If the President favors this bill, as is currently reported, will the men he appoints to the court be in favor of it also and vote to uphold its constitutionality," Tarver asked the House.

Claims Measure Illegal

"If that legislation passes, what character of men, with what views upon the race problem may be appointed to the court?"

"Let those who support too readily the idea of greatly increasing the Supreme court pause to consider, especially the people of the South."

Tarver charged "there can be no reasonable doubt" that the Gavagan measure is unconstitutional.

Declaring the Supreme court "has been our protection against rabid proposals" affecting the race problem, Tarver discussing possible ap-was "regrettable."

Athens, Ga. Times
April 16, 1937

TORRID DEBATE FIRES SOLONS OF DIXIE STATES

Scores of Negroes Sit In Gallery During Hot Session

WASHINGTON, April 15—(UP)—In one of the most fiery sessions in years the house tonight beat down stubborn opposition and passed the drastic anti-lynching bill, the first such measure to obtain approval in 15 years. All attempts to emasculate it with amendments were defeated.

The bill expected to encounter a rockier road in the senate where southern democrats are prepared to oppose it as an invasion of state rights. Also Senator Borah served notice in sharply worded statement today that he is aginst it.

"At a time when the people in the states are having the greatest success in dealing with the lynching problem, Borah said, "this measure is put forth to place stigma of condemnation upon their efforts and brand the people in the states as will fully neglecting their duty."

Rep. Hamilton Fish, R., N. Y., angered southern democrats opposing the measure when he demanded that they swing over to support the bill and "end these blood-thirsty mobs."

Southerners retorted that the bill would violate states rights, would destroy county governments, and would be unconstitutional.

Scores of negroes were in the galleries as the debate progressed.

Fish shouted that the mob which lanched the two negroes in Duck Hill "probably will never be brought to trial" and contended that the recent incident "ought to make southern democrats support this bill."

Rep. Zebulon Weaver, D., N. C., member of the house judiciary committee demanded [illegible]

[illegible] victims, Roosevelt Townes and [illegible] McDaniel, were taken [illegible] officers as they were being ca[illegible] from the courthouse where they had been arraigned on charges of murdering the white man.

The terrified negroes were taken to Duck Hill, scene of the Windham slaying, tied to trees and tortured with the searing flame of a blow torch across their naked chests. Townes died of the flames and after McDaniel had undergone indescribable torture, he was shot through the head.

The mob, by this time, had grown to some 500, including women and small children, who looked on the gruesome scene.

The negroes were snatched from the jurisdiction of the circuit court, now in session here. They had entered pleas of not guilty to the murder charges before Judge John Allen.

No Indication of Violence

A spokesman for Judge Allen said: "Judge Allen wants this impressed—that there had been no indication up to that time that violence was impending. There were very few in the courtroom."

Sheriff E. H. Wright termed it an "orderly mob." There were about 40 men in the mob when the negroes were seized from the officers, but approximately 500 were present when the negroes were lynched—12 miles north of Winona.

Sheriff Wright said:

"It was most unexpected, but it was an orderly mob. As I was bringing the two prisoners out of the courthouse about a half-dozen men grabbed me and pushed me back against the wall. Two deputies standing near me tried to prevent mob violence, but they were also grabbed. I pleaded with the mob to let the law take its course but to no avail. I shall use every means possible to bring those responsible for the mob before the bar of justice."

Victim's Kin Looks On

District Attorney Clarence Morgan revealed that he was talking to Windham's father-in-law at the time the negroes were lynched. He said when he looked out the window, after hearing noises, he saw the mob taking the negroes away in automobiles.

The mob drove to a spot about a mile from the store in which Windham was slain. After the negroes had been tied to trees, a blow torch was applied to their chests and they were told to confess the crime. Townes confessed he shot Windham and McDaniel said he robbed the store afterward.

[illegible] of the negroes implicated a [illegible] by the name of "Shorty." He [illegible] by the mob and escaped.

[illegible] told of drastic steps taken in North Carolina to punish lynchers.

"There is no good negro in the south today who does not have the love and protection of the white man," Weaver said. "We have real men in the south like our sheriffs who are ready to lay down their lives to defend the law."

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners of the house judiciary committee, an opponent of the bill said he "got pretty mad" about the Mississippi lynchings "and was almost ready to join the mob ready to lynch the constitution."

He then asserted that public opinion in the states had steadily decreased the number of lynchings.

"If you want to see the lynchings stopped," shouted Sumners, "let the states do their part for they have rapidly reduced lynchings."

"We of the south have a bad and dangerous situation but we say to you "for God's sake stay out because we know more about it than you do," he pleaded.

Montgomery, Ala. Journal
April 15, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING VOTE LOOMING

Proponents Predict Approval for Gavagan Measure in Showdown Fight

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, April 15.—House sponsors predicted "two to one" approval today for the Gavagan anti-lynching bill in a showdown expected to follow sectional lines. The measure would impose heavy fines and prison terms on peace officers from whose custody a prisoner is taken and lynched.

Chairman Sumners (D), Texas, of the judiciary committee, leader of southern opposition to the bill, would make no predictions on the outcome. He said his group would make every effort to defeat it as an unnecessary invasion of states rights. Republicans decided at a recent conference to support the bill which also would punish mob members and make the county pay damages to the victim's family.

Harlan Hearing Renewed

The senate civil liberties committee pored over the income tax reports of some Harlan county, Ky., officials in connection with reports of "anti-union terrorism." High Sheriff Theodore Middletown, described in testimony of Lawrence Dwyer, a union organizer, as "the worst article we ever had in Harlan county," was called to the stand.

Chairman Connery (D), Massachusetts, of the house labor committee, predicting early passage of new wage and hour laws in congress, said he still believed the 30-hour week the best solution of unemployment.

Montgomery, Ala. Journal
April 16, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL IN SENATE

Filibuster Action Looms on House-Approved Gavagan Measure

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Congressional leaders predicted today the first anti-lynching bill to pass the house in 15 years would encounter greater opposition in the senate. Filibusters have killed every previous attempt to win senate approval of such legislation.

Even as the house adopted the Gavagan bill late yesterday 277 to 119, Senator Borah (R), Idaho, criticized what he called an effort to "force through congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

Sectional Clash Looms

Southern senators were preparing to oppose the measure, forecasting warm sectional debate, similar to that which punctuated argument in the house. Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said that although the legislation would not stop lynching, "it will check lynching and encourage respect for the law."

The Gavagan bill provides that an officer who permits a prisoner in his custody to escape, or to be injured or put to death by a mob would be subject to a maximum fine of $5,000 and a maximum prison term of from 5 to 25 years. Participants in mob violence would be subject to similar prison terms, and the county in which a prisoner is seized or put to death would have to pay his family damages ranging from $2,000 to $5,000.

Charleston, S. C., Evening Post
April 15, 1937

NO SPECIAL LAW NEEDED

Because of the lynching of two alleged murderers by a Mississippi mob just at the time when Congress is considering its second anti-lynching bill of the sessic is no reason for opponents of the measure to feel that their position is shaken. In recent years the crime of lynching has almost disappeared from sections where it was formerly common, because of the prevalence of more enlightened views. There were only eight lynchings in the entire country last year, whereas fifty years ago the number of persons suffering death in this outrageous manner averaged annually about one in every 300,000 of the population. The record speaks for itself. It is a clear demonstration of the fact that the situation is a long way from demanding special federal legislation, especially at this time, unless the gratification of northern politicians seeking the support of minority groups is given consideration.

The first proposed federal anti-lynching law submitted to the present Congress was killed little more than a week ago. Its defeat was without significance in the country at large mainly for the reason that if it had been passed it would hardly have achieved its objective. And there is nothing to indicate that its successor, if adopted, will serve a more useful purpose.

The States already have anti-lynching laws of their own. Compared with the steady improvement in public sentiment their influence has been negligible in reducing lynching almost to the vanishing point. If the States are unable or unwilling to enforce their own laws against lynching, it is hardly likely that they will enforce those of the federal government. The federal prosecuting officers will have to depend for their verdicts upon the courts and juries in the same States where the crimes occur.

For example, if the Gavagan bill, which the House of Representatives at Washington is considering, were now in force, three Mississippi peace officers, a sheriff and two deputies would be answerable in federal court for "failure or neglect" properly to protect their prisoners or apprehend members of the lynching mob, and the county wherein the lynching occurred would be liable to a fine of from [illegible] to $10,000. From all appear[illegible] there is little chance of passage in the senate.

Washington, April 7.—The South Carolina delegation voted solidly to-day against taking up the Mitchell anti-lynching bill which was defeated on roll call.

The House next Monday will vote on taking up the Gavagan anti-lynching bill under a discharge rule. This is expected to pass but

Edgefield, S. C. Advertiser
April 14, 1937

S/C. Group Against Anti-Lynching Bill

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5701

Greensboro, N. C., News
April 8, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill Beaten By Majority Vote In House

Measure Supported By Chicago Negro Representative Side-Tracked, Presumably For More Drastic Measure Proposed By New York Member.

Daily News Bureau and Telegraph Office
823 Albee Building (By Leased Wire)

Washington, April 7.—The house this afternoon declined by a decisive majority to consider the Mitchell anti-lynching bill, a maneuver which some of the members themselves did not fully comprehend, judging from the conflicting explanations given of their conduct.

The anti-lynching bills are loaded, politically, for many of the members, and for this reason marked interest was manifested in the proceedings. For a time there was a threat of a filibuster as roll calls were demanded.

The bill which the house refused to take up today was that sponsored by Representative Mitchell, the negro Democratic member from Chicago. It contained provisions for imposing fines and prison sentences on officers who permit mobs to take away prisoners, and counties would be liable for damages for the benefit of relatives of persons lynched.

But at that, the Mitchell bill was less drastic than the one introduced by Representative Gavagan, Democrat, who represents the Harlem, or negro district of New York city. The latter bill, while more severe in its terms, will, it was explained, be passed by the house the first of the week.

Makes Little Sense.

This seemed to make almost no sense at all. Some described it as a three-way fight. One group objected to the enactment o. any legislation at all of this character, another group favored the Gavagan bill, and still another group the Mitchell bill. The idea was, said the strategists, to pass the more drastic bill on the theory that southern members of the senate would have less trouble in heading it off. Other members declined to follow the lead of the Chicago negro, although he is a Democrat in good and regular standing.

Mitchell gave his own version of what the house had done when he said the Republicans and the New York delegation had made common cause against him, the Republicans because they were trying to recapture the negro vote that in many of the pivotal states was thrown to the new deal last November, while the Democrats in the Empire state wanted passed the bill that had been introduced by one of their own number. Moreover, said Mitchell, he had declined to be influenced by the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, an organization which then got behind the more drastic proposal of the member from the Harlem district.

House Approval Expected.

It is quite generally assumed that the Gavagan bill will receive house approval next week, but the element of doubt is not altogether lacking. Some think as the bill of the New Yorker will not have much chance in the senate, the same factors, the more severe punitive terms of the measure, may make it possible to command a majority against it in the house. The administration would probably suffer some embarrassment, should matters so eventuate. The negroes are expecting anti-lynching legislation from the new deal, and they are expecting this just as much as John L. Lewis is expecting support for his labor policies.

Most of the members from the southeastern states are found in opposition to the anti-lynching bills, first on the ground that such legislation would be unconstitutional, an interference with the authority of the states, and because they feel that the crime of lynching is not nearly so serious as in times past. Major Bulwinkle said today legislation of this character would be clearly unconstitutional, and that a crime might be committed in one county, a lynching occur in another county, and the latter county could be held responsible, with damages to pay.

Clark Says Bills Invalid.

Representative Bayard Clark commented that the pending bills were rottenly unconstitutional. If such a law should one day be declared invalid by the Supreme court, even the President would be impelled to approve, said Mr. Clark.

Representative Lindsay Warren thinks Senator Borah has said the last, and the best word on the subject. The elder statesman from Idaho has always doubted the constitutionality of anti-lynching legislation, and his saying so cost him much support at Cleveland, when he sought the Republican presidential nomination.

Representative Hancock today voted with the minority that favored immediate consideration of the Mitchell bill, a bill which as before stated, is considered less objectionable than that offered by Representative Gavagan, and which many expect the house to accept next week. Mr. Hancock would have been perfectly willing, as contemplated in the Mitchell bill, to make lynching a federal offense, as is kidnaping. In reality, Mr. Hancock saw in the Mitchell bill ample protection for honest and conscientious law officers, who protect their prisoners so far as humanly possible. He thinks if a county elects a sheriff who fails in the performance of a manifest duty, allowing a man to be killed or injured, such county should be held liable and thus compelled to make restitution.

Must Maintain Law, Order.

Besides, said Mr. Hancock, there was never a time in the world's history when it was more important to maintain law and order. He may find it impossible, however, to support the Gavagan bill unless amended in some particulars.

Representative Fish, of New York, said tonight:

"The house refused to consider the Mitchell bill because it does not represent the views and wishes of the colored people of America. It is considered an emasculated anti-lynching bill, and a mere political gesture and camouflage. I communicated today with the editors of the six largest colored newspapers of the country and they were unanimously in favor of the Gavagan bill.

"Even the Chicago Defender, in the home city of Representative Mitchell, urged passage of the Gavagan bill. Editor Robert [illegible] Vann, of the Pittsburgh Courier with a circulation of 175,000, wrote me today that 'intelligent negroes everywhere very much prefer Gavagan bill.'"

Griffin, Ga. News
April 13, 1937

Georgia's House Members Line Up Against Anti-Lynching Measures

WASHINGTON, April 12.—(AP)—Georgia's house members apparently have lined up solidly against anti-lynching bills in the house.

They joined a two-to-one house majority Wednesday in beating down a motion to consider a lynching measure offered by Arthur Mitchell, negro representative from Illinois.

They were just as determined to defeat another anti-lynching bill by Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, New York democrat. Some Georgians said the Gavagan bill was even more objectionable than the Mitchell plan.

At least two of the Georgia delegation, Representatives Malcolm C. Tarver and Paul Brown, are expected to make speeches on the Gavagan measure when it comes up for debate Monday.

Some of the delegation, predicted enactment of the bill, explaining Wednesday's vote on the Mitchell proposal was not a fair test of the house sentiment. Many of the Gavagan supporters, they said, were anxious to vote down the Mitchell bill.

Public Reaction Grows

Georgians, like most other southern representatives, contended the lynching problem was taking care of itself through a growing public reaction against mob action. They said the federal government will obstruct the south's own campaign against lynching if it interferes.

Is Southerner

Mitchell himself is a southerner and a democrat. Like his negro predecessor, Oscar de Priest, he came from Alabama.

Georgians in the capital looked to Senator Russell this week for decision on whether Atlanta is to get a new federal judge.

A bill by Representative Robert Ramspeck of the Georgia Fifth district passed the house last Monday and went to the senate.

Last year, in the same stage of the bill's consideration, Russell blocked its enactment, insisting the state needed a new district, not just a new judgeship.

The senator was silent on his plan, explaining it would be some time before the judiciary committee could consider any legislation except the President's court reorganization plan.

HOUSE ACTS TODAY ON LYNCHING BILL

Chairman Sumners Plans Constitutional Fight Against Measure.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—(AP) The house, divided along sectional lines, prepared for a vote tomorrow on the drastic Gavagan anti-lynching bill providing for federal intervention in mob crimes against persons.

Representative Gavagan, Democrat, New York, representing a district in New York city where many negroes reside, predicted tonight the house would pass his measure by a "two-to-one" vote.

Southern Democrats lined up behind Chairman Sumners, Democrat, Texas, of the judiciary committee for a "last-ditch" fight against the bill on the ground it was an unconstitutional invasion of states' rights.

Proponents said they would direct attention in debate to the lynching of two negroes in Mississippi yesterday. They contend it showed the need for federal anti-lynching legislation.

Sumners, while deploring the crime, denied it called for federal intervention.

We Did Our Part, as Usual

April 21, 1937

Anti-Lynching Law Battle

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 21.—Chances for a federal anti-lynching act are good unless the anticipated filibuster of a few Southern Senators is supported by obstruction from the Senate leadership and apathy among the measure's friends.

Assuming passage, there will be one deficiency in the law if it follows the model of the Gavagan bill passed by the House. For the Gavagan bill applies its penalties only in cases where a prisoner has been taken into custody before being seized by a mob.

It carries an obvious incentive for local officers, discovering the possibility of mob action and fearing federal prosecution, to refrain from arresting suspects and then leave them to the mob.

The Wagner-Van Nuys bill, now with the Senate judiciary committee, extends to cover all cases of persons accused, suspected or convicted of crime who are lynched or injured by mobs in denial of trial by the regular process of law.

The Gavagan bill, on the other hand, provides—as the Senate bill does not—for federal prosecution of members of lynching mobs in cases where local or state authorities have not acted within 30 days.

Supporters of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill think they can bring enough pressure on the majority leaders, Senators Joe Robinson of Arkansas and Pat Harrison of Mississippi, to give the measure a place on the calendar sooner or later. They will then be faced by a filibuster which will be led by "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina. Smith, Tom Connally of Texas and Josiah Bailey of North Carolina headed the filibuster which two years ago was used to sidetrack the Costigan anti-lynching bill. Smith is given to repeating that such legislation is a crime against Southern womanhood. His vehemence is counted as an asset by supporters of the bill.

In the background will be the desire of Northern Democratic leaders to hold the colored vote, which deserted the Republican party almost en masse in the last election. Most opposition speeches in the House were based on the Gavagan bill's alleged unconstitutionality, violation of state rights and interference with a purely Southern problem.

(Aside from the difference pre-[illegible] House and Senate [illegible] fail to make diligent efforts to prevent prisoners from being lynched shall be subject to a $5,000 fine and five years in prison; that officers who conspire with mobs may be imprisoned from five to 20 years and that any county in which a prisoner is injured or killed by a mob may be sued by the victim's family for from $2,000 to $10,000.

A who's who of the House leadership can be found in the list of those who voted against the Gavagan bill, which passed by 277 to 119. Among those voting nay were Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Chairman Bob Doughton of the ways and means committee, Chairman Marvin Jones of the House agriculture committee, Chairman Sam McReynolds of the foreign affairs committee, Chairman Hatton Sumners of the judiciary committee and other Southern leaders.

Representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People say 64 Senators have promised to vote for the Wagner-Van Nuys measure, and that sentiment for an anti-lynching law has vastly increased, especially in the South and among Southern women's organizations.

Among Congressmen voting against the Gavagan bill were the three wealthy land owners who, as members of the House agriculture committee, were instrumental in burying the administration program to aid tenant farmers and share croppers—Kleberg of Texas, Coffee of Nebraska and Fulmer of South Carolina.

This coincidence is noteworthy because the N. A. A. C. P. recently showed that eight of the lynching victims of 1935 and 1936 had been accused solely of union activity in the organization of sharecroppers and tenants. Others were lynched for fighting with white men, drunkenness or disrespect.

(Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc.)

Johnson City, Tenn., Press
April 13, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill Divides Democrats On Sectional Lines

North Lines Up Against South In Debate Over Penalty For Mobs

WASHINGTON, April 13. (AP)—House Democrats divided today along sectional lines for debate on federal anti-lynching legislation.

Northern Democrats lined up in general behind the bill of Rep. Gavagan, New York Democrat, providing heavy fines and prison sentences for peace officers who allow prisoners to be lynched. Similar punishment would be inflicted on mob members.

GOP Backs Measure

Many southern Democrats opposed such legislation as unnecessary and an unconstitutional invasion of the rights of the states. Their debate leader was Chairman Sumners, Texas Democrat, of the judiciary committee.

House Republicans decided at a conference last week to support the Gavagan measure.

Aside from this, the only topic of conversation among congressmen was the possible effect of the Wagner act decisions on the Roosevelt court bill and on future labor legislation. Speaker Bankhead predicted a presidential message proposing wage and hour standards.

Finances Studied

The senate was in recess, but several members of its finance committee were studying methods of making government income match expenditures without new taxes. Senator Byrnes, South Carolina Democrat, said he was making a survey to determine if states could pay a higher share of relief costs.

Secretary Morgenthau declared there has been no shift in the administration's fiscal or monetary policies. He denied rumors of a change in the price of gold.

The revised Guffey-Vinson coal control bill, providing for federal price fixing, went to the White House after the senate and house agreed to amendments. The original act was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court last year, but the new measure omits labor provisions.

Greenwood, S. C. Index-Journal
April 18, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL AGAIN

The Congressional Record is filled these days with speeches for and against the anti-lynching bill which this Congress is likely to enact into law. Opposition is not confined to the South, though the Southern members of the Congress are practically solid against it. Able Senators like Borah from far off Idaho are against it as the final blow to State sovereignty. They do not inject the race question into it. Unfortunately that issue is stressed by both Republican and Democratic politicians in the North and East as a vote-catching scheme. The Administration is believed to be supporting the move though President Roosevelt has not said a word one way or the other.

States, as was said here a few days ago, have not and are not now taking the stern action which they should against lynching. The lone example of Virginia is an exception.

But admitting all this, the proposal is a very dangerous one in its inevitable consequences. The true statesman considers consequences with more attention than the politician. The politician is after votes and regardless.

This quotation from a speech by Congressman Johnson, of Texas, is worth pondering:

Commendable in its purpose to suppress lynching, which no one condones and against which no one is more bitterly opposed than I, yet the means by which it attempts to eradicate this evil is revolting and shockingly illegal and unconstitutional.

Lynching and mob violence is indefensible, but it is no more indefensible than this bill, which is a reckless, arrogant, and illegal attempt upon the part of the Federal Government to usurp the lawmaking and the law-enforcing powers and agencies of the State governments.

The bill does more than destroy State rights; it completely destroys State sovereignty, and makes the States, including all State and county officers, responsible, not to the State governments of which they are a part, and to which they have sworn allegiance, but responsible to the ukase of Federal officers, Federal courts, and Federal bureaucrats.

The despised force bill of reconstruction days was no more a wanton or reckless disregard of the inherent and exclusive rights of the States than this vicious measure.

In addition to placing State and county officers of State governments, from Governor to constable, under supervision and control of Federal laws and Federal courts and subject to prosecution in Federal courts for acts committed, not in their individual, but in their official capacity as State officers; the bill goes still further in penalizing counties, which are subdivisions of State governments created by the States and which cannot be sued, even in State courts, except by grant of the State, and are in this bill made responsible in civil damages recoverable in Federal courts, in suits brought by Federal district attorneys.

Furthermore, individual citizens who are not officers may be prosecuted in Federal courts, upon the whim and caprice of Federal judges, for violation of State laws.

The most impressive argument against the proposed bill and all similar bills would be more serious efforts on the part of the States to do their duty in suppressing lynchings.

It could be done.

It may be that some day many citizens will wish that it had been done.

Lynch Law

Governor Hugh White of Mississippi addressed a farm meeting in his State's capital last week, and in the course of his speech said: "We are justly proud of the fact that Mississippi has not had a lynching in fifteen months." A few minutes later his secretary drew him aside. A mob in the town of Duck Hill had just burned the truth out of the Governor's boast and the life out of two Negroes.

A Sheriff and his deputies, returning from court to jail with two prisoners accused of robbing and killing a country storekeeper, were surrounded by a mob. The prisoners were seized, rushed into near-by woods. There the Negroes were chained to trees, sprayed with the flame from a blow-torch until they admitted their guilt in the storekeeper's death. Then they were put to death.

Soon afterward a third Negro, implicated by the others, was seized. He was lashed, and then ordered out of the region.

News of the lynching was flashed not only to Governor White but also to Washington, where the House was opening heated debate on the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. (Lynchings dropped from 80 in 1919 to 8 in 1932, rose to 20 in 1935, and last year totaled 13.) The measure's proponents cited the Mississippi crime as new proof of the need for action, intensified their

The Gavagan measure, sponsored by [illegible] invasion of States' rights, Senator Borah being a particularly outspoken opponent. Southerners maintain lynchings will disappear only with change in public sentiment, that without such a change any law will accomplish nothing.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5782

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Think for Yourself and Let Others Enjoy the Privilege to Do So.—Voltaire.

LET IT COME—AND QUICKLY

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

Of course I may be lynched of stop a few more people from speaking to me when I say, let the anti-lynching law come.

We Southerners may not like the idea and the forces in congress that are trying to pass the bill may not intend it as a benefit to the South, but as I see it, it is a bill that all law-abiding people, all prohibitionists especially, all seekers after lower taxes and all who are interested in the welfare and prosperity of the South, should earnestly work for.

In Georgia particularly, the law will be of the greatest help, for Georgia has a prohibition law that is not enforced in many counties. Georgia has many sheriffs and police that do not try to enforce her prohibition laws, some that encourage violations, some waxing fat along with bootleggers from the illegal traffic.

Since beer was made legal in the state, bootlegging has greatly increased, arrests for drunkenness has doubled in counties not selling beer and increased from four to seven times in counties selling beer. New local prisons have been built and a new state prison—chain gangs are crowded, fighting and shootings numerous, jails and calabooses often full, highway accidents and deaths at high records, and the end is not in sight.

We Southerners agree, almost to a man, that most of the crimes committed in the South are caused by liquor drinking; that most of the crimes for which men are lynched were caused by the evil stimulating influence of liquor, and that most of the lynchings are perpetrated by men with liquor on their breaths. We also agree that there is no humbler, better-natured, industrious and peaceable servant than the sober Negro, nor a worse, more degraded, senseless and unreasonable man than the drunken Negro.

I offer the thought that the officers of the law are responsible for most of the crimes caused by liquor, in that they allow the bootleggers to operate. I offer the thought that the people, the voters, are responsible for the law violations, in as much as they elected the officers, and in some cases, knowing the officers would not enforce prohibition laws. And now, supposing the anti-lynching bill was a law and a county or two stood to pay the penalty, which would mean heavy taxation on the taxpayers. Would the taxpayers, the voters, elect sheriffs at the next election who were not in sympathy with the prohibition laws? Would the town voters elect a mayor or aldermen who would not enforce the law? It's a safe bet that if a few counties in Georgia were facing the penalties for lynchings, these counties and the rest of the counties in Georgia would see that the law was enforced. Knowing the Negro's weakness for liquor, the voters would elect officers with outstanding prohibition records. The taxpayers would be afraid to take chances.

The anti-lynching law will awaken voters to their responsibility as all the literature, eloquence of speakers and tears of good women have not done. Let it become a law, and all laws of the South will be enforced, taxes will be reduced, merchants will be more prosperous, poor folks will have more food and clothing, drunks will become scarce, crimes and courts will be fewer, chain gangs will be less populous—a sure wave of peace and prosperity will come to the South.

Without liquor, the South has nothing to fear by economic supremacy of any section; without liquor, the Southern Negro is the best laborer in the country; without liquor, there is no fear of trouble between the two races in the South; without liquor there will be less poverty, crime, illiteracy and property owners will have a far less tax burden.

Once before the North, it was said in ill will, offered the South economic freedom, which was refused, only to have it forced on it. It is said that the Union offered to pay for the freedom of the slaves, that many Southerners were willing to free the slaves, but that many politicians agitated against freeing them and brought on the war. Some of the best men in the South opposed the war, among them General Robert E. Lee, and only after war became inevitable did they take up arms for the South. No section of country ever went through more calamities, and no section ever prospered more after war. The South lost so much in wealth and in men that its quick recovery causes one to wonder what the South would have been like and how rich it would be today had it avoided war and received the Union's offer of pay for its slaves. History makes a poor comparison of the Old South of slavery, slave song and story with the New South of freedom, industry and glory. Few Southern hearts would replace the South of today with the South of old.

So, whatever the motives of the forces in congress that are trying to force through this law; whatever the Southern politicians say of the evils its operation would inflict on the South, it does seem to offer an opportunity for the South to advance to new welfare, new prosperity and riches and new glories. It may prove to be a blessing—another blessing in disguise. Let it come.

GEO. A. DAWSON.

Dawson, Ga.

A New South May Be Born

It was a history making moment in the U. S. Senate Tuesday when Senator Bennett C. Clark of Missouri, presiding temporarily, recognized a member to make the motion which brings the anti-lynching bill up for discussion and a vote.

Lynching is less a menace to Negroes than to whites, yet the law to curb it has long been sought by the former because they are singled out as its victims. Actually fewer Negroes are lynched than traffic accidents kill in many cities. But substituting the mob for law breeds contempt generally, a handicap which Negroes feel in every relation.

The anti-lynching bill now under consideration will go far toward giving Negroes equal rights before the law. Therefore it is epochal that they are able to get it considered at a time when it was possible to have put it aside for legislation asked by President Roosevelt. Though it get no further, that in itself is a gain.

Negroes helped elect many of the members who will vote on this bill, but if that were not so, still conditions are too serious for Congress to give ear now to any hymn of hate. Common sense forbids further effort if all these years have not sufficed to get prejudice the result it desires. It is now 70 years since the cry was raised that the Negro must be kept in his place. What the South by disfranchisement, peonage, the sale of convict labor and every other limitation has not done, the country will not wait for it to do.

The old guard will not permit the anti-lynching bill to pass without a bitter struggle. To do so would be to lose their political standby. Once the Negro is removed from the forefront of southern politics, they will have to learn something about government, and about economics. Actually the measure now before Congress has in it the birth of a new political era in which real issues will supplant the false one which served to put men like Tillman and Vardaman in office.

Events are moving in such a way that Henry W. Grady's dream of a new South is about to be realized, where in "the fairest and richest domain of this earth" by the gift of nature, Negroes can "reach the full stature of citizenship and in peace maintain it."

Leesburg, Fla., Commercial
December 10, 1937

Not being the chairman or any democratic committee, maybe we can declare ourself on the anti-lynching proposition without embarrassing a lot of party men who are, we have discovered, mostly democrats for revenue only. We say that states' rights do not include the right to lynch anybody and we are perfectly willing for a flock of G-men to go into or come into any state in the United States and ferret out the identities of any mob, Ku Klux or otherwise, that commits crime, especially murder. And we are perfectly willing for federal courts to try the offenders and mete out the proper punishment without fear of retribution from some local un-American, hooded organization that commits crimes and hides behind masks and fear.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5703

Belton, S. C., News
December 9, 1937

Senator Smith Flays Anti-Lynching Bill

(The following recent speech, in part of Senator E. D. Smith in opposition to the pending "anti-lynching bill" bespeaks, we believe, the sentiment of the whole South on this controversial proposal.—Editor.)

MR. SMITH: Certainly; and it would be more decent for them to come in frankly and say, "We want you to make an appropriation to enable us to buy the Negro votes of Harlem, of the southside of Chicago, and elsewhere where members of this unfortunate race live in large numbers." Count them; let us see how much it will cost and buy their votes, but, for God's sake, do not attempt to humiliate a great section in order to get the Negro vote.

MR. BANKHEAD: In the opinion of the Senator from South Carolina, how many votes would this bill get if Negroes were not voters?

MR. SMITH: Not one. The Senator from Alabama has hit the nail on the head; and tey, to the shame of this great body, that has helped demonstrate to a doubtful world that democracy is possible, that a dual form of government, collect- [illegible] indicated and indi- [illegible] where indicated, is prac- [illegible] certain long-haired men [illegible] uncultivated women who nev- [illegible] the real responsibili- [illegible] of life, but are now attempt- [illegible] so perpetrate such a dastardly [illegible] upon charge us, whose [illegible] is jeopardized with de- [illegible] legislation; in other words, they would let this brand be placed on us in order ti get a few Harlem votes.

So far as I am concerned, I represent, in part, the little storm center of the United States, little South Carolina, that passed the Secession Act single - handed and alone, and then seceded. I do not apologize for either act, because it showed the grit of those from whom I descended. The same courage is in us now. Nothing is done in malice, but our self-respect is touched for the dirty thing of getting votes - and getting them from where and from whom? I imagine those who are trying to get them are about on a part with those from whom they would be obtained. Any man or set of men that will stoop so low as this are no higher than the source from which they hope to draw their political strength. They are not going to get away with it.

Against my own family a crime was committed that would inflame the heart of any man. I saw a father-in-law 80 years old shot to death, his son shot to death, that son's bride of 8 months shot to death, and a poor, young Negro, who had belonged to certain members of my family, who attempted to defend this defenseless household, had his throat cut. Yet I and those of us whose blood and the sanctity of whose homes were jeopardized believed in letting the law take its course.

I invite the author of this bill to go and stay where we stay, surrounded by the conditions that surround us, and which have surrounded us since the days of the reconstruction. If he would do that, in place of trying to condemn us, were he to know as I know, and as every other southerner knows, the instigation for these outbreaks of lawlessness, if he had a drop of decency in him he would take off his hat in honor of the South emerging as it has emerged from the mere prevalent perpetration of this deed.

You may call it "humanitarianism"; but have you no respect for our officers, have you no respect for us?

Mr. President, I said I was not going ti make a speech, and I am not. I am simply serving notice that I am going to do everything within my power to keep this iniquitous and unjust stigma from being placed on my section of the country. What galls me more than anything else is that it comes from the so-called Democratic Party, which we have lived and which, in the dark days of reconstruction, was our pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, a fact which made me feel kindly toward old Tammany. I shall never be able to pay my debt of obligation to that organization which stood between us and the death of our civilization.

Senators stand here and quote the Constitution. What is the Constitution to a man who is hunting votes? What does it amount to with him? I can call a polecat a geranium, but that does not make him any less a polecat. You may call this humanitarianism, but it is no less a vote-getting scheme. We all know that. If a certain distinguished Senator were not dead, but were still in this body, I shiuld like to quote what he said when I remonstrated with him about the injuction into this body of a similar bill.

No one knows or can know how we of the South efel about this thing. Mark my prediction: If this bill passes and becomes law through the Supreme Court declaring it constitutional you will have injected a rift into the ranks of the so-called Democratic Party that all the blandishments of the next generation will never heal.

Mr. President, I wonder sometimes what is the purpose of the treatment being accorded the South. The two-thirds rule in national conventions was abolished and we were eliminated from any participation in the naming of a President. You are about to pass, and perhaps, will pass, an hours and wages bill which, in the recrudescent state of my section, will crucify it. Now you come aling and say, "You are not competent to protect your prisoners"; and so the great purified, sublimated, glorified, crime-ridden New York and her collaborating State, those two peaks of morality and of political and social purity, must not only shed their light on poor benighted South Carolina and the rest of the South, but must send their gifted peace officers down there to help us eliminate lynching and promote racketeering.

MR. OVERTON: The Senator has lived all of his years in the South. The ostensible purpose of this bill is to protect the Negro from the crimes that are committed upon him by the people of the South. Ie desire to ask the Senator, what is the attitude of the South toward the Negro race; whether the South is not the best friend of the Negro race that is found in any section.

MR. SMITH: O Mr. President, that goes without saying. As a baby boy I was nursed in the arms of a Negro woman, whom I loved as devotedly as was possible. Then, later on, old Uncle Bill, who lived to be 103 years old, was my shelter in the time of storm. Many a time my father would lead me around behind the house, where was an old privet bush that I have hated from that day until this. It grew [illegible] the right length of sprou[illegible] teach the young idea how [illegible] he would take me aroun[illegible] the house in order to h[illegible] condition of my soul an[illegible] by the applicatiin of the hickory, and old Uncle Bill, whom my father revered and respected more than he did any other man, would just walk up without a word and deliver me from the hand of the slayer. Oh, I loved him with devotion.

The South knows the Negro, and knows his limitations. I state before this body - and I dare any of you to go down and investigate, that since the Supreme Court has declared that in certain cases involving Federal jurisdiction Negroes must be on the jury, when the Negroes themselves have a case they will take you aside and say, "Do, for God's sake, get me the best white men you can on the jury." Is it not so?

Down in the section from which we come the Negroes are treated just as justly, and more understandingly, than by these gentlemen up North. We do not call them "mister" and "mistress" because they have been accustomed to call us "marster" and "mistress." We do not take them into fellowship with us in the home or in the school, because it is dangerous. You know it. I know it. But give the Negro a schol to himself, a courch to himself, and treat him fairly, and the relation between the races has grown more amicable as the years have gone by. Pass this bill, and you will be responsible for the consequences.

Mr. President, you are about to put us in this position: Here is the party to which we have given allegiance and for which we have suffered. Though defeat after defeat came, we still were loyal to the principles of demicracy. You are about to put us in the position that was described by the Negro preacher who had more knowledge of the sound of words than he did of their meaning. He said to his congregation, "There air but two roads. One leads 'way up ti perdition and the other one way down to degradation." The Negro said "My God! If dat be true, dis nigger takes to the woods!"

Here in the home of our friends, so-called, we are threatened with the most humiliating expression of the other part of the country that ever was conceived in the heart if man. Why, it was born in the heat and passion just subsequent to the Civil War.

I wonder if the Senate is going to pass this South-baiting, South-humiliating measure. I wonder if it is. If we who love the Constitution and vloe fair play and decency, whether we are Southerners or not, can prevent it, the bill will not pass before the times arrives for another election and call ing together of Congress.

Mr. President, when the bill comes up I hope to make some extended remarks regarding it.

Bonifay, Fla., Advertiser
December 3, 1937

That Lynching Bill Again

We can not help taking the recurring discussion of the anti-lynching bill as a mere political trick. In the first place nine out of ten of those rip-roaring legislators who rant about an occasional lynching in the South don't care a penny what the South does with her outlaws, black or white. What they do want is votes for their pet measures. And this is how they get them:

At the beginning of each session they pick out one of the most obnoxious measures proposed by the nation's meddlers to regulate people in general, and Southerners in particular. Then they make fire-eating addresses to the subject and try to make it appear that the measure will certainly sweep both houses with little opposition. Then to make it still more impressive they keep a flock of obnoxious amendments hovering over the scene.

After they have the Southern representatives "all het up" about the matter and believing they are going to be overwhelmed with a new carpet-bag invasion, they begin to trade. "If you will just help us in this little matter, we will vote against the anti-lynch law. Of course our constituents will be down on us, but we will risk it and help you out." So with a nice batch of Southern votes tucked away in their pockets they let the poor negro or poor white man, for that matter, suffer the danger of lynching a little longer. It is 'most too good a game to give up. We may expect it to continue as long as Southern legislators fall for it.

Oxford, N. C. Ledger
December 7, 1937

A LAW WITH TEETH

Congress is about to pass the Anti-Lynching Bill, a measure aimed at the South and the abandon with which lynchings are sometimes committed.

The bill provides that heirs of a person killed or injured by a mob, may bring suit in a Federal court against the state subdivision responsible and recover damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000.

An officer found guilty of permitting a prisoner to be taken from him is subject to a $5,000 fine, or five years' imprisonment, or both. A mob is defined in the bill as "three or more persons who take from an officer a prisoner suspected of, charged with, or guilty of a crime and injures of kills him."

This newspaper believes in the inalenable right of every accused to a fair and honest trial. It appears that privisons of the act now before Congress are aimed at those spineless pismires who hold themselves up as officers only when there is no shadow of trouble to frighten them. The bill proposes to put the weight of responsibility where it ought to be.

The Anti-Lynching bill may be an infringement upon States' Rights, but when a state becomes unable to guarantee the right of a fair and impartial trial to one of her citizens, then she has no claim to States' Rights and it behooves the Federal government to offer that protection.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle
December 13, 1937

[illegible] READING ON ANTI-[illegible]CHING

For those who are passionately convinced that what this country needs is federal interference in a state's han[illegible] of lynching matters, we cite an instance in Gatesville, N. C., as evidence of how Southern whites can sometimes regard Southern Negroes.

An aged Negro woman died in Gatesville. "Virtually the entire population of Gatesville," reports The Associated Press, "attended the funeral. County Judge A. P. Godwin and several white ministers conducted the services. Six white men were pallbearers."

The old Negro mammy probably never gave a thought to the need of a federal anti-lynching bill. And her Southern white folks never gave a thought to her save one of kindly respect.—The Birmingham News.

Summit Press Sun
Dec 2 1937

News Briefs

By A. C. Anderson

The anti-lynching bill pending in Congress has been side-tracked for the time being, but will be up again when the agricultural bill is out of the way. The anti-lynching bill is clearly a gesture to the negro vote of the north. There is no particular demand for such a law at this time, even if it would serve the wholesome purpose its advocates claim for it. Under such a law there would be many instances of injustice and the crime of lynching would be increased rather than diminished. The statistics on lynching show a steady decline in the last 60 years. The year 1882 is as far back as the figures are given on this terrible crime, and in that year 113 people were lynched in the United States, 64 of them being white men. In the years 1882, 1883, 1884 and 1885 there were more white people than negroes lynched, 1884 being the banner year for whites and 160 being the number of white people lynched that year in the United States, along with 51 negroes. The banner year for this form of crime was 1892, when the total number lynched reached 231 in that year. The total number lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, both inclusive, was 4,681, of whom 1,311 were white people and 3,370 negroes. The lowest number lynched was in 1932, when two whites and six negroes were unlawfully executed. In the all-time record Mississippi leads, having to her discredit 469 lynchings, as against a total of 460 for the state of Georgia, covering the period from 1882 to 1935. These figures were prepared by the Director of the Department of Records and Research at Tuskegee Institute, and vary slightly with figures recently quoted on the floor of congress.

Gadsden, Ala., Times
December 28, 1937

ASTOUNDING POLITICAL PLAY

IT IS disconcerting to note from Washington dispatches that one of the first things scheduled to come up in the regular session of Congress is the anti-lynch bill.

When the Congress adopts an attitude of this kind it is comparable to a father spending his time playing checkers while his family remains in need.

There is not the slightest urgency about the anti-lynch bill. Lynchings have become rare and are diminishing. They present no great and pressing problem. Yet the nation is faced by a great and pressing problem that must be subordinated to the anti-lynch proposal.

The business situation demands immediate attention. Unemployment is increasing and these matters should be the primary concern of the Congress. When they are subordinated to consideration of a measure like the anti-lynch bill the Congress is thinking in terms of politics and not in terms of the national well-being. The advocates of the bill are pushing their claims because of the hope of lining up negro votes in the next election and are not putting the needs of the idle and the needs of languishing business to the front.

A viewpoint so warped and so at variance with the needs of the hour is astounding.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5704

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
December 17, 1937

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Think for Yourself and Let Others Enjoy the Privilege to Do So.—Voltaire.

LET IT COME—AND QUICKLY

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

Of course I may be lynched or stop a few more people from speaking to me when I say let the anti-lynching law come.

We Southerners may not like the idea and the forces in congress that are trying to pass the bill may not intend it as a benefit to the South, but as I see it, it is a bill that all law-abiding people, all prohibitionists especially, all seekers after lower taxes and all who are interested in the welfare and prosperity of the South, should earnestly work for.

In Georgia particularly, the law will be of the greatest help, for Georgia has a prohibition law that is not enforced in many counties. Georgia has many sheriffs and police that do not try to enforce her prohibition laws, some that encourage violations, some waxing fat along with bootleggers from the illegal traffic.

Since beer was made legal in the state, bootlegging has greatly increased, arrests for drunkenness has doubled in counties not selling beer and increased from four to seven times in counties selling beer. New local prisons have been built and a new state prison—chain gangs are crowded, fighting and shootings numerous, jails and calabooses often full, highway accidents and deaths at high records, and the end is not in sight.

We Southerners agree, almost to a man, that most of the crimes committed in the South are caused by liquor drinking; that most of the crimes for which men are lynched were caused by the evil stimulating influence of liquor, and that most of the lynchings are perpetrated by men with liquor on their breaths. We also agree that there is no humbler, better-natured, industrious and peaceable servant than the sober Negro, nor a worse, more degraded, senseless and unreasonable man than the drunken Negro.

I offer the thought that the officers of the law are responsible for most of the crimes caused by liquor, in that they allow the bootleggers to operate. I offer the thought that the people, the voters, are responsible for the law violations, in as much as they elected the officers, and in some cases, knowing the officers would not enforce prohibition laws. And now, supposing the anti-lynching bill was a law and a county or two stood to pay the penalty, which would mean heavy taxation on the taxpayers. Would the taxpayers, the voters, elect sheriffs at the next election who were not in sympathy with the prohibition laws? Would the down voters elect a mayor or aldermen who would not enforce the law? It's a safe bet that if a few counties in Georgia were facing the penalties for lynchings, these counties and the rest of the counties in Georgia would see that the law was enforced. Knowing the Negro's weakness for liquor, the voters would elect officers with outstanding prohibition records. The taxpayers would be afraid to take chances.

The anti-lynching law will awaken voters to their responsibility as all the literature, eloquence of speakers and tears of good women have not done. Let it become a law, and all laws of the South will be enforced, taxes will be reduced, merchants will be more prosperous, poor folks will have more food and clothing, drunks will become scarce, crimes and courts will be fewer, chain gangs will be less populous—a sure wave of peace and prosperity will come to the South.

Without liquor, the South has nothing to fear by economic supremacy of any section; without liquor, the Southern Negro is the best laborer in the country; without liquor, there is no fear of trouble between the two races in the South without liquor there will be less poverty, crime illiteracy and property owners will have a fair less tax burden.

Once before the North, it was said in ill will, offered the South economic freedom, which was refused, only to have it forced on it. It is said that the Union offered to pay for the freedom of the slaves, that many Southerners were willing to free the slaves, but that many politicians agitated against freeing them and brought on the war. Some of the best men in the South opposed the war, among them General Robert E. Lee, and only after war became inevitable did they take up arms for the South. No section of country ever went through more calamities, and no section ever prospered more after war. The South lost so much in wealth and in men that its quick recovery causes one to wonder what the South would have been like and how rich it would be today had it avoided war and received the Union's offer of pay for its slaves. History makes a poor comparison of the Old South of slavery, slave song and story with the New South of freedom, industry and glory. Few Southern hearts would replace the South of today with the South of old.

So, whatever the motives of the forces in congress that are trying to force through this law; whatever the Southern politicians say of the evils its operation would inflict on the South it does seem to offer an opportunity for the South to advance to new welfare, new prosperity and riches and new glories. It may prove to be a blessing—another blessing in disguise. Let it come.

GEO. A. DAWSON.

Dawson, Ga.

Brunswick, Ga., News
December 30, 1937

Eight persons were lynched in the United States during 1938 which is providing more points of arguments for those advocating federal anti-lynching legislation.

Batesville, Miss., Panolian
December 30, 1937

ANTI LYNCHING BILL USED AS "BOGEY"

James Preston, one of the brightest newspaper men in Washington, says:

The famed anti-lynching bill is being used as a bogey man to frighten little Senators. The farm bill was moved forward in the Senate by at least a tacit threat: "If you don't push this bill, we'll make you vote on the anti-lynching bill."

And when and if the wage hour bill reaches the Senate the same tactics will be used. Some folks wonder why the frightened little Senators don't realize that no matter how long they put it off, the anti-lynching bill will eventually be put to a vote. And private polls indicate it has more than enough votes to pass, especially since more and more members are saying they might as well vote for it because it can't be enforced anyhow.

Knoxville, Tenn. News Sentinel
December 30, 1937

Time To Reconsider!

LET'S look at the 1937 lynching figures, released yesterday.

Florida	3
Mississippi	2
Tennessee	1
Alabama	1
Georgia	1

Many Southern Congressmen are still fighting Federal anti-lynching legislation. We don't believe that they are truly representing the sentiment of the people from their home states. We believe that the anti-lynching legislation would be passed in most of these five Southern states where lynchings occurred this year. We have little doubt that it would be passed in Tennessee.

Lynching is not condoned by the majority of the citizens in communities where they occur. An Institute of Public Opinion poll during the past year, published by The News-Sentinel, showed that sentiment over the country was overwhelmingly for anti-lynching legislation. The South, considered alone, voted for the proposed measure.

We think it is time our Congressmen reconsidered their stand on this question. Lynching must stop even if it takes Federal legislation to do it.

Lynchings—1937
Legislation Relating to.

5705

Rocky Mount, N. C., Telegram
April 15, 1937

BOOST FOR ANTI-LYNCHING

While southereners in Congress were reported as opposed to the anti-lynching bill, which has been argued there for weeks, and northerners generally were reported in favor of it, the South itself, through the lynching of two Negroes in Mississippi, gave the bill one of its biggest boosts.

As far as the anti-lynching bill itself is concerned, there is probably less need for such a law than for enforcement of such laws as we already have. While we know of no southern state which has a statute definitely pointing out that it shall be unlawful to lynch a man, in the manner in which they are often lynched below the Mason and Dixon line, all states certainly have laws against murder and lynching can be classed as nothing less than that.

Even while we do not maintain that it would not be best for such a law to be enacted, we see little hope for greater success for it than for the present laws against murder unless citizens cooperate with law-enforcement officers in respecting law and order and unless officers themselves exercise greater initiative in dealing with this evil which stands as a black spot upon the records of those states in which lynchings occur.

Lynching is too barbaric to have a place in modern society and the sooner its ugly head is buried forever the better it will be for the country—and the South. We believe the education of the illiterate black will have a great influence in wiping out this practice.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
April 18, 1937

Our Own Press Turns Against Us!

IN their mealy-mouthed attitude toward the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, the two Hanson papers, The Birmingham News and The Birmingham Age-Herald, present a disgusting sight.

These two newspapers, in editorials rambling for more than a half column, take a jumble of facts, fancies and figures, and reach some sort of conclusion that lynchings are awful, that states ought to be allowed to handle them, but that the federal government, prodded on by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, might know best after all.

In the first place, The Birmingham News attributes, beyond "the shadow of a doubt," the House approval of the Gavagan bill to the recent double lynching in Mississippi. "It is a matter of conjecture," says The News, "whether an anti-lynching bill would have been passed at this session of Congress if it had not been for this affront to American civilization in Mississippi."

That statement is inane and ridiculous, and unworthy of a reputable paper, whose own news columns will refute it. Even BEFORE the Mississippi lynching occurred, the milder Mitchell anti-lynching bill had been shunted aside, with Republicans and Northern Democrats uniting behind the Gavagan bill. Press dispatches, BEFORE the Mississippi lynching, made it quite clear that the House would vote this week, and that, in all probability, the bill would be passed. And the House did vote, passing that bill 276 to 119. In the face of this two-to-one vote, does The Birmingham News mean to tell us that the Gavagan bill would have failed had it not been for the Mississippi lynchings? Where would the votes have come from? The South voted solidly against the bill. Is The News actually so naive as to believe that 80 congressmen from the North and West, prodded for years by parlor pinks and their negro constituents, waited until this Mississippi incident before flopping to the anti-lynching bill. Neither reason for the roll call will bear The News out in its contention.

The News goes further to accept as a fact a recent poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion which showed that the South, as well as other sections, favored a federal anti-lynching bill. We maintain that any such findings are ridiculous—as ridiculous as many another poll which this country has seen in recent months. We invite both The Birmingham News and the American Institute of Public Opinion to poll the man in the street, not the man in the plush-lined office. We invite them to poll the hundred or more Southern congressmen who, with hardly an exception, opposed the Gavagan bill. Could these congressmen have been so uninterested in representing their constituents, to say nothing of preserving their political futures, as to have bucked public opinion in a body?

As for The Age-Herald it takes several hundred words to tell why the "Gavagan" bill, as it insists on calling the measure, should not be adopted and then concludes that, after all, federal intervention might be desirable.

We blush to think of what the earlier champions of White Democracy in Alabama—Houston, Morgan, Knox and others—would think of the exhibition which we have today—wherein two of the state's largest newspapers offer to sell their political birthright for a mess of Pulitzer prize pottage. We can understand it when The Birmingham Post, with its editorial policies dictated from New York, approves a federal anti-lynching bill. But Alabama-owned newspapers? Never!

Most of us disapprove of lynchings; most of us were shocked by the exhibition in Mississippi last week. But we, for one, are not willing to let a hostile federal agency, prodded to action by a bunch of Northern politicians, take over our state courts under a law which is openly, admittedly and belligerently aimed at the South.

If the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People can induce the federal government to take over our law courts, it can also induce the federal government to take over our ballot boxes, and we do not intend to be a party to any such outrage.

Spartanburg, S. C. Journal
April 15, 1937

Anti-Lynching Legislation

The torturing and lynching of two negroes near Duck Hill, Mississippi, came at a time when the anti-lynching legislation was being debated in the national house of representatives and added fuel to the flame of agitation for the passage of such federal law.

The double lynching in Mississippi is unjustifiable and indefensible from any standpoint—but it is a matter of concern and responsibility solely for Mississippi. Federal regulation or attempt to regulate in matters involving the police powers and law enforcement of a soversign state are without the province and authority of the federal government. Except such things as are clearly defined and stipulated as belonging to the federal government and its jurisdiction the framers of the constitution zealously guarded the several states from invasion and trespass on that score.

Lynching should be stamped out. In the scheme of civilization, however sorry a spectacle that scheme appears at time, there is no place for mob violence and mob rule. But enactment of anti-lynching laws by congress will not result in progress being attained to that end. The states must handle that problem. In most of them mob violence does not crop out. In South Carolina for the past several years the state has been kept clean of lynching bees.

Anniston, Ala. Star
April 24, 1937

Anti-Lynching Measure

(Decatur Daily)

The Gadsden Times, admitting that the members of the recent Mississippi mob which took the lives of two Negroes, did violence to the constitution, declares also that those who voted for the federal anti-lynching measure did worse for they violated the very constitution they had sworn to uphold.

It was a tragic chapter in American history that those Congressmen who cast their ballots for the measure wrote in the House of Representatives and The Daily, for one, trusts there is sufficient manhood in the Senate to prevent its duplication.

Senator Oscar Underwood successfully defeated such a measure by a parliamentary filibuster which completely tied the Senate's hands until he was assured that the unwanted legislation would not be pushed. Surely there are members of the present day Senate who could adopt similar tactics.

If it becomes necessary to completely deadlock the Senate to prevent it committing this grave offense against the states of the South, then by all means let us have the deadlock. Filibustering constitutes a harsh measure but if nothing else will suffice, then let us start a filibuster which will be remembered a hundred years from now!

The Times, thoroughly aroused to the menace of this nefarious legislation, says:

"The deplorable lynching of two Negroes by a mob of stupid illiterates in Mississippi is comparable in its ultimates to the deplorable lynching of the United States Constitution by a mob of stupid lawmakers in the House of Representatives.

"The Mississippi lynchers did violence to the civil law, bringing disgrace upon their state, while the equally excited mob in the House of Representatives did gross violence to the fundamental law of the land. In one respect they were worse than the Mississippi lynchers because they had taken a most solemn oath to uphold the Constitution which they proceeded to lynch upon the floor.

"Moreover, these congressional lynchers of the Constitution knew what they were about. They knew it not only because they were warned of the illegal nature of what they were doing, but, because they have had the benefit of education, they possessed an intellectual knowledge of the nature of the violation they were committing.

"As Senator Borah has pointed out, the anti-lynch bill that has been given approval is a flagrant violation of the Constitution. It seeks to give to the general government certain privileges that are clearly prohibited and which it has no more right to exercise than it has to tell the individual citizen what time he shall arise in the morning and retire at night.

"The men voting for it knew also that the Supreme Court as now constituted, would throw it into the scrap-heap, but they ignored this and passed the act upon the theory that the court shortly is to be enlarged and that the new court, created to carry out legislative purposes instead of carrying out the provisions of the Constitution, would place the stamp of approval upon it because of expediency and not because of its legality.

"This makes vivid the warning of Senator Glass that an enlarged Supreme Court carries a threat to the very civilization of the South, and lends point to the grave warning of Congressman M. C. Tarver, of the Seventh Georgia District, that it threatens not only the election laws of the South, but points to destruction of those laws under which necessary segregation is practiced in the South.

"It is a first step in a crusade to destroy those laws under which whites and blacks are separated in schools, in hotels, in restaurants, upon trains and elsewhere, and throw them all together as has been done in the North. In sum, it is a movement to recreate in the South the conditions of a half century ago. And why? Because to do these things pleases certain Negroes in certain states where the Negroes hold the balance of political power.

"Southern civilization is to be bartered for Negro votes in doubtful states. That is the sum of it, as Senator Glass has seen, as Congressman Tarver has seen, and as has become clear to many other Southerners who are capable of seeing beyond the ends of their noses.

"And one of the tragic phases of the situation is that no thought is being taken of the Negroes in the South. What they may suffer through the recreation of the intolerable condition of a half century ago enters into the accounting of these white politicians who fawn at the feet of Negro politicians and who seek to use both the whites and the blacks in the South as pawns in the scurvey game of fence-building for individual benefit."

Culpepper, Va., Exponent
April 29, 1937

FEDERAL LYNCHING LAW UNWISE.

On most issues, state and national, we find ourselves in general agreement with our estemed contemporary, the Richmond Times-Dispatch, which is now regarded as one of the great liberal newspapers of the South. It is, therefore, with regret that we are forced to differ emphatically with its aggressive campaign for a Federal Anti-Lynching law in which it has gathered support from a number of Southern newspapers.

That these newspapers do not represent Southern sentiment on this subject is best illustrated by the fact that a lone Democrat from the South, Congressman Maury Maverick, of Texas, and we believe one Southern Republican from Tennessee, voted for this bill, when it passed the House a few days since.

We are opposed to this proposed law on several grounds. In the first place it is almost certain to prove ineffective and unenforceable for the simple reason that if lynching is made a Federal crime the officers from whom prisoners are taken and the participants in future lynchings will have to be tried by Southern juries. When the prisoner happens to have been charged with one particular crime, and especially if there should exist reasonable probability of his guilt, the Government would find itself utterly unable to convict either officers or participants.

In the next place, it seems to us unfair to penalize a city or a county with heavy fines because under stress of passion or excitement a prisoner has been taken from officers and lynched. Often this will take place before either the county or city has opportunity to furnish necessary protection. We have no idea that Southern juries will enforce this provision of the bill.

In the third place, we believe that the bill is clearly unconstitutional. Only by straining the Constitution could the Federal Government acquire this extraordinary power to interfere in state affairs.

Again, lynchings are steadily decreasing throughout the nation; states are adopting necessary legislation, as instanced in Virginia, and there is no real necessity for Federal legislation, even though at times the country is shocked by such mob violence as recently took place in Mississippi.

In opposing this legislation, we place ourselves once more on record as condemning lynchings as barbarous and as a crime which should be stamped out, but it will not be done, in our opinion, by such legislation as that so warmly endorsed by the Times-Dispatch. Southern representatives in the House, rather than our contemporary and newspapers in accord with it, reflected by their practically unanimous adverse vote the real sentiment of the South on this measure. We are glad to note that all Virginia Congressmen were opposed to its passage.—Fredericksburg Free Lance-Star.

Chattanooga, Tenn. News
April 27, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill Likely to Die

BEHIND the politics of the Anti-Lynching bills now before Congress, there is a bit of trickery. The only Negro member of Congress, Representative Arthur Mitchell of Chicago, introduced a bill which he claimed met the Constitutional objections raised against other such measures. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People opposed this measure, claiming it did not go far enough.

Then Representative J. A. Gavan of Tammany Hall, introduced his bill which passed the House.

However, if the Senate runs true to form, it will permit the Anti-Lynching bill to die. A bill sponsored by Senator Wagner of New York is now before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

A leader in the opposition is Senator Borah, who contends that the bills are unconstitutional.

"There is nothing in this move but politics," Senator Borah is quoted. "And, when these bills come up on the Senate floor, I intend to say so. It is nonsense to talk about the Fourteenth Amendment as a justificiation for such measures. The Fourteenth Amendment was intended to insure that States did not pass laws which discriminated against any race."

The Gavan bill provides that any county in which a person is seriously injured or put to death by a mob shall be liable to the injured person or his legal representatives for a sum not less than $2,000 nor more than $10,000. Civil action shall be prosecuted by the United States District Attorney to recover this sum, and he may levy on county property to secure it. Thus, some lynched Negroe's family might some day find itself owning a schoolhouse.

In the past the Senate has argued such bills, and permitted the Northern Senators to angle for the Negro vote. There is a strong opinion that such measures are unconstitutional, and it is being predicted that Anti-Lynching legislation will be allowed to die a slow death in the upper branch.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to

5706

Sanford, Fla. Herald
April 16, 1937

Making Matters Worse

After being repeatedly rebuffed in Congress for fifteen years, most of that time under the control of Republicans, the Gavagan anti-lynching bill rode to an overwhelming victory in the House yesterday, now that it is completely dominated by Democrats. Be it said to the credit of Florida's representatives that with a single exception they joined other Southern Democrats in fighting supporters of the bill from the North and East.

Aimed at the South this bill would subject a county in which a lynching occurs to a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 for the purpose of recompensing the family of the victim and would also subject the sheriff, or any other peace officer, who permitted a prisoner to be taken from him by a mob for the purpose of lynching, to a fine of $5,000 and up to five years in prison.

Just how the sheriff is to prevent a mob from taking a prisoner from him under certain circumstances is not made clear but it is presumed that under the compulsion of a $5,000 penalty and five years in prison he will be made sufficiently desperate to use his sawed-off shotguns and fight to his last drop of blood in defending his prisoner. And the taxpayers, confronted with the prospects of paying a $10,000 judgment to the family of the prisoner would doubtless align themselves with all their side arms on the side of the sheriff.

It is clear that we have in this proposed law the makings of an interesting little civil war wholly unrelated to the usual economic problems of the day, to "sit-down" strikes, or mortgage foreclosures. And after the smoke of battle has cleared away, and the victim has been hanged to the nearest tree, despite the efforts of law enforcement officers and taxpayers, we have then the pretty prospect of federal agents swooping down upon the county to collect its fines and put the sheriff in jail.

It is possible that the vote of 277 to 119 carrying this bill to victory in the House was influenced to some extent by the deplorable lynching in Mississippi early this week when two negroes were burned to death by an angry mob for the slaying of a country merchant. No one deplores such acts of lawlessness more than the Southern Congressmen who voted against the measure but in spite of this instance, as one of them pointed out, lynchings in the South have declined 5,000 percent since the peak in 1892.

If the Gavagan bill really would serve to prevent or even retard mob law, there would be much to say in favor of it in spite of its utter disregard for the rights of individual states, but in our opinion it would have exactly the opposite effect. It would not prevent a single lynching, and it would be likely to turn the hanging of one or two individuals into a free-for-all community-wide battle.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES HAS PASSED in 1937, a law to end the lynching of Negroes by making peace officers responsible for the safe conduct of their prisoners into a duly constituted court of justice. The law also permits an injured person to institute suit against the guilty peace officer for personal damages. The safeguards provided are of the most elementary sort; yet the storm of sectional debate that preceded its passage was a civil war in miniature. The solid South, with the honorable exception of Maury Maverick, fought as one man against the invasion of the "states' rights" to "take care" of their colored citizens in their own way. "The color line in the South is a permanent institution," said Cox of Georgia, who charged that the measure would "mongrelize the white race." "When you talk about equality for niggers in theaters and restaurants," shouted Ford of Mississippi, "every man with a wife and daughter will arm himself to the teeth . . ." More enlightened members insisted that the South was working out its problem and pointed to the decrease in murder by mobs. The bill was passed on April 15 by a vote of 277 to 119—and the final argument was a particularly brutal lynching of two Negroes at Duck Hill, Mississippi, two days before. It now goes to the Senate. The passage of the Gavagan bill is a hopeful event. But the very simplicity of its provisions and the passions it roused throw a lurid light on the long road the Negro must yet travel before he reaches genuine social and economic emancipation in the republic that set him "free" three-quarters of a century ago.

Newport News, Va. Press
April 17, 1937

ANTI-LYNCH LAW

Passage of the anti-lynching bill by the House of Representatives does not come as a surprise. The measure was bitterly opposed by representatives of the southern states. But while it was being considered two Negroes were being burned to death by a mob at Duck Hill, Miss. Hence Representatives from other parts of the country paid little attention to pleas for state's rights or promises that the South would make an end of lynching.

The Daily Press regrets that the House of Representatives has found it necessary to enact an anti-lynching law. But there seemed nothing else for it to do. Nor does there appear anything for the Senate to do but concur. State's rights do not mean that the people of a community have a right to take the law into their own hands, or that officials who are sworn to uphold the law must turn over to mobs without a fight prisoners whom they are sworn to protect. The South has had ample time to make an end of savagery of this kind, and has failed to do so. True, there are fewer lynchings than there used to be. But there are still far too many.

Virginia has put an end to lynchings and the other states could do likewise if they wanted to. But they do not want to. Hence we have barbarous lynchings, investigations which are nothing more than a coat of whitewash, and then more lynchings.

The Gavagan bill provides that an officer who permits a prisoners to escape his custody and be injured or put to death by a mob would be subject to a maximum fine of $5,000 and a maximum prison term of from five to 25 years.

Participants in mob violence would be subject to similar prison terms, and the county in which a prisoner is seized or put to death would have to pay his family damages ranging from $2,000 to $5,000.

If this measure becomes law, and it appears that it will, officials who are charged with the safekeeping of prisoners will be more careful than they have in the past. "Surprises" in which they are "overpowered" by a mob, "none of the members of which they are able to recognize" will become less frequent. And there will be fewer mobs, for a real attempt will be made to enforce the law, and by men who are not in sympathy with the practice of lynching.

Those states which tolerated lynching have only themselves to blame for the anti-lynch law. And it is significant that the most complaint concerning the law comes from states in which lynching has been most prevalent.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
April 19, 1937

House Passes Anti-Lynching Bill.

The Gavagan anti-lynching bill has passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 277 to 119 after considerable debate along sectional lines. The measure was opposed by practically all Representatives from Southern States. Congressional leaders predict that it will encounter greater opposition in the Senate, where the debate also will be largely along sectional lines, with Senators from Southern States in opposi-

The Gavagan bill provides that an officer who permits a prisoner to be taken from his custody and be injured or put to death by a mob would be subject to a maximum fine of $5,000 and a prison term of from five to twenty-five years. Members of lynching mobs would be subject to similar prison terms, and the county in which a prisoner is seized and put to death would be required to pay his family damages ranging from $2,000 to $5,000.

That a Federal anti-lynching law would immediately put a stop to mob murders could not be expected. All laws, Federal and State, are violated. But it is safe to say that if the pending bill should be enacted there would be fewer lynchings and there would be cause to hope that such outrages would cease before a great while. Officers would attempt to give their prisoners better protection, men would have a greater hesitancy to participate in lynching mobs, and counties would be more strongly opposed to lynchings within their borders.

The House has passed anti-lynching bills before but they have always been killed by the Senate. Southern Senators have opposed them and when necessary have staged filibusters to defeat them. These Senators speak for fewer and fewer of the people whom they represent. It has been fifteen years since the last anti-lynching measure was defeated in the Senate, and during that time Southern sentiment in favor of such a law has grown greatly. Southern people, resenting lynchings and humiliated by the fact that those inexcusable crimes are confined almost altogether to their section, have abandoned hope that the States will suppress mob lawlessness.

Anniston, Ala. Star
April 18, 1937

Gavagan's Bill Passes

In spite of the brave fight made by Congressman Sam F. Hobbs and other representatives from the South, the anti-lynching bill fathered by Representative Gavagan of New York has passed the House by a vote of 277 to 119 and now goes to the Senate for final consideration. Here it will have to overcome the hurdle of preferential administration measures now on the calendar and the further obstacle of unlimited debate that was not permissible under the rules of the House. Its ultimate fate, therefore, becomes problematical.

Senator Borah, who comes from the West and thus cannot be accused of sectional prejudice, has already stated that the bill is unfair and unconstitutional and we are in hearty agreement with his contention. We believe it is unfair to make innocent persons, who abhor the very thought of lynching, suffer a penalty along with the guilty, as this law does, and we do not believe that there is any delegation of authority to the Congress in the Constitution that will sanction such power as is contemplated in this measure.

It was in anticipation of an instance of this kind that The Anniston Star assumed a position in favor of President Roosevelt's proposed court reform as opposed to a constitutional amendment that would give two-thirds of the members of the Congress a power to override Supreme Court decisions. For if the court should hold such a law as this invalid, as it apparently must do under the terms of the organic law, the bill then could be passed over the court's veto by a two-thirds vote, as might be done if sufficient pressure were brought to bear. It is not believed, however, that any learned and fair-minded court would uphold such a law, which is patently an invasion of state rights.

Nevertheless, we must face the fact that in a recent poll a majority of the people of the South were indicated as being in favor of federal legislation along this line and we might as well make up our minds to the fact that unless the separate states and governmental subdivisions do their full duty in the premises we shall eventually be compelled to invoke the strong arm of the federal government to put an end to the iniquity of lynching. But there is a remedy within the states. It lies in election of men of the calibre of Ex-Governor Thomas E. Kilby of this city, who in four years secured more convictions for the crime of lynching than have been secured by all other states of the Union since his term of office. Be it said to his credit, too, that Governor Bibb Graves has given unstinted cooperation in helping to wipe out this disgrace here in Alabama. Had it not been for his assistance, for instance, Roosevelt Collins probably would have been lynched here last year. As it was, however, Collins was given an orderly trial and his conviction of rape has just been upheld by the Alabama Supreme Court.

Moreover, there is another remedy in which the federal government may have a part. It was the parent government, then controlled by the states that would foist the Gavagan measure on the South, that freed the slaves—which the North had sold to the South—before they were ready for freedom, then fastened upon us the crimes of Reconstruction as a result of which we were then and have been since unable to train the Negroes for citizenship. It is out of ignorance that lynching emerges, according to authentic studies made by the Southern Interracial Council, and only ignorant Negroes are guilty of beastial crimes, according to facts brought to light by these same authorities. Accordingly, if those behind the Gavagan bill really want to approach this problem as constructive statesmen, let them get behind the Fletcher-Black-Harrison bill and the Bankhead farm tenancy bill and make it possible for us to raise the educational and economic standards of the Southern masses, black and white alike.

Nor is this a plea for the South alone. Jefferson, Monroe and other of the founding fathers recognized that without an educated citizenry there could be no stable democracy in this country. Hence, they supported federal aid to education. Furthermore, since the North makes most of our finished products, that section will profit more by increasing the purchasing power of the South, which can be made possible only through education and a more widely diffused ownership of the agencies of production. And the improvement of the Southern market should become of especial interest to the manufacturing North in view of our rapidly diminishing foreign trade and our approach as a nation to an enforced economy of strict nationalism, for the time may come when they will have to rely on this section to keep their factories in operation.

These conditions are basic to the national welfare, whereas such a measure as the Gavagan bill is born in prejudice and can only result in a widening of the breach in sectional understanding—a consummation that is devoutly to be deplored in a light of progress that has been made in recent years towards the goal of interracial cooperation and national solidarity.

It has been observed by The Birmingham News that the enforcement of the provisions of the Gavagan bill would rest with the district judges of the federal courts in this section and that since they are all Southerners we have little to fear if our local authorities will do their full duty. But it is not so much the law itself to which we object as the element of force that underlies its conception. We have made remarkable progress in stopping the lynching evil without any outside coercion and in the interest of local self-government and state rights we hope the Senate will be able to show Mr. Gavagan the error of his way.

Just Another Bloc?

Representative Hatton Sumners, Dallas, Texas, Democrat, has branded the 58 anti-lynching bills now before Congress as unconstitutional and affording "an inexcusable, dangerous extension of federal power not calculated to be helpful to the cause professed."

Without arguing about that, we would like to see some congressman get up on his hind legs and tell why there are 58 anti-lynching bills pending, but then everybody knows why. There are 58 congressional districts in which incumbent congressmen hope to get some votes by adding another factor to the complex game of racial politics by which most northern urban congressmen get elected to office. It is one of the grim jests of history that in the very areas of America where racial realities are most fervently denied, the real basis of politics and government is the exploitation of race consciousness.

It is doing the negro citizen no service to make him a pawn in this game of machine politics. It is in fact an affront to his citizenship to ask him to become just another alien racial bloc in gangster government.

It is the northern urban regions that stand to be harmed by anti-lynch laws, not the south. Lynching here is becoming an anachronism, at the same time that anarchism tempered by gang rule is becoming the actual mode of government in the urban north.

Madison, Fla., Recorder
April 16, 1937

We cannot think that a federal anti-lynching bill would be constitutional, without amendment of the constitution, for it would clearly be a federal interposition in a state matter; and yet Southern Congressmen will find it very embarrassing to fight the bill unless the State does severely punish those perpetrating the lynchings. In the present case, the crime of which the lynched negroes were accused, was not the one so often advanced, although it was heinous and warranting legal execution, and would probably have resulted in legal execution if the evidence justified conviction. We of the South rightly do not want the rest of the country poking its nose into our administration of justice; then the thing for us to do is to keep justice on a high plane and to insure to every person within our respective borders, whatever the color of his skin or whatever his nationality, protection in his person and property, fair trial in a duly constituted court if he is charged with crime, and sure punishment if he is found guilty.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5787

MANEUVER OF SOUTH'S 4 BLOC FAILS

Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON.

The intended coup of Congressman Hatton W. Sumners of Texas to forestall a forced vote on the Gavagan Anti-lynching Bill, by announcing Judiciary Committee hearings on fifty-nine such measures for Wednesday, fell short of its mark.

With 202 signatures to his petition to discharge the committee from consideration of the bill, secured by Thursday, when Sumners made his announcement, Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan of New York had secured the last of the necessary signatures.

According to rules of the House, automatically compels House action on the floor—a action on the floor—a present scheduled for April

It will be the first time in years that the House has voted on such legislation. The Dyer Bill was passed by that body in 1922. According to Walter White, NAACP secretary, who has pledged in writing from 265 Congressmen that they will vote for the measure, prospects for favorable action are good.

[illegible] now contemplating [illegible] for support in the Senate [illegible] a filibuster blocked a [illegible] measure brought before [illegible] by Senators Wag[illegible]

[illegible] and Costigan during the last Congress. Some twenty Southern Senators are said to be planning to re-enact this move.

Hearings Not Affected

Sumners announced Monday that the committee would not interfere with the scheduled hearings on the forty-eight other anti-lynching bills which [illegible] has been holding up.

Considered the leader among Southern Congressmen opposing federal interference with lynching, Sumners is reported to have assured his friends that no such measure would [illegible] pass the hearings [illegible] the Judiciary Committee.

Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois circulated a letter proclaiming the Sumners hearing announcement. He is author of one of the pending measures, generally considered milder than the Gavagan Bill.

The name of Rep. Arthur W. Mitchell, who has repeatedly refused to sign the Gavagan petition on the ground that Sumners had promised to hold hearings on the anti-lynch bills, is not included in the 218 signatures.

The Gavagan Bill provides penalties for counties in which lynchings occur, as well as punishment for county officers, while the Mitchell measure has no county penalties and provides for punishment of county officers only when lynchings occur "without justification."

Vote Assessed

Gavagan's petition insures House debate, limited to three hours for each side, and a vote.

Congressmen whose signatures appear on the petition include:

NOTE: With the exception of those so designated, the Representatives reported to have signed the petition are Democrats. R. Republican; F.L.: Farm-Labor, and P.: Progressive.

CALIFORNIA: Harry L. Englebright (R.), Frank H. Havenner (P.), Richard J. Welch (R), Albert E. Carter (R), John H. Tolan, John J. McGrath, Bertrand W. Gearhart (R), John Steven McGroarty, R. Jerry Voorhis, Thomas F. Ford, John M. Costello, John S. Hornor, Byron N. Scott, Frank Buck.

COLORADO: John A. Martin.

CONNECTICUT: Bernard F. Kennelman, William J. Fitzgerald, James A. Shanley, Alfred N. Phillips, Jr., J. Joseph Smith, William M. Citron.

DELAWARE: William P. Allen.

ILLINOIS: Raymond S. Smethurst, Edward A. Kelly, Harry P. Beam, Adolph J. Sabath, Leo Kocialkowski, Chauncey Thompson, Everett M. Dirksen (R), Leslie C. Arends (R), Frank W. Fries, Edwin M. Schaefer, Lewis D. Long.

INDIANA: William T. Schaffer, Virginia E. Jenckes, Eugene A. Cowen, Finly H. Gray, Louis Ludlow, Glenn Griswold.

IOWA: Steven C. Fisher, Cassius C. Dowell (R), Paul C. Stefanich (R), Vincent F. Harrington, Lloyd Thurston (R).

KANSAS: Wm. P. Lambertson (R), D. Glover (R), Harrold W. Patterson (R), Edward C. Rees, John M. Houston, Clifford R. Hope (R).

KENTUCKY: John M. Robsion (R).

MAINE: James C. Oliver (R).

MARYLAND: T. Alan Goldsborough, Vincent L. Palmisano, Andrew J. Hickey.

MASSACHUSETTS: Charles R. Clason (R), Joseph E. Casey, Pehr G. Holmes (R), Edith Nourse Rogers (R), Charles L. Gifford (R), Richard B. Wigglesworth (R), Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R).

MICHIGAN: George G. Sadowski, Fred W. Shafer (R), Andrew J. Transue, Jesse P. Wolcott (R), Fred L. Crawford (R), Roy O. Woodruff (R), John Lesinski, Frank E. Hook, Louis C. Rabaut, John D. Dingell, Albert J. Engel (R).

MINNESOTA: August H. Andresen (R), Henry G. Teigan (F.L.), Melvin J. Maas (R), Dewey W. Johnson (F.L.), Harold Knutson (R), Paul J. Kvale (F.L.), John T. Bernard (F.L.).

MISSOURI: Thomas C. Hennings Jr., C. Arthur Anderson.

MONTANA: Jerry J. O'Connell.

NEBRASKA: Terr Norton (R), Charles F. Sindergr, Henry C. Luckey.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Arthur B. Tuttle (R), Charles W. Tobey (R).

NEW JERSEY: Charles A. Wolverton (R), Elmer H. Wene, Clifford R. Wolf

[illegible] K. Sager, Edward A. Kenney, Fred A. Hartley, Jr. (R), Edward [illegible] Frank W. Towey, Jr., Mary T. Norton, Edward J. Hart, D. Lane Powers (R), Donald H. McLean (R).

NEW MEXICO: John J. Dempsey.

NEW YORK: Robert L. Ramspeck (D), William R. Barry, Joseph P. Pfeifer, Thomas H. Cullen, Marcellus H. Evans, Andrew L. Somers, John J. Delaney, Donald L. O'Toole, Eugene J. Keogh, James A. O'Leary, Samuel Dickstein, Christopher D. Sullivan, William J. Bloviis, John J. Boylan, Theodore A. Peyser, Martin J. Kennedy, Sol Bloom, James J. Lanzetta, Joseph A. Gavagan, Edward W. Curley, Charles D. Millard (R), William T. Byrne, Bertrand H. Snell (R), Francis D. Culkin (R), Fred J. Douglas (R), Stephen F. Kelly, Walter G. Andrews (R), Alfred F. Beiter, James H. Sheridan, Daniel A. Reed (R), Matthew J. Merritt, Caroline O'Day, Hamilton Fish (R), W. Stanley Corbett (R), James M. Fitzpatrick.

NORTH DAKOTA: William Lemke (R), Usher L. Burdick (R).

OHIO: Joseph A. Ellzey, Herbert S. Bigelow, Byron B. Harlan, Arthur W. Allaire, John F. Hunter, Thomas A. Jenkins (R), Arthur P. Lamneck, Harry A. White (R), Clay W. Hamer, Robert T. Secrest, William A. Ashbrook, Lawrence E. Imhoff, Michael J. Kirwan, Martin L. Sweeney, Robert Crosser, Anthony A. Feighan, John McSweeney, Harold G. Mosier, W. E. Thom, Joseph A. Dixon.

OKLAHOMA: Wesley E. Disney, Jack Nichols, Lyle H. Boren.

OREGON: Nan Wood Honeyman.

PENNSYLVANIA: Leon Sacks, James P. McGranery, Michael J. Bradley, Frank J. G. Dorsey, Michael J. Stack, Jr., Walter Drew, James Wolfenden (R), J. Roland Kinzer (R), J. Harold Flannery, Albert G. Rutherford (R), J. William Ditter (R), Benjamin K. Focht (R), Guy J. Swope, Benjamin Jarrett (R), Daniel Ginsberg, Charles I. Faddis, Charles R. Eckert, Joseph Gray, Robert G. Allen, Charles M. Crosby, James L. Quinn, Herman P. Eberharter, Henry Rinaldo, Matthew A. Dunn, Robt. F. Rich (R).

RHODE ISLAND: Aime J. Forand.

SOUTH DAKOTA: Fred H. Hildebrandt, Francis E. Case (R).

TENNESSEE: B. Carroll Reece (R), J. Will Taylor (R).

UTAH: J. W. Robinson.

WASHINGTON: Warren G. Magnuson, Knute Hill, John M. Coffee.

WEST VIRGINIA: Robert L. Ramsay, George W. Johnson.

WISCONSIN: Thomas R. Amlie (P), Marty Sauthoff (P), Gardner R. Withrow (R), Raymond J. Cannon, Thomas O'Malley, Michael K. Reilly, Gerald J. Boileau (P), George J. Schneider (P), Bernard J. Gehrmann (P).

In addition to this list, the following members promised to sign the petition but to date have not done so:

Ralph Brewster (R), Maine; Richard T. Buckler (F.L.), Minnesota; Ralph E. Church (R), Illinois; D. Worth Clark, Idaho; Robert P. Hill, Oklahoma; Marvin Jones, California; Karl E. Keller, Illinois; Charles H. Leavy, Washington; John Lesinski, Michigan; J. A. Meeks, Illinois; Charles A. Plumley (R), Vermont; Elmer J. Ryan, Minnesota.

The following Congressmen [illegible] the NAACP in writing prior to the November election that they would [illegible] everything in their power to [illegible] anti-lynching bill to a vote and to [illegible] it but they also have not as yet signed the Gavagan petition:

Frank M. Simpson (R), Illinois; Lee E. Allen, Edwin V. Champion, Illinois; Samuel B. Pettengill, Indiana; Clyde T. Ellis, Missouri; Will Rogers, Oklahoma; Oliver W. Frey, Pennsylvania.

White Ministers Seek Support Of Anti-Lynch Bill

NEW ORLEANS, Apr. 29. (ANP)—Terming lynching "a brutal and barbaric disregard of the Christian ideal of the value and worth of human life," the Evangelical Ministers' association of New Orleans addressed a letter Wednesday to United States Senators John H. Overton and Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, urging their support of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill now before the United States Senate. The letter received prominet display in local dailies.

The letter said, in part:

"As ministers of the Gospel and as citizens of the state which you represent, we wish to inform you of our deep interest in the approval of your vote to the support of this measure. In a democracy, legal procedure must flow through the re[illegible]ized channels of the law. Lynching' is not only a flagrant violation of this procedure, but it is also a brutal and barbaric disregard of the Christian ideal of the value and worth of human life."

Signing the letter were the Rev. Norman A. Maunz, First Evangelical church; the Rev. Oscar C. Laubengayer, Bethel Evangelical church; the Rev. Roy J. Stock, St. Paul's Evangelical church; the Rev. Fred C. Scweinfurth, Salem Evangelical church; the Rev. Norman L. Stock, Bethany Evangelical church; the Rev. A. J. Scherer, Trinity Evangelical church; the Rev. J. C. Reiger, Metairie Evangelical church; the Rev. Herman Borne, St. John's Evangelical church; the Rev. Louis Schweichhardt, St. Matthew's Evangelical church.

Evangelical ministers have taken the lead in bringing about interracial good will here.

Chester, S. C., Reporter
April 19, 1937

A Grave Situation

The House, by a vote of 277 to 119, passed the Gavagan anti-lynching bill yesterday. The bill

...Senator Gavagan is a Democrat representing the negro school district of Harlem. The proposed law would make lynching a federal crime and subject peace officers having in custody accused prisoners, subject to fine and imprisonment and the county in which the lynching occurred will be heavily fined. For some time we have felt that one of the gravest questions involved in the loss of state's rights by encroachment of the federal government was the race problem. This outburst to take over the policing of the states by the federal government is proof that our contention was justified. It now appears that Senator Guffey knew what he was talking about when, during the last presidential campaign he made the assertion that the Democrats had to have the negro vote to win. We now make this prediction: If the Senate passes this bill and it becomes a law, there will come a deluge of lynching that will overshadow any period we have yet had in this country. Throughout the South, and for that matter, other sections of the country, the officers will not attempt to protect prisoners, for the simple reason that they will not arrest them, and those charged with certain crimes will fall into the hands of mobs that will carry out the lynchings. Those charged with certain crimes will fall into the hands of the mob and never see the sheriffs nor their deputies. Lynchings in the South, if this bill becomes law, will increase to an astonishing degree. To say that officers neglect their duty in such cases is to talk foolishness. You cannot prove that an officer is purposely absent, that the failure to arrest the alleged criminal was a premeditated act. Under the present conditions in the South lynchings have decreased in a marked degree. In fact there are in other sections of the country almost as many lynchings as there are in the South. But that is neither here nor there: this idea of white supremacy in the South is deeply rooted and it will be maintained to the utmost, we believe. Segregation of the black and white races. We will not tolerate social equality, inter-marriage nor the opening of mixed schools. Under the present conditions the negroes of the South have made no small advance. Under a law such as Representative Gavagan proposes the advancement of the negroes of the South will be set back a hundred years. That's our prediction, and it is an honest expression, spoken without malice and with the best of good will towards the negro race. You might with equal justification pass a national police law to protect Japanese, Chinese, or any other alien race. Specific punitive police laws should seldom be passed by the Congress. Such laws belong to the states, not the national government. But in this day when Congress is regimenting agriculture, industry and business—things commercial, it is not surprising that the attempt to regulate the social life of individual states should come to the fore. If the present administration presses too far in the crusade to beat down the traditions of the white people of the South, the white people of the South will abandon the Democratic party. There will be no solid South controlled by Democrats.—Union Times.

MAIL BAG

CONGRESSMAN MASSINGALE OPPOSES ANTI-LYNCH BILL

To the Editor:

Some time back I received a letter from you recommending that I support the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill. I will say to you that I considered this bill and the Mitchell bill, [illegible] to be real plain about it, I think they are both ill-timed. I mean by this to give it as my opinion, in the light of what has happened within the last ten or fifteen years toward stopping or preventing lynching(it is a mistake to pass any kind of legislation that might have a tendency to drive a wedge between the increasingly good and wholesome relationship that has been steadily growing between the two races, particularly in the South.

Nobody, of course, would condone lynching. It is a terrible, horrible crime, whether committed on a black or white. Sentiment has been such that this crime is almost extinct. I believe that records disclose that in 1936 there were only eight lynchings among 130,000,000 people. There should not have been one, of course.

Under the Gavagan bill I am afraid that a person accused of any unnamable crime will be deprived of the protection of the local law enforcement officials that he would have without this law. In fact, it amounts to a suggestion that for a law enforcing official to escape the penitentiary himself, when he knows a mob is forming, instead of going after a person charged with crime, he had better absent himself rather than take chances on having the prisoner taken from his possession. I know that even now there is not always good faith on the part of the officials, but generally, such is not the case.

I was reared among the Negroes. My father before me respected them and had their confidence, and they believed in him. Likewise, I believe in them. I think some of the finest characters I have ever known were Negroes, and I really believe that they come as near doing their duty as American citizens as any other people. What America needs along this line more than anything else, according to my idea, is that the Negro race produce more men of the type of Booker T. Washington, and that the white race produce more men of the type of Henry W. Grady. Racial prejudices cannot exist if men are educated properly. I do not believe that any code of law will help promote that right kind of education and good feeling. The Gavagan Bill, in my judgment, will fall far short of this goal.

The Gavagan Bill has the vicious feature of making the real friends of law enforcement, and these are the ones who have taxable property in a community, go down into their pockets and pay damages for an uncontrollable element. These people hate lynching or mob violence in any form, and yet they must be penalized because they have others living among them who know and respect no law.

Furthermore, the Gavagan Bill is so extreme as to make it possible for the arrest and conviction of some enforcing official who has spent his lifetime trying to overcome prejudices and to prevent the crime of lynching, simply because a federal judge might find that such an official has not done his duty under that law.

In addition to these things, the law may be so construed that it will destroy a county government which is, of course, a local unit of a state and of the United States, and might be the means of subjecting officials of a county government to imprisonment for contempt of court for the simple reason that such officials, on account of a constitutional barrier, cannot do the things required for raising money with which to pay the damages that may be assessed against the county.

Very sincerely yours,
SAM MASSINGALE

ANTI-LYNCH BILL

From the Cuthbert Leader:

Until Uncle Sam went legally dry we had a high opinion of him as a law enforcer. Since his failure we hope he will not try to enforce any anti-lynching enactment. While the motive behind the proposed law is very admirable, the law proposed is bad.

Elberton, Ga., Star
April 20, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

During the debate on the anti-lynching bill in congress the past week, Congressman Paul Brown made one of his most logical and powerful speeches against the measure. It attracted the attention of The United States News which publishd an extract from it. The bill passed the House, but it is hoped it will meet the defeat it deserves in the Senate.

Southerners do not condone lynching. They believe in the law taking its course, but they do not believe in penalizing innocent people for what a few misguided individuals may do.

Mr. Brown shot hard and straight at northern proponents of the bill when he said: "I pray that it will never again be necessary for the Klan to protect the South, but those of you from other parts of this nation are showing mighty little consideration for our conditions down home. Do not come talking to me about what you call the great horrible crime of lynching. We can handle our own troubles. You go home and clean up your own back yards of some of this nasty pile of crime, filth, disloyalty and disregard of law."

Cleveland, Tenn. Banner
April 17, 1937

UNCALLED-FOR LEGISLATION

The passage by the house of congress of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill is regrettable. It is to be hoped that the measure will meet the defeat it deserves at the hands of the senate.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, correctly brands the bill "an effort to force through congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an immoral measure."

The Georgia delegation vigorously opposed the bill both by their votes and on the floor of the house. For this they are to be warmly commended.

This iniquitous measure is aimed at the south. Particularly obnoxious, as pointed out by members of congress from various southern states, is the provision that any county in which a prisoner is seized by a mob or put to death may be subjected to a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000, the money to be paid to the victim's family. The possibilities in such a law are alarming to contemplate.

The chief iniquity of the bill, however, lies in the fact that it is the worst example, to date, of the growing tendency to force federal interference into affairs which are strictly matters for the states themselves to handle. The bill strikes at one of the most fundamental of states rights, the right to exercise exclusive police power over its own citizens. Federal policing of crime in any state is a dangerous innovation an done that could easily lead to utter submergence of the states as governmental entities.

There can be no doubt that the charge, made by southern opponents of the bill, that it is aimed at the south, is true. Though the black record of lynching includes many mob crimes committed in other parts of the country, it is self-evident that, had there been no lynchings in the south the measure would not have been introduced and would not have received the strange support of a temporary coalition of northern Democrats with the Republican minority.

The lynching is a frightful crime which cannot, on any grounds, be condoned, no intelligent person will deny. That it is a shameful blot upon modern civilization is not open to argument.

But, emphatically the cure does not lie through federal interference with the sacred rights of the states. The cure, as for all social evils, lies in education and it evident, to the unprejudiced, that education is steadily wiping out the evil.

The records reveal that, since the peak of 1892 the number of lynchings in the country as a whole has decreased 8 000 per cent. The greater part of this improvement has

Education is curing the evil. Edu- ...ing legislation is need... ...ay not of the type of ...

Occasionally we are still shocked ... ...ction will perfect that cure in due ... and horrified by the report of an- ... Federal assumption of a duty the Gover... other mob outrage but they become ... that is emphatically a duty of the ... steadily less frequent. Public con- ... state is not the prescription for the ... demnation grows stronger and this ... disease. ... day has passed when any man may ... It is to be hoped the senate will ... safely boast that he was a member ... promptly scotch this evil proposal. ... of a lynching mob.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to

5708

5708

Wilmington, N. C. News
April 16, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

The News is not nor has it ever been the champion of mob law, but it has opposed and still opposes such measures as the Gavagan anti-lynching bill yesterday before the house.

Its opposition is founded on the obviously discriminatory phases of this bill on the clear encroachment of state's rights that it represents.

The bill is aimed at a certain form of lawlessness, unfortunately common to the south, but it may be noted in this connections that infamous crimes in other sections which the constituted authority was even more impotent than in the south, never [illegible] citation for federal law.

[illegible], the province of the federal government is to deal with crime of a federal nature, but this bill would send Uncle Sam in to take [illegible] and in the purely domestic affairs of the various states.

It sets a precedent that might easily be followed until state's right has been usurped and taken over by the federal government.

As it stands, the government sets up a guardianship over certain sections regarding a certain crime. It smacks more of an emergency rule laid down for a conquered province than of a law passed for the safety of the nation.

several districts where Congressmen Boren, Hill, Johnson and Nichols hail from, is that they resolve themselves into a oneness on election day, supporting without reservation for re-election these courageous representatives in the lower house of the Federal legislature.

To re-elect these men to Congress will help to stiffen the courage of those Oklahoma congressmen who failed us. These timid men are watching. They will be wanting to know what the folk back home are going to do to the Oklahomans who by their votes in Congress seek to blot out the crime of lynching. When election day comes for the fine men who dared to stand for the right, the Black Dispatch is going to be on the firing line for every one of them and we hope that every black man and woman in their districts will close ranks and get squarely behind a program which will re-elect them to office.

Culpepper, Va., Star
April 22, 1937

COMPLIMENTS VIRGINIA.

Congressman Hamilton Fish, of New York, in favoring the Federal anti-lynching law now pending in Congress, paid a compliment to Virginia when he said, "At the outset of my remarks I want to except the State of Virginia. There has not been a lynching in the State of Virginia for 10 years or more. Why? Because that great Commonwealth has written into the law an adequate anti-lynching provision giving the Governor full power to prosecute the members of the mob. If this example had been followed by the other States of the southland, this bill would not be before us today."

Virginia's strong anti-lynching law was passed in 1926 upon the recommendation of Governor Byrd. Although in the preceding 10 years Virginia had a number of lynchings, in the past 10 we have had none.

Every State should enforce its own laws. Lynching is murder and should be punished accordingly.

It is to be regretted that the refusal of other Southern States to arrest and punish those guilty of lynching is now being used as justification to give to the Federal Government the authority to invade sovereign states with Federal troops if need be to enforce a law of local concern.

The passage of the Federal anti-lynching bill destroys one of the remaining vestiges of the authority of the states to maintain home rule and control its local affairs.—Harrisonburg Record.

Close Ranks on Boren, Hill, Johnson, Nichols

Four Oklahoma congressmen, Lyle H. Boren, R. P. Hill, Jed Johnson and Jack Nichols, voted for the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill. The Negroes in the districts where these fine men reside should not forget this. The action of these Oklahoma congressmen is, however, not only a compliment to them individually, but also to the liberality and fairness of their white constituency.

The vote of these men is indicatory of a fine, healthy interracial relationship developing in this state. These congressmen know that down in the districts where they received their commissions to represent Oklahoma, the majority of the white people are opposed to mob murder and believe in the integrity of the courts and the right of such tribunals to try men accused of crime.

The action of these men is a challenge to the Negro voters in their districts. These men have broken the ice. They are today treading on the border land of uncertainty, where other members of the Oklahoma delegation feared to tread. The challenge comes to the Negro voters in the

Congressman Massingale and Lynching

Congressman Sam Massingale, one of the Oklahoma congressmen who voted against the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill, has written the Black Dispatch a letter this week regarding his position in this matter, and which appears on this page in the Mail Bag column.

As usual, along with all of those who declare anti-lynching legislation unconstitutional, the congressman admits there is a cancer eating at the heart of America, but he immediately creates a no-man's land where nothing can be done about it. He admits that mobs destroy human life but he is afraid if the federal government stops the mob it will in doing so destroy state and county government.

In this connection we would like to ask Congressman Massingale one direct question: "Which is the more important: human life, or state and county government?"

In answering this question Congressman Massingale should direct his attention to the protection that white people should have as well as black folk, under our form of government, for Oklahoma is the one state in the Union where more white people have been lynched than black folk. Records compiled by Congressman Mitchell show that Oklahoma has lynched 116 white people and 44 Negroes. We state this so that Congressman Massingale can see that an anti-lynching bill in Oklahoma will benefit white people as well as black.

As congressman mere negation will not absolve Representative Massingale of responsibility which is his. He says he likes Negroes, and that his father had great respect for them, and that Negroes believed in his father. But can Negroes believe in the son of Sam Massingale's father? That is the important question. Congressman Massingale's father doth not represent Oklahoma in Congress. His son does, and it is to the son we look for succor and aid. The Oklahoma solon refers to Booker Washington and Henry W. Grady. Sure we need more Gradys and in addition Negroes want to fix it so that when an embryo Booker T. Washington is born, he will be safe from the brutal and vicious reach of the mob.

In his letter to the editor, Congressman Massingale says before the deprecation

In his letter to the editor, Congressman Massingale says that a person accused of an unnamable crime will be deprived of the protection of the local law enforcement officials."

Mob victims do not have that protection now and it is because of this very lack of protection that the Gavagan law is proposed. Take, for example, the sheriff of the county. A man who mingles daily with the citizens and is known everywhere and who himself has handshaking acquaintanceship with thousands of folk. Think of all of these southern sheriffs and a coroner's jury, when called, delivering always the same verdict: "The Negro was slain by unidentified persons." Such a lie stinks to high heaven and there is not a white man in the South but who knows it is behind this hypocrisy the mob hides.

We raise this question because of the reference Congressman Massingale makes to "the real friends of law enforcement" in the South. These are also unidentified persons in certain communities and we think Congressman Massingale manufactures them out of pure fiction.

Here is what the congressman says on that score:

> "The Gavagan Bill has the vicious feature of making the real friends of law enforcement, and these are the ones who have taxable property in a community, go down into their pockets and pay damages for an uncontrollable element. These people hate lynching or mob violence in any form, and yet they must be penalized because they have others living among them who know and respect no law."

If these "real friends" of law enforcement, to whom Congressman Massingale refers, will appear at the next lynching as observers and make a few notes regarding the prime movers in the savage Roman holiday for the benefit of the coroner's jury and later appear in court as witnesses, there will be no need for federal anti-lynching bills. No friend of law enforcement, nor protector of human life, will remain silent while human butchery and savage torch burnings are practiced in his community.

Our notion is that any county government condoning such crimes and lawlessness ought to be destroyed, and furthermore, we realize that no such breaking down of constituted authority could occur without the backing of public sentiment in that community. This is the important reason why the community becomes stained with guilt and ought to be penalized. The Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill fixes heavy penalties upon counties and there is where the penalty belongs.

Senator Borah and other members of Congress are always harping on the unconstitutionality of anti-lynching legislation. No such argument was made when the Lindbergh anti-kidnap legislation was passed. Kidnapers were making dollars unsafe here in America when the Lindbergh kidnaping law was passed. Congress rushed to protect property rights. We should not forget that the men who wrote America's fundamental instrument said they were guaranteeing to American citizens life, liberty and property.

Columbus, Miss. Dispatch
April 16, 1937

ITS COMMUNISTIC

The anti-lynching bill in Congress is Communistic.

It is inspired principally by Communists who are eternally trying to stir up race trouble in the South.

The Southern people and the negroes get along pretty well together.

Here are the negro's best friends.

Here he is treated better than any other place on earth.

Here his relations with the white race are more peaceful and satisfactory than anywhere else.

Yes, the Southern people and negroes get along pretty well.

Let the Communists and the Federal government leave us alone.

St. George, S. C., Eagle
April 22, 1937

AGAINST "SOLID SOUTH"—RESPONSIBILITY FOR FEDERAL ANTI-LYNCHING LEGISLATION

The State:

Who said the 'Solid South" is but a tradition, a condition mythical!

Whoever he is, there is much, very much in his assertion. Call the roll on the once honored principle of the Democratic party, "tariff for revenue only," and whence now would come the supporting responses? To many Southern congressmen it would be something new, which they had not "digested." But many who understand it would be impelled to vote for protection; protection sugar-coated with the prefix "reasonable"—for some of their influential constituents "need" protection other sections are furnishing the fighters against high tariffs.

Call the roll on the question of states' rights on almost any imaginable issue but one, and the South would be found "scattering" in support. If the issue should be the sovereignty of the states on one side, and the surrender of sovereignty in exchange for, say, $100,000,000, we greatly fear that noble phalanx at Washington representing the South—we do not claim they would vote to "take the dough." Yet we believe that in days of old when Southern knights were bold—in the days long before the popular primaries—Southern statesmen not only had convictions on this issue but were ready to make any sacrifice to support these convictions.

Times have changed and Southerners have changed with them. But on one, and only one issue, is the South changeless. On one question do the representatives of the South vote with rock-like solidness.

When the roll was called in the house of representatives last week on the bill giving federal courts jurisdiction in cases of lynching, not one Southerner faltered in his sacred obligation to uphold the integrity of the sovereign states. On that one issue they are gloriously "solid for the constitution."

Speakers from the South charged Northern and Western Democrats with attacking the stronghold of their party; attacking the fortress where the spirit of the party was kept alive during the long years of political adversity. True, quite true. People are forgetful. Even Southern congressmen have forgotten that a supreme court, saved the South from that which would have been a thousand times worse than federal jurisdiction over lynching cases.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
April 16, 1937

Northern Democrats Strike A Wicked Blow At The South

NOW that the Northern Democrats have thrust the Gavagan anti-lynching bill through the House, the people of Alabama will turn with interest to the Senate in the hope that Messrs. Black and Bankhead play a more conspicuous part in opposing this iniquitous measure than did their colleagues in the lower chamber.

We realize that Alabama's delegation in the House is packed with freshmen and sophomores, but even so we yearn for the day not so long ago when such men as Oliver, McDuffie and Huddleston would have let the nation know that this state does not intend to submit to any such usurpation of its powers as the Gavagan bill provides.

We are a little ashamed that men from Georgia, Mississippi and Texas had to lead the fight.

Be that as it may, the bill now goes to the Senate, and every White Democrat in Alabama will look to Black and Bankhead in the knowledge that they, with a few other Southerners, can stop this bill if they wish.

It may not be good politics for Mr. Black and Mr. Bankhead—if they have national political ambitions—to join in the militant opposition to this measure, but it will be good politics from an Alabama standpoint—and Alabama sent them to Washington. We suggest that our two senators be prepared to drop their mail and lobby investigations, their court reform stump-speaking and their various other activities in order to filibuster against this bill until Christmas, if necessary.

"For more than 100 years the South has kept the Democratic Party alive. Now it has grown fat and powerful, it proposes to turn upon the South and deal it this wicked blow."

Those true words are from Representative Cox of Georgia, and if Southern senators permit this bill to become a law when they were able to block similar measures so easily during Republican administrations, they will indeed have let a "wicked blow" be struck at the South. All Alabamians who believe in white supremacy will expect Mr. Black and Mr. Bankhead to do their duty.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5769

SENATE POLL SHOWS 56 FAVORABLE TO ANTI-LYNCH BILL

Press service N.A.A.C.P.

Independent Questionnaire by a Washington Information Service Reveals 47 Positive Votes, With 9 More Favoring Measure; Only 20 Listed as Definitely Opposed

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

Washington, D. C., May 14.- A poll of the Senate on the question of whether or not senators favored the Gavagan anti-lynching bill has revealed that 56 senators - 7 more than a full majority - are in favor of the measure.

Of these 56 votes, 47 are positively certain for the bill, while 9 are for it with certain reservations.

Only 20 votes are listed as definitely opposed to the bill. Nineteen senators are listed as uncertain.

The poll was an independent one conducted by one of the several leading information services operating here. These information services collect information on legislation and release it to subscribers. From time to time, they conduct polls on important pending legislation. Supporters of anti-lynching legislation had nothing whatsoever to do with the poll and, therefore, the results have double significance since they can not be interpreted as inspirational propraganda.

In the notation accompanying the tabulation, the information bulletin says:

> "The poll indicates that this bill on lynching can pass the Senate if it should come to a vote now. The big issue concerning the bill appears to be whether or not it will be brought to a vote. Indications are that it will not. The tabulation above is a reflection of sentiment as of noon Friday, May 7.

Many "Uncertain" Senators Friendly

Of the 19 senators listed as "uncertain" on the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, 16 have at one time or another indicated that they are friendly to legislation, N.A.A.C.P. officials said here today.

The N.A.A.C.P. has received permission to make the poll public, but the association is withholding the names and classifications of the senators until it can receive an answer from the 16 senators in the uncertain group whom it believes are favorable to the bill. The N.A.A.C.P. is confident that at the very least, 8 of these 16 will declare for the bill, making a total of 64 or 65 votes for the measure in the Senate - an overwhelming majority.

"This poll by Congressional Intelligence is simply one more proof of our assertion that there are more than enough votes to pass the anti-lynching bill in the Senate if it can be got to the floor," said Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary. "The poll by the Institute of Public Opinion in December showing 70% of the people in the country in favor of an anti-lynching bill plus these polls in the House and Senate showing overwhelming majorities in Washington for the bill indicate plainly that the major task now before all supporters of this legislation is to exert the utmost pressure upon the leadership in the Senate to get it to bring the bill up for a vote.

"Messages should be sent to Henry F. Ashurst, chairman of the Senate judiciary committee, to Senator Joseph H. Robinson, majority leader, to Vice-President John N. Garner and to Senator Frederick Van Nuys and Robert F. Wagner, urging them to take steps to see that the bill is brought up for a vote. The address for all Senators is: 'Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.'"

Columbia, S. C. Record
May 8, 1937

HARLAN AND THE LYNCHING BILL

When revelations were made recently as to acts of violence, occasionally mounting to homicide, against trade unionists and union organizers in Harlan county, Kentucky, [Southern members of congress were quick to point out the analogy to lynching. Representative Robsion, of Kentucky, was twitted in the house on April 23 with having voted for the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, for Robsion's district contains Harlan county.

Robsion was one of the members from below the Mason and Dixon line who voted for the Gavagan bill. However, Robsion is a Republican. The striking point about the vote of more than 2 to 1 by which the house passed the bill on April 15 was the presence of certain Southern Democrats in the affirmative ranks. Maverick, of Texas, and four fellow Democrats from Oklahoma voted aye. Creal, Democrat, of Kentucky, went with his Republican colleagues for the bill, as did the two Republican members from Tennessee. As for the other border states—five of the 11 votes recorded from Missouri were for the Gavagan bill, all six from Maryland, all six from West Virginia, and the one from Delaware—Democrats all but one.

In certain quarters the Gavagan anti-lynching bill if it is enacted at this or at the 1938 session of congress, is expected to discourage lawless acts like those in Harlan. For although the bill is termed an "anti-lynching" measure, it is directed not merely at lynching—in fact, the word "lynching" occurs nowhere in the measure. It is directed, rather, at any case of mob violence; and for the purposes of the bill a mob may consist of as few as three persons "acting in concert without authority of law."

However, the Gavagan bill punishes mob violence only when directed against a person in the custody of "any peace officers." This limitation seems to have been inserted with the idea of strengthening the bill in a test of constitutionality. The constitutional basis of the bill is that the mob's action has the purpose or the result of depriving its victim of his guaranteed right of due process of law or equal protection of the laws.

The question of constitutionality aside, this limitation on the bill's scope may seriously weaken its effectiveness if it should be enacted. In the house debate, the point was made that approximately one-half of all persons lynched in the United States in recent years had been taken from the custody of public officials. In the recent "blow-torch" murders in Mississippi, the victims were seized by the mob without having been apprehended by state or local officials. Representative Robsion made the further point: "Some state or county officials might say, 'Why take the chance of being prosecuted or the county being subjected to pay damages?' and neglect or fail to take the accused person sought by the mob into custody."

This narrowness in scope of the Gavagan bill may be rectified when the measure is considered by the senate judiciary committee, now holding it up until the court reform bill is acted upon, and then by the senate, provided it gets to the floor of the senate. The Southern members who are prepared to filibuster against the bill may even vote to make it apply when victims have not been taken from the custody of officials, in the hope of weakening the case for the constitutionality of the measure.

Raleigh, N. C. Times
April 20, 1937

A FEDERAL "ANTI LYNCH" BILL AND THE COURT CONTROVERSY

NATURALLY enough the peculiarly horrible Mississippi lynching made a renewal of the effort in Congress to pass a Federal anti-lynch bill aimed at the South, on the theory that negroes are the sole victims of mob violence.

There are several such bills now pending and there is distinct danger that it will be impossible to preserve the truth that it is not necessary, in order that a lynching be committed, for the victim to be black, or for hanging or torture to be the method of the mob. Every year sees ten mob murders committed in the North and West for one lynching in the South; yet despite a constantly bettered record, the general opinion persists that lynching is peculiarly a Southern crime.

The chief objection to any such Federal statute is, of course, the invasion of the authority of the States to deal with their own criminals by law. If the Supreme Court could still be counted upon to follow its long-time precedents, no such law would be worth the writing. But what may happen when the Supreme Court is reconstructed and the northern and western negroes are voting the Democratic ticket, no one is prophet enough to predict.

Richmond, Va. News-Leader
April 16, 1937

UNCLE SAM IN LYNCHINGS.

Southern Democratic Senators doubtless will filibuster and may defeat any anti-lynching bill at this session of Congress, but Southern leaders as a group will not make a further fight against Federal legislation of this general nature.

For more than ten years, non-political spokesmen of the South have been urging the States to enact anti-lynching laws. Warning after warning has been given that if the States did not act, the Federal Government would. A few States took that warning and passed statutes that have put an end to lynchings. The other States adopted no laws and took scant action of any sort to stop mob murder. They have invited and they deserve what will be imposed on them under the Gavagan Act or a substitute for it.

When States will not assume the obligations that run with their cherished rights, they cannot expect those rights to be respected.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
May 17, 1937

A New Anti-Lynching Plan

WITH lynchings in the South having been reduced by 5,000 per cent in the last 40 or 45 years, we see no reason for federal anti-lynching legislation in any form.

If we must have such a bill, however—it looks as though the Northern Democrats, as a sop to their negro constituents, will never be satisfied until we do—the so-called Hallion suggestion is the best yet put forward.

Frank H. Hallion, a negro who was born and reared in Lynchburg, Va., but now living in Jamaica, N. Y., is sponsoring a plan devoid of nearly all the objectionable features of the Gavagan bill, which has already passed the House.

Hallion, seeking some member of Congress who understands the attitude of the South toward lynchings to introduce his bill, feels that it will win the approval of white Southerners as well as intelligent leaders of his own race.

The proposed law provides that federal authorities, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (of G-man fame) and the federal courts may assist in the investigation of lynchings, the apprehension of mob members and their prosecution when such aid is requested by the governor or the legislature of the state where the mob outrage has occurred.

A law such as this is far preferable to the Gavagan bill, which would permit federal authorities to take over the affairs of the state and its courts in such a manner as never before in the history of America. The Gavagan bill, by allowing a virtual federal invasion, is little better than the iniquitous Force Bill of the last century which was filibustered to death.

No one could object to the Hallion plan on the grounds that it permits a federal invasion of states' rights—it merely allows us federal assistance in solving our difficulties. Furthermore, it is probably constitutional—something which the Gavagan bill probably will not be, unless as we now fear, the Supreme Court is packed with gentlemen who have no sympathy with the South.

The principal objection to the Hallion plan is that it just carries us one step farther in our alarming and increasing reliance upon the central government. The people of no state can be completely happy, or free, as long as their policies and courts are dictated from a central authority several hundred miles away—an authority in which we, as only one of 48 states, have a very weak voice. It is the parallel evil of absentee ownership in industry and agriculture cropping up in government.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to -

5710

Brunswick, Ga., News
May 17, 1937

KNOX IS OPPOSED TO ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

HE TELLS LOCAL GRAND JURY TODAY THE MEASURE IS UNFAIR AND UNJUSTIFIED

Judge Gordon Knox in his charge to a Glynn county grand jury today declared the anti-lynching bill now before congress and which stands a fair chance of being passed is unfair and unjustified.

Deploring lynching as a horrible crime, he said all good citizens were opposed to this violation and they should do all in their power to wipe it out, but at the same time the present bill before congress, if passed, will work a hardship on many communities.

Judge Knox pointed out that under the provisions of the bill a county in which a lynching occurs is subject to a penalty of $5,000. He also said that the bill provides that a county in which a lynching occurs must pay $10,000 to the estate of the person lynched. Such a law, he said, is unfair to all good citizens and he hoped the bill will be defeated, he said. An innocent county will be subject to the heavy penalties. As an example, he pointed out, a mob in an adjoining county could secure a prisoner, bring him to this county and lynch him, and although this county had no connection whatever with the crime, it would at the same time be responsible and subject to the $5,000 penalty and would be liable for the $10,000 to be paid to the estate of the person lynched.

Judge Knox also told the Glynn county jury that they should aid in every way possible in preserving the timber supply of this section of the state. Timber is the most valuable asset in the surrounding territory, he said, and is daily growing more valuable with the coming of pulp mills to this section. It is the duty of our citizens to protect and preserve the surest income we have, he said.

Burning of woods has long been practiced, at a great loss to timber owners, he said, and the law prohibiting this practice should be rigidly enforced. The man who sets fire to his land to provide grazing pastures for his cattle does great damage to the land of his neighbor, he said, and everything possible should be done to put a stop to it.

The judge told the jury he was not going to call particular attention to any laws that should be investigated and enforced. He said it was the duty of grand jurors to see that all laws are respected, it matters not whether or not they may meet with the approval of the community or grand jurors. As long as they are on the statute books, he said, they should be enforced.

He also told the jurors it was their duty to look into the public affairs of the county, to inspect county offices, buildings and highways and see if county affairs were being wisely and economically administered.

The jury was organized with the selection of Guy Walker as foreman, D. C. Staley as clerk, and J. E. Abbott bailiff.

Montgomery, Ala. Journal
May 18, 1937

Senator John H. Bankhe[illegible] at his home in Jasper on a visit, speaks very bluntly about the anti-lynching bill recently passed by the house. He is quoted as saying that the measure "has no real backing except from a few Northern negroes who collect dues for their efforts," and makes the point that "if legislation is to be enacted, it should include gangster murders in the big cities of the North and East."

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
May 18, 1937

Rights And Mob Law

[illegible]cipal opposition to the Gava[illegible]nching bill which recently [illegible]ouse of Representatives was [illegible]round that it would violate [illegible]ts.

[illegible]uld be a sound plea—it should [illegible] decisive plea—if there were any states' rights to be violated, asserted in the cases of most lynchings. Admitted, it is the right and the duty of states to deal with lynchings within their borders and to punish lynchers. But they rarely assert that right and perform that duty. Their officials either fear or sympathize with the lynchers and do nothing to bring them to justice. And the states do nothing to force their officials to perform their duty or replace them with officials who will perform it.

And lynchings are not the only things about which states' rights are dead. Observe how the governors and mayors rush to Washington surrendering states' rights and imploring the government to do for them what they fail to do for themselves.

For almost a lifetime, there has been no more earnest defender of states' rights than The Courier-Journal. But it is because it has been reluctantly forced to the conviction that, if mob law is to be abolished, it must be done by the federal authorities that it now advocates the enactment of such a substitute for states' rights as the Gavagan anti-lynching bill.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal
May 22, 1937

BILBO TO OPEN DRIVE ON ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Senator Promises To Block Measure By Filibuster

Special to The Commercial Appeal

LOUISVILLE, Miss., May 21.—"I'll kill the anti-lynching bill in the Senate, by filibuster, if it takes six months," Senator Bilbo said here today in an address at the dedication of an American Legion state park.

Discussing the measure which passed the House several weeks ago, Senator Bilbo said "I was shocked at receiving a telegram from a students' organization at Millsaps College urging me to vote for the anti-lynching bill."

He charged that the request was an outcrop of a "Communistic organization which fostered the chapter of the American Student Union at Millsaps and now taking root in southern schools."

"I think the movement should be checked," he said. "I hate lynchings, but the bill they want me to indorse is ridiculous to a southern man."

Thomasville, Ga., Times-Enterprise
May 28, 1937

THE RADICAL TENDENCIES OF YOUTH?

Students in Mississippi at some college advocated the anti-lynching bill. Senator Bilbo made some very sarcastic and disparaging remarks remarks about them and their I. Q. The result was a rather widespread rediscussion of the age old question of the radical tendencies of youth and especially those who are given a taste of the unusual doctrines and theories that get into the college course.

Students in the main are not radical although they have peculiarly direct reactions to some of the problems and theories concerning them that are advanced. They are too neophitic in their reasoning on public questions to get the right viewpoint and to properly evaluate the types of arguments that are utilized by their more learned and experienced directors.

The country needs new thought and refreshing solutions to many questions but it can do well without the too enthusiastic and often too prejudiced opinions of students, translated into riotous action. The problems of the day must be settled not alone on their future but the translation of the past into the future so as to preserve that for which we have labored and still meet the problems and trials that new conditions of the passing years create. There is much good in what we have builded. There can still be good if it is continued on the same sound scale as it has been started in this country.

Our latest political activities, both in America and elsewhere, have created a feeling that dictatorship is in the offing. The politicians have builded up a campaign against it for obvious reasons and when they are threatened with their power and control even in minor affairs they put up a dictatorship bogey man and they all bow down in reverential fear so that some people not well informed are convinced of the actuality of the danger when it is a mere political drawstring. Students are prone to follow that process if they are led astutely. If not they soon snap out of it and add to the conservatism and saneness of our citizenship.

This clipping from
Seneca, S.C. Journal
May 20. 1937

Passage of Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill Seen As Slap In Face to Loyal Democrats of The Southern States

Washington, May 20.—Southern Democrats here and who are responsible for keeping the party alive in its darkest days are still smarting under the slap in the face they received at the hands of the Administration in the recent passage of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill.

While it is generally believed that the measure will die in the Senate where other like bills have died in past years, Southern Democrats who voted against the measure almost solidly are nevertheless wrought up over the attitude of the Administration in allowing such a measure to pass purely for political expediency to satisfy Tammany Democrats and a large negro vote in Harlem and other sections of the North.

It is generally understood here that the proposal has the silent endorsement of the Administration because its author, Joseph A. Gavagan, who calls himself a Democrat, and is, of the Tammany variety, stated several days after the passage of the measure by the House that James A. Farley, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee and Postmaster General, had called him early the next morning to congratulate him on his work in getting the measure through the House.

"Jim Farley called me up before nine o'clock the other morning to congratulate me," Gavagan stated here. "He told me that all of Washington was thrilled by the fine job I had done, and he was especially happy since I came from New York." It is generally assumed here that this bit of elation on the part of Farley was inspired by the thought that passage of such a bill would add all the negro votes to his candidacy for the Presidency in 1940.

The Southern Democrats and others opposed this measure were solid in their denunciation of lynching and mob crime, they contend, correctly, that it is a local problem, a problem that should be handled and is being handled by the States in the South. Figures were submitted to substantiate the fact that lynching in the South has been reduced to a negligible figure; that every year for the past thirty years the figures have been reduced. A number of Democrats from the South contended that the Federal Government has no more right to punish a mob, a county and a state for the occurrence of a lynching than they have a right to go into such large centres as New York and Chicago and prosecute rackets of a purely state nature, or to hunt down and prosecute gangsters who have committed no Federal offense.

Under the terms of the bill a county in which a lynching occurs will be liable to a fine up to $10,000 regardless of the efforts made by the officers of that county to prevent the lynching. It imposes other severe fines and punishment on law officers and individuals where the crime occurs.

When the vote on the measure was taken all Southern Democrats except Maverick of Texas, who made a speech on the floor for the bill, voted against it.

Gavagan who is the author of the measure is a Tammany Democrat and represents part of New York City in which Harlem is located. He is somewhat of a hero in Harlem at the present time because of the passage of the bill. Plans are under way to stage a monster parade and celebration there to honor him and Senator Robert F. Wagner who is expected to sponsor the bill in the Senate. The New York Enquirer of April 25 says that 50,000 are expected to take part in the celebration when it is held.

Even should the measure be passed by the Senate and get the approval of the President, there is much doubt in the minds of many if it will actually prevent lynchng. Some contend that such high-handed methods will only widen the breach between the two races. Certainly this measure and similar legislation now pending is not inclined to smooth the already troubled Democratic party waters. It is recalled by many Southern Democrats that after the election of Harding in 1920, the party in all sections of the country except in the South was deader than the Republicans after the election of Roosevelt. The South, except for the Al Smith-Hoover fiasco remained Democratic and was the nucleus about which the present Democratic party was built. As a reward for their devotion and years of struggle to put the party in the front again, they are slapped in the face with such legislation as the Gavagan bill, aimed purely at the South and designed with the intent and purpose of luring negro votes in the heavily populated sections of the East to the Democratic party.

As one member of Congress stated several days ago, "We are Democratic and always will be in the South. The Administration knows that and feels they can insult us with such legislation as the Gavagan bill and we'll still be with them. I do not believe that it will always be so."

Final Drive Is Made For Lynch Bill

Interview

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 11—The nation surely needs and must have an anti-lynch bill! Braced only by their humanistic conception of justice and unwavering courage supporters of anti-lynching legislation, struggling against frail prejudices, this week outlined the campaign that must be followed if success is to be ultimately achieved.

President Certain To Sign

It is regarded as practically certain that President Roosevelt will sign the bill in event the Senate approves it, and favorable action of the Senate depends entirely upon the efforts of those persons interested in seeing the measure become a law.

With Senator Van Nuys of Indiana as chairman of the Senate sub-committee of the judiciary committee and Senator Ashurst, Arizona, as chairman of the full committee, and both being favorable to the bill, little trouble is anticipated in having it reported to the Senate for consideration.

First Major Hurdle

This first major hurdle is looked for after the bill reaches the Senate where Majority Leader Joseph Robinson, will have much to do with the position the matter receives on the calendar, as well as when it will be considered.

Pressure may be brought to bear upon Robinson in two ways: first, by President Roosevelt who merely has to signify his interest, and the second, by other senators, and the senators will turn on the heat only after heat is turned on them by their constituents.

Filibuster Possible

Thus it has been deemed advisable that citizens throughout the country flood their respective senators with telegrams and letters requesting them to use their influence to force the measure to the floor of the Senate in case there is any attempt to sidetrack it for other legislation, and mark time until Congress adjourns. With the proper backing from an interested public the measure will surely come up for debate but upon reaching this stage it will face its worst barrier—that of the filibuster. If the bill is forced on the floor opposing senators may try to "talk it to death" as they did several years ago in dooming the Dyer anti-lynching bill.

Blocking Filibuster

There is only one way to block the filibuster and that is by means of the "closure rule," which may be invoked only after two-thirds of the Senate has voted for it. The closure rule, when adopted by the required two-thirds, stops all debate and brings the question to a vote. In view of this fact it appears that while a majority of 49 of the 96 members who compose the Senate can pass the bill if it comes to a vote, that number would be powerless to do anything in case of filibuster, therefore in order to insure favorable Senate action on the measure, sufficient agitation must be carried on to line up at least 64 senators in favor of the law. At the present time 62 senators in the favorable class: 53 definitely for the bill; six for it with reservations and three probably for the bill.

There are two less senators in the favorable class than are necessary to put over a closure rule vote but there are four to spare to win provided there is no filibuster..

Senate Marking Time

With a report of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill slightly delayed due to the long Memorial holiday week end, the Senate was still marking time on the measure, although it is freely predicted that some action will be taken this session.

It became apparent this week that Congress will be in session until after July 15, and some quarters are predicting the session will last until mid-August. The President's Supreme court bill has been withdrawn temporarily thus clearing the way for action on other legislation including the anti-lynching bill. With the court bill out of the way and with no chance of early adjournment the chances for the anti-lynching bill are regarded as improved.

It is expected that it will be favorably reported within a few days by the Senate judiciary committee, headed by Senator Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona.

Lynchings—1937
Legislation Relating to

5711

Vienna, Ga., News
April 29, 1937

...ED FOR ANTI-LYNCHING

It was unfortunate for those who ...ppose the Gavagan anti-lynching ...ill which passed the house by a sub...tantial majority, that at the very ...time when Senator Borah was say...ng that the South was curbing this ...rime, two of the most atrocious ...ynchings in the history of the coun...ry took place in Mississippi. Charg...d with the murder of a Mississippi ...erchant, and not with the crime ...gainst a white woman which was ...sed for so many years as a partial ...xcuse for mob law, two Negroes ...ere taken out and burned, while ...a howling mob looked on.

The South is duly grateful to Sen...tor Borah and other who opposed ...he Gavagan bill partly on the ...round that this section of the coun...ry was getting away from mob ...iolence, but at the same time it ...hould be set forth, to keep the rec...ord straight, that lynching is no long...r peculiar to the South and per...aps never has been. There has been ...a reduction in the number of lynch...s the country as a whole over a ...eriod of years, but New Yory city ...nd points in Illinois have instances ...f mob violence against Negroes ...his country has ever seen.

The proposed bill follows a famil...ar pattern. It asserts that any state ...r political subdivision thereof which ...ails to afford protection to any ...individual from a mob shall be con...idered to have deprived such person ...f due process of law or of equal ...protection of the law.

Section 3 declares that any officer ...hereable for such a crime to be ...uilty of a felony and subject to a ...ine not to exceed $5,000 or a prison ...erm of not more than five years.

A clause also provides a term of ...from five to 25 years for any officer ...conspiring to deliver prisoners.

Section 4 gives a federal district ...court jurisdiction in such cases ...here an officer fails to do his duty ...or where jurors are so prejudiced ...that they are not likely to punish ...mob violence.

Section 5 and 6 deal with the lia...bility of counties for failure to take ...action and provide for damage in ...federal courts.

Representative Rankin, of Miss...issippi was one of the most vigorous ...opponents of this bill and yet it was ...in his state that the latest of these ...crimes of mob violence took place.

Representative Hamilton Fish, a ...Republican, who, nevertheless, has ...generally been friendly to the South ...called attention to the burning of ...the two Negroes in Mississippi and ...said the actual test of the ability ...of the southern states to protect ...colored citizens from mob are arrest...ed and convicted. If they are, he ...said, then there is no real need for ...federal anti-lynching legislation, but ...if they are not "then even the south...ern Democrats should vote for the ...bill."

This view seems to be entirely ...sound, but in the meantime we may ...add that thus far the members of ...the mob engaged in the burning of ...the Mississippi Negroes certainly ...have not been 'arrested and con...victed".

As we have said, the usual defense ...of lynching has been that the crime ...thus summarily avenged has some...times been an attack upon woman, ...but when one of the most horrible ...instances of mob violence, with tor...ture, took place a few years ago ...near Marianna, Fla., a number of ...the leading women in the state came ...forward and urged that the good ...name of the state should be cleared ...by bringing the members of the mob ...to justice.

We have great respect for the ...high authoritity of men like Rep...resentative Wadsworth and Senator ...Borah who contend that the law ...would be unenforceable. Senator ...Borah also holds that it would be ...unconstitutional. It goes without ...saying that no good citizen should ...advocate a law that is unconstitu...tional, but as the years go by mob ...violence is not punished in the south ...or in the north, and if an anti-lynch...ing bill can be framed which will ...give the federal government power ...to intervene when and if the states ...have failed in their obvious duty ...which is almost universally the case ...where a lynching takes place, then ...such a law should go on the statute ...books.

The very civilization of the South ...demands that this blot should be ...wiped out and that mob violence ...should be purnished.—Macon Tele...graph.

Pointed Paragraphs

By DEWEY R. JONES

OUR CONGRESS

IF I had not been there and ...had not seen and heard for ...myself, I would never have ...believed it. Even reading the ...remarks and extensions in the ...Congressional Record would ...not have convinced me that ...men, in these enlightened ...years, would have the effron...tery to make the statements ...attributed to them. But, hav...ing seen and heard them, I ...know that they did make ...them.

I saw and heard for instance a ...smiling, gentle-spoken man from ...Texas, Hatton Sumners, chairman ...of the House Judiciary committee ...make a thirty-minute speech against ...anti-lynching legislation, and using ...as the basis for his arguments the ...fact that there were fewer lynch...ings in 1936 than there were in 1935 ...and 1892. He said that this reduc...tion proved that the South was ...handling the lynch question satis...factorily to the South. And he con...cluded his speech with a threat that ...if the bill is passed the South will ...show its resentment by increasing ...its lynch activities.

THEN, there was an individual ...from Mississippi named Rankin ...who dragged out the old bugaboo ...of rape and social equality as his ...reason for opposing any sort of ...anti-lynch legislation. The fact ...that two men had been murdered ...by mobs in his state during the de...bate, dampened not a bit his ardor ...for what he chose to call "State's" ...Rights." He stormed up and down ...the floor raving about "Nigras" who ...would accept the passage of this ...bill as a license to attack white ...women, and appealed to the emo...tions of his colleagues to defeat ...the bill.

And there was a gentleman from ...Georgia who declared that his love ...for black folk (as typified by the ...Mammy) knows no bounds—except ...those bounds set up by efforts to ...protect their lives. And there was ...another rabble-rouser from Ala...bama who, reaching down in his ...book of statistics, brought up the ...'facts" that there has been but ...one lynching in Alabama in ten ...years. He apparently had forgot...ten (conveniently) Snow Hill and ...Tecumseh. Three persons were ...lynched in Alabama at one time ...in 1933 and one in 1934, but this ...distinguished speaker either did not ...know of them or thought the world ...Almanac did not know of them.

Then, there was the effort to take ...from the Gavagan bill the very heart ...of it by removing certain para...graphs and sections. You would ...have been interested ot see how ...certain Congressmen changed their ...vote when they realized that they ...were being put on record. For ...instance when the first vote on the ...amendments to emasculate the bill ...was taken, the amendments won by ...overwhelming majority. But this ...was something else again when Mr. ...Gavagan of New York demanded ...a roll call. This proved to me that ...many persons did not vote for the ...bill because they were our friends ...and wanted to see lynching wiped ...out, but because they were afraid ...not to vote for it. That little thought ...ought to encourage more Negroes ...to qualify themselves to vote and ...use the ballots where they have ...them.

AND I wish to commend Con...gressman Arthur W. Mitchell of ...Chicago. It required courage for a ...man to get on the floor of the ...house and denounce the Dixie sys...tem of justice after a leading re...presentative of that form of jus...tice had just praised him, and yet ...that is what Mr. Mitchell did. Con...gressman Sumners fighting the ...lynch bill with all his might ...paused long enough to give Con...gressman Mitchell one of his left-...handed compliments. "If that gent...leman, Mitchell, keeps on in the ...way he is going, he will go down ...in history as one of the greatest ...statesmen the colored race has pro...duced," said Mr. Sumners.

I wondered what Congressman ...Mitchell would do after that. ...had not long to wait. He secured ...the floor, and in a 15-minute talk ...answered Sumners. Rankin, Tar...ver, Cox and all the others who ...claim to be our friends (as long ...as we stay in places they designate ...for us). In the few minutes that ...Mitchell talked, he proved more ...clearly than ever before, that a ...Negro in high places is the only ...person who can speak for Negroes. ...There is a difference between be...ing a humanitarian and being a self-...preservationist.

WELL, it's history now. The anti-...lynch bill passed the House ...by the staggering vote of 276 to ...119. It now goes to the Senate ...where it is freely predicted it will ...die. I don't know. I remember once ...before when the Senate was divid...ed on the issue of "who won the ...war." It was the effort to place ...upon the Supreme court bench one ...Judge John J. Parker who had stated ...that he didn't believe Negroes ...should take part in politics. Ne...groes, marshalled by Walter White ...and the Negro press, warned the ...senators that we did not want Judge ...Parker on the high court. Some ...senators took the hint and acted ...accordingly. Others thought Ne...gro voters were bluffing. They—...every blooming one of them (in ...those sections where Negroes vote) ...have since been retired from the ...senate. It can ' ' 'n, you know.

AND speak: ...ass Pressure. ...please let me presume to pre...dict that "Gone With the Wind," as ...a motion picture will make the ..."Birth of A Nation" seem like an ...Easter entertainment by compari...son. It's too bad that Negroes can...not start a movement now to keep ...that picture from being made rath...er than try to keep it from being ...shown after it is made. Mark my ...words. "Gone With the Wind," will ...stir up more race hatred through...out the country and arouse more ...contempt for Negroes than any...thing sent out in recent years. You ...can remember this when the pic...ture gets started.

Bastrop, La. Enterprise
April 29, 1937

South Is Angered by Anti-Lynching Act

SOUTHERN congressmen found ...they were no longer in the sad...dle when the house by a vote of ...276 to 119 passed the anti-lynching ...bill. The debate was furious and ...the representatives from the South ...were deeply resentful.

The bill was sponsored by Repre...sentative Joseph Gavagan of New ...York whose district includes the big ...negro city of Harlem. It provides ...that any state officer who surren...ders a prisoner to a mob shall be ...guilty of a felony and subject to ...prosecution and severe penalties. In addition, the county in which a ...lynching occurs shall be liable for ...$1,000 to $10,000 damages, to be paid ...to the family of the lynched person. ...Proponents of the measure were shocking affair a "closed incident."

Mitchell Anti-Lynch Bill Failure Laid To Weakness And Misrepresentation

Rep. Hamilton Fish Outspoken On Doomed Proposal; To Aid Gavagan

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 16—The House of Representatives and particularly the Republican members, refused to consider Representative Mitchell's antilynching bill last week because it does not represent the views and wishes of the colored people of this country.

This was the statement of Representative Hamilton Fish of New York immediately following rejection of the Mitchell bill in the House of Representatives last Wednesday.

"The Mitchell proposal," he continued "is an emasculated anti-lynching bill—a mere political gesture of camouflage—and hasn't the support of a single prominent colored newspaper in America.

"I took the occasion today to wire the editors of the six largest colored newspapers and, without exception, they favored the Gavagan bill, which will come up automatically under the rules Monday.

"Editor Robert S. Abbott, of the Chicago Defender, in the home city of Representative Mitchell, wired me to use every possible effort towards the passage of the Gavagan bill. The same request came from Carl Murphy, editor of the Afro-American of Baltimore, and from Editors C. B. Powell of the Amsterdam News and Fred R. Moore of the New York Age.

Editor Robert L. Vann of the Pittsburgh Courier wired me that 'intelligent Negroes everywhere very much prefer the Gavagan bill.'

"The colored soldiers in the World war fought to make the world safe for democracy. The time has come to put an end to mob violence and the hideous plague of lynching, which is a black stain upon the honor of our country. If certain counties and states in the South cannot and will not enforce the laws and prosecute lynchers and mob violence and protect the lives of our citizens, then the Federal government must do it.

"I intend to support the Gavagan bill when it comes up next Monday, and I believe that every Republican in Congress will do likewise."

PACE MAKES PROTEST

FROM THE DAWSON NEWS

In one of the most heated debates of the year in the House of Representatives in Washington, Congressman Stephen Pace, of the third district, protested strongly the Gavagan anti-lynch bill now before the Senate, declaring the bill is aimed at the South.

Mr. Pace pointed out, in the debate, that those who sponsor the bill know nothing about the subject involved, and accused them of catering to a limited Negro voting population in their congressional districts, on which their position depends. Citing the civil rights cases involving the Fourteenth Amendment, he proved the unconstitutionality of such a law as invasion of the recognized states rights.

The proposed bill provides that any officer, failing to protect a person in his custody from injury or death, will be guilty of a felony and punishable by $5,000 fine or five years imprisonment; and the same crime and penalty will apply to any officer conspiring to cause injury or death to such a person. This leaves the only course open to the officer to be killed in defense of his prisoner, murderer or rapist that the prisoner may be.

Furthermore, the bill provides that if within 30 days the state court has not indicted or prosecuted persons participating in a lynch mob, the U. S. district court will have jurisdiction to try and to punish those persons. The U. S. district court will have that same jurisdiction if it appears that the state officers failed, neglected or refused to apprehend, prosecute or punish the offenders, or if it appears that the jurors in the state court are so opposed to punishment in the case that probably they will not punish the guilty persons. The U. S. district court judge may order the trial held any place in his district which he may designate. All this is an indictment, direct or indirect, of the courts and jurors of the state in which the crime is committed.

The bill also provides that the county or counties in which the seizure and putting to death takes place will be liable to the injured person or to his estate for between $2,000 and $10,000 as damages, which sum may be recovered by the United States district court. This is a suitable example of the unfairness in which the law-abiding citizens of a county will be taxed possibly $10,000 for the actions of a small group of irresponsible or enraged persons seeking to punish some rapist or murderer, if the bill is passed.

It is inconceivable in the minds of a just people that innocent persons should be compelled to pay $10,000 to the widow of a murderer or rapist. Even President Roosevelt can dismiss his secret service guard on visits to Georgia, and ride wherever he pleases without fear of harm, so well does he know the South. But the logical effect of this bill, if passed, would be to give would-be rapists and murderers the belief that the national government is protecting them, and thus tend to increase the number of such crimes. As a result, more instead of fewer lynchings might be the outcome, and the very purpose of the bill be defeated. In other words, instead of alleviating the acknowledged evil of lynching, this bill would tend to aggravate it.

Slap In Passage Of Gavagan's Bill Angers Dixie's Democrats

Anderson, S. C., Independent Trib. May 18, 1937

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Southern Democrats here who have always been Democrats and who are responsible for keeping the party alive in its darkest days are still smarting under the slap in the face they received at the hands of the administration in the recent passage of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill.

While it is generally believed that the measure will die in the senate where other bills like it have died in past years, southern Democrats who voted against the measure almost solidly are nevertheless wrought up over the attitude of the administration in allowing such a measure to pass for political expediency to satisfy Tammany Democrats and a large negro vote in Harlem and other sections of the North.

It is generally understood here that the proposal has the silent endorsement of the administration because its author, Joseph A. Gavagan, who calls himself a Democrat, and is, of the Tammany variety, stated several days after the passage of the measure by the house that James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee and postmaster general, had called him early the next morning to congratulate him on his work in getting the measure through the house.

MAY HELP FARLEY

"Jim Farley called me up before 9 o'clock the other morning to congratulate me," Gavagan stated here. "He told me that all of Washington was thrilled by the fine job had done, and he was especially happy since I came from New York." It is generally assumed here that this bit of elation on the part of Farley was inspired by the thought that passage of such a bill would add all the negro votes to his candidacy for the presidency in 1940.

While Southern Democrats and others who opposed this measure were solid in their denunciation of lynching and mob crime, they contend that it is a local problem, a problem that should be handled and is being handled by the states in the South. Figures were submitted to substantiate the fact that lynching in the South has been reduced to a negligible figure; that every year for the past 30 years the figures have been reduced. A number of Democrats from the South contended that the federal government has no more right to punish a mob a county and a state for the occurence of a lynching than they have a right to go into such large centers as New York and Chicago and prosecute rackets of a purely state nature, or to hunt down and prosecute gangsters who have committed no federal offense.

WOULD FINE COUNTIES

Under the terms of the bill a county in which a lynching occurs will be liable to a fine up to $10,000 regardless of the efforts made by the officers of that county to prevent the lynching. It imposes other severe fines and punishment on law officers and individuals where the crime occurs.

When the vote on the measure was taken all Southern Democrats except Maverick of Texas, who made a speech on the floor for the bill, voted against it.

Gavagan, who is the author of the measure, is a Tammany Democrat and represents part of New York City in which Harlem is located. He is somewhat of a hero in Harlem at the present time because of the passage of the bill. Plans are under way to stage a monster parade and celebration there to honor him and Senator Robert F. Wagner, who is expected to sponsor the bill in the senate. The New York Enquirer of April 25 says that 50,000 are expected to take part in the celebration when it is held.

MAY WIDEN BREACH

Even should the measure be passed by the senate and get the approval of the president, there is much doubt in the minds of many if it will actually prevent lynching. Some contend that such high-handed methods will only widen the breach between the two races. Certainly this measure and similar legislation now pending is not inclined to smooth the already troubled Democratic party waters. It is recalled by many Southern Democrats that after the election of Harding in 1920, the party in all sections of the country except in the South was deader than the Republicans after the election of Roosevelt. The South, except for the Al Smith-Hoover fiasco, remained Democratic and was the nucleus about which the present Democratic party was built. As a reward for their devotion and years of struggle to put the party in the front again, they are slapped in the face with such legislation as the Gavagan bill, aimed purely at the South and designed with the intent and purpose of luring negro votes in the heavily populated sections of the East to the Democratic party.

As one member of congress stated several days ago, "We are Democrats and always will be in the South. The administration knows that and feels they can insult us with such legislation as the Gavagan bill and we'll still be with them. I do not believe that it will always be so."

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5712

Savannah, Ga., Press
January 7, 1937

MRS. O'DAY JOINS BODY FOR ANTI-LYNCH LAW

Two Former Savannahians Now in Congress in Favor of Proposed Act.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Leaders in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who held a meeting Monday night at their headquarters on Fifth avenue, announced the election of several new members. Among those elected was Caroline O'Day, representative in the lower House of Congress from the state at large. Mrs. O'Day is a Southern woman and a former resident of Savannah, but she is much interested in the work the organization is doing.

The association again went on record as urging the national Congress to pass the federal anti-lynching law. It is expected this measure will come up for consideration at the present Congress. James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic senator from Illinois, and a former resident of Savannah, supported this measure in the Senate last year. It is expected he will do so again. Senator George and other Democrats conducted a successful fight against the proposed law at the last session.

While the President has not expressed himself on the anti-lynching act, it is believed he is in favor of its passage. Those behind the movement say sixty-two senators are prepared to vote for it.

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution
January 10, 1937

Sixth annual conference of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching will be held here Wednesday and Thursday, it was announced last night by Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, executive director of the group.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal
January 10, 1937

Lynching Opponents In Southern States To Meet in Atlanta

Anti-lynching activities in thirteen southern states will be studied at the sixth annual conference of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, to be held Wednesday and Thursday at the Piedmont Hotel.

The association, which was organized here in 1930, claims a constituency of 35,000 southern women who have signed a repudiation of lynching for any cause, and a pledge to work to wipe out the crime.

Mrs. Attwood Martin, of Louisville, will preside at the conference. Speakers will include Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, of Atlanta, who is executive director of the association; Dr. Arthur Raper, of Agnes Scott College, and thirteen state chairmen.

Jacksonville, Fla., Times-Union
January 12, 1937

Anti-Lynching Group To Meet Wednesday

ATLANTA, Jan. 11. (AP)—The Georgia program of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching is expected to be given special consideration at the convention of the organization here Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames, executive director of the association, said Georgia would be given special consideration because "Georgia had six of the nine lynchings in the United States last year."

Dr. S. M. Bristol, of the University of Florida, and Dr. Arthur Raper, of Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga., will be among the principal speakers Thursday. Dr. Bristol will discuss "Changing Social Attitude."

Bill To Make Lynching Federal Crime Wins Huge Majority North and South

By Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Should congress enact a law which would [illegible] make lynching a federal crime?

This proposition, embodied in a bill before congress last year, has [illegible] just been submitted to a cross-section of American voters by the Institute of Public Opinion. It received a thumping vote of approval—even [illegible] in the south.

Seven out of every 10, or 70 per cent, of those who expressed an opinion, in principle, favor federal anti-lynching legislation on the subject of lynching. There is a further evidence of the growing faith of public opinion in the law-enforcement powers of the federal government.

But the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill stirred up much opposition in congress last year, and the opposition was not confined to southern statesmen. Senator Borah, of Idaho, has opposed it on constitutional grounds. The proponents of the measure feared their case on the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution which provides that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or deny to any person within its jurisdiction equal protection of the laws.

Provisions of Federal Bill.

Briefly, the bill provided (1) local officers of a state or municipality convicted in federal court of failing to protect a prisoner from a mob would be fined $5,000 or given five years imprisonment, or both; (2) if they conspired with the mob they would be liable to imprisonment of from five to 25 years, and (3) county governments involved would have to pay $2,000 to $10,000 indemnity to the injured persons, or to the estate of the slain. The bill defined a "mob" as any gathering of more than three persons.

Senator Smith, of South Carolina, and Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, led the opposition to the measure. Senator Bailey declared the Wagner-Costigan measure would "destroy the last vestige of state sovereignty" and "practically wipe out the states as governmental entities." Senator Smith declared the measure would "destroy free government."

Pacific Coast Voters Most Opposed.

It is interesting to note that in the Pacific coast states, where lynching is almost unknown, there is the greatest opposition to a federal anti-lynching law. Possibly one reason for this is that the lynchings in the southern states have been widespread in the indictment of the whole south. Southerners were only too glad to see federal action as compared to a national average of only 30 per cent. There may be several explanations for this. Possibly one is that the Pacific coast citizens do not feel that lynching would be an appropriate punishment for the murderer.

Are Local Officers Efficient?

A cool-headed analysis of lynching statistics shows that the number of lynchings has steadily declined during the last generation. As compared to 130 lynchings in 1901, there were 28 in 1922 and 20 in 1935, according to figures compiled for the World Almanac.

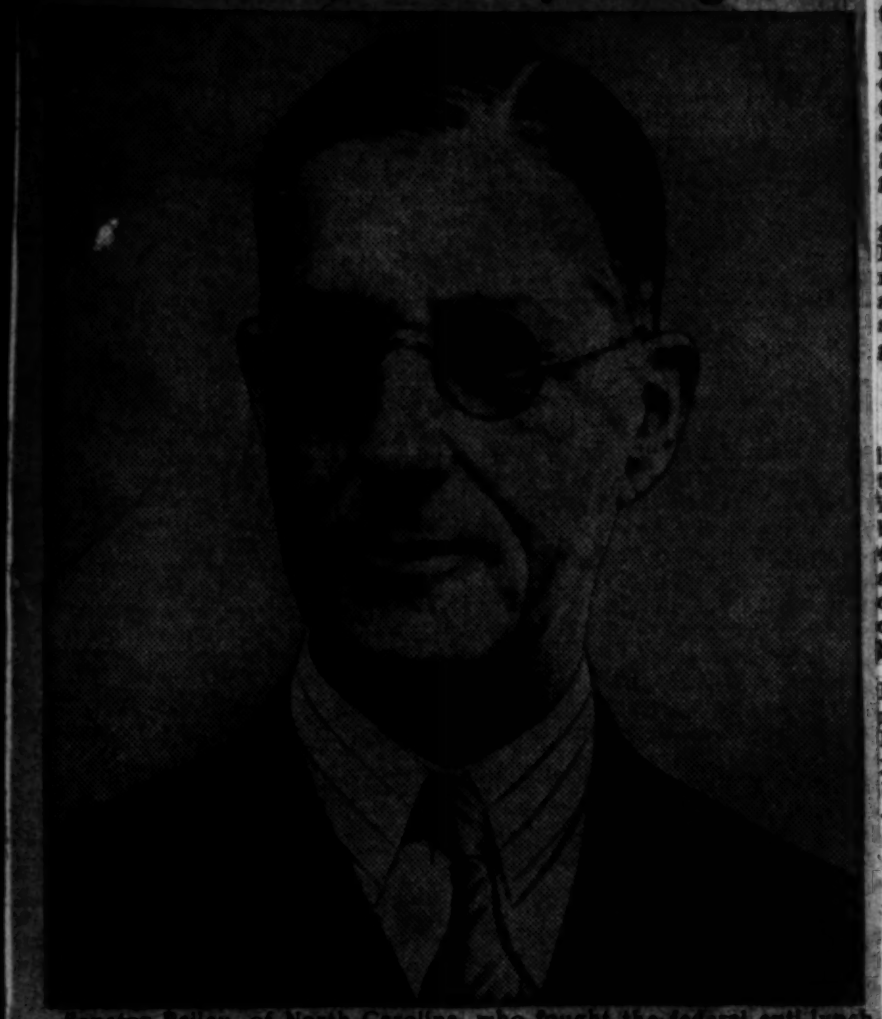
That the public wants the federal government to take a hand in the lynching problem implies a lack of faith in the efficiency of local officers. But observers point out that in instances in which officers have stopped lynchings, according to the World Almanac, they have often been [illegible]

Lynchings Found Declining

According to the World Almanac, 4,951 persons were lynched in the United States between 1882 and 1935. The following table shows a steady decline in the number of lynchings since 1900.

Lynchings in the United States Since 1900.
1900	115
1901	130
1902	92
1903	80
1904	83
1905	62
1906	65
1907	60
1908	91
1909	82
1910	76
1911	67
1912	63
1913	52
1914	47
1915	73
1916	54
1917	36
1918	64
1919	80
1920	60
1921	62
1922	57
1923	33
1924	16
1925	17
1926	30
1927	19
1928	10
1929	11
1930	10
1931	21
1932	12
1933	28
1934	15
1935	20

Opposes Federal Lynching Bill



Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, who fought the federal anti-lynching bill in congress last year. Said he: "What power has the federal government over a sheriff in North Carolina?"

South, Like Rest of Nation, Wants Anti-Lynch Law, Poll Figures Show

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Should Congress enact a law which would make lynching a federal crime?

This proposition, embodied in a bill before Congress last year, has just been submitted to a cross-section of American voters by the Institute of Public Opinion. It received a thumping vote of approval—even in the south.

Seven out of every ten, or 70 per cent, of those who expressed an opinion were in favor of a federal anti-lynching law. Southerners were only slightly less in favor of the measure—65 per cent.

That the survey found so many voters who, in principle, favor federal legislation on the subject of lynching is a further evidence of the growing faith of public opinion in the law-enforcement powers of the federal government.

But the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill stirred up much opposition in Congress last year, and the opposition was not confined to southern statesmen. Senator Borah of Idaho opposed it on constitutional grounds.

The proponents of the measure based their case on the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which provides that no state "shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction equal protection of the laws."

Provisions of Federal Bill

Briefly, the bill provided (1) local officers of a state or municipality convicted in federal court of failing to protect a prisoner from a mob would be fined $5,000 or given five years' imprisonment, or both; (2) if they conspired with the mob they would be liable to imprisonment of from five to 25 years; and (3) county governments involved would have to pay $2,000 to $10,000 indemnity to the injured persons or to the estate of the lynched. The bill defined a "mob" as any gathering of more than three persons.

Senator Smith of South Carolina and Senator Bailey of North Carolina led the opposition to the Wagner-Costigan measure. Senator Bailey, pitching his argument on constitutional grounds, declared:

"What power has the federal government over a sheriff in North Carolina? The sheriff is responsible to North Carolina, and when you destroy that responsibility you destroy free government."

Pacific Coast Voters Most Opposed

It is interesting to note that in today's survey the opposition to a federal anti-lynching law is strongest not in the south, but on the Pacific Coast. There 41 per cent of the voters reached are against federal action, as compared to a national average of only 30 per cent. There may be several explanations for this.

Possibly one is that when the murderers of Brooke Hart were lynched in California a few years ago, no less a personage than California's governor, James Rolph, said publicly that at times lynching was a deserved punishment.

Furthermore, today's survey was being conducted at the time the body of Charles Mattson was found near Everett, Wash. The ghastliness of this crime is said to have caused many Pacific coast citizens to declare privately that lynching would be an appropriate punishment for the murderer.

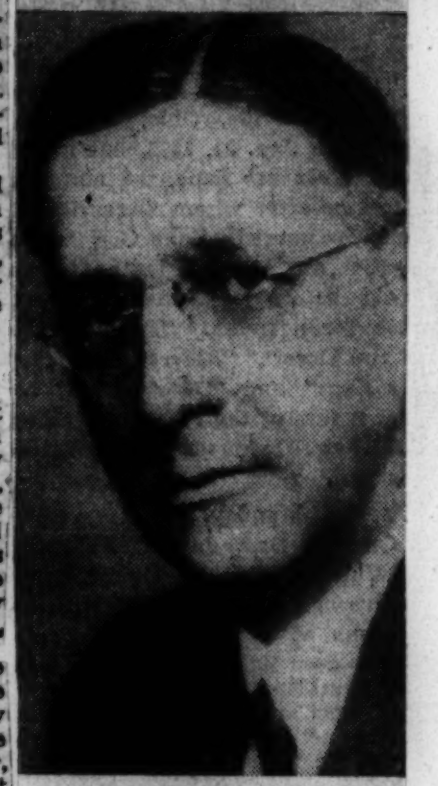
Summary Of Survey Vote

The following table, showing the vote by sections and groups, indicates how widespread is the indorsement of a federal anti-lynching law.

Should Congress enact a law which would make lynching a federal crime?

	Yes	No
Nation	70%	30%
New England	75	25
Middle Atlantic	72	28
East Central	77	23
West Central	70	30
South	65	35
Mountain	65	35
Pacific coast	59	41
Groups:
Women	75%	25%
Young persons	77	23
Reliefers	72	28
Farmers	69	31
Small towns	75	25
Urban	70	30

Opposes Lynch Law



Senator Bailey of North Carolina, who fought the federal anti-lynching bill in Congress, said: "What power has the federal government over a sheriff in North Carolina?"

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
February 18, 1937

To Prevent Lynching

One advance, one only, in the law relating to lynchers would be effected by the so-called Wagner bill whereby the trial of alleged lynchers and law officers failing in their duty to protect prisoners would be transferred from state to federal courts.

The juries would be drawn from much broader districts. Were a lynching to occur in Charleston county, and the accused lynchers to come up for trial in the federal district instead of the state court, the jury would be drawn from twenty-three or twenty-four counties. The prosecution could object to service on the jury of citizens of Charleston or localities near the scene of the crime.

Thus the jury would be free of bias favorable to the defendants, as often it is not when it is composed of neighbors living in fifteen or twenty-five miles of them.

The principle had illustration while the Volstead act was in force. Persons accused of bootlegging or moonshining were not often convicted in the circuit court in Charleston but many of them were "sent up" by the federal court. Most of the federal jurymen came from counties in which public opinion was not antagonistic to the law.

The Wagner act does not provide that an accused lyncher in South Carolina can be taken to Ohio or Pennsylvania for trial. He would be tried in one of the two federal districts in this state.

The general assembly may, if it wish, enact a law that would effect the purpose of the Wagner act. This state law would simply provide for change of venue in all lynching trials. Were the lynching an affair in Greenville, the accused could be taken for trial to some county a hundred miles distant and the jury drawn from a special panel composed of men from twenty or all of the counties of the state.

A hundred years ago the distances across a county were in time, inconvenience, and cost of travel much greater than they are now across half the state. From Lancaster to Abbeville, for example, is now about three hours, but formerly it was about three hours from a point in Lancaster county to Lancaster court house ten miles away.

The suppression of crime would be assisted by state laws providing for the drawing of juries from wide districts for trials not only of lynchers but of other grave offenders. In this age of swift travel and instantaneous communication is no reason for the composition of any jury of persons subject to local biases and prejudices.

If, for example, a man of prominence and influence load himself with whiskey and drive his automobile recklessly over an innocent person, it would be far more difficult to convict him of manslaughter in his own county than in another part of the state.

The Wagner bill, in The News and Courier's opinion, has not for its principal design the prevention of lynching. We think it will incite to lynching in the South. The bill is part of a plan to take away government from the states and add to the federal powers. It has a second motive, namely to please the negro voters in the great cities of the North and further attach them to the Democratic party organization.

The Southern congressmen will have all that they can stand up to in defeating the bill. One cannot be sure that another filibuster would prevent its passage. It is certain that it will be pressed more vigorously by the Northern Democrats than it was two years ago and the signs are that it will receive more of quiet encouragement from the White House and some of the members of the cabinet.

The general assemblies of South Carolina and other Southern states can assist their members of congress in the defeat of the Wagner bill by enacting additional legislation to put an end to lynching.

We wish that our general assembly would recognize the facts of destruction of distance by the improvements of transportation and communication and enact laws that would almost wholly eliminate [illegible] feeling among jurymen in the trials of criminal cases.

Lynchings-1937
6
Legislation Relating to.
6

5713

Asheville, N. C., Citizen
April 20, 1937

HEADED FOR PASSAGE

That Congress will pass an anti-lynching law at this session of Congress seems now to be more than likely. The Gavagan bill which passed the house last week will be challenged in the senate; but its passage, or that of some similar measure, can be defeated only if opposition senators conduct, as in the past, a filibuster that will prevent the proposal from coming to a vote. It is possible that this will be done, but the odds are the other way.

Several things have happened to increase on the one hand the pressure for anti-lynching legislation and to reduce on the other hand the resistance to such legislation. The negro vote has become important in a number of northern states and congressmen from those states, Democrats as well as Republicans, think it good politics to assert themselves aggressively in favor of a Federal anti-lynching law. Southern congressmen who are opposed to such a law are in the awkward predicament, many of them, of having voted and worked for other measures which constitute just as much an invasion of the rights of the states as federal action in the matter of lynching.

Nor is this the whole story. It is an interesting and significant fact that whereas formerly southern sentiment was virtually unanimous in its opposition to a federal anti-lynch law, now influential southerners, and a number of influential southern newspapers, are either supporting such legislation or else not opposing it.

There are, we think, two underlying reasons for this change. One reason is compounded of the weariness of those southerners who have been engaged for many years in the execration of mob murder and the battle to end it plus the impatience of the newer generation that has come on the scene without possessing, in many instances, any marked understanding of the history of their own region. The other and more important reason goes deeper.

To some it seemed contradictory a decade and a half ago that the southern press, militant in its denunciation of lynching, should be equally militant in its opposition to the suggestion of federal assistance in stamping it out. There was no contradiction in fact. The Southern press believed then, as The Citizen believes now, that the lynching evil could be combatted successfully only by building up sentiment against it. The record tells the story of the strides that have been made in this direction. They have been notable and continuous.

Further, and this is vital, the fear existed that the assertion by the Federal government of its authority to exercise police powers within a state for the suppression of an undoubted evil, one for which there can be neither sympathy nor defence, would be followed or at least might be followed by the exercise of such powers in other ways which the South was not prepared to tolerate and which we do not think that it is yet prepared to tolerate.

This fear still actuates southern congressmen, apparently, but does not seem to weigh as heavily upon many southerners as formerly. The strange thing about this is that there may be more practical reasons for entertaining such fear than existed a generation or so ago.

However that may be, it is plain that the combination of circumstances to which we have referred has brought congress close to the point of enacting legislation empowering the Federal government to assume the responsibility for the ending of lynchings in the United States. There is serious danger, in our judgment, that such action by congress may have harmful and perhaps exceedingly vicious effects, but the tide, nevertheless, has set.

It would be difficult at best to overcome the political forces that are now active for a Federal anti-lynch law. It will be almost a miracle if this is done in view of the fact that the South itself has ceased to be either cohesive or coherent in its attitude toward federal government and is today, for the purposes of this discussion at least, a section without a party.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
April 23, 1937

Need for Anti-Lynching Bill

It was unfortunate for those who oppose the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, which has passed the House by a substantial majority, that at the very time when Senator Borah was saying that the South was curbing this crime, two of the most atrocious lynchings in the history of the country took place in Mississippi. Charged with the murder of a Mississippi merchant, and not with the crime against a white woman which was used for so many years as a partial excuse for mob law, two Negroes were taken out and burned, while a howling mob of 400 persons looked on.

The South is duly grateful to Senator Borah and others who opposed the Gavagan bill partly on the ground that this section of the country was getting away from mob violence, but at the same time it should be set forth, to keep the record straight, that lynching is no longer peculiar to the South and perhaps never has been. There has been a reduction in the number of lynchings in the country as a whole over a period of years, but New York city and points in Illinois have furnished some of the most inhuman instances of mob violence against Negroes this country has ever seen.

The proposed bill follows a familiar pattern. It asserts that any state or political subdivision thereof which fails to afford protection to any individual from a mob shall be considered to have deprived such person of due process of law or of equal protection of the laws.

Section 3 declares that any officer blameable for such a crime to be guilty of a felony and subject to a fine not to exceed $5,000 or a prison term of not more than five years.

A clause also provides a term of from five to 25 years for any officer conspiring to deliver prisoners.

Section 4 gives a federal district court jurisdiction in such cases where an officer fails to do his duty or where jurors are so prejudiced that they are not likely to punish mob violence.

Sections 5 and 6 deal with the liability of counties for failure to take action and provide for damages in federal courts.

Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, was one of the most vigorous opponents of this bill and yet it was in his state that the latest of these crimes of mob violence took place.

Representative Hamilton Fish, a Republican, who, nevertheless, has generally been friendly to the South, called attention to the burning of the two Negroes in Mississippi and said the actual test of the ability of the southern states to protect colored citizens from violence is whether the members of the mob are arrested and convicted. If they are, he said, then there is no real need for federal anti-lynching legislation, but if they are not "then even the southern Democrats should vote for the bill."

This view seems to be entirely sound, but in the meantime we may add that thus far the members of the mob engaged in the burning of the Mississippi Negroes certainly have not been "arrested and convicted", and there is little likelihood that they will be.

As we have said, the usual defense of lynching has been that the crime thus summarily avenged has sometimes been an attack upon women, but when one of the most horrible instances of mob violence, with torture, took place a few years ago near Marianna, Fla., a number of the leading women in the state came forward and urged that the good name of the state should be cleared by bringing the members of the mob to justice.

We have great respect for the high authority of men like Representative Wadsworth and Senator Borah who contend that the law would be unenforceable. Senator Borah also holds that it would be unconstitutional. It goes without saying that no good citizen should advocate a law that is unconstitutional, but as the years go by mob violence is not punished in the South or in the North, and if an anti-lynching bill can be framed which will give the federal government power to intervene when and if the states have failed in their obvious duty, which is almost universally the case where a lynching takes place, then such a law should go on the statute books.

The very civilization of the South demands that this blot should be wiped out and that mob violence should be punished.

Birmingham, Ala. News
April 17, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill Challenges The South

There is one sure way by which the South may avert all federal interference in lynching prosecutions under the Gavagan bill which has already passed the House and which stands a good chance of becoming law. And that way lies through enforcement of present state laws or perhaps stronger state laws.

For the bill provides—and this is a point not stressed as it should be—that the federal courts will not take action against any persons accused of lynching until there is strong reason to believe that the state administration of the law has broken down. As long as local authorities are alert to enforcement of the state laws against lynching, the federal government, under the bill, has no power to step in.

Section 4 of the Gavagan bill reads as follows:

The district court of the United States judicial district wherein the person is injured or put to death by a mob or riotous assemblage shall have jurisdiction to try and punish, in accordance with the laws of the state where the injury is inflicted or the homicide committed, any and all persons who participate therein: Provided, That it is first made to appear to such court (1) that the officers of the state charged with the duty of apprehending, prosecuting, and punishing such offenders under the laws of the state shall have failed, neglected, or refused to apprehend, prosecute, or punish such offenders, or (2) that the jurors obtainable for service in the state court having jurisdiction of such offense are so strongly opposed to such punishment that there is probability that those guilty of the offense will not be punished in such state court. A failure for more than 30 days after the commission of such an offense to apprehend or to indict the person guilty thereof, or a failure diligently to prosecute such persons, shall be sufficient to constitute prima-facie evidence of the failure, neglect, or refusal described in the above proviso.

This provision challenges the South to handle the menace of lynching in a manner that will not bring down upon the South what many regard as the disgrace and the questionable procedure of having the federal courts intervene. Whether or not federal intervention becomes necessary will be determined by how the South enforces its own state laws.

This newspaper is in that group of Southerners who believe that lynching presents peculiar problems that can best be solved by [illegible] inclined toward the South. It believes that progress is being made toward solution of the lynching problem, and that the slowness with which the solution is being reached hardly justifies federal legislation.

But even with these beliefs, The News is not unduly alarmed over prospect of passage of the Gavagan bill, in view of the fact that it specifically guards against federal action until it appears that state and local administrations have broken down.

There may be some who will fear that the federal courts will be too quick to intervene. Let it be remembered, however, that the federal district courts in the South are all manned by Southerners. A Southern judge is not likely to be hasty in bringing federal force to bear against his own people. Not until he is convinced that Southern officials and Southern juries are lying down on the job will he act.

In the light of this provision, the Gavagan bill, if it becomes law, will be only a club over the heads of Southerners. We may not like the presence of the club there, it may not be a wise thing for the club to hang there, but if it ever descends it will be because we have failed to enforce the law ourselves.

Birmingham, Ala. News
April 16, 1937

The House Passes The Anti-Lynching Bill

There cannot be the shadow of a doubt that the action of the House yesterday in passing the Gavagan anti-lynching bill was prompted by the two peculiarly atrocious lynchings in Mississippi Tuesday. The damnable, fiendish crime committed by the Mississippi mob in torturing two Negroes to death with blow torches so outraged the sensibilities of congressmen that they voted, 276 to 119, far more than two to one, to make lynching a federal offense.

Not only did they pass the bill making lynching a federal crime; they wrote into it the indemnity provision against which many Southern members of Congress have protested most strongly. The bill provides that a county in which a prisoner is seized or put to death shall pay damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000 to the victim's family.

It is a matter of conjecture whether an anti-lynching bill would have been passed at this session of Congress if it had not been for this affront to American civilization in Mississippi. Such a bill might have been passed before the end of the session in any case, though it is doubtful. So drastic a bill would hardly have been approved by the House, however, had it not been for this outrage in Mississippi.

Many of us in the South, including this newspaper, have thought that it would be better to leave this problem in the hands of the states. But we have warned repeatedly that the acts of mob violence in the South and the failure to track down and punish lynchers would inevitably force Congress to act. Now that prediction has been fulfilled at least so far as the House of Representatives is concerned. The bill, of course, is not yet law, and it may not become law. What the Senate will do with it remains to be seen. But unquestionably many senators who have heretofore refrained from approving federal action against lynching will be moved by this Mississippi atrocity much as members of the House were, whether or not that feeling will produce a majority for the bill in the Senate.

The continuance of lynchings year after year and the repeated failures to bring lynchers to justice have aroused public opinion all over the country in favor of federal action. A poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion not long ago showed that public sentiment in the South, as well as in other sections, favored a federal anti-lynching law.

The pity of it is that this sentiment has been brought about by the inability or the unwillingness of law enforcement officers and grand juries to arrest and indict members of mobs. If the states had proved that they could cope with lynching, practically everybody would have preferred leaving the problem to the states. But the states have failed woefully. That is the only reason that we find a majority of public opinion favoring a federal statute today.

It would still be better to leave this matter to the states if they showed the ability and willingness to deal with it adequately. The best thing that could be done now to prevent the Senate from following the lead of the House on the Gavagan bill would be for the Mississippi authorities to search out the members of last Tuesday's mob and punish them.

Anniston, Ala. Star
April 14, 1937

Hobbs Again To The Front

Congressman Sam Hobbs of the Fourth Alabama District was paid another outstanding compliment by his colleagues in the House yesterday when he was selected to make the only speech in opposition to the Gavagan anti-lynching bill which would be particularly obnoxious and unjust to the South. In this connection it has been pointed out that this is the second time recently that the Fourth District Representative has been thus honored.

It will be recalled that Hobbs was selected by the House to conduct the investigation of charges brought against Judge Ritter of Florida—an inquiry that resulted in the impeachment of the judge for misconduct in office and brought praise to the Alabama Congressman for his part in bringing out the damaging evidence in the case.

And in his speech yesterday against the anti-lynching measure, Congressman Hobbs acquitted himself with equal distinction and added further to his already enviable record in the House. In opposing the bill, he stressed the point that the only remedy for the lynching evil lies in enlightenment of the people and in creating sentiment against the crime of mob murder. He also emphasized the fact that the South is making progress toward the solution of the problem and cited figures to show the decrease in lynchings in the last half century.

Development of public opinion in the Southern states against lynching should be more rapid in the next few years with the growth in educational facilities. But it is necessary that Negroes as well as whites be provided the opportunity to obtain an education and be thereby raised to a higher standard, which will tend to deter them from the crimes that have caused mob action in the past. Records show lynchings have occurred more often in communities in which a low average in intelligence and learning prevails, proving that a more wholesome attitude on the part of the citizens is the thing most needed to combat the mob spirit. They likewise attest the fact that education for Negroes has a direct and important effect on the amount of crime. For example, it is said that no graduate of Tuskegee Institute has ever been convicted of a crime and equally impressive results have been shown by other schools for colored students in the South.

Therefore, the federal government really can aid materially in eliminating lynchings by contributing to the education of both white and colored in the Southern states. Federal funds for the schools in the South will enable us to make greater progress toward the development of an enlightened citizenship that is of such vital necessity in keeping us clear of racial troubles that have resulted in disgraceful acts of lawlessness in the past.

Northern Congressmen who are seeking to force the anti-lynching measure on the South should use their influence in behalf of the Harrison-Fletcher-Black bill to provide aid for the states in the public school systems. By turning their attention from an unjust measure to this praiseworthy proposal, or some other plan of similar merit, they could perform a service to the South that would count and do something constructive in the way of advancing the cause in which they profess to have such a keen interest.

Lynchings—1937
Legislation Relating to.

5714

Anti-Lynching Legislation And The Bill Of Rights

San Antonio Express, April 17, 1937
(Biggest white paper in South Central Texas)

That a strong, genuinely enforced federal anti-lynching law is need to root out an evil which has shamed the nation for two generations past, has been long evident to intelligent citizens both in the North and in the South.

The recent atrocity in Mississippi—an exhibition of mob cruelty at its worst—undoubtedly influenced the House's vote (277 to 119) for the Gavagan Bill. Should the Senate concur—as appears likely—the effect would be to throw the federal government's weight into the scales against a social condition which persistently has defied state authority.

As the mob—like the underworld gang—has a healthy respect for the "G-men," the very existence of such a federal law would suffice to prevent at least some lynchings. That is a sufficient reason for completing this legislation.

It is high time Congress acted. This measure, in essentially the form which the House approved—as the Dyer Bill, and later as the Wagner-Costigan Bill — has been before Congress since 1918. During that period 515 persons have been lynched, but except in a single Georgia case (when the victim was a white man) not one mob-murderer has been tried and punished as befitted the crime.

Though state and local authorities have received ample warning — through the growing favor which the proposed federal legislation has commanded in Congress and among citizens generally—they have consistently refused to heed the lesson.

In its latest survey of the record ("Can the States Stop Lynching?") the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reviews the 39 outrages in 12 states during 1935 and 1936. After each it enters with monotonous regularity the notation, "State action—none."

Unless all precedents shall be upset, when the official record of Mississippi's double lynching—revolting as it was—shall be complete it may be summed up in the same words, "State action—none." For—shocked and stirred as they must be—Governor, trial judge, district attorney and sheriff probably dare not bring the perpetrators to justice, even if they could be identified, which is exceedingly difficult. To follow the dictates of duty under their official oaths in such circumstances (as Texas citizens can perceive) doubtless would be to commite political suicide.

The very existence of that evil condition affords all the justification need for federal intervention. For that reason the injection of partisan or sectional issues into the debate on the Gavagan Bill is deeply regrettable.

Fundamental human rights are at stake; the vindication of law and the most elemental principles of justice is involved.

Lynching is murder: the mob tramples the Fifth and Sixth Amendments to the national Constitution; it denies the accused person's right to "due process" and trial by jury.

However, the House debate on constitutional grounds was more pertinent. Recalling a court decision on a similar Virginia law a few years ago, the proviso to penalize the county is open to question. The pending bill would be more likely to stand up in court—and certainly more practically useful—should the Senate eliminate that section and add a proviso (modeled after the Lindbergh Anti-Kidnapping Law) giving the federal authorities jurisdiction over mob crimes if local and state authorities failed to act immediately.

The effect would be to put the G-men on the lynchers' trail.

DIXIE AGHAST AS MEASURE GOES THROUGH

See Stiff Battle When Bill Reaches The U. S. Senate

Editor Wires President

On Wednesday, April 22, the day before the House of Representatives passed the Gavagan Anti-Lynching bill, Robert S. Abbott sent the following telegram to President Franklin D. Roosevelt:

Your Excellency
The President
Washington, D.C.

Blow torch lynchings in Mississippi yesterday call for every ounce of influence in support of the Gavagan Anti-Lynching bill now before the House. On behalf of fifteen million colored citizens, members of which group are largely the victims of lynch mobs, The Chicago Defender prays your powerful aid in passing this legislation designed to blot out such heinous crimes against law, order, society and our general welfare.

ROBERT S. ABBOTT,
Editor and Publisher.

Some other facts on anti-lynching bill on pages 4 and 16.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 23—(Special)—Spurred to action by the brutal mob-murder of two men and the flogging of a third in uncivilized Mississippi Tuesday afternoon, the House of Representatives here late Thursday passed th Gavagan anti-lynching law by the impressive vote of 276 to 117, splitting party lines asunder.

Enactment of the bill climaxed one of the stormiest sessions of the 75th Congress and was marked by impassioned pleas of sectionalism and race prejudice.

Introduced by Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan of New York, and ably supported by Congressmen Arthur W. Mitchell and Raymond S. McKeough of Illinois, and Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York, the bill hurdled numerous attempts to kill or emasculate it and was placed on the record to become the second anti-lynch bill ever to pass that body, the Dyer anti-lynching bill having been passed by the house 15 years ago, only to be crushed in the senate.

(Continued From Page 1)

The measure will be taken up in the Senate immediately and lest it suffer the fate of the Dyer bill proponents of the measure plan to urge Pres. Roosevelt to put his mighty MUSCLE behind the bill to assure its passage in the upper house. Ask him by wire today!

In the face of the brutal double lynching in Mississippi there is still bitter opposition to the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, and there is yet a likelihood that it may be defeated unless strong pressure is put on the Senate. Only the President is able to wield this influence with sufficient telling effect to turn the trick.

On Capitol Hill it is being freely argued that the President has gone to congress for more than the bill which he personally feels is good for the welfare of the country. When he hasn't gone in person he has sent his emissaries.

Those men of the Race who have boasted of their closeness to the President, those who are known to have the chief's ear, right now ought to be doing some constant whispering urging him to take action in the matter. Now that the nation is stirred over the recent Mississippi tragedies, it may not be difficult to touch the heart of the great humanitarian. He should be wired today.

It is pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt has not only taken his cases to Congress, but he has taken them to the people. He pleaded with his constituents please to understand his position in his court enlarging plan, and he has indeed, won favors. All opposition has wilted steadily under the spell of his strong will, magnetic charm, and fascinating personality. He can do wonders for the anti-lynching bill, if he will, and because of his tremendous popularity and influence over Congress, the fate of the measure can be debited or credited up to him. He can maneuver its passage, he can stand idly by and let it suffer and die, or he can block it altogether. What will he do? Wire him today!

While efforts are being made to get the President to show his hand, supporters of the bill in the Senate are busy rounding up members in a drive to obtain hasty favorable action by that body.

The House convened at 12 noon, and after the usual procedure incident to the opening, Mr. Gavagan, sponsor of the Gavagan Anti-Lynching bill, said: "Mr. Speaker, I move that the house resolves itself into the committee of the whole house on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 1507, to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every state the equal protection of the laws and to punish the crime of lynching." The motion was agreed to and accordingly the House resolved itself into the committee of the whole house on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 1507, with Mr. O'Connor of New York in the chair.

Some indication had been given of a filibuster against the passage of the bill by southerners who opposed the bill almost solidly, but the hope of the southern members of the House was weakened when a telegram was received in the House with news of the Duck Hill lynching. After the news was read in the House, Representative Hatton W. Sumners, Democrat of Texas, chairman of the judiciary committee, and one of the strongest opponents of the bill, remarked "This makes it hard for us to fight the bill successfully," said Mr. Sumners. "As one southern man to another, I hope I will not be considered impertinent by stating candidly my own reaction and that is that the State of Mississippi cannot escape this reflection upon its governmental capacity, in fact, can not escape in effect becoming an accessory after the fact, unless it is able to and does bring these lynchers and officers to speedy and adequate punishment."

Representative Boland, Democratic whip of the House announced early in the session "we will stay in session until the Gavagan Anti-Lynching bill is passed today." He also announced that he anticipated the probability of efforts by southern members to delay a vote.

Representative Edward W. Curley, Democrat, of New York, deplored the injection of the sectional issue in the debate. He pointed to the argument of Mr. Wadsworth against it as proof that the measure is nonsectional.

Contending that mob violence is wholly a state issue, Representative John R. Mitchell, Democrat, of Tennessee, asserted that there was no justification for the passage of the Gavagan Anti-Lynching bill.

He argued that "It arouses sectional hatred" and that "it is intended to rebuke the South."

Bringing into the discussion pictures of "Old Black Joe" and the black mammy, Representative Zebulon Weaver, Democrat, of North Carolina, pleaded with the House to leave the problem of lynching to the states.

He told of the prosecution and conviction of 32 members of a mob in North Carolina, who took from a jail a New Jersey white man charged with a criminal assault on a young white woman. He also recited another instance in which 20 members of a mob were convicted and given prison sentences for attempting to remove from a jail colored defendants who were awaiting trial on charges of criminal assault on three white women.

When he yielded the floor, Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, who with Mr. Gavagan led the fight for passage of the bill, reminded Mr. Weaver that next to Virginia "North Carolina has the best record in preventing lynching of any southern state."

Representative J. Will Taylor, Republican, of Tennessee, taking the Duck Hill, Miss., lynchings as text, declared that "The Spanish inquisition, infamous for its acts of sadistc cruelty, does not afford a parallel. And yet scores of other cases in recent years of equal or greater repugnance and atrocity could be cited."

Representative Sam D. McReynolds, Democrat, of Tennessee, at culprit will not be allowed to get into the hands of the sheriff," the tity of attempting to police

Representative Charles L. Gifford act applying only after the victim chusetts, de- gets into the custody of the sheriff.

that "as old friends of the He said he salved his conscience by race, the Republican party paraphrasing the fourteenth amend-with you, even though you ment and "having the faith of my most entirely deserted us." forefathers and my Republicanism leavage in the ranks of the I certainly will vote for the bill."

atic party, he ascribed to Representative Haton W. Sumn Democrats "paying ners, of Texas, chairman of the n Negro support." House Judiciary committee, leading pressed the belief that the the opposition, declared that "The ld prove futile because "South has a racial problem that ill would

ked the bill as unconstitutional protection of law now enjoyed by the nation."

He said he has every confidence those accused of such crimes as ex-that the Supreme Court will never perience has shown lead to lynchurtain its constitutionality, ing."

which if sustained, will set a pre-edent giving the Federal court jurisdiction of any local offenses urrein Congress should pass such islation."

"Enactment of the Gavagan Anti-Lynching bill," stated Representave Gul L. Moser, Democrat, of ennsylvania, "will have the effect

He explained his vote against the measure by saying that it was "vote of my community, saying to the federal government, you failed in the purpose ascribed to the Mann Act, you failed in the pur-pose ascribed to the Volstead Act your impotence has proved the ut-

He expressed

...ot of you gentlemen know noth-
...ing of," and added that the bill
...would not only not prevent lynch-
...ing, but might prove less of a pro...tection to colored people than its
...sponsors hoped.

He also pointed out that the bill was directed only toward the protection of persons in custody of officers. He occupied the floor about half an hour. He consumed most of his time in an appeal to the House to let the South handle the lynching problem in its own manner.

"You men," he said pointing to the table where sat Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, author of the bill, and Representative Emanuel Celler, both Democrats, of New York, "are sincere in your efforts to help protect the Negro race. But I tell you that you will not aid the Negro race with this bill, because it is unworkable.

The South has reduced the crime of lynching more than 5,000 per cent in the last forty years, and that is proof that the tide of public sentiment will take better care of this situation than can any law you enact."

Dixie Representatives Bitter

The close of the furious debate found the bloc of southern Democratic representatives deeply resentful as they faced defeat in their opposition to the bill. Their bitterness was directed at northern members of their own party.

Howling and shouting, Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) declared, "For more than 100 years the people of the South have kept life in the Democratic party, and now that that party has grown powerful it turns upon the South and proposes to pass this wicked and cowardly law. This bill is directed just as much against the South as any reconstruction bill passed after the civil war.

"It is an attempt to break the spirit of the white South and in time bring about social equality. I want to inform this house that the color line in the South is a permanent institution. It will not break, and we will maintain our social purity. The South does not mean to be mongrelized as the result of foderal domination."

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N.Y.), who declared the act gave the federal government immense powers, and asserted that no court could find it constitutional was the lone Republican to argue against the bill.

"Lynching is not only a disgrace to the South, but to the whole nation," he remarked.

On several occasions the southern Democrats were taunted by reminiscences of their support of the Volstead act.

A heated response came from John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) who pointed at a group of Democrats from New York City and shouted:

"There is an old law about coming into court with clean hands and it applies to legislation. You New Yorkers leave your city to go into the South to wipe out a few ...ts of blood, while you wade in ...

...your home home city! Snoop around your own back doors for a change!"

Shakes Fists at Galleries

The southern representatives grew more vitriolic as the debate grew more heated. John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), shaking his fist at the galleries, where colored persons were in the majority, yelled that "this is a bill to encourage Negroes to think they can rape white women!"

Representative Arthur Mitchell (D., Ill.), in his appeal declared, "When I was head of a school in Alabama I once knew what it was to fear mob violence because of some misunderstanding about a $20 check. A mob formed to march upon my house, and I stood at a window with a rifle, while my wife armed herself with a pistol. Luckily there was no trouble, but I know what little chance a man of my race has when the mob spirit is aroused."

Chairman Hatton W. Summers, (D., Tex.), chairman of the house judiciary committee, who promised to aid Representative Mitchell went into a rage. He pladed, "Why don't you northerners leave us alone down there? You who are so excited about lynchings are living in gangster-ridden cities, terrorized by gangsters. You in New England stole the Negroes out of Africa in the first place and brought them to the South. You better leave this problem to us and tend to something you know something about!"

Yells from the minority side accompanied Sumners' reflection that —"we've got an acute attack of 'federalitis' in this country."

"Do you agree that the inspiration for 'federalitis' comes from high places in the government?" inquired Roy Woodward (R., Mich.).

"We've got a chance today to show those in high places how things should be done," retorted Sumners.

Texan Supports Measure

Maury Maverick (D., Tex.), was one of the few southerners to support the measure.

LAW ON LYNCHING IS PRESSED AGAIN

Demand for Federal Statute Is Result of Half a Century of Reform Agitation

By HENRY LEE MOON

The passage by the House of Representatives on Thursday of the Gavagan bill, providing Federal punishment for officers surrendering prisoners to lynch mobs, climaxed a half century of agitation and organized effort for the enactment of Federal legislation to combat lynching.

The original agitation was inspired by the lynching, in various parts of the country, of a large number of aliens—Italians, Chinese, Japanese, Bohemians, Mexicans, and citizens of Great Britain and Switzerland—between 1887 and 1901. These incidents caused the United States Government great embarrassment and resulted in the payment of $475,500 in indemnities to foreign governments.

Sporadic agitation in widely separated sections was crystallized in 1891 following the lynching of eleven Italian murder suspects in New Orleans. The case created a tense situation between the United States and Italy. So widespread was the criticism of Louisiana that a group of prominent citizens of that State petitioned their Legislature and organized a lobby to fight for a law against lynching.

State Laws Enacted

This effort failed, but the organization of several citizens' committees in the South led to the enactment of a series of State laws to protect both Americans and aliens from mob violence.

The Georgia Legislature passed the first act in 1893. It provided for prison terms up to twenty years. North Carolina followed suit the same year with a law which made change of venue mandatory in lynch trials. In 1895 South Carolina adopted a new State Constitution which empowered the Governor to remove a Sheriff for failing to protect a prisoner, and assessed the county of the lynching $2,000 for damages to the victim's family. During the next eight years Ohio, Kentucky, Texas, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan and Kansas all passed anti-lynching laws.

Although none of the local laws proved effective, since no lynchers were punished or Sheriffs removed, they did strengthen the anti-lynching movement and reduce to a slight degree the number of lynchings. Whereas from 1890 to 1900 there were 1,665 lynchings, from 1900 to 1910 only 921 persons died through mob violence.

For Federal Action

Even before the Louisiana incident a movement had been started in the North to have the Federal Government enact legislation for the protection of aliens from mobs. Led by the late Senator George F. Hoar of Massachusetts, the movement finally resulted in 1902 in the drafting and introduction in the House of the first Federal Anti-Lynching Bill.

The House refused to debate the bill, but the movement was kept alive. It acquired a permanent nature in 1909 with the founding of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People by the late Moorfield Storey and other liberals. Systematically collecting facts about lynching, the association during its first decade publicized the evil throughout the United States and several foreign countries through meetings and literature. In July, 1917, the organization sponsored its first silent protest parade against lynching, and more than 15,000 Negroes marched down Fifth Avenue in New York.

Stirred by this demonstration, other organizations joined the anti-lynching movement. The most effective of these was the Commission of Interracial Cooperation of Atlanta, Ga., which brought about the organization in most Southern States of associations of women for the prevention of lynching.

House Action in 1922

Through the efforts of the N. A. A. C. P. and supporting organizations, the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill was passed 230 to 119 by the House of Representatives in 1922, only to be killed in the Senate by a filibuster. The fight was later strengthened by the open support of more than a dozen influential daily newspapers in the South.

In 1935, when the N. A. A. C. P. pushed its drive for the enactment of the Costigan-Wagner Anti-Lynching Bill, more than two dozen national organizations, with an estimated membership of 42,000,000 persons, supported the measure. The movement has become even stronger in the last two years through the campaign of the Catholic Church to stamp out lynching and through memorials to Congress by the Legislatures of Rhode Island, New York, Colorado, Michigan, Nebraska and Indiana.

A recent poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion tended to show that 70 per cent of the people of the country now favor Federal legislation against lynching. In the Southern States 65 per cent now favor Federal action.

Greenwood, S. C. Index-Journal
April 15, 1937

UNFORTUNATE ARGUMENT

While the anti-lynching bill was being argued in the Congress this week, a mob in Mississippi lynched two Negroes who had confessed to murdering a white storekeeper. They were after money. The man was killed about three months ago.

The mob probably had not heard of the proposed anti-lynching law and had no conception of what it will mean but they gave advocates of the law most timely argument for it.

It was the first lynching in Mississippi since 1935, the press report said.

Very deplorable.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to 5715

CIVIL WAR ECHOES

FEATURING ACRIMONIOUS debate between Northern and Southern Congressmen, the Civil War was fought all over again last week on the floor of the House of Representatives when the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill came up for consideration. As in the Civil War, the North emerged victorious in this fight, passing the bill by a vote of 277 to 119.

Having been successful thus far, proponents of the bill now face their stiffest fight in the Senate where already several of the Senators have promised to filibuster the bill to death. Coincident with the announcement of the passage of the bill in the House, Senator Borah issued a statement condemning what he called "an effort to force through Congress an unjust, unconstitutional and, in my opinion, an unmoral measure."

The argument used by the Southern Congressmen that lynching is being effectively wiped out, was proved ineffectual by the two brutal torch lynchings which took place in Mississippi on Tuesday.

The debate prior to passage of the bill waxed hot and furious with only one Southern Congressman, Representative Maverick of Texas, having enough intestinal fortitude to come out openly on the floor and espouse passage of the bill. Probably Representative Maverick will not be regarded any too favorably by his constituents back in Texas, for his forthright attitude on this bill, but there is little likelihood that there will be any repercussions at the polls when next he comes up for reelection.

There were some classical lines recorded for history during the debate, some of which we reproduce below in part:

Representative Guyer (Republican from Kansas):

"It is a rather sad commentary upon our civilization in America that we seem to excel in this disgrace of modern organized society. Mob violence is a sort of collective insanity whose contagion spreads and consumes like a prairie fire. In its mad rage, reason is dragged from her throne, pity and mercy are forgotten, and only mad delirium of vengeance reigns."

Representative Fish (Republican, New York):

"What surprises me in connection with the consideration of this bill is that a bill such as this has not been enacted into law long ago. Five thousand Americans have been lynched in the past 50 years in this great free country of ours, that is supposed to be the most civilized in the world. The rest of the world laughs at us every time we say we stand for justice and law and order. They bring up that stigma of lynch law and throw it back in our face."

Representative Cox (Democrat, Georgia):

"This is the first of a number of bills we can expect to come in this House from the reformers of the North seeking to establish racial equality in the South....The South will never surrender its racial lines."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People deserves credit for its work in getting signatures and pledges for passage of the Gavagan Bill in the House. Now that the fight goes to the upper house, we sincerely hope that the Senators will not fight the Civil War all over again. Now is the time for all persons interested in passage of the bill by the Senate asking their favorable action on the bill.

We might also suggest that the N. A. A. C. P. keep a strict eye on those Senators who have promised to lead the filibuster against the bill for the day will come when they can be repaid at the polls.

How very simple the whole procedure would be if only President Roosevelt would only say the word that he wanted the bill passed for the benefit of the real "forgotten man" — the Negro.

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
April 16, 1937

Capable of Handling Our Affairs

Paraphrasing the words of Representative Stephen Pace, of the Third Georgia district of which Columbus is a part, as he stood before the house of representatives and pleaded to the congress to leave with the south the right of governing itself as he opposed adoption of the anti-lynch law bill, since passed by that body, the south is a land of peace-loving and law-abiding citizens where security against violence is greater than in any other part of the nation.

Using sound, common reasoning, prefaced with a discourse on the legality of the proposed measure, Mr. Pace cited instance after instance why an anti-lynch law is unnecessary and why the right of governing and handling their problems should be left with the states.

We quote from his remarks in part:

"I believe that the President, who has made Georgia his second home, is sufficiently acquainted with conditions in my state and all over the south to know we are able to solve our own local problems of this kind; that we know how to keep friendly and proper relations between the races, and that we do not need the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a district court and a threat of imprisonment over our officers and a liabilty for indemnity over our heads in order to properly conduct our home affairs. I am sure that if the President were at liberty to speak freely he would tell you that he feels safer and more free from harm while at Warm Springs, Ga., than at any other place in this nation. There among a simple, honest, law abiding, law respecting, and native American citizenry he dismisses his secret service, climbs in his old roaster, and rides alone whenever and wherever he pleases, free from harm or alarm.

"I say to you that this bill, if it becomes the law, will do many times more harm than good. I predict, gentlemen, and God knows I hope I am wrong, that such a law as this will bring on 10 times more lynchings than we have had in the past. Some of our negro population is law abiding and is making a real effort to maintain proper relations between the races, but there are some that have no respect for the law or the constituted authorities, and when you give this latter class cause to believe that the federal government is back of them and is protecting them, it is going to bring on a condition most difficult to handle. I pray it will never again be necessary for the Klan to protect the South, but those of you from other parts of this nation are showing mighty little consideration for our conditions down home.

"Let me beg you, let me appeal to you, to your manhood, to your statesmanship, to let us handle our own local troubles in our own way. You must agree that we are making wonderful progress in this matter. The records show that in 1892 there were 226 people lynched, in 1932 there were 8, and so far this year there has been only 1. Do not you think we are doing a pretty good job of a bad situation? Do you think these efforts on our part justify this attempt on the part of members from other sections of the nation, who know nothing of our problems, and care less, to force on us the powers of the federal government in purely local or state

Those who would free the South of lynchings, could best first clean their own ballwicks of gang killings and gang massacres. In all fairness, which is the lesser of the two evils? We cannot believe that the senate is going to follow the mistake of the house in passing the anti-lynch bill.

There is no more excuse for an anti-lynch law to cover the South than there is for an anti-gangster law to apply to the North. There are laws against murder and mob violence and they are being applied in the South the same as in other sections of the country. If there were need it would be better for repeal to come from those who are wholly unfamiliar with conditions in Dixie and are basing their inaccurate and often vicious opinions on pure heresy.

The South is capable of handling the lynching problem. It has proven that and there is no need for the enactment of a federal statute to handle a situation that is already in hand in the South.

Durham, N. C. Herald
April 18, 1937

"FIXING" LYNCHING BY LAW

The size of the majority by which the anti-lynching bill passed the house, many are saying, forecasts its ultimate approval by the Senate. Others intervene with the opinion that southern senators will talk the House-approved bill to death as they have done other bills of similar import.

Both observations are plausible and reconcilable with experience and the record. The size of the House vote and the fact that it conformed to sectional lines suggests that the best guessers figure political sentiment in the home bailiwicks of the majority of senators is in favor of the bill. And no one needs to depend on guessers to say that southern senators will be on the job when it comes to talking against the proposition.

We would, however, go afield and beyond the House vote and the talkativeness of southern senators for basis of the forecast of victory for advocates of the federal anti-lynching bill. We would go back to the law enforcing machinery of the several states where lynchings occur and where laws against lynchings already on the books are talked to death, even as southern senators would talk the pending federal anti-lynching bill to death.

In most jurisdictions there are anti-lynching statutes on the books and everywhere lynchings and lynchers are officially condemned, condemned as completely as the pending bill condemns them. But what is done by statute and officially is not done in practice, and there is where sprouted the seed that put the anti-lynching bill through the House and will very likely put it through the Senate.

It is one of the "good old American" customs to fix everything by passing a law. In the House debate on the anti-lynching bill, for instance, southerners in general and North Carolina's spokesmen in particular predicated opposition speeches on fact that the states already have "fixed" lynchings by state statute. North Carolina, one of our representatives boasted, has an anti-lynching law.

Yes, North Carolina has an anti-lynching law and so do the other states. Trouble is we brag about the law when there is no occasion to use it and forget it is on the books when there is occasion to use it.

We are not so sure a federal anti- ently. Our offhand guess is that the same people would apply the same formula.

But we are not disposed to line up with those who don't like a federal anti-lynching law because states already have such laws and then hold their tongues when the state laws are ignored. The state anti-lynching laws haven't "fixed" things and we doubt that a federal law will. It is possible though that two "fixings" will produce better results than one and we are willing that it be tried.

Anti-Lynching Aftermath

THE esteemed Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch is apparently very unhappy over the passage by the House of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, which it designates "the Tammany anti-lynching bill." Our contemporary is in a position of peculiar isolation. The daily press of the State has quite generally agreed, that while it would be right and proper for the States to control mob law, they have failed to do so in the lower South, and some form of Federal action is now necessary to curb the rule of the mob. The papers of Richmond, Danville, Roanoke, Bristol and Newport News, among others, have placed themselves squarely upon record as having reached the conclusion that Federal action is necessary, however regrettable in their estimation, that may be.

The Ledger Dispatch is particularly disturbed over the provisions of the Gavagan bill that impose a fine of from $2,000 to $10,000 upon a county in which a lynching takes place, and hopes that Virginia's Senators, "joining with its Representatives, will vote against the bill." Our guess is that our esteemed and greatly respected contemporary will have nothing to regret as far as our Senators are concerned, as it has had nothing to regret over the way our Representatives voted.

If, however, our Representatives had wanted to vote for a bill that was as moderate in its provisions as the Virginia statute itself, there was the Mitchell bill, doctored by Chairman Sumners, of the Judiciary Committee and favorably reported, but which the House tossed aside by a combination of Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans, who, the Chicago Congressman says, did not want to see a bill passed that was introduced by a Negro Democrat.

The House would not even consider the Mitchell bill. Our Mr. Hamilton voted for its consideration, but promptly announced that had it come to a vote on its passage he would have cast his ballot against it.

If the Southern Congressmen had wanted to defeat the Gavagan bill they had an excellent opportunity to take the lead in putting through a bill less drastic. They contented themselves with voting against all anti-lynching bills.

If a vast majority of the influential newspapers of the South represent the enlightened sentiment of the section on the matter of law observance the Congressmen are out of line. They have mis-guessed public sentiment.

We are distressed that the Ledger-Dispatch, heretofore so sensitive to the cause of higher civilization, should find itself almost alone, editorially, on the question of how best to control the ravages of the worst crime with which our social order is afflicted. Right at heart, of course, but out of step this time with overwhelming public sentiment as to procedure, although the procedure may appear at this stage, somewhat drastic.

FOR THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Editor The Advertiser:

For several weeks it has been in my mind to ask The Advertiser to give its readers an editorial on the pros and cons of the Federal Anti-Lynching Bill. This morning when I spied the letter, "Alabama Statesmen," I had hopes of gaining information of a definite description on this subject. Alas for mortalities; how often we hear such phrases as "usurpers of States' Rights" and "destroy constitutional guarantees of freedom."

As I read the quoted part of Congressman Hobbs's speech I was impressed only by the fact that Mr. Hobbs gave no definite or, to my mind, significant reason in defense of his stand.

Why is the bill "a rape of justice?" The State guarantees each individual his constitutional right of trial by jury. In every lynching which occurs the State fails in its duty to the victim. Lynching is the act of a mob but the responsibility of State and county government. In what State has a member or members of a lynching mob been indicted, convicted and executed for usurping State's rights, for committing murder?

If a sovereign State cannot or will not prosecute and convict its lynching mobs then it is indeed time for a Federal anti-lynching law which will not close one eye nor be overpowered by the lust of a few blood-thirsty maniacs.

Perhaps I have no right to question Mr. Hobbs's statement, "But while some have been risking their lives to prevent mob violence, others introduce bills. . . ." This statement completely lacks specific examples and I could wish that he had been a little more explicit. Examples are effective, particularly in political speeches. Has Mr. Hobbs risked his life to rescue a victim or prevent mob violence? It would be my guess that the man who risked his life to prevent a lynching, and his number is deplorably few, would also be the one to advocate the anti-lynching bill. He would not only have sec- how ineffective the county and State had been in protecting its charge (presuming, of course, that this man is not an officer of the law, and he seldom is) but doubtless would have himself known the horror of the rope around his neck and the lash upon his back. The quoted text of Mr. Hobbs's speech is full of sweeping misstatements, void of any pretense of explanation.

"Does the spirit of mob violence which is driving this bill through the House make it right?" If one were sitting in the House of Representatives listening to this speech one might be able to salt down the exaggeration of such an expression. In the quiet of one's house in Alabama one is liable to conjure up the most extraordinary pictures of congressmen roaring and cursing one another, pushing, jamming and banging. But even such a picture is pleasant compared to another type of mob violence which results in burning of human flesh and renewed hatred created in the hearts of man.

And Mr. Hobbs, of course, answers himself: "No!", he shouts, "it is just as wrong as the hinges of hell." He does not even explain what is wrong with the hinges of hell, he just takes it for granted that we have all been there and have first hand information on the subject.

A. S. W.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
April 17, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill

Passage of the anti-lynching bill by the overwhelming vote of 277 to 119 was in striking contrast to the 236-149 vote of the House of Representatives in defeating a resolution condemning sit-down strikes, notwithstanding the underlying principles of the two measures are almost identical. Many of the Democratic members will have to plead Ashurstian inconsistency to explain their votes.

Both the anti-lynching bill and the sit-down strike resolution are measures that encroach upon local and state affairs pertaining to law enforcement.

The anti-lynching bill is much stronger than was the anti-sit-down strike resolution, yet the former passed by a larger majority than that which defeated the lat-

Tennessee are not guilty of this inconsistency of a felony if they fail to protect. They voted for both measures. Law enforcement officers are made prisoners from mobs under the anti-lynching bill, but they would have been merely censured for not protecting industrial plants against lawless strikers under the anti-sit-down resolution.

The two Republican Representatives from

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5716

Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser
November 23, 1937

MISS DIXIE'S MAIDEN SPEECH

The other day "Miss Dixie," i.e., Senator Graves from Alabama, made her maiden speech in the United States Senate. She spoke against the "anti-lynching bill' of Northern origin. She spoke as a daughter of the Deep South. So impressive was her manner, so earnest her reasoning that at the end of her first address she received applause from colleagues who rarely applaud a speaker. An incident of her ovation is the fact that Senators crowded around her to congratulate her and the next morning her pictufe appeared on the front pages of many American newspapers along with a brief account of her remarks.

It should be of interest to Alabamians to read a more complete account of Senator Graves's remarks in her first address to the Senate. We herewith quote excerpts from the Congressional Record:

Mrs. Graves. Mr. President, a new Senator, I believe, is supposed to be seen and not heard, particularly if she has not prepared in detail her maiden speech. I had not expected to speak on this subject, at least for a long time, because I thought crop-control measures would be considered first. But since the anti-lynching measure has taken precedence over all other measures, I feel that it is of such import as to demand an expression of my convictions. I shall not speak to consume time, nor shall I discuss other measures that may be more important to our country as a whole; but I shall confine myself merely to the bill in question.

Mr. President, I abhor lynching. It is a crime designed to punish crime or to prevent a recurrence of crime. We know from history, however, that lynching has been common to all countries in an unsettled condition. We know from history that every part of these United States has its heritage of extra-legal activity. We are told, in fact, explicitly by no less an authority than the encyclopedia that lynch law, not civil law, cleared the forests and valleys of the West of the horse and cattle thieves. That was lynching, and I abhor lynching. We know that in the pioneer days of the West, where cattle and horses represented the living of the pioneers, there was such an epidemic of thieving that numbers of ranchers banded themselves together and inflicted summary punishment upon the criminals; but in doing so they committed a crime, for they were guilty of lynching.

Lynching originated in the South, where helpless women and children in isolated sections were made the victims of the most brutal of all crimes. Men, incensed by such outrages, would band themselves together occasionally and inflict summary punishment upon the guilty criminals. When they did this they were guilty of lynching and therefore of crime; and I abhor lynchings and other forms of crime.

I abhor the crime of the machine-gunner racketeer. When organized bands of murderers blaze their way through the streets of a city and mow down helpless and innocent bystanders, if, perchance, they happen to be in the way of the intended victims of such murderers, they are guilty of murder and they constitute a mob, but they are not committing crime to punish crime; they are committing crime to satisfy their lust for blood or power.

I abhor all this; but I rejoice, Mr. President, to see that times and conditions in the West have changed, and that today an earnest law-enforcement authority, backed by public opinion, has banished the crime of lynching from the West; and now, when an occasional horse thief is caught, he suffers only the penalty that constituted authority imposes.

Mr. President, I rejoice, too, that in the South the constituted authorities, diligent about their business and strengthened by public opinion, are banishing the crime of lynching. In proof of this I have but to submit figures which are furnished by authority, and to reiterate, though it may have been heard on the floor of the Senate before, that whereas 10 years ago, in 1926, there were throughout the country a total of 30 lynchings, at the end of the 10-year period in 1936, which was last year, there were only 8 or 10—there seems to be a conflict of authority, so I shall use the larger number—only 10 lynchings. Thus in the 10-year period there was a reduction of two-thirds, which would mean, if pursued to its logical conclusion, that at the end of five years there will not be a single crime of lynching in these United States. Is not that an amazing record for the South or for any other part of the country where lynchings may have taken place in large numbers heretofore? Today we are deeply concerned with the rapid increase of crime throughout our country, and yet we have this amazing spectacle of what is almost an eradication of lynching in the United States.

Mr. President, I do not know what is the record of machine gunners, and if I did know I should not quote it in this Chamber, nor would I consent to send a representative or an investigator from the Federal Government into a city where machine gunners ply their daily trade to find if, perchance, some precinct policeman, when those guns were blazing away, instead of rushing into the danger, perhaps prudently sought shelter. No, I would never consent to send an investigator there, because I believe that the local authorities, backed by the State authorities, feel those things far more keenly than can any outsider; and I am confident, because I attribute to others the same motive I myself possess, that the eternal and determined diligence of local and State authorities in those cities and States, backed by a public opinion, will be so effective that this crime, too, will pass in itme. I have every confidence in the peace officers and the authorities of my sister States.

Mr. President, last summer, when I entered this Chamber for the first time, I felt that there was no greater privilege than to serve the presnt age, and no greater opportunity for rendering such service than through membership in this great deliberative body, the Senate of these United States. I was filled with a feeling of mutual understanding, of unity, of oneness of purpose, for we had suffered and rejoiced together; we had known want and plenty together; we were at peace; and we, as ambassadors from great sovereign, indestructible States, were met here to counsel, to consider, and to enact legislation for the general welfare. So I was happy and grateful to be admitted into your midst; and as I participate in the first business of this body at the present session I find that we are to discuss the anti-lynching bill. Not being learned in the law, I shall not attempt to touch on the constitutionality of this measure, but I feel that I can speak of reason and of justice as applied to the bill in question.

As to reason, Mr. President, surely only a compelling emergency should cause this body to strike down the sovereignty of an indestructible State and utilize the forces of the Federal Government to insure law and order; but no such emergency exists. The emergency, if one ever existed, has passed. The problem is being solved. If a specific remedy for a certain disease had been applied so effectively that in a period of 10 years the number of new cases was diminished by two-thirds, which would means that in another five years the disease would be completely conquered, would it be wise to change to another remedy, untried and drastic in its nature? Surely there is no reason for that.

As to justice, Mr. President, to punish deliberately men known to be innocent is a new departure in Americanism. I say that advisedly: To punish deliberately innocent men is a new departure in Americanism, and a most unwelcome one. What justice is there in punishing thousands of citizens of a county because, perchance, one of their law officers failed to do his full duty in protecting a criminal? If we enact this bill into law, every taxpayer in a county where one officer may be negligent may be insulted, condemned, and punished without any legal procedure to which he is party.

Mr. President, a general wrong perpetrated in the effort to avenge a particular wrong is evil. There is no justice in this bill.

* * * *

That is the very bulwark of their safety; and I cannot believe that that will yield to expediency, because if this bill is passed you will say, not merely to America, but you men representing great sovereign States will say to the world, "We have in our Union a group of Southern States that cannot or will not enforce the law. Therefore we will impose our law and take possession."

That is the word, the unmistakable message, that you will send to the world; and I cannot believe that any Senator, no matter whether he is a Republican or a Democrat, would thus violate the indestructible sovereignty of a sister State on the ground of expediency. No; I thrust that from me.

So there is only one alternative left, Mr. President, and that is misinformation or lack of information.

I was struck with this thought day before yesterday when a supposedly well-informed person, an interested person, one who presumably was conversant with national and world affairs, asked my position on this matter. I said, "Why, there is no problem. The South is taking care of that itself"; and this person turned to me with amazement and said, "But you have not any laws against lynching, have you, in the South?"

SENATOR GRAVES' MAIDEN SPEECH

Somehow, we had looked forward with a deal of interest to the time when Senator Dixie Graves from Alabama would make her maiden speech before the United States Senate, of which she has recently become a member. Of course, we did not know whether the Farm Bill or the Anti-Lynching Bill would afford her the opportunity but unfortunately for her, the Anti-lynching Bill gave her the opportunity and we must say that we were somewhat disappointed with the defense she made of lynching. She begged and pleaded with her colleagues for another five-year lease on lynching, notwithstanding the record that more than five thousand victims have been put to death by mob violence in the South, and little or nothing has been done about it.

Whether she said what she was "told to say" by her husband, Bibb Graves, Governor of Alabama, who appointed her to the office, makes no difference; the expressions were presumed to be her own words, of her own feelings on the subject. When she was appointed to this important office, we thought perchance, she might be wise enough to condemn lynching at her first opportunity, just as the leading white women of the South have done on several occasions. We also had in mind the fact that the leading white women of the South have repudiated the charges that lynching is for the purpose of defending Southern womanhood. But Mrs. Graves, in her first speech, resorted to the common demagogic method of dragging in the red herring, "unspeakable crime," to divert attention from the main issue. We were tickled, almost to outright laughter, as we noted that she said, "If this bill is passed, you will say, not merely to America but to the world, 'We have in our Union a group of Southern States that cannot or will not enforce the law'." This reminds us of the Victorian Age, when people didn't mind doing things disgraceful, but didn't want you to talk about it.

Senator Graves evidently thought she scored a point when she stated that "to punish the innocent is a new departure in Americanism." We would invite her attention to the fact that the records show that many innocent Negroes have been lynched. Mob psychology, as has been shown, gives little or no thought as to whether its victim is guilty or innocent. Blood is all it wants. During its rampage, many innocent victims are beaten and maltreated by these mobs. Then, too, the presumption of the law is that every person is innocent, until he or she has been duly indicted and convicted by a jury of his peers. It would be a fair statement that, as far as the law is concerned, most of the more than five thousand victims were innocent, because they never had their day in court.

But, we do not picture the Junior Senator from Alabama as being mean, vicious, uncultured, etc. She is a victim of a social caste and a vicious slave system which has made the South poor and her statesmen backward. She perchances to live in and was probably born in a section of this country that believes in lynching and burning of Negroes, just because they are Negroes. The "unspeakable" crime of which she makes mention is committed by white men in the South but, no lynching. When Senator Graves gets upon the Senate floor and pleads in one breath that she abhors lynching and in the next breath uses all the words at her command to justify lynching, she is merely using the language of Tom Connally, Hugo Black, Ed. "Cotton" Smith, and the rest of the southern statesmen. With whatever training or intelligence she possesses, she is not able to rise above the Southern [illegible]. What she said will soon die and be forgotten. On the other hand, she had been able to rise above the fog of the demagogue, presenting herself in the Senate Chamber as a representative of a new South to which she is looking forward, as an exponent of truth and justice; and in discussing the Anti-lynching bill, had called a spade a spade, and thrown herself into the fight for right and justice of all people, and for the equal protection of the laws for all the citizens of the United States, she then, would be today, not merely another Senator from the South with reactionary ideas, but a heroine, such as this country has never known, a Joan of Arc of the twentieth century.

We are told that applause followed her speech. But had she made the other speech as we have suggested in this article, where she received one applause, a thousand would have been hers. Her praises would have been sung in Dixie as well as New York. And when the names of great women of America are written, Dixie Graves might have had her name written in large letters.

Sanford, Fla. Herald
November 19, 1937

The Lynching Bill

Biggest issue in Congress, appears from early oratorical flourishes, is the anti-lynching bill to which the Senate has devoted the first full week of its special session. A strong group of eastern senators has been trying to cram this bill down the necks of Southern senators with the intention, so it is said, of helping to clean up the South's back yard.

While it could be argued that the New England senators would do well to devote their attention to their own trash cans, still we believe that substantial opposition to the bill can be successfully maintained on the strength of the theory that this particular measure instead of helping to reduce lynching in the South may actually increase it, and that under any circumstances it will have no beneficial results.

The anti-lynching bill provides that any county in which a lynching occurs shall be fined $10,000 and that any sheriff from whom a prisoner is taken and later lynched shall be criminally liable. In the event of such a lynching the county commissioners of the county in which the lynching occurred would be required by federal law to include in their budget this item of $10,000 and collect the necessary taxes for it from the local taxpayers.

Overlooking the fact that there is no constitutional right given the federal government for fining any city, county, or state, regardless of what it does, and that the federal government has no more power to fine a county, than a county has to fine the federal government, we get considerable amusement in speculating on just what would happen if such a bill finally were enacted into law and a subservient Supreme Court allowed it to stick.

Suppose, for instance, that there were a peculiarly vicious crime committed in Seminole County, and a mob were organized for the purpose of lynching the prisoner. Then suppose the taxpayers, aware of the penalties for such an offense and reluctant to pay the fine even under the exigencies of the emergency, finally succeeded in talking the mob into a fair consideration of their pocketbooks, and got them to disperse and go home.

But then suppose that a crowd in Orange county heard about it and decided that such a crime should not go unpunished any longer than it takes to stretch a rope, and aware of the fact that it would be Seminole County taxpayers under any circumstances who would have to pay the fine, got together, came over here, seized the prisoner, and lynched him. Seminole County citizens would be assessed a $10,000 fine just the same even though they did everything they could to prevent the lynching.

And the next time a peculiarly heinous crime occurred in Seminole County, what influence would the taxpayers then have in talking the mob out of hanging the prisoner? There would probably be some sort of agreement reached very shortly whereby Seminole County's prisoners would be taken over to Orange county and strung up there. Then Orange county citizens would have to pay the fine.

There are wonderful possibilities in this federal control of the lynching evil. We can envision all sorts of eventualities from the government's well meaning but ill considered plans to police the South.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to

5717

"IN EXTRAORDINARY SESSION"

Duffy in The Baltimore Sun

Victory for the Anti-Lynching Bill is seen despite filibustering.

Danville, Va., Bee
November 17, 1937

The Anti-Lynch Bill

The filibuster on the anti-lynching bill which began with the opening of an important session of congress demonstrates how far Southern senators are prepared to go in resisting its enactent as a law. Why it should have been taken up so immediately is hard to understand with administration leaders reported concerned about other more immediate and pressing matters. The situation, however, is significant in that it shows that congress is in a fighting mood and will not be regimented as during the earlier phases of the administration.

The anti-lynching bill has been forced to the front again lately by the Gallup poll, that typically American institution of New Mexico which attempts to sound out national opinion on public questions. The poll showed 72 per cent of the country favoring some form of federal enactment which would make unhealthy for any state the crime of mass accomplished murder.

There remains sharp objection to the proposed method of penalizing localities where lynchings take place by assessing fines against them, not that this would fail to tighten up the protection of suspected rapists and murderers, but because it is a usurpation by the federal government of a state's right. Lynching may well be condemned far and wide because of its sheer injustice but inasmuch as the law would apply more generally to the South and Southwest the hue and cry about the abridgment of state's rights would transcend the sentiment in favor of anti-lynching legislation.

The law against lynching should primarily apply to those who take part in these midnight assassinations and burnings rather than against officers of the law who may have failed to exercise common prudence in handling their prisoners.

The federal statute reaches out for the thief who steals an automoble in one state and drives it to another. There is no public anguish over that law because it is highly effective and obviates the difficulty of extradition. In the same way a federal statute which would make lynchers amenable to the federal courts would be more efficaceous because it would bring to the locality the instrumentation of detection more alert and less immune to "local atmosphere."

TIMELY OBSERVATION

Under the head of "Southerners For A Federal Lynch Bill," The New Orleans Item-Tribune, editorially observes the attitude of southerners anent the anti-lynching bill as follows:

An extensive poll reported today by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that 72 percent of the typical classes embraced by it favor Federal legislation against the barbarous crime of lynching. This finding was to be expected.

The poll also shows that 57 per cent of the Southerners voting in it likewise favor the same thing. This might not have been anticipated by some of us. But for some years past we ourselves have had little or no doubt that practically all of the humane and intelligent people of the South, and a good majority of all Southerners, were of that mind. Multiplying signs convinced us that the progress of civilization was overcoming the claims of a very dubious legalism invoked to defend this survival of lawless savagery.

On several occasions we have expressed doubt that Southern Congressmen have been correctly representing the enlightened majority of their people when they assumed heights of indignation at the suggestion of Federal action against lynching. The same thing is said in other terms by the interpreters of the present poll.

It woud be a gross mistake to assume that the 43 percent of these Southerners who are disposed against Federal action upon lynching, countenance lynching itself. We have no doubt that most of them reprobate it heartily. They are merely prejudiced against Federal measures to check it, preferring to leave its cure to the slow and doubtful growth of sentiment that will compel a proper policing of this form of atrocity by state agencies.

We think there is no doubt that a small minority in the South—and in other parts of the country too—believe in 'lynching' on occasions. We even think that some few of these are persons of average decency and good purpose in the other relations of life. But we have reason to believe that this class is becoming smaller and smaller as the processes of enlightenment overcome the blight of customary mental habit.

Some observation, and still more study, of lynchings themselves, has left us no doubt that the greater number of those who actually engage in it are of low and irresponsible types, often hoodlums and other bad elements in village and smalltown life. In the several cases that have come under our notice we can recall none who undertook one of these atrocities who belonged to the class that his community regarded with pride on ordinary occasions.

It is idle to enter here into a discussion of the great Constitutional objection to Federal action against this survival of savagery. That has been presented too often. It is enough to say—so far as our own view is concerned—that there is as much or more Constitutional warrant for Federal action as Constitutional ground against it.

One of he pending lynch-bills has already passed the House of Representatives. It is entitled, by agreement to early action in the Senate. How far it will serve, if passed, the purpose for which it is designed, we are in some doubt for reasons already pointed out. But it is a move in a good direction. We hope, in any case, that it will receive prompt action after due debate.

In Washington With GEORGE MORRIS

Back Of Lynch Bill?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—When Senator Bennett Clark hung a placard on the wall of the Senate chamber, about the size of a highway billboard, with a picture of the victims of a Mississippi lynching, the motives behind the Anti-Lynching Bill were fully revealed. The obvious purpose was to make it appear that every senator who opposed the bill favored lynching and torture as shown by the billboard.

Coming down to specific cases, there are not three persons anywhere more opposed to lynching than Senators Connally, Bailey and

On the other hand there are not two persons anywhere who owe more to gangsters than Senators Clark and Wagner. Southern senators opposing the bill stand for law enforcement and have no alliance with criminals.

Wagner, on the other hand, is a beneficiary of Tammany, the New York political organization which gathers some of its recruits from gangsters and in exchange provides them with such protection as it can give. Clark is a friend of the Kansas City political organization, celebrated for violence. The bill is so drawn that the most criminals in New York and Kansas City are exempt from its provisions.

IF PASSION, prejudice and ignorance could be eliminated, it would be obvious that the sinister purpose actuating the advocates of the bill is more far-reaching than the reason which appears on the surface. If the Congress can pass a law and the Supreme Court hold it constitutional, by which the Federal Government can assume jurisdiction in one case, it can assume jurisdiction in all. If the Anti-Lynching Bill is constitutional the states might as well surrender their charters.

Senator Wagner has no patience with states anyway. They don't have states or states' rights in Germany where Senator Wagner came from, and he doesn't see any use for them in this country. He has never sponsored legislation of consequence which did not have for its purpose extension of the power of the Federal Government over the states.

BUT SENATOR WAGNER'S advocacy of centralized government and the breaking down of states cannot be attributed solely to the fact that he is foreign born. There are any number of senators who take the same socialistic attitude without the excuse of European heritage. The existence of states is the last remaining bar to centralized government and protection against Fascism or Communism, whichever is the personal preference of senators to make the states impotent.

Opposition to the Anti-Lynching Bill this time is fraught with more alarm than at any time during the 20 years it has been advocated. In the past, sponsorship was purely political. There was no question but that the Court would declare it unconstitutional. Its advocates were prompted solely by desire to corral negro votes. There is a lot of that kind of support now. Senator Van Nuys of Indiana, known as co-author of the bill, is for it for whatever good it will do him politically. But the main strength of the advocates comes from those who would get rid of states and make the Federal Government supreme.

[illegible] for more fear of consequences now than at any time in the past. While it has been conceded that the Supreme Court would unhesitatingly declare such a law unconstitutional in other years, no one knows what the Court might do now. The Court has reversed itself as often as it has upset New Deal legislation. It is no longer possible to lay a law down beside the Constitution and see if it fits the pattern and determine if it is constitutional or unconstitutional.

Senator George brought that out effectively in discussing the Anti-Lynching Bill the other day. He is one of the best lawyers in the Senate and almost any one would defer to his interpretation of the Constitution. But he declined to interpret the constitutional phases of the bill. He admitted that there was no telling what the Court might do.

BY WHICH IS MEANT that while liberals were denouncing the Court a year ago, conservatives at last have realized the predicament the country is in as a result of vacillating members of the Court, members who shift positions between decisions, and whose opinion one day is no criterion to what it will be tomorrow. In that situation lies cause for alarm.

Even a layman should be able to guess what the Constitution means when it says that the states reserve to themselves all authority not expressly ceded to the Federal Government, but no lawyer with regard for his reputation would dare predict how far the Court would go in protecting the states.

The modern interpretation of the Constitution seems to be that the Federal Government has a right to do anything that ought to be done. If lynchers should be punished, according to their reasoning, then it is constitutional for the Federal Government to punish them. If the Federal Government thinks something needs to be done in the states, regardless of whether the states think so or not, the Federal Government would usurp the authority. It is amazing to observe the equanimity with which some senators accept the proposal to destroy the states.

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times
November 20, 1937

OBSTRUCTING PROGRESS.

Senator George is exactly right when he condemns members of Congress for insisting on injecting the highly controversial anti-lynching bill into the special session.

President Roosevelt, in his message to the session, listed a number of objectives which should occupy the time of the members and he explained that these should be given speedy consideration. He pointed out to the Congress that recent months have witnessed a business recession which makes it imperative that something be done to restore business and industrial confidence. He also pointed out that farm relief should occupy a prominent place in the deliberations since farmers are now anxious to make their plans for 1938 and are entitled to know what they may expect from Congress. Certain other bills were listed by the President for consideration.

However, at no point in his message did he mention the need for any anti-lynching law. The country, on the whole, has expressed no desire for any such legislation. As Senator George pointed out, this effort to enact some such bill has been before the Congress for many years. At the time of its first consideration there was no demand for it and through the years, despite the efforts of a few, little or no widespread sentiment for it has been apparent.

Without entering into any discussion of the arguments for and against anti-lynching laws, there can be no justification for obstructing other important legislation to consider a bill which, at its best, is one for which there is little demand.

There are some vital issues to be settled. Congress has an opportunity to aid business in general and agriculture in particular and it is little short of criminal for the members of that body to allow a comparatively minor bit of legislation to obstruct the program.

Birmingham Ala. Post
November 20, 1937

Why Not Legislate?

Several Southern Democratic senators, including George of Georgia, Bailey of North Carolina and Connally of Texas, have been demanding that Congress quit wasting time and do something to help pull business out of the slump.

That is a sound idea. Business needs help, needs it badly. The jobs of millions depend upon business getting that help quickly. But the way these particular do-something-for-business senators want Congress to "quit wasting time" is to debate the anti-lynching bill.

Inasmuch as anti-lynching legislation has already been debated in Congress for more than 15 years, the quickest and best way for the Senate to "quit wasting time" would be for Senators George, Bailey, Connally et al to stop their talk, take their seats, and vote.

After all passage of the measure, if it did pass, would not hurt business, except the business of lynching, which, though it may be a lively industry in some states, certainly yields no dividends, pays no taxes and provides no gainful employment.

In the House also the legislative process is being choked. The stranglers are five Southern Democrats—Cox of Georgia, Driver of Arkansas, Smith of Virginia, Clark of North Carolina and Dies of Texas—abetted by four Republicans—Martin of Massachusetts, Mapes of Michigan, Taylor of Tennessee and McLean of New Jersey. These nine constitute a majority on the House rules committee. They don't like the Black-Connery wage-hour bill. And so, although the bill has been passed by the Senate and approved by the House labor committee, they have decided to use the peculiar autocratic power which a rules committee majority possesses, and not permit the bill to come before the House. These nine men won't let the 424 other representatives vote on the bill, or even legislate on the subject in the way such measures customarily are debated, amended, and then rejected or approved.

We don't like the wage-hour bill as it is now written. We think it would be better for Congress to fix labor standards than to delegate that power to a commission. But so long as the bill is bottled up in the rules committee there can't be any wage-hour consideration at all. Thus far no congressman whom we have heard of—certainly not one of these nine—has had the political courage to say publicly that there should be no legislation to stop the sweatshop exploitation that is undermining the living standards and buying power of the American wage earners.

Once it gets out on the House floor, this bill can be amended and improved by the orderly democratic processes. But some elected "representatives" of the people seem to be afraid to let representative government function.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5718

Columbus, Ga., News Record
November 29, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill Denounced as Purely a Political Measure to Get Negro Votes in the North

IN the discussion of the pending anti-lynching bill in the United States senate, Senator Bankhead asked Senator Smith, of Alabama:

"In the opinion of the senator from South Carolina, how many votes would this bill get if negroes were not voters?"

Senator Smith's reply to this question, and the subsequent remarks, follow, as reported by the Congressional Record:

Mr. SMITH. Not one. The Senator from Alabama has hit the nail on the head; and yet, to the shame of this great body, that has helped demonstrate to a doubtful world that democraracy is possible, that a dual form of government, collectivism where indicated and individualism where indicated is practicable, certain long-haired men and short-haired women who never assumed the real responsibilities of life, but are now attempting to perpetrate such a dastardly thing as this, charge us whose good name is jepoardized with delaying legislation; in other words, they would let this brand be placed on us in order to get a few Harlem votes.

So far as I am concerned, I represent, in part, the little storm center of the United States, little South Carolina, that passed the Nullification Act single-handed and alone, and then seceded. I do not apologize for either act, because it showed the grit of those from whom I descended. The same courage is in us now. Nothing is done in malice, but our self-respect is touched for the dirty thing of getting votes—and getting them from where and from whom? I imagine those who are trying to get them are about on par with those from whom they would be obtained. Any man or set of men that will stoop so low as this are no higher than the source from which they hope to draw their political strength. They are not going to get away with it.

Against my own family a crime was committeed that would inflame the heart of any man. I saw a father-in-law 80 years old shot to death, his son shot to death, that son's bride of 8 months shot to death, and a poor, young negro, who had belonged to certain members of my family, who attempted to defend this defenseless household, had his throat cut. Yet I and those of us whose blood and the sanctity of whose homes were jeopardized believed in letting the law take its course.

I invite the author of this bill to go and stay where we stay, surrounded by the conditions that surround us, and which has surrounded us since the day of the reconstruction. If he would do that, in place of trying to condemn us, were he to know as I know, and as every other southerner knows, the instigation for these outbreaks of lawlessness, if he had a drop of decency in him he would take off his hat in honor of the South emerging as it has emerged from the more prevalent perpetration of this deed.

You may call it 'humanitarianism"; but have you no respect for our officers, have you no respect for us?

Mr. President, I said I was not going to make a speech, and I am not. I am simply serving notice that I am going to do everything within my power to keep this iniquitous and unjust stigma from being placed on my section of the country. What galls me more than anything else is that it comes from the so-called Democratic Party, which we have loved and which, in the dark days of reconstruction, was our pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, a fact which made me feel kindly toward old Tammany. I shall never be able to pay my debt of obligation to that organization which stood between us and the death of our civilization.

Senators stand here and quote the Constitution. What is the Constitution to a man who is hunting votes? What does it amount to with him? I can call a polecat a geranium, but that does not make him any less a polecat. You may call this humanitarianism, but it is no less a vote-getting scheme. We all know that. If a certain distinguished Senator were not dead, but was still in this body, I should like to quote what he said when I remonstrated with him about the injection into this body of a similar bill.

No one knows or can know how we of the South feel about this thing. Mark my prediction: If this bill passes and becomes a law through the Supreme Court declaring its constitutional, you will have injected a rift into the ranks of the so-called Democratic Party that all the blandishments of the next generation will never heal.

Mr. President, I wonder sometimes what is the purpose of the treatment being accorded the South. The two-thirds rule in national conventions was abolished and we were eliminated from any participation in the naming of a President. You are about to pass, and perhaps will pass, an hours-and-wages bill which, in the recrudescent state of my section, will crucify it. Now you come along and say, "You are not competent to protect your prisoners"; and so the great purified, sublimated, glorified, crime-ridden New York and her collaborating State, those two peaks of morality and of political and social purity, must not only shed their light on poor benighted South Carolina and the rest of the South, but must send their gifted peace officers down there to help us eliminate lynching and promote racketeering. (Laughter)

Mr. President, I am taking up the time of another southerner.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. Yes; I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. The Senator has lived all of his yeasr in the South. The ostensible purpose of this bill is to protect the negro from the crimes that are committed upon him by the people of the South. I desire to ask the Senator, what is the attitude of the South toward the negro race—whether the South is not the best friend of the negro race that is found in any section?

Mr. SMITH. O Mr. President, that goes without saying. As a baby boy I was nursed in the arms of a negro woman, whom I loved as devotedly as was possible. Then, later on, old Uncle Bill, who lived to be 103 years old, was my shelter in the time of storm. Many a time my father would lead me around behind the house, where there was an old privet bush that I have hated from that day until this. It grew just the right length of sprouts to "teach the young idea how to shoot." He would take me around behind the house in order to better the condition of my soul and morals by the application of the hickory; and old Uncle Bill whom my father revered and respected more than he did any other man, would just walk up without a word and deliver me from the hand of the slayer. Oh, how I loved him with devotion.

The South knows the negro, and knows his limitations. I state before this body—and I dare any of you to go down and investigate, that since the Supreme Court has declared that in certain cases involving Federal jurisdiction negroes must be on the jury, when the negroes themselves have a case they will take you aside and say, "Do, for God's sake, get me the best white men you can on the jury." Is it not so?

Down in the section from which we come the negroes are treated as justly, and more understandingly, than by these gentlemen up North. We do not call them "mister" and "mistress,' because they have been accustomed to call us "marster" and "mistress." We do not take them into fellowshin with because it is dangerous. You know it. I know it. But give the negro a school to himself, a church to himself, and treat him fairly, and the relation between the races has grown more amicable as the years have gone by. Pass this bill, and you will be responsible for the consequences.

Mr. President, you are about to put us in this position: Here is the party to which we have given allegiance and for which we have suffered. Though defeat after defeat came, we still were loyal to the principles of democracy. You are about to put us in the position: Here is the party to which we have given allegiance and for which we have suffered. Though defeat after defeat came, we still were loyal to the principles of democracy. You are about to put us in the position that was described by the negro preacher who had more knowledge of the sound of words than he did of their meaning. He said to his congregation, "There air but two roads. One leads 'way up to perdition and the other 'way down to degradation." A negro in the congregation said, "Say that again, parson." He said, "I said, there air but two roads. One leads 'way up to perdition and the other one 'way down to degradation." The negro said, "My God! If dat be true, dis nigger takes to the woods!" (Laughter.)

Here in the home of our friends, so-called, we are threatened with the most humiliating expression of the other part of the country that ever was conceived in the heart of man. Why, it was born in the heat and passion just subsequent to the Civil War.

I wonder if the Senate is going to pass this South-baiting, South-humiliating measure. I wonder if it is. If we who love the Constitution and love fair play and decency, whether we are Southerners or not, can prevent it, the bill will not pass before the time arrives for another election and calling together of Congress.

Albany Decatur, Ala. Daily
December 4, 1937

Negro View

Much has been written and said about the propored federal anti-lynching bill and before the bill is permitted to become law a great

...needed for the best interest of the negro race. I think your editorial is one of the best I have ever read. I wish I had a way for that editorial to get in every paper—white and negro—in this country. I said in a speech in Alabama last week, that the passage of the so-called anti-lynching bill will be the greatest menace to real American principles ever enacted. It will breed more race strife than anything that has happened in the U. S. since the Civil War. It was proposed for no other purpose, than to secure the votes of negroes who live in states above the Mason and Dixon line, and only to help politically, men who have not one half as much real good-will for the advancement of the negro race as do men who live in the South. In fact the Southern man holds sentiments for the advancement of the negro far superior to many who live in the North. Lynching is decreasing annually, so much so, that all Southern people are helping to wipe it out. But, let Congress pass a national anti-lynching bill, and show that the North is trying to 'whip the South' in line, you will see more race strife than ever before.'

Lakeland, Ga., News
November 25, 1937

Boake Carter, famous radio news commentator, said in a recent broadcast that only the South could solve its lynch problem, and that the Federal Government had no business to interfere in such a situation. Lanier county, without any lynchings, without any gangdom, without any labor violence and without any farm strikes, certainly looks like God's country. But, what of Senator Wagner, of New York, trying so desparately to jam the anti-lynching blll through the Upper House at this most critical time? We admire the Senator, but we feel that at this particular time he is proving false to his great responsibility as one of the New Deal stalwarts. Perhaps he structive to help solve the gang murders, under world lawlessness and labor violence which occurs so frequently in his own great section.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
November 21, 1937

Honor and Lynching

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—I am addressing this letter to Southern white women because as woman to woman we know and understand each other's problems generally.

There is a problem being discussed in the extra session of our Congress at this time which affects Southern white women and Negroes most seriously.

You are aware that the anti-lynching bill has come up for consideration and you know what is happening.

While this is not the first time such bills have been offered to Congress for passage (all previous ones failed), I feel that the responsibility of this bill rests more heavily on the shoulders of Southern white women than any of the others.

The majority of the Southern senators are opposing the bill and are determined to defeat it. Why? Is it because they feel the only way to assure protection to your womanhood and honor is by mob violence and the lynching of black men?

Whether the crime of assault and rape on white women is real or imaginary, they seem willing to let the mob have its victim. The passage of the antilynching bill would wipe out this sacrifice of human blood and make the South safe for white women.

A Federal law would give every criminal proper protection and trial to prove himself innocent or guilty, and thereby eliminate murder by hysterical mobs.

How many of the thousands of black lynch victims were ever proven guilty? Is it necessary that the protection of your honor be continued by human sacrifice upon the altar of hatred and prejudice? Do not women of the entire world look upon you and wonder why you require such sacrifice?

Shall this un-American custom go on through the years unrestrained, and will your men continue to tell the world by their actions that they are too weak and inadequate to give you needed protection except by mob violence and lynching of black men? Will you continue to accept such protection or will you rise up in your might and right and demand that your senators now filibustering and obstructing justice, shall cease making spectacles of themselves and pass this bill which will give the right of fair trial to every man accused of crime against your honor?

A NEGRO WOMAN.

New York, N. Y.

Birmingham, Ala. News
November 21, 1937

CURRENT BATTLE OLD HISTORY HERE

Similar Bill Up Before U. S. Congress Page Lifted From State's "Dark" Era

BY RALPH HURST
Birmingham News Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The anti-lynching bill over which the special session of Congress is now engaged in mighty struggle, is a page lifted from the dark days of a Reconstruction Legislature in Alabama.

The Legislature of 1868, composed largely of Negroes and carpetbaggers, wrote such a law into the code of Alabama with the same sort of provisions as that of the bill now before Congress.

This Alabama measure, which may be found on Page 452 of the General Acts of 1868, was later repealed along with most of the other reconstruction legislation. But before it was repealed, it was amended to exempt Dale County.

While the bill before Congress is designed to court the Negro vote of the North and East, the Alabama act of 1868 was designed to further impress the stamp of the conqueror upon the South.

Like the bill which now has the Democratic party split in Congress, Alabama's anti-lynch bill provided that the county in which the lynching occurred should pay to the next of kin of the victim the sum of $5,000. It went further, however, and provided a payment of $1,000 for a person beaten or assaulted.

Also like the proposed federal bill, it provided no payment would be required if convictions of the lynchers were obtained.

As written into law in Alabama, it provided:

AN ACT

To suppress murder, lynching and assaults and batteries.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Alabama, That whenever in any county of this state, any person shall be assassinated or murdered by any outlaw, or person or persons in disguise, or mob or for past or present party affiliation or political opinion, the widow or husband of such person so murdered or assassinated, the next of kin of such person, shall be entitled to recover of the county in which such murder or assassination occurred, the sum of $5,000 as damages for such murder or assassination, to be distributed among them according to the laws of Alabama, regulating the distribution of the estates of intestate decedents.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That said damages allowed in Section 1 of this act shall be recoverable in the following manner: The claimants shall, after the expiration of six months from the murder or assassination aforesaid, bring an action in the Circuit Court of the proper county, by summons and complaint against the county, alleging the murder or assassination of such person in said county by an outlaw, or person or persons in disguise, riot or mob, and that it was done at least six months before the commencement of the suit. The subsequent proceedings shall be according to the laws of the state and rules of practice in suits between individuals.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That if the issue shall be found for the claimants, judgment shall be rendered in their favor for $5,000 and costs against the county. If found for the county, the costs shall be adjourned against the claimants. When judgment is rendered for the claimants, the court shall enter, with the judgment, an order to the Court of County Commissioners of said county, notice of which shall be issued by the clerk of the court, and served on the probate judge by the sheriff, commanding said Court of County Commissioners within 20 days, to assess on the state tax of said county such a per centum as will realize the amount of said judgment for damages and costs.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, that the assessment so made shall be delivered to the tax collector or the county, who shall collect such tax, in the same manner as the state tax is collected, within 60 days.

Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, that for failure to perform the duties herein required, without good excuse, either by the Commissioners Court or the tax collector, sheriff, or clerk of the Circuit Court, each member of the court, and the tax collector, sheriff or said clerk so in default, shall be liable to a fine, on indictment, of $1,000, and in default payment, to imprisonment in the county jail for 12 months for every 30 days of such neglect or failure.

Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, that whenever, in any county in this state, any person shall be whipped or beaten or wounded upon accusation, real or pretended, or to force such person to confess himself guilty of any offense, or to make any disclosure, or to consent to leave the neighborhood, county or state, or for any cause, by two or more persons unknown or in disguise, shall be entitled to recover of the county in which such offense occur, the sum of $1,000 as damages therefor, by suit in the Circuit Court of said county, to be conducted in the same manners as prescribed in this act for the conduct of suits and the enforcement of the judgment. The cause of action shall survive the legal representatives of the injured person, and the damages when collected shall, in no way be liable to the debts of the injured party, but shall be distributed as in cases of intestacy.

Sec. 7. Be it further enacted, that if at any time before the payment of the money recoverable under any section of this act, the offenders shall be apprehended and duly tried, convicted and punished, such conviction and punishment shall operate as satisfaction of the judgment in the particular case. If the offenders herein described shall be apprehended and undergoing trial for the offense about which the suit for damages is brought, the court, or in vacation, the presiding judge of the court, may, on a proper showing, suspend proceedings in the suit for damages until the result of the trial of the apprehended person shall be known.

Sec. 8. Be it further enacted, that it shall be the duty of the county solicitor to prosecute the suit for the claimants, which may be brought in the name of the widow, husband or any one of the heirs, though a minor, for which he shall receive 10 per centum of the amount recovered.

Sec. 9. Be it further enacted, that the laws of the state as to principals and accessories shall govern in all suits brought under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 10. Be it further enacted, that if those entitled to sue as provided in this act will not do so in 12 months from the time they are allowed to commence suit, then the solicitor shall commence and prosecute the suit in the name of the State vs. the County, and the amount recovered shall be appropriated for the benefit of the asylum for the insane, the deaf and dumb and the blind in the state, and to each the same amount.

Sec. 11. Be it further enacted, that this act shall take effect and be in full force immediately on and after its passage, any laws or parts of laws in the statutes of this state to the contrary notwithstanding.

Approved. Dec. 28. 1868.

Montgomery Ala Journal
November 20, 1937

SPOKEN FROM THE HEART

It goes without saying that every informed man and woman in Alabama is opposed to the pending anti-lynching bill because of the sectional spirit in which it is drawn, because of its dishonest discriminations, and because it is an inconstitutional proposal for dealing with a subject that the South knows how to handle. But there are many ways in which that opposition can be expressed. In the midst of the abuse, recrimination and ill feeling which have characterized the debate in the United States senate this week, the calm, earnest and soft-spoken words of Alabama's junior senator, Mrs. Dixie Graves, may well prove more effective in convincing Northern senators of the iniquity and injustice of the proposal than hours of heated denunciation. Mrs. Graves spoke from the heart, and people always listen to that kind of utterance.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5719

Atlanta, Ga. Georgian
November 23, 1937

Wounded in the House of Her Friends

By Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, President Oglethorpe University.

DISPATCHES from Washington indicate that the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill will be passed by the Congress. This bill provides that the Federal Government shall have power to punish officers and local governments in whose territory of administration lynchings may take place. It is aimed directly at the South, and is of the same general type as other such bills which have been proposed in the past. It is just another form of Force Bill and of carpetbag government.

The most illuminating of its features is the fact that it is proposed, and that it will probably be enacted, by a Democratic administration, put into power by the South, and depending for its further existence upon the South, and that Democratic representatives in Congress have allowed such a bill to come to the point of enactment.

It is still stranger that Southern voters, having seen the two-thirds' rule abrogated at the Philadelphia convention, and having been warned that the policy of the present leaders of the Democratic party does not include the protection of minorities, should continue complacently to float toward their Niagara.

In some instances our leaders even supported the bill to pack the Supreme Court, its effect being to substitute a majority vote of the populace for constitutional protection of the rights of minorities.

The lynching bill now emphasizes the folly of those Southern voters who are willing to impair the powers of the Supreme Court of the United States by approving the recent proposal which would deprive the South of its sole remaining protection against the tyranny of an unkindly majority.

But men should be pitied, rather than blamed for being willing to sell their souls for a handout. They have been doing it from the beginning and they will doubtless do it until the end. Politicians know that principle well and use it whenever necessary to effectuate their purposes.

There are exceptions. For example, Senator George serves his constituency well in saying: "I don't think there will be any prolonged fight against the bill. It might be that an organized fight will be made, but, after reasonable debate, I think it will come to a final vote. Of course, I am unalterably opposed to the bill. I AM SATISFIED IT IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL and that no court—not even a 'reorganized' court—can uphold it."

In other words, the only safeguard for the South in this matter, as in many similar matters in the past, and as in many similar matters in the future, has been, is, and will be, the Supreme Court guaranteeing a rigid administration of the Constitution of the United States which was written and intended to protect minor groups in their rights against the senseless manias of popular majorities.

As I have pointed out many times before, America is in the midst of a vast conflict of opinion in which the republic is being supplanted by a democracy. In a republic, government is conducted by the upper half, the responsible half, the intelligent half, the educated half, the property-holding half. In a democracy, it is, for all practical purposes, conducted by the lower half, the irresponsible half, the unintelligent half, the uneducated half.

Former Governor Landon well says: "The challenge to our country today is that citizens lay aside all personal, factional and party prejudices and join in the fight to preserve the republic."

Ft. Myers, Fla., News Press
November 22, 1937

A FUTILE FILIBUSTER

The anti-lynching bill with which the senate is fiddling is a sorry piece of legislation but we doubt that it is worth the opposition being lavished upon it. To brand it for what it is and to register indignant dissent a filibuster in other times would be fully justified. But at this particular moment the country faces an economic crisis of such serious implications as to demand the undivided attention of congress. Yet here they are emoting crocodile tears over a matter that will probably never have more than academic consequences.

For this miserable deviation from a paramount public duty both proponents and foes of the lynch bill must share responsibility. Backers of the measure, whose purposes are concerned solely with their own political fortunes, maneuvered it into position where the senate would have to deal with it as the first order of business in the special session. As they knew full well that it would encounter a long drawn filibuster they stand guilty of starting a ruckus that could just as well go over until another time.

For their part opponents of the bill convict themselves of wasting time in futility because they concede that eventually it must pass. They are absolutely right, and the country agrees with them, in denouncing the move to bring it up at this time. But there was nothing they could do except denounce. Under the senate rules they couldn't stop it from coming up; all they could do was decide whether to indulge themselves in gestures of dissent or to make a virtue of necessity and let it pass.

Unwisely they chose to gesticulate and by doing so became parties to a disheartening spectacle of legislative impotency in a time of national peril. They cannot beat the bill and do not expect to. The sole object of their dilatory tactics and rafter shaking oratory is to make a record of fervid adherence to public sentiment in the South. That they share this sentiment and will do what they can to uphold it goes without saying. They don't have to fill page upon page of the Congressional Record with proof. Their constituents in the South will concede that and honor them for it. But the modern South, as vitally affected as any other section by the ebb and flow of national prosperity, will not grant the wisdom of delaying an attack on a common foe while going through the motions of fighting a lost cause.

It would be more seemly if our senators would say, "You have the votes to impose this affront on the people of the South and you are doing it for base political motives. We can delay you but we can't stop you. And so, in the patriotic interest of getting on with other things, we shall bow to the inevitable while serving notice that on more opportune occasion we shall return to this fight and seek to mitigate the evil which you are hell bent to commit."

The South does not dishonor a heroic surrender. If victory were possible and if a filibuster could be pressed without endangering the national well-being, we should be foremost in egging our senators on. But they cannot win. They are outnumbered, the parliamentary cards are stacked against them and they are merely wasting valuable time.

Baton Rouge, La., Times
November 20, 1937

SOUTH AND ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

We confess to considerable satisfaction at the denunciation which the southern senators have heaped upon Senator Wagner of New York and few of the northern leaders in whom the spirit of Thaddeus Stevens and General Butler still live.

It is certainly the irony of fate that the South, after passing through reconstruction, and Republican rule, for 50 years and through all these years fighting off this same anti-lynch law, shoud find itself facing its greatest threat under a so-called Democratic administration completely dominated by a Democratic president. Secretly this Democratic president has given aid and comfort to those who are trying to fasten this offensive law upon the South. Franklin Roosevelt dearly loves the negro minorities in the than the negro lynchings in the was being done about it. The did not propose to move against leaders in the North. Only Thurs-r leaders in Minneapolis was sho ter fashion by a rival labor mo tings of dues, but the whole thing
Chicago alone kills more in thi than the whole South lynches fo in two years.
nti-lynching bill, coming from mocratic congress, is just about th the Democratic South. We hop senators are able in debate t and hate back of the measur

Spartanburg, S. C., Herald
November 25, 1937

Lynching on the Way Out

The anti-lynching bill has excited once more a lot of discussion pro and con on that subject. Reliable information on the historic record is of timely interest, therefore, and the enterprising Charlotte Observer has dug up the following facts:

The most authentic and available data shows that 3,679 persons have been lynched in this country since 1882 and that of this number 700 were white and 2,979 were negroes.

No lynchings have ever occurred, according to these records, in the States of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont, and 10 other States have records that are almost clean. Delaware, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Nevada, Pennsylvania Oregon, Utah and Wisconsin.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings (72.2 per cent) have occurred in eight States. Mississippi tops the list with 485 recorded lynchings. In order, come Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241; Tennessee, 210.

Far more negroes than whites have been lynched in the South, but in the West and Mid-West the situation is reversed.

Negroes comprised only 12.4 per cent of the 257 individuals lynched in 17 States, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Montana Nebraska, Nevada New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. It is probable that many of the "white" victims in these States were Mexicans or Indians.

The six years, 1882-1887 inclusive, witnessed 752 lynchings, or 20.4 of the 55-year total. The 15-year period, 1922-1937 inclusive, brought only 304 such crimes, or 8.2 per cent of the total. The "high" year was 1883, with 158 lynchings; and 1933 was "low" with only eight. Nine lynchings were recorded in 1936, and seven through Sept. 30, 1937. All the victims in the last two years were negroes, and the 16 lynchings occurred in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The South Atlantic and South Central States account for 88.3 per cent, of all recorded lynchings.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
November 24, 1937

The Great Game Of Politics

By FRANK R. KENT

Caught In The Middle

WITH THE report of the Senate committee, the new proposal for crop control confusedly takes the place of the so-called anti-lynching bill, which for a solid week has held the attention of the Senate to the exclusion of all else.

KENT

However, the latter is only temporarily relegated to the rear, not by any means disposed of. Soon or late this session it will return for final action. There is slight doubt that in the end it will pass because behind it is the covert but none the less solid weight of the Administration. This, coupled with Republican support, is enough to enact the bill over the desperate opposition of the Southern Democrats. At least, so it is generally believed.

—o—

FROM THE political standpoint, this measure is probably the most pregnant of any which will be considered this session. Despite the humanitarian professions of its champions, everybody knows that the driving power of the fight for it is generated by the great Negro vote in the big debatable States north of the Mason and Dixon line and stretching from Connecticut to Michigan.

This is true of Republicans as it is of Democrats and it is time the truth were told about it. Everybody is opposed to lynching. No one defends it and no decent man, in politics or out, condones it. But this bill does not make lynching any more of a crime than it is now and will not diminish the number of lynchings.

What it does is give the Federal Government power to investigate the conduct of county officials in the prosecution of lynching and if deemed inadequate to impose prison penalties and fines not only upon individuals, but upon the local government unit.

Offensive To South

WHOLLY ASIDE from the question of lynching, it is easy to see how intensely offensive a proposal of this sort is to Southern Democrats, or, in fact, to Democrats of any section who still believe in the sovereignty of the States and oppose the imposition upon them of the Federal authority.

Clearly, if the Federal Government can go into the States to examine their conduct of criminal proceedings, it can go into them to examine their conduct of elections, which unquestionably would be the next step. Southern Democrats see in this proposal another force bill and the thing that stirs their indignation to white heat is that it should be a Democratic Administration, not a Republican one, to supply the votes by which the bill will go through—if it does.

—o—

ACTUALLY, Mr. Roosevelt and his political strategists are in an unhappy position about this proposal. Last year they very successfully played both ends against the middle. By a skillful and carefully planned campaign, aided by relief money and Federal patronage, the succeeded in taking away from the Republican party its basic asset—to wit, some two million Negro votes in a dozen big debatable States.

At the same time they held in line the solid South, where the Negro does not vote and which is solidly Democratic largely because of racial prejudice.

—o—

Caught In Middle

NOW, HOWEVER, the price has got to be paid. The anti-lynching bill must have Administration support to pass. Should it fail, the Republicans in the next campaign will be given exactly the argument they need to recapture the Negro vote.

They will charge—and justly—that the Administration took their votes and then "sold them out." The Negro newspapers all over the country which supported Mr. Roosevelt in 1936 look to him now to pass this bill. They unquestionably will blame him if it fails.

—o—

ON THE OTHER HAND, if the bill is forced through, it will widen and deepen the Democratic split. However furtively it is done, Southern Senators will know that the bill could not have been passed but for the Roosevelt-Farley organization. It will intensify feeling against the President, justify Southern opposition to his policies and greatly diminish his 1940 chances either of renominating himself or picking his successor. The situation in which the White House politicians find themselves in the inevitable result of being too slick. They are now caught in the middle, where instead of getting support from both sides they may alienate both.

Copyright for The Journal

Albany-Decatur, Ala. Daily
November 23, 1937

The Filibuster

The Southern senators have been doing a grand job of filibustering against the federal anti-lynching bill, although to date the star role was played by Alabama's own Dixie Graves.

Mrs. Graves stopped a turbulent senate session long enough to reveal that charm so well known to Alabamians and the senate, at first amazed; then paid her an unusual compliment by applauding as she returned to her seat.

As The Daily views the situation the only thing the Southern filibuster has lacked is a display of determination which would have convinced senate leaders that the filibuster will continue until the offensive bill is withdrawn.

As things stand now, the leaders seem content to let the Southerners talk as long as they wish, confident that the bill will be passed ultimately.

The farm measure had a preferred status on the senate calendar and for this session takes precedence over the anti-lynching bill. Therefore when the farm bill was ready for discussion it displaced automatically all anti-lynching debate.

No one, of course, knows how long it will take the senate to dispose of the farm measure, but when that legislation is enacted into law the senate will find itself renewing debate on the anti-lynching bill.

It is then that the real filibuster should be conducted.

There are other and important measures requiring the attention of congress but if leaders are so bull-headed they will not shelve the anti-lynching bill long enough to permit congress to dispose of the other parts of the president's legislative program then, let us be just as bull-headed.

Let's get the floor and serve notice on the self-seeking politicians that we intend to keep the floor as long as congress stays in session if necessary to prevent the passage of the nefarious anti-lynching measure.

It would not be the first time that the rights of minorities have been protected by such tactics.

Lynchings-1937
&
Legislation Relating to
&

5720

Kingsport, Tenn. Times
November 29, 1937

WHY NOT AN ANTI-GANG LAW?

It is true that the majority of the lynchings occur in the southern states. It is likewise true that the majority of the gang and racketeer atrocities occur in the northern states. There are far more gangster murders and kidnapings than there are lynchings, and the former are more despicable than the latter.

Since determined efforts are being made to force a federal anti-lynching law down the throat of congress, why not put through a federal anti-racketeer law at the same time?

In other words, if we are going to begin invading state's rights to enforce certain federal laws, then we should at least be consistent in the matter.

The proposed federal anti-lynching law would penalize the innocent for the acts of the guilty. It would fine the innocent taxpayers of a county because of the occurrence of a lynching in that county—an occurrence in which more than 99 per cent of these taxpayers would, of course, have no part, and which they would deeply deplore. The federal anti-lynching law would also persecute state and county officers of the law.

The legislation had its inception with Senator Wagner of New York. Senator Van Nuys of Indiana, and other northern and middlewestern senators. Obviously the act is purposed largely as an insult to the south. It is an act that is neither just nor fair, and it is legislation which is a far departure from constitution-embodied states' rights.

These northern senators tell us that if a negro who has criminally assaulted and murdered a white woman is executed by a mob the federal government should enter the state and take a hand in the matter. They tell us that under such circumstances the county in which the crime occurred should be punished by a seyere fine.

If a gang of foreign hoodlums takes an innocent man out and murders him in cold blood, however, that is another matter. Just where do they make the distinction? Why not place a heavy fine on any county in which a gang crime occurs, and persecute the officers of the law in that county?

For instance in Detroit last week a group of gangsters coolly walked into a restaurant and shot to death a man who had displeased them. Neither were the gangsters careful about other lives. With utter disregard of others in the restaurant they fired a fusilade of 20 shots. Four innocent people in the restaurant fell wounded—and one, at least, of them was desperately wounded. A short time before, this same mob of gangsters had murdered an innocent doorman with a bomb under the hood of an automobile in an effort to slay the man whom they had marked for assassination.

The same papers which told of the restaurant gang-shooting told of a man being killed by gangsters in Chicago. He was shot to death in the presence of his wife on a busy Chicago street in mid-day!

Why not legislate a federal law to cover this sort of thing? Why not impose a heavy fine on the county in which Detroit is located and on Cooke county, Illinois? Many gang atrocities have occurred in Indianapolis; would Senator Van Nuys of Indiana, who is a co-author of the anti-lynching bill, be willing to support a federal anti-gang law? We do not think so.

They charge that the southern states have not made sincere efforts to wipe out lynch law. Have the northern states made sincere efforts to abolish the racketerring curse? Of course not. The interlinking of dirty politics with racketeering and gang activities in many northern cities and northern counties is one of the jokes of the country.

We are inclined to the modest opinion that it would be well for the northern legislators to clean their own hearths before heaping insulting legislation upon their southern neighbors. We cannot help clinging to a belief in the rights and the sovereignty of the individual states, and the old rule of fair play

Gainesville, Ga., Eagle
November 25, 1937

LYNCHING THE LAW

WASHINGTON has just completed another illustration of politics versus the people, with the same inevitable result—the people lost. A fool filibuster was resorted to to keep the anti-lynching bill from coming to a vote and was halted only after agreement to postpone action in favor of crop control legislation.

For a Southern newspaper to favor an anti-lynching bill may be heresy, especially with the Southern Congressmen tearing their political shirts in opposition. The facts, however, permit of no other position, unless the Southern newspaper wishes to join the cohorts of the politicos and fight the people.

The question of the Southern officers—sheriffs and deputies, chiefs and policemen—being able to cope with the situation is a farce. When a heinous crime is committed, these officials, although inwardly honest and anxious to keep their oath of office inviolate, are helpless to stem the influence and pressure brought to bear against them. After all, sheriffs and police must eat, sleep and wear clothes, and the life of a man more than likely doomed to be demanded by law, seems a small stake against such odds.

The South has long been stigmatized in other sections because of its numerous lynchings. The only state where any marked headway has been made against the mob rule has been in Virginia, where the law has some teeth in it. It follows that the only way any progress will be made in the remaining states is by a similar statute, but it goes without saying that such will not be passed. It lies in the lap of Congress, but Congress' lap is too eager to be filled with pork to consider human lives.

It is a sorry commentary on this so-called Twentieth Century civilization, this do-nothingness in Washington. For it proves that the law can be lynched by legislators as well as an individual by mobsters.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., EXPRESS
NOV. 16, 1937 D2

PUBLIC SENTIMENT FOR ANTI-LYNCHING LEGISLATION

Almost immediately after a Mississippi mob had seized two Negroes—during their trial at Tupelo for killing a white man—and burned them to death with gasoline blow-torches, thereby outraging justice and humanity, the House at Washington passed the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill by a large majority (277 to 119). Many Southern Democrats voted for the measure, which was almost identical with the Dyer Bill—introduced in 1918, but never duly considered.

Had any Southerner supported the Missouri Representative's proposal at that time, probably he would have committed political suicide. The vote in the House last April indicated the remarkable change in sentiment toward lynch-murder which has taken place within the past few years. At last the civic conscience is waking up and demanding that the infamy be eradicated.

On the other hand, in this regard "State rights" sentiment appears to be dying out. Consequently, a Federal law against lynching now is inevitable. Though the Senate succeeded in sidetracking the highly controversial measure last summer, that was merely a parliamentary coup. The bill is not dead; it has preferred standing on the calendar and probably will come before the special session just convened. In any event it will be considered early next year.

His survey of senatorial sentiment has convinced Bertram Benedict, political analyst for Editorial Research Reports, that the bill will pass. That conclusion may derive strong support from the American Institute of Public Opinion poll. To the question, "Should Congress pass a law which would make lynching a Federal crime?" 72 per cent of the citizens questioned answered, "Yes".

Perhaps the most surprising response came from the South, where almost all the lynchings occur and where State rights sentiment is traditionally strong: Among the Southerners questioned—and they were chosen scientifically to represent a cross-section of the entire electorate—57 per cent voted "Yes".

Let those Southern Senators who fear to support legislation against mob crimes, lest their constituents retire them at the next election, consider that showing. Even in the "deep South," it appears, only four citizens in every 10 questioned oppose Federal action against lynching. The other six—an impressive majority—would like to see G-men put immediately on the mob's trail.

Dr. George Gallup, the Institute's director, concludes that the educational work which newspapers, colleges, churches and special organizations have been doing these many years past is becoming effective. A considerable share of the credit for the change in public sentiment belongs to the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has gathered convincing data showing the futility of expecting State and local authorities to deal effectively with lynch-murder.

In that connection consider the mes-

...age from Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Texas), warning Governor White of Mississippi that should his State fail to punish the savage Duck Hill murderers, Southern Congressmen would be handicapped in their efforts to keep lynching out of Federal jurisdiction. Still, there is no record of any serious official effort to arrest the persons responsible for that atrocity.

Recognizing the futility of expecting State action, San Antonio Express supported the Dyer Bill when it was introduced. Then Texas was frequently a leader in the annual records compiled by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute. For example, in 1922 this State reported 18 lynchings.

If conditions have improved, education plus official alertness, courage and competency deserve the credit. The Federal law now proposed would strengthen those and related forces making for common justice and civic decency.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal
November 30, 1937

House Condemns Anti-Lynch Bill

A resolution charging that strikes, rioting and similar disorders in the industrial centers of the north and east have caused more loss of life "than all the lynchings in the south," was adopted unanimously Monday by the State House of Representatives and sent to the Senate.

Representatives Harrell of Brooks, Cochran of Thomas, Coleman of Lowndes and Dollar of Grady, in offering the resolution, asked that Goergia's United States senators and congressmen be "commended" for "their valiant opposition" to the Wagner anti-lynch bill in Congress.

It charged the anti-lynch bill "is manifestly unjust, unfair and would work an oppressive burden upon the entire south."

The resolution urges that the General Assembly suggest to the Georgia congressional delegation that "should this bill be enacted into law the losses of life of strikers and peace officers be compensated in the same manner as in cases of lynchings and that the county authorities be charged with liability and subject to the same penalties."

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times
November 26, 1937

LYNCHINGS DECREASE

Senator Dixie Bibb Graves, of Alabama, opposed the anti-lynching legislation and he made some rather strong arguments in favor of her contention. She insisted that public opinion and law enforcement are gradually decreasing the number of acts of mob violence and there is reason for her belief that the next few years will probably see ever further reduction in them.

In 1926 there were 30 lynchings. In 1936 there were 13. Of course, that was thirteen too many, but the reduction shows the trend of the times.

The number of lynchings has fluctuated from year to year but there has been a slow but certain reduction in them.

For Congress to enact the proposed bill would doubtless cause such a wave of resentment in the South, where most of the lynchings occur, to bring about a change in public sentiment which might result in a feeling that, since Congress has taken over the job of preventing lynchings, the individual communities may as well let things ride.

There is grave injustice to the South in the proposed measure and it is to be hoped that Congress will refuse to enact it.

Huntington, Tenn., Republican
November 26, 1937

The Anti-lynching bill now before Congress should be defeated. It is ...icious and will supplant state sov...reignty in the administration of certain laws. It is a rare case that the party lynched does not deserve what the culprit deserved without the ex...pense of a trial. In Texas it was the cure for horse stealing, in California it functioned for justice when the judges became corrupt or touched and now it is hardly ever employed except in an unmentionable crime. The officers in the South now protect their prisoners in most insances and when they cannot the courts go after the lynchers.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
November 27, 1937

BID FOR NEGRO VOTE

From the Early County News.

Probably as a bid for votes among the thickly populated Negro sections of the North and East, advocates of the anti-lynching bill brought that measure up in the senate last week. This caused a furore among Southern congressmen, several of whom filibustered against the bill throughout the week. Although it is evident it will pass when brought to a vote, it is generally conceded that the bill is unconstitutional.

Savannah, Ga., News
November 26, 1937

Lynchings Gradually Decrease

In a Senate speech opposing the anti-lynching bill, U. S. Senator Dixie Graves of Alabama remarked that state law enforcement and public opinion combined had reduced acts of mob violence by two-thirds in the last ten years and in another five years would end them altogether. It is to be earnestly hoped that her prediction may be fulfilled, but at the present rate of progress an extension of time for final accomplishment may be necessary. Her view is at least a hopeful one.

As to the records, they show that in 1926 there were thirty lynchings in the whole country, while last year there were thirteen. That, of course, was thirteen too many. But the chance for further progress is evident from the fact that in 1932 there were eight lynchings. These figures are to be compared with a total of 231 for 1892, the high point in the nation's history. The number has fluctuated from year to year, but on the whole progress has been steady. It is the really constructive aspect of a problem that is greatly confused by the political cross-currents in which the question has been caught in Washington.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5721

THE SOUTH AGAIN THE VICTIM OF SECTIONAL GREED, JEALOUSY

More than 70 years ago the south, after four years of heroic struggle, suffered defeat on the field of battle. Chiefly because the north wished to abolish slavery, although the slaves in the south had for the most part come through the hands of northern traders who made vast profits on their commerce in human flesh, the south was forced to her knees.

For half a century afterwards the story of the south was the story of a region struggling out of the damning aftermaths of war.

Chattel slavery of the negro was abolished. But in its place was substituted an economic slavery that, in its blighting effect is worse. In the new slavery, there is no limitation by race. Whites and negroes alike are its victims.

High tariff policies, year by year, bled the southern cotton producer, and the southern consumer, for the benefits of the industrialized regions of the north and east.

Differentials in freight costs have imposed an unfair financial handicap on every southern industry which sought to send its product to market in competition with the products of other regions.

By scores of methods, the south has been held in economic inferiority to the rest of the nation.

Now there is evident a very definite program which, unless it is promptly halted, can result only in still further impoverishment of this section.

* * *

Under the terms of the proposed farm bill which is to be submitted to the senate, the southern cotton producer would be forbidden to raise more than 10,000,000 bales of cotton a year. This is barely enough to meet the requirements of the domestic market and ignores, entirely, the scant remnants that remain of the export cotton market this country once enjoyed.

Worse, is the provision that the southern farmer, forbidden to raise cotton on many of his acres, is to be forbidden to use those acres for raising cattle, hogs or for growing corn.

Still another affront, tentatively approved by the national house of representatives, is the proposal to withhold federal benefit payments from southern farmers who turn to dairying to replace their cotton.

Thus the southern farmer would be legally estopped from all the cash crops open to him on a diversified farming system. Cattle, hogs, corn, dairy herds and all the feeds that can be grown for them, would not be lawful products for the southerner to raise in place of the cotton he is forbidden to grow.

* * *

A measure known as the anti-lynching bill is being forced through congress. The name of the bill is a misnomer. It is actually not so much an effort to halt the crime of lynching, but an effort to take from the states one of their most vital rights, their police power.

Every decent man or woman in the south would gladly welcome anything which would stamp out lynch law. The steady improvement in the lynch record of the south is irrefutable proof of this. According to the Negro Year Book, published at Tuskegee Institute, the average annual total of lynchings had shrunk to 13.6 for the decade ending with 1936, from 103.5 for the decade ending in 1896. This is a greater improvement than that for lynching of white men in the west and other parts of the country.

But this misnamed "anti-lynching" bill does not seek, along intelligent, co-operative lines, to help the south stamp out this most horrible crime. It seeks, rather, to invoke the federal powers to punish local enforcement officers and the entire population, innocent and guilty alike, where a lynching occurs. It even makes it financially alluring for the family survivors of the victim for the lynching to occur.

* * *

The Black-Connery wages and hour bill has been forced out of the house committee and to the floor for action by a petition signed by 218 members, including a number of southerners. While this measure, as now amended, is not as obnoxious as in its original form, it still constitutes a serious threat to industry, especially to industry in the south.

It was conceived with the chief purpose of hobbling southern industry. It would place industry at the mercy of a federal bureaucracy and would give a group of government appointees in Washington the power of life or death over every private manufacturing enterprise in the nation.

With these new specific attacks on the south, there remains still, as the dominating motive of the economic picture, the dark shadow of high tariff, which forces the southern farmer to buy all his supplies in a high, tariff-protected market, while his products, chiefly his cotton, must be sold in open, free trade world markets, in competition with products produced in foreign lands by cheap, coolie labor. Further, the high tariff acts as an effective bar to foreign purchases of American cotton by keeping the goods other nations would sell to this country, away from our ports. It thus holds a protective umbrella over the rapidly increasing foreign production of cotton.

Thus, once again, the south is caught in a vise between the selfish interests of the industrialized east and the jealousies of the agricultural midwest.

* * *

Although the south is the first sufferer, the evil effects from these policies cannot fail to bring distress to the entire nation.

By thus shackling the south, on the farm and in the factory, economically, politically and socially, unemployment will be increased and the average per capita income in this section will be further reduced. Taking acres out of production means taking work away from thousands of agriculturalists. Enactment of the wages and hours bill, virtually a tariff wall between states, means imperiling the jobs of thousands of industrial employes.

The greatest danger to the south lies in its own indifference to the situation. The south holds its own salvation in its hands. It can overcome these handicaps and lift the economic shackles if it will stand united for its own interests and its own rights.

A united south can, in time, teach the whole nation that the problems of this section are peculiar to itself and that the economic measuring rods of other portions of the country cannot, in justice, be applied here.

There must be, however, a united front, not only among the people, but by their representatives in the national congress. The delegations from the different southern states must stand as a unit, forming a bloc determined to defeat policies inimitable to the welfare of this section.

* * *

The new shackles for the south are being forged by a political coalition which bears the name of a party to which, for nearly three-quarters of a century, the south has been unswervingly loyal.

The answer is that the party which now holds the greatest majority in congress of all time, is not the Democratic party whose principles have received the unfaltering support of the south. It is a coalition of political hybrids, masquerading under the name of Democrat and experimenting with strange theories of government that spawn in mentalities totally foreign to southern comprehension.

From the industrial east and from the socialistic west have come the practitioners of strange theories to take the ancient party of the south and distort it to their own weird concept.

From time immemorial, the basic political beliefs of the south have been white supremacy, state's rights and low tariffs. Now the south sees, in shocked surprise, the anti-lynching bill forced upon it, to the utter disregard of rudimentary states rights. It sees the wages and hours bill nearing enactment, with its threat of regimented rule for labor and bureaucratic doom for private industry. It sees its farmers facing immolation, as sacrifices to the agricultural interests of other sections and to the greed of industrialists, and it sees, after years of so-called Democratic government, the strangling high tariffs of the Smoot-Hawley bill still in force.

Worst of all, it sees some of its own duly elected representatives, southern members of congress, not only affiliating with its enemies but aiding, abetting and joining in the enactment of laws which rivet tighter the gyves of economic slavery upon it.

...time has come for the south to realize fully the economic and political strangulation with which it is threatened.

Most important of all, our representatives in congress must awaken to the fact that, under the guise of high-sounding theories, policies are being advanced which, unless blocked, will again make the south the victim of sectional greed and jealousy.

Asheville N. C., Citizen
November 19, 1937

A WELL-INTENTIONED MISTAKE

With most Southerners and with many Northerners resident in the South we are bound to feel that the well-meant federal anti-lynching bill is a mistake. The Senate filibuster as far as we are concerned looks from the sidelines like a rather rough and tumble fight for a worthwhile purpose. No bill of this nature should be acted upon hastily while Congress is just waiting around for its principal legislative program to be shaped up. It should receive the consideration due the major importance of the precedent such a law would set.

This newspaper has always been against lynchings in any form and for any crime. Its record in this respect has ever been clear, and the record of Asheville and Western North Carolina when it comes to lynchings may be pointed out with pride by all the inhabitants of our mountain country. We don't approve of lynching, we don't condone lynching, and if we can help it we are not going to have any lynching. So that is that.

But we also most emphatically are of the opinion that law enforcement is constitutionally and as a matter of practical execution a concern of local government. If local governments have come to the point that they either can't or won't enforce law and order, they had better be abolished in all respects and not in just one particular. The federal government at Washington could not possibly undertake to police the vast expanses of the United States. It quite rightly is horrified by individual acts of lawlessness in any part of its borders. But why, on that account, should it pick gang murders in New York or Chicago, hold-ups in the deserts of the Southwest, or lynchings in the South as its own particular field? One is just as much an act of local lawlessness as the other.

Police power is not within the sphere of the Washington government. If it undertakes such duty not its own it will inevitably weaken the responsibility of local communities in this as it has in other respects. Cities and counties and states will be tempted to stand by and let George do it. Under a system of double accountability such crimes as lynching are far more apt to increase than to diminish.

The fight against lynching must be made along economic and educational lines. Only so can it be combated at the source—not by passing a federal lynch-law that would be a blow to Southern pride, and is bound for that reason alone to add oil to the flames of sectional hard feeling.

Eufaula, Ala. Tribune
November 22, 1937

Would It Be Wise?"

Making her first speech on the senate floor, Senator Graves of Alabama joined other southern members in an attack on the anti-lynching bill. Declaring that passage of the bill would "strike down the sovereignty of a state," she said, "The states are stamping out this disease. Would it be wise to change to another remedy?"

Rocky Mount N. C. Telegram
December 29, 1937

LYNCHING TOLL THE SAME

Whether the projected anti-lynching law that has attracted so much attention at Washington had anything to do with it or not remains a matter of doubtful certainty, but 1937 saw the same number of persons lynched in the United States as did 1936, according to the Tuskegee Institute's department of records and research.

Five states, all southern, furnished the settings for the lynchings of the eight persons, who were all Negroes. Florida led the list with three, the record shows, Mississippi was next with two, and Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia had one each. The offenses charged against the victims were listed as rape 1, crime against nature and robbery 1, murder 4, and wounding of officer 2.

The part of the report that is cheering and that will give southern congressmen all the more reason for wanting to continue their filibuster against the anti-lynching bill is that in 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, with five of these cases occurring in northern states and 51 in the south.

It cannot be said that the South condones lynching and the records substantiate that. It can be said, however, that the South is interested in eliminating this crime from the records and concrete evidence of efforts to achieve just that may be noted in the comparison of lynchings for the past four years. In 1934 the number was 15; in 1935 it was placed at 20; then, it drops to eight for the past two years. Our own belief is that it will be less than that in 1938, with or without the passage of the anti-lynching measure.

Columbia, Tenn., Daily Herald
December 28, 1937

LYNCHING

While Northerners in a bid for the negro vote are trying to foist on the South a federal anti-lynching law, singling out this crime above all others merely as a political measure, the South is continuing to stamp out lynching by its own local efforts.

The record for 1937 compares favorable with that of the previous year. In each year, only eight persons were lynched. And this year, according to the records up to and including Christmas, no less than 77 persons were saved from mobs by law enforcement officers, with 73 of these being negroes. Tennessee's record was marred by only one lynching.

How does that record compare with the record of the North in labor violence. We have not the available figures on the subject, but until figures are cited to prove it not so, we will venture the assertion that more than twice as many persons lost their lives in the North because of the laxity of law enforcement in labor disputes (because of the local political strength of labor unions) than lost their lives in the South because of lack of law enforcement against lynch-bent mobs.

Is not the North seeing the mote in the eye of the South and failing to see the beam in its own eye?

The Herald has an unalterable record for law enforcement, and against lynching, and has in season and out opposed mob rule. Consistently, we oppose mob rule in the North, and in labor disputes, as much as we do in the South, and in high crimes.

The point is, that the South is bettering its record for law and order, the North is allowing its record to become worse. Meanwhile politicians are making capital of what was once a major problem in the South and is now being solved locally, as it should be.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5722

HOUSE AND SENATE CONFEREES PLAN TO REWRITE ACT

Cotton, Corn and Wheat Provisions in Measure Require Major Changes; Housing Program Draws Attack by Republicans.

ANTI-LYNCH BILL SET FOR TOMORROW

Agriculture Legislation Expected To Be Made Ready at Conferences Starting December 28.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(AP) Administration hope of getting a farm bill from the special session of congress was snuffed out today by a decision that the joint conference committee would wait until after Christmas to tackle the job of adjusting differences between house and senate bills.

Committee members agreed, however, to work as speedily as possible after the holiday in order to lay a rewritten farm measure before both houses early in the regular session convening January 3.

Senator Pope, Democrat, Idaho, one of the senate conferees and an author of the senate bill, said experts would begin making an analysis of the two bills at once. The conferees probably will get together about December 28, he added.

Agree on Rice and Tobacco.

"There will be no differences between the conferees on the rice and tobacco sections because these are identical in both bills," Pope said.

"We will have some ironing out to do in the cotton provisions, but I don't think anything will arise there that will break down the conference.

"The corn and wheat sections have some pretty vital differences, but I am hopeful that we will be able to work out a satisfactory compromise."

Chairman Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, of the senate agriculture committee, said he was "disappointed" with two provisions of the bill passed by the senate last night—one preventing diversion to dairy use of lands withdrawn from production and another making only $500,000,000 available for farm benefits.

Dairying Provisions Same.

The house bill also contains the dairying provision, precluding any possibility of change by the conference committee. Smith said, however, that congress might increase the funds for the act.

The house took up today the administration's bill designed to encourage the investment of private capital in housing. Debate brought Republican attacks on the measure, but rule limited speech-making. A senate banking subcommittee was studying a similar proposal with a view to getting it before the senate early next week.

Anti-lynching legislation now is before the senate and must be taken up when it reconvenes Monday. Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, and author of the anti-lynching measure, said it might be possible to bring the housing measure up for immediate consideration if proponents of the anti-lynching bill were assured that it would not be permanently sidetracked.

Senator Barkley, the majority leader, said that if the housing bill could be brought before the senate on Monday, final action might be possible by December 22, when the special session is supposed to end.

TODAY'S POLITICS

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

The country today is being dominated by politicians, from the city of Macon to the United States government. It has gotten to the place that unless you have the support of the politicians, an individual's efforts are futile.

As Mr. Chas. Gibson writes in his letter in this paper on Dec. 6, the Democratic party as the South has known it has been destroyed, and it is very true. As he said, it has been replaced with a coalition of aliens, Negroes and etc. The Roosevelt administration has been catering to the Negroes as it can plainly be seen. First of all the Negroes have an organization by the name of American Association for the Advancement of Colored People up North which is a huge thing. With so many Negroes up North this organization has a tremendous influence over elections, I'm sorry to say. If you recall the famous "Scottsboro" case in Alabama, you will remember that a lawyer from New York defended them and perhaps he was sent there by this same organization and paid by their funds.

Perhaps the reason Wagner introduced the anti-lynching bill was to increase his standing among the Negroes in the state of New York. I want to commend our Southern representatives for fighting this foolish thing and do hope they will continue the good work in reference to this bill. As I read, if Wagner would look after all the gangsters, bandits and murderers that his state possesses, he would have his hands full without worrying about conditions here in the South. The more this question is commented on the more race hatred and prejudice it produces. The people of the South are and have been friends of the Negro, as long as he understands the conditions that prevail in the South.

Macon. J. O. TOWNS.

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution
December 5, 1937

THE SOUTH AGAIN THE VICTIM OF SECTIONAL GREED, JEALOUSY

More than 70 years ago the south, after four years of heroic struggle, suffered defeat on the field of battle. Chiefly because the north wished to abolish slavery, although the slaves in the south had for the most part come through the hands of northern traders who made vast profits on their commerce in human flesh, the south was forced to her knees.

For half a century afterwards the story of the south was the story of a region struggling out of the damning aftermaths of war.

Chattel slavery of the negro was abolished. But in its place was substituted an economic slavery that, in its blighting effect, is worse. In the new slavery, there is no limitation by race. Whites and negroes alike are its victims.

High tariff policies, year by year, bled the southern cotton producer, and the southern consumer, for the benefits of the industrialized regions of the north and east.

Differentials in freight costs have imposed an unfair financial handicap on every southern industry which sought to send its product to market in competition with the products of other regions.

By scores of methods, the south has been held in economic inferiority to the rest of the nation.

Now there is evident a very definite program which, unless it is promptly halted, can result only in still further impoverishment of this section.

* * *

Under the terms of the proposed farm bill which is to be submitted to the senate, the southern cotton producer would be forbidden to raise more than 10,000,000 bales of cotton a year. This is barely enough to meet the requirements of the domestic market and ignores, entirely, the scant remnants that remain of the export cotton market this country once enjoyed.

Worse, is the provision that the southern farmer, forbidden to raise cotton on many of his acres, is to be forbidden to use those acres for raising cattle, hogs or for growing corn.

Still another affront, tentatively approved by the national house of representatives, is the proposal to withhold federal benefit payments from southern farmers who turn to dairying to replace their cotton.

Thus the southern farmer would be legally estopped from all the cash crops open to him on a diversified farming system. Cattle, hogs, corn, dairy herds and all the feeds that can be grown for them, would not be lawful products for the southerner to raise in place of the cotton he is forbidden to grow.

* * *

A measure known as the anti-lynching bill is being forced through congress. The name of the bill is a misnomer. It is actually not so much an effort to halt the crime of lynching, but an effort to take from the states one of their most vital rights, their police power.

Every decent man or woman in the south would gladly welcome anything which would stamp out lynch law. The steady improvement in the lynch record of the south is irrefutable proof of this. According to the Negro Year Book, published at Tuskegee Institute, the average annual total of lynchings had shrunk to 13.6 for the decade ending with 1936, from 103.5 for the decade ending in 1896. This is a greater improvement than that for lynching of white men in the west and other parts of the country.

But this misnamed "anti-lynching" bill does not seek, along intelligent, co-operative lines, to help the south stamp out this most horrible crime. It seeks, rather, to invoke the federal powers to punish local enforcement officers and the entire population, innocent and guilty alike, where a lynching occurs. It even makes it financially alluring for the family survivors of the victim for the lynching to occur.

* * *

The Black-Connery wages and hour bill has been forced out of the house committee and to the floor for action by a petition signed by 218 members, including a number of southerners. While this measure, as now amended, is not as obnoxious as in its original form, it still constitutes a serious threat to industry, especially to industry in the south.

It was conceived with the chief purpose of robbing southern industry. It would place industry at the mercy of a federal bureaucracy and would give a group of government appointees in Washington the power of life or death over every private manufacturing enterprise in the nation.

With these new specific attacks on the south, there remains still, as the dominating motive of the economic picture, the dark shadow of high tariff, which forces the southern farmer to buy all his supplies in a high, tariff-protected market, while his products, chiefly his cotton, must be sold in open, free trade world markets, in competition with products produced in foreign lands by cheap, coolie labor. Further, the high tariff acts as an effective bar to foreign purchases of American cotton by keeping the goods other nations would sell to this country, away from our ports. It thus holds a protective umbrella over the rapidly increasing foreign production of cotton.

Thus, once again, the south is caught in a vise between the selfish interests of the industrialized east and the jealousies of the agricultural midwest.

* * *

Although the south is the first sufferer, the evil effects from these policies cannot fail to bring distress to the entire nation.

By thus shackling the south, on the farm and in the factory, economically, politically and socially, unemployment will be increased and the average per capita income in this section will be further reduced. Taking acres out of production means taking work away from thousands of agriculturalists. Enactment of the wages and hours bill, virtually a tariff wall between states, means imperiling the jobs of thousands of industrial employes.

The greatest danger to the south lies in its own indifference to the situation. The south holds its own salvation in its hands. It can overcome these handicaps and lift the economic shackles if it will stand united for its own interests and its own rights.

A united south can, in time, teach the whole nation that the problems of this section are peculiar to itself and that the economic measuring rods of other portions of the country cannot, in justice, be applied here.

There must be, however, a united front, not only among the people, but by their representatives in the national congress. The delegations from the different southern states must stand as a unit, forming a bloc determined to defeat policies inimitable to the welfare of this section.

* * *

The new shackles for the south are being forged by a political coalition which bears the name of a party to which, for nearly three-quarters of a century, the south has been unswervingly loyal.

The answer is that the party which now holds the greatest majority in congress of all time, is not the Democratic party whose principles have received the unfaltering support of the south. It is a coalition of political hybrids, masquerading under the name of Democrat, and experimenting with strange theories of government that spawn in mentalities totally foreign to southern comprehension.

From the industrial east and from the socialistic west have come the practitioners of strange theories to take the ancient party of the south and distort it to their own weird concept.

From time immemorial, the basic political beliefs of the south have been white supremacy, state's rights and low tariffs. Now the south sees, in shocked surprise, the anti-lynching bill forced upon it, to the utter disregard of rudimentary states rights. It sees the wages and hours bill nearing enactment, with its threat of regimented rule for labor and bureaucratic doom for private industry. It sees its farmers facing immolation, as sacrifices to the agricultural interests of other sections and to the greed of industrialists, and it sees, after years of so-called Democratic government, the strangling high tariffs of the Smoot-Hawley bill still in force.

Worst of all, it sees some of its own duly elected representatives, southern members of congress, not only affiliating with its enemies, but aiding, abetting and joining in the enactment of laws which rivet tighter the gyves of economic slavery upon it.

The time has come for the south to realize fully the economic and political strangulation with which it is threatened.

Most important of all, our representatives in congress must awaken to the fact that, under the guise of high-sounding theories, policies are being advanced which, unless blocked, will again make the south the victim of sectional greed and jealousy.

BRYAN, TEX., EAGLE
DEC. 29, 1937 17

Lynchings on Decrease

In view of the recent interest taken in the discussion in Congress of the proposed anti-lynching legislation, the annual report of the Tuskegee Institute on lynchings for the current year should attract more than usual attention.

This report shows that eight lynchings were recorded during the year, all the victims being negroes. It further states that three of the lynched were taken from jails, while the other five were in the custody of officers but were not in jail at the time of their seizure by the mob.

The number of persons lynched was the same as that for the previous year and considerably less than for a number of years previous to 1936, showing that more and more the people are inclined to give the law a chance at punishment and that the belief that those accused of crime should have a fair trial is steadily growing.

The most notable phase of the report, perhaps, is that dealing with the prevention of lynchings. A total of 56 cases were cited, five in the North and 51 in the South. In each of these cases law enforcement officers stood fast against mobs and prevented the capture of their charges by groups of inflamed men and women. As a result a total of 77 men, women and children were protected from mob rule.

While America is more fertile in crime than any other great nation and many cases of serious crime go unsolved and unpunished, it is a fact that more and more the violator of the law in America is finding the path of the transgressor hard.

In this state in the past year there have been a number of notable cases of criminals being brought to justice, in proceedings marked by law and order, despite the fact that local populaces were highly incensed and inflamed. The more frequently cases of this type are recorded the less danger there is of mob rule.

In fact, study of lynchings makes it apparent that one or two cool heads are all that is required to head off a lynching. Mobs that take the law into their hands are, as a rule, groups of men and women easily swayed by passion and prejudice, but at the same time susceptible to the rule of reason and a display of real courage. For this reason the officer who takes a bold stand against mobs is usually successful in his effort to protect his prisoners and the fact that so many evidenced this courage in the past year should tend to give the people generally more confidence in the rule of law and order and in the integrity of the average law enforcement official.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5723

Anniston, Ala. Star
December 4, 1937

A Political Measure

Frank R. Kent, frequent critic of the New Deal, in a recent article names the anti-lynching bill exactly what it is—a political measure intended to keep in line Negro voting blocs in Eastern states, The Decatur Daily avers.

Mr. Kent wrote: "From the political standpoint this measure is probably the most pregnant of any which will be considered this session. Despite the humanitarian professions of its champions, everybody knows that the driving power of the fight for it is generated by the great Negro vote in the big debatable states north of the Mason and Dixon line and stretching from Connecticut to Michigan."

"In spite of the fact that many humanitarian organizations are declared to be lending their support to the measure, the bill, itself, possesses no humanitarian principles," says the Decatur editor. "It is political from beginning to end.

"It does not prohibit lynching and does not provide for punitive measures against communities of the East which suffer from periodical gang killings and labor wars.

"The bill is a sharpened knife aimed directly at the heart of state's rights. It is intended to insult the South in order that political band wagon riders like Senator Guffey and Senator Wagner may continue to keep their snouts in the public trough by means of the support the Eastern Negroes can give them at the polls.

"The Southern Senators have done very well with their filibuster so far, but when the farm control measure is out of the way, they should have courage enough to resume their filibuster and keep it going until the senate leadership agrees that the South will be spared this slap in the face.

"The farm bill had the right-of-way, but other measures are behind the lynching bill. There may be a lot of merit in some of the proposals, but let them wait, if necessary, and let's beat this lynching measure by whatever means required."

Columbus, Miss., Commerc'l Disp.
December 3, 1937

MOB WAR NOT SECTIONAL

The Albany, Ga., Herald makes this comment on the proposed anti-lynching bill now on the calendar of the Senate for passage:

Many of those who demand that Congress enact anti-lynching legislation easily assume that it is the South alone that needs to be disciplined.

Mob law is not to be excused anywhere or under any circumstances. It is wholly bad. It represents an insidious attack on constituted authority, on organized government.

But when has mob law in the South been any worse than mob law in the North? What Southern mob has raped justice more viciously than have organized gangsters in the North and West?

There have been wholesale killings time and again. These have been heralded as "gang against gang," but it was lynch law—men condemned without due process of law, and executed by firing squads detailed by gangdom big-shots. In a Detroit restaurant on Thanksgiving Day a former Purple Gangster was shot to death by executioners who also wounded four other persons, as more than twenty shots were fired. The victims in various similar enterprises in New York, Chicago and other gang-infested cities have varied in number from one to a half a dozen or more.

The Herald is eminently correct, but it fails to make the point that the vicious anti-lynching measure specifically exempts gangsters and all other crime from its provisions.

After all is said and done, the measure isn't a thing but a sop to the northern negro vote.

If the bill should by any chance pass, it would do more to disturb the peaceful relations that exist between the two races than anything that has happened in 50 years.

ANTI-LYNCHING GROUP MEETS IN MISSISSIPPI

More Conferences Will Be Held Next Year

12-5-37

Special to The Commercial Appeal

DURANT, Miss., Dec. 4. — Arrangements for further conferences in the state next year to carry on campaign against lynching were made here yesterday, as the second such conference came to a close. Mrs. Dan Comfort, leader for this district, will arrange the meetings.

The two-day meeting presented addresses and discussions of an educational program, the cause of lynching, economic problems underlying mob action and co-operation should a Federal anti-lynching law be passed. Speakers were Mrs. Jeeie Danil Ames of Atlanta, executive director of the Southern Conference for Prevention of Lynching; the Rev. Charles G. Hamilton, rector of the Aberdeen Episcopal Church; the Rev. J. L. Sendlin, pastor of the Clarksdale Christian Church; Miss Constance Rumbough of Rosedale, associate director of the Delta Co-operative Association, and the Rt. Rev. Theodore Dubose Bratton of Jackson.

Dr. E. S. Lewis, pastor of the Durant Methodist Church, where the conference was held, welcomed the conferees.

Californians Petition For Anti-Lynching Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Vice President John N. Garner laid before the Senate last Monday a resolution adopted by the Public Affairs Association of the Santa Monica Back Bay District, California, favoring the prompt enactment of the Wagner-Van Nuys-Gavagan anti-lynching bill.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, Democrat, of New York, presented a petition from the Harlem Industrial Workers, New York City, to the same effect.

Ga. Legislature Scores Federal Anti-Lynch Law

ATLANTA, Ga.—Charging that the Anti-lynching bill now before Congress is "manifestly unjust, unfair and would place an oppressive burden upon the entire south," the Georgia House of Representatives adopted a resolution against the bill and sent it to the Georgia Congressional delegation.

The resolution said that strikes, rioting and similar disorder in the industrial centers of the north and east have caused more loss of life" than all the lynchings in the south." It was suggested to the Congressional delegation that "should this bill be enacted into law the losses of life of strikers and peaces be compensated in the same manner as in cases of lynching and that the county authorities be charged with liability and subject to the same penalties."

Nashville Daily Claims Anti-Lynching Bill Should Have Been Passed Years Ago

NEW YORK, Dec. 10—Among the many clippings received here by the N. A. A. C. P. urging passage of federal anti-lynching law is one from the Nashville, Tenn., Tennessean for December 7 which declares: "In this instance (signing the wages and hours bill) as in the case of the anti-lynching bill, southern senators and congressmen have not displayed that brand of enlightened statesmanship the nation—including the south—has the right to ask of them.

"The wage-hour bill should have been voted on at the regular session. Anti-lynching legislation should have been voted years ago. For a southerner to say less after all these years of inveighing against the evils these measures are designed to correct would mark him a whited sepulchre before his own conscience."

...UCKY ...Y MOST ...IBERAL ...N SOUTH

Courier

Louisville Editor Says His Town Backs Anti-Lynching Bill, Enfranchisement and Equality of Opportunity.

12-7-37

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 16 — (ANP)— Louisville Negroes enjoy more civil rights than do those of any other Southern city, declared Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Courier-Journal and Louisville Times, Tuesday night at the fourth annual state interracial conference.

Although Mr. Ethridge is a native of Mississippi, he has become nationally known as one of the most liberal white editors in America. He told his audience Tuesday night that he favored passage of the anti-lynching bill, enfranchisement and equality of opportunity.

"The price of keeping Negroes in poverty is to keep whites in poverty, and to continue the Ku Klux Klan, Black Shirts and Tobacco Road," he said. Mr. Ethridge also cited as undemocratic and unjustifiable arguments made against pending wage and hour legislation purely because Southern Negroes would come under its provisions.

Speaking of lynching, he asserted, "So long as there are extra-legal punishments in the South, no man, white or black, is assured of protection under the law. The anti-lynching bill is bound to be enacted.

"As a civilized country, America, out of self respect, must see that there are no more lynchings. If it takes a federal marshal or a deputy to prevent lynching, I as a Mississippian advocate the use of these federal officials."

Although the race is making vast strides economically and in the professions and skilled trades, "inexcusable inequalities of opportunity exist in numerous instances," Mr. Ethridge said, pointing out that in Southern states Negro children receive only 1/7th of the amount spent for white education and that a similar disparity exists in health facilities, sanitation and housing.

Urging Negroes to remedy these conditions and to think in terms of generations rather than years, he stressed the value of the ballot as a means of winning recognition but pointed out that merely putting faith in the name of Lincoln was of little aid.

"The best thing for the Negro race is to split wide open between the two parties," he said. "Then and only then will their voices be heard in both camps."

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
December 28, 1937

The North Attempts A Folly

SUPPOSE that you were a father with a sick, a very sick boy. This boy you had almost lost, but your family doctor, by skillful treatment and diligent care, had pulled him past the crisis. At this point, then, would you fire your family doctor, go out into the medical world and hire a new doctor with a new treatment? This doctor had an untried treatment which he believed to be a remarkable one, even though he admitted it to be dangerous. Would you want him to experiment on your son, already on the road to recovery? We think not.

Neither does the South want the federal government to tinker with its criminal laws, just because a few politicians in the North think that they can win a little favor with a segment of their misguided electorate by so doing. We refer, of course, to the anti-lynching bill which, in recent months, has been so persistently before Congress, and will be back before it as soon as the new session opens within the next few days.

In the South during 1937, there have been eight negroes who died at the hands of mobs and this figure, together with the identical figure for 1936, is an all-time low since statistics were started on this sort of thing 40 or 50 years ago, if we are not mistaken. In case anyone doubts their accuracy, these figures come from the negro school, Tuskegee Institute, and they show a decline from 20 lynchings in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

The most remarkable part about the Tuskegee figures for 1937, however, is that in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings that might have involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in the North and the other 51 occurred in the South—and yet the North would slap a federal law upon us because our officers do not have the courage to thwart a mob!

Fifty-one times, officers in the South have stepped into the breach and, risking their own lives, they have driven off mobs, or outwitted them, or outtalked them, or outfought them. But are we told about such things as these by the congressmen from the North who, in their zeal to capture a few votes, would inflict a sectional statute upon the South? Time after time, they tell the story of the Mississippi torch lynching—and a horrible story it is—but they don't tell the country that we had fewer than half as many lynchings in 1936 and 1937 as we had in 1935, and they don't tell the country that on 51 separate occasions, Southern officers of the law braved life and limb in 1937 to see that justice, if any, would be meted out in the courts and not by a band of vigilantes.

In view of this record—a record which is remarkable when compared with the hundreds of lynchings which occurred in the South a half a century ago—it seems unthinkable that any real friend of the negro would wish to upset the apple-cart. And the apple-cart will be upset if our states are to be denied the privileges of conducting their courts as they see fit. Never you forget that for one instant. The lynching fever itself was born of the Northern-dominated courts which were inflicted upon the South following the War Between the States—courts which laughed when aggrieved white men asked justice for a black man. Will the North now repeat its folly?

Do those Northern congressmen think, for a single instant, that Southern officers will be diligent about the arrest and protection of a negro murderer or rapist if they know that at any moment a mob might snatch the prisoner from them, and lead them to fines and prison terms? Do those Northern congressmen think that it's just to impose a fine of thousands of dollars upon an entire county just because a band of a few irresponsible men, under the cover of darkness, commits a murder? Do they think that it's any more just for this fine to be imposed upon us that for the federal government to impose a similar fine upon a New York county for a gang killing? A mob death in the South, so the sociologists tell us, is simply an exhibition that a few men are determined to display and preserve their racial supremacy. A gang killing, then, is simply an exhibition that a few men are determined to display and preserve their economic supremacy. Is one any worse than the other?

If that federal anti-lynching bill does become a law, the real friend of the negro will rue the day. It will do more to disrupt the relationships between the two races, which have been growing in cordiality each year, than any other conceivable thing.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5724

Beaufort, S C., Gazette
November 25, 1937

REMARKS OF SENATOR ELLISON D. SMITH

Of South Carolina Before Senate Nov. 19 In Opposition to Anti-Lynching Bill

Mr. Smith: Mr. President, I do not intend at this time to make a speech or attempt to advert. except briefly, to what, in my opinion, is the most opprobrious, the most uncalled for, and the most vicious attack upon a section of the country that has ever been made in our history—and that, too, from the party to which my section has given allegiance during all the disappointing years following the War Between the States, during which it was only accidentally placed in power, and that only temporarily.

I have risen to serve notice that not now, when other matters should be before us, will I discuss this infamous bill. but later, when it will be before us under a very questionable procedure of this body, I shall address myself to the measure. It is an iniquitous thing, which seeks to make an impassable gulf between the North and South and East and West, and will not be forgiven in the course of the next generation. It has broken what up to now has been an indissoluble and the southern democracy. The pressing of this bill by the so-called leaders of Democracy. The pressing of this bill by the so-called leaders of Democracy has absolved my section of the country forever from allegiance to the name of the National Democratic Party. You cannot make anything out of us but not Democrats of this type.

Mr. President, what I rose to say was that when this bill shall come up, as it will come. I, for one, will join with other southern Democrats to filibuster to deathh all other legislation, and by doing so we prevent my devoted section from being branded by the Senate of the United States as this bill would brand it.

We have shed blood for less than this. We surely can sacrifice certain legislation if by its sacrifice we may prevent the stigma that is deliberately planned to be placed on the section to which I belong. and which, please God, is more civilized better cultured. and certainly better educated in the amenities of life than are the sections from which come those who would perpetrate this outrage on us.

The very terms of the bill brand its sponsors with ignorance of the philosophy and the social and intellectual standards of their ancestors. It seeks to reflect upon the proud section of the country whose sons have been the authors of and defenders of that which made America great. Yet all history, all precedent, and all decency and all attempts to make a common country. after the horrible spectacle of War Between the States, must go down before the desire to get the votes of an unfortunate and inferior race. That is all the bill is for. The splendid speech made by the lady from Alabama (Mrs. Gra[illegible]) this afternoon was marvelous in its eloquent portrayal of the undeeniable facts. She analyzed them from every standpoint, and stated to this body, supposed to be a great deliberative body. nothing but the fundamental principles of justice. equity, and the relation of the States to the Nation and the Nation to the States. I wondered if she really realized to whom she was talking.

Mr. President, this bill would hardly be respectable in a slum community. Disrobe it, let it stand out in its baldness, and it is merely an attempt to appeal to an unfortunate race at the expense of the good name and the good citizenship of a section of America. I repeat that all those who come from the South ought to band together to resist the passage of this bill. In the confusion incident to the adjournment of the last session some of us. perhaps in order to get away, made the mistake of putting it on the calendar as one of the bills that must be taken up and seriously considered. It is not worthy the atention of decent men. Knowing its purpose as we do, every real lover of America and of his Government ought to help to throw it out the window.

Mr. Connally: Mr. President—

The presiding officer: Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. Smith: I yield

Mr. Connally: The Senator said that every southern Senator ought to do what he has suggested. Regardless of whether he is a southern Senator or any other kind of a Senator. I take it that the Senator from South Carolina thinks every Senator ought to respect the constiutional limitations of the Federal Government and of the States. ones he not?

Mr. Smith: Oh. certainly.

Mr. Connally:-Let me ask the Senator another question. At present where is the junrisdiction to try the crime of murder?

Mr. Smith: It is within the States.

Mr. Connally: It is within the States; and if it be there now under the Constitution, how can it be taken away from them and given over to the Federal Government an amendment to the Constitut on of the United States?

Mr. Smith: It is now a question of the Supreme Court sustaining the bill. if it should be enacted; it is not a question of it becoming law; it is a question of getting the endorsement of the Congress for political reasons. What is the use of mincing words about it? Everybody knows what its purpose is. I think those who have introduced and are sponsoring it ought to estimate how much it would take to buy the Negro votes of their respective communities and then ask Congress to make an appropriation so that they buy the votes without attempting to humiliate my section to accomplish the same end.

Mr. Connally: May I interrupt the Senator again? We have the constitutional power to make such an appropriation. have we not?

Mr. Smith: Certainly; and it would be more decent for them to come in frankly and say, "We want you to make an appropriation to enable us to buy the Negro votes of Harlem, of the south side of Chicago, and elsewhere where members of this unfortunate race live in large numbers". Count them; let us see how much it will cost, and buy their votes, but for God's sake. do not attempt to humiliate a great section in order to get the Negro vote.

Mr, Bankhead: In the opinion of the Senator from South Carolina, how many votes would this bill get if Negroes were not voters?

Mr. Smith: Not one. The Senator from Alabama has hit the nail on the head; and yet, to the shame of this great body, that has helped demonstrate to a doubtful world that democracy is possible, that dual form of government, collectivism where indicated and individualism where indicated. is practicable certain long-haired men and short-haired women who never assumed the real responsibilities of life, but are now attempting to perpetrate such a dastardly thing as this, charge us. whose good name is jeopardized, with delaying legislation; in other words, they would nlet this brand be placed on us in order to get a few Harlem votes.

So far as I am concerned, I represent, in part. the little storm center of the United States, little South Carolina, that passed the Nullification Act single-handed and alone, and then secede. I do not apologize for either act, because it showed the grit of those from whom I descended. The same courage is in us now. Nothing is done in malice, but our self-respect is touched for the dirty thing of getting votes—and getting them from where and from whom? I imagine those who are trying to get them are about on a par with those from whom they would be obtained. Any man or set of men that will stoop so low as this are no higher than the source from which they hope to draw their political strength. They are not going to get away with it.

Against my own family a crime was committed that would inflame the heart of any man. I saw a father-in-law 80 years old shot to death. his son shot to death. that son's bride of 8 months shot to death, and a poor. young Negro, who had belonged to certain members of my family, who attempted to defend this defenseless household, had his throat cut. Yet I am those of us whose blood and the sanctity of whose homes were jeopardized believed in letting the law take its course..

I invite the author of this bill to go and stay where we stay, surrounded by the conditions that surrounded us, and which have surrounded us, [illegible] the da of the reconstruu n since the days of reconstruction. If he would do that. in place of trying to condemn us,, were he to know as know. and as every other southerner knows. the instigation for those outbreaks of lawlessnesses, if he had a drop of decency in him he would take off his hat in honor of the South emerging as it has emerged from the negro prevalent perpetration of this deed.

You may call it "humanitarianism".; but have you no respect for our officers, have you no respect for us?

Mr. President, I said I was not going to make a speech, and I am not. I am simply serving notice that I am going to do everything within my power to keep this iniquitous and unjust stigma from being placed on my section of the country. What ...ost it comes from the so-called Democratic Party, which we have loved and which, in the dark days of reconstruction, was our pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, a fact which made me feel kindly toward old Tammany. I shall never be able to pay my debt of obligation to that organization which stood between us and the death of our civilization.

Senators stand here and quote the Constitution. What is the Constitution to a man who is hunting votes? What does it amount to with him? I can call a polecat a geranium. but that does not make him any less a polecat. You may call this humanitarianism, but it is no less a vote gettting scheme. We all know that. II a certain distinguished Senator were not dead, but were still in this body, I should like to quote what he said when I remonstrated with him about the injunction into this body of a similar bill.

No one knows or can know how we of the South feel about this thing. Mark my predicitions if this bill passes and becomes law thhough the Supreme Court declaring it constitutional you will have injected a rut into the ranks of the so-called Democratic Party that all the blandishments of the next generation will never heal.

Mr. President. I wonder sometimes what is the purpose of the treatment being accorded the South. The two-thirds rule in national conventions was abolished and we were eliminated from any particiption in the naming of a President. You are about to pass, and perhaps, will pass, an hours and wages bill which, in the rescrudescent state of my section, will crucify it. Now you come laong and say, "You are not competent to protect your prisoners"; and so the great purified, sublimated, glorified. crime-ridden New York and her collaborating State, those two peaks of morality and of political and social purity, must not only shed their light on poor benighted South Carolina and the rest of the South, but must send their gifted peace officers down there to help us eliminate lynchihng and promote rack-steering.

Mr. Overton: The Senator has lived all of his years in the South. The ostensible purpose of this bill is to protect the Negro from the crimes that are committeed upon him by the people of the South. I desire to ask the Senator, what is the attitude of the South toward the Negro race; whether the South is not the best friend of the Negro race that is found in any section.

Mr. Smith: Oh Mr. President, that goes w.thout saying. As a baby boy I was nursed in the arms of a Negro woman, whom I loved as devotedly as was possible. Then, later on. old Uncle Bill, who lived to be 108 years old. was my shelter in the time of storm. Many a time my father would lead me around behind the house, where was an old pivet bush that I have hated from that day until this. It grew just the righh length of sprouts to "teach the young idea how to shoot". He would take me around behind the huose in order to better the condition of my soul and morals by the application of the hickory; and old Uncle Bill. whom my father revered and respected more than he did any other man, would just walk up without a word and deliver me from the hand of the slayer. Oh, I loved him with devotion.

The South knows the Negro. and knows his limitations. I state before this body—and I dare any of you to go down and investigate, that since the Supreme Court has declared that in certain cases involving Federal jurisdiction Negroes must be on the jury. when the Negroes themselves have a case they will take you aside and say, "Do. for God's sake, get me the best white men you can on the jury". Is it not so?

Down in the section from which we come the Negroes are treated just as justly, and more understandingly, than these gentlemen up North. We do not call them "mister" and mistress" because they have been accustomed to call us "marster" and "mistress". We do not take them into fellowship with us in the home or in the school, becuase it is dangerous. You know it. I know it. But give the Negro a school to himself, a church to himself, and treat him fairly, and the relation between the races has grown amicable as the years have gone by. Pass this bill, and you will be responsible for the consequences.

Mr. President, you are about to put us in this position: Here is the party to which we have given allegiance and for which we have suffered. Though defeat after defeat came, we still were loyal to the principles of democracy. You are about to put us in the position that was described by the Negro preacher who had more knowledge of the sound of words than he did of their meaning. He said to his congregation, "There air but two roads. One leads 'way up to perdition and the other one 'way down to degradation". The Negro said "My God! If dat be true, dis nigger takes to the woods!"

Here in the home of our friends. so-called, we are threatened with the most humiliating expression of the other part of the country that ever was conceived in the heart of man. Why. it was born in the heat and passion just subsequent to the Civil War.

I wonder if the Senate is going to pass this South-baiting, South-humiliating measure. I wonder if it is. If we who love the Constitution and love fair play and decency, whether we are Southerners or not, can prevent it. the bill will not pass before the time arrives for another election and calling together of Congress.

Mr. President, when the bill comes up I hope to make some extended remarks regarding it.

Lexington, Miss. Advertiser
November 18, 1937

The Anti-Lynching Bill

While the whole United States flounders away toward another depression and the farmers of the nation await a much needed program of crop control, the world's greatest deliberative body, the Senate, filibusters on the Anti-lynching bill which passed the Lower House at the last session.

The Southern senators, including Pat Harrison, feel that it is a hopeless job and that the bill will pass.

While the saner and more thoughtful citizens of the South deplore lynching more than the Northern south-baiters, the measure is aimed at the South. If there was any good way to prevent this most abhorrent form of lawlessness, the thinking people of the South would be the first to advocate it.

The bill now pending is one that will work a hardship on all but the guilty and will mean the loss of the most sacred principle of local self-government. It will mean that Federal courts will hold jurisdiction over the law enforcement usurping the power of the states to maintain their own houses in order.

Like many of the well-intentioned people of the East, the president is misguided in the matter, if indeed he is for this measure. It was not one of his "must" assignments to the lawmakers.

To life-long Democrats, steeped in the principle of States-Rights, the bill is unconstitutional in intention as well as practice. Seeking to fine the officer who allows a prisoner to fall into the hands of a mob, the whole issue to be determined by Federal rather than state courts, is too drastic a remedy for the "disease." Lynching and mob action are going out of their own accord. Education and a more enlightened citizenship, as well as better law enforcement, will cure the sore spot without federal action.

Even the most rabid (misinformed) Eastener should hesitate to enforce the type of federal tyranny that proved so distasteful to this section in the dark days of Reconstruction. Its passage in the Lower House was for political expediency rather than to cure an evil.

As the bill now reades, few believe it will be found constitutional, but time alone can tell. J. B.

Johnson City, Tenn., Press
December 8, 1937

A POLITICAL FOOTBALL

The antilynching bill happens to be an excellent vote-getting device for its advocates and opponents alike. The former, principally the Northern Congressmen, of course, know that many of their constituents admire their identification with the bill. The latter, the Southern Congressmen, almost exclusively, are perfectly aware that they can arouse a certain amount of favorable sectional feeling by attacking the bill at every opportunity. Once the bill was passed, or once it became evident that it never could be passed, congressional appeals to sectional emotions would no longer be politically useful. Accordingly, the antilynching bill is a measure that very few Congressmen want passed but that very few Congressmen want to see defeated. It is a most serviceabe political football and a majority of the congressmen on both sides want to see it kept in play.—Mobile Register.

Columbus, Ga. Enquirer-Sun
December 9, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL SCORED

A vigorous blow was struck at the Wagner federal anti-lynching bill by the Georgia legislature in the adoption of a resolution charging that strife in industrial areas of the North has caused more loss of life "than all the lynchings in the South."

In addition to various other reasons why the proposed measures should not be passed, it is unfair to single out one type of crime for penalty. As the assembly's resolution points out, the bill, if it is passed, should provide for compensation for losses of life of strikers and peace officers in the same manner as in lynchings and also that county authorities be charged with liability and made subject to the same penalties.

However, the measure should not be approved by congress and we believe that our Southern members of congress, who are doing such splendid work against this vicious legislation, will be successful in their fight.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5725

FARM BILL DEBATE
DELAYS LYNCH BILL

Press Service: the n.a.a.c.p.
New York City

Washington, Dec. 10.- Continued debate on the farm bill in the Senate has further delayed consideration of the Gavagan-Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill which is next on the calendar.

12-10-37

It was thought that the farm bill would be passed by December 9, but the word is now that it probably will not be passed until Tuesday, December 14.

Immediately after the passage of the farm bill, the anti-lynching bill is the next order of business and debate on it is expected to be resumed at the point where it was dropped on November 22.

Behind the scenes numerous inducements have been offered to Senators Robert F. Wagner and Frederick Van Nuys to get them to consent to postponement of a vote on the anti-lynching bill.

Newspapers report that Senator Wagner has been offered cooperation and support for his housing bill if he will let the anti-lynching bill be delayed still further. It is said that Senator Van Nuys, who feels very strongly about tax revision, has been promised cooperation and support if he will temporarily withdraw the anti-lynching bill from the calendar.

The latest move in an effort to postpone action on the anti-lynching bill is the suggestion made, wholly unofficially, that the government's huge housing bill, designed to revive business, should be allowed to come into the Senate ahead of the anti-lynching bill.

Supporters of the anti-lynching bill point out that they are just as anxious as anyone else to see a revival of business and to support the housing measure or any other measure designed to increase employment and purchasing power. But they point out that the anti-lynching bill has been tossed about on one excuse or another ever since the beginning of the depression and that many times it has given way before measures which were thought to be necessary to the prosperity of the country. They also point out that there are more than enough votes to pass the bill in the Senate and that it can be passed in one hour. Therefore, they argue, it should be brought to a vote, disposed of, and then the Senate can go on without delay to other business.

Senators who might be lending an ear to the proposals to further delay a vote on the anti-lynching bill are certain to hear from home, since all observers and newspaper cooresponden[illegible] agree that the sentiment of the country is overwhelmingly in favor of a federal anti-lynching law. The quicker it is taken up and voted upon, the quicker the Senate can get to other measures. Senators Wagner and Van Nuys have stood firmly against any plan to delay consideration of the bill.

According to the latest information, the anti-lynching bill may be back on the floor of the Senate by December 15 or 16. The date depends on whether the farm bill will be brought to a vote by that time.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
December 1, 1937

Some Truth—More Ignorance

The article in "The Nation" by Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, entitled "Dixie Rejects Lynching," contains much truth and reveals, at the same time, much ignorance of feeling in the South, especially the "deep South."

The informed, self-respecting and enlightened South, always has rejected lynching. More than sixty years ago South Carolina, under the leadership of the great editor of The News and Courier, Francis Warrington Dawson, began an unceasing opposition to lynching and members of the staff of the newspaper, in the field, at times exposed their very lives to danger when they investigated cases of it.

The Columbia State, under the editorship of the distinguished N. G. Gonzales, who had long served with Captain Dawson and was one of the young men who did not count peril of his life in the campaign for law and order, joined The News and Courier's fight in 1891. Although South Carolina was one of the two Southern states having a large majority of negroes in the population (there has been a white majority since 1930) lynching steadily decreased in the state, despite occasional incitement to it from one or two demagogues in office.

Mr. Dabney attaches especial import to the endorsement by the "Commission on Interracial Cooperation" of the Costigan-Wagner bill and the Wagner-Van Nuys bill. Now the fact is, that a long time defeatism in respect of state rights has increased in the South, and not many of the brave old advocates of it, of the stamp of Lamar, Wade Hampton, Morgan and Pettus, and Culberson of Texas, remain. Nor have the Southern Democrats Northern allies now as they had when Thurmon of Ohio, Voorhies of Indiana, and scores like them were senators from Northern states. The evidence that Mr. Dabney cites simmers to the fact that the old Democrats, South and North, of a generation ago, have thrown up the sponge. Too many of them want centralized government and its favors.

To virtually all decent and enlightened Southern men and women, lynching is abhorrent, and they are sympathetic with the aims of the Commission on Interracial Relations, but that is not admitting that they believe the federal government is a better machine to "civilize" the South than are the Southern states individually. The burden is on men like Mr. Dabney to show that the efforts of outside reformers has been or will be effective for good on any American state.

who is prepared to prove that the crusades in behalf of Leo Frank, of Sacco and Vanzetti, or the Scottsboro negroes, of Tom Mooney, have, on the whole, been helpful to the races or persons concerned?

Even if the lives of some of the Scottsboro convicts were saved by the interveners it is not improbable that other negroes in Alabama have been sacrificed in consequence of it.

In the South, the North too, the lynchers, the gangsters, the gunmen, the brigands, do not come from the membership of commissions on interracial relations or other benevolent societies, and once the crazed mob is ascendant in Omaha, in Springfield, in Duluth, it proceeds to its kill.

For that matter, save for a numerous and effective police, race rioting and race slaughter would be commoner in Harlem than in any Southern city. In a dozen Northern cities have been race conflicts since that one in Atlanta a third of a century ago, the last of importance remembered in the South.

Mr. Dabney observes that a law by which counties are held responsible for neglect of duty by county officers, resulting in lynching cases, was enacted in South Carolina in 1896. He says that in at least seven counties, between 1918 and 1931, the minimum fine of $2,000 was collected from the county and that no lynching has occurred in any of the seven since the fine was imposed. As argument, that is ridiculous. Since 1913, it is safe to say that in at least twenty-three of the forty-six counties of South Carolina no lynching has occurred; perhaps none has occurred in more than thirty of the counties. We could name for Mr. Dabney numerous counties in South Carolina that have had no lynchings within the recollection of living men, and in recent years such outrages have been, to a degree, localized in district where the white industrial population is considerable.

The one method of enforcing law and ending violation of it where two races are dwelling together is by effective policing. In no town of 10,000 inhabitants in South Carolina has been a lynching in the last fifty years, or longer.

Mr. Dabney naively mentions that since the passage of an anti-lynching law in Virginia nine years ago have been no lynchings in that state, and still, by some mysterious process of reasoning, he concludes that the way to put an end to it in other states is through the machinery of the federal government and its courts.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
November 27, 1937

Leadership for the South

In the South, in South Carolina, the need is for leadership that understands Southern interests and is brave enough to stand up and fight for it regardless of party names.

Why should we be slaves to names?

This party that we call "Democratic" elects an administration with the assistance of the LaGuardias, the LaFollettes, the Bob Wagners, and their like. What have they in common with us?

James Wadsworth, Jr., a representative and former senator of New York, not a New York city man, is a Republican, and almost alone among Northern men he opposes the so-called anti-lynching bill.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, lifelong Republican, more than any Northern Democratic leader is this day speaking for the Democracy of Lamar and Hampton, and with the clear voice of a statesman.

These Southern leaders, pulling chestnuts out of the fire for the Guffeys and the Wagners, are, to be sure, getting the offices, the patronage, for themselves, their friends and their kin.

What is that to the masses of the South?

How much richer are the plain people of South Carolina, Dick, Tom and Harry, black and white, for the gifts, the hand-outs to Southern people in the last four and a half years?

What are all these gifts to South Carolina, by the side of $406,000,000 in two years for parks and playgrounds to New York city alone?

How long shall be gulled?

In the North, the South has plenty of friends. We know them. They are not of the machines that control Chicago, New York, Boston, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia. They hate them not less than we do.

The constitution provides for the election of the president and the vice president by an Electoral College. Why do we not use it? It is there for our protection and advantage.

White Studes O.K. Lynch Bill

Daily Worker 12-17-37

AUSTIN, Texas—(A N P)—Joining the army of Southerners who ardently favor the passing of a federal anti-lynching bill, Texas University students, in a poll conducted by the school's board of student [illegible] past Saturday showed 61% for such legislation.

Although some [illegible] no opinion on the subject, 21% were against such a law.

Texas University is the largest white university in Texas and their student body is generally accepted as reflecting the thought of the people of Texas. Senator Tom Connally of Texas led a fight against the anti-lynching bill last month.

Dothan, Ala. Eagle
December 16, 1937

Sectionalism In Modern America

BY MORGAN M. BEATTY
(A. P. Feature Service Writer)

The 1937 Congress is getting a taste of sectional controversies which smack of the issues that once led America into civil war.

Again, a question of dollars and cents is paramount. The North and South, the East and the West, all want to be sure of their economic places in the sun.

But now, as in antebellum days, there is a moral side issue besides. Then it was slavery. Today it's the lynch law.

Two highly important pieces of legislation before Congress can illustrate the main squabble. They are—

First, the wage and hour bill:

This plan would guarantee workers a wage of at least 40 cents an hour in a 40 hour work week. Northern congressmen, especially those who have a heavy labor vote in their districts, are all for it. Southern congressmen have bottled up the scheme in the House Rules Committee.

Why?

One answer appears in a Department of Labor survey. This little pamphlet says nearly half the unskilled labor in the South is paid less than 40 cents an hour. If 40-cent pay should become universal, Southern employers would have to shell out wage increases to nearly half their workers. On the other hand, the new law wouldn't cut much ice in the North.

Perhaps that explains why Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., from textile-making New England voted for the wage and hour bill. It's no secret that New England textile mills have been moving South.

Second of the sectional controversies rages around the farm bill. This measure has been battered about in Congress for weeks.

The trouble is the bill requires farmers to devote less of their land to five basic crops—wheat, corn, cotton, rice and tobacco. Farmers in every section of the country are wondering what is going to happen to the land that will be released in other sections for new purposes.

For instance, a Wisconsin dairy farmer asks his congressman:

"Will the land left idle by crop control go into milk and butter fat production? And if it does will that flood the milk and butter fat market and demoralize prices?

Then there's the moral side issue just as there was in Civil War days. You can trace it in modern form to the anti-lynching bill that soon will be tearing the hearts out of congressmen.

What is this measure? What's its inspiration? Where does it come from?

The bill is offered mainly by Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, who has always sympathized with the underdog. Of course, Senator Wagner also needs to court the big Negro vote in Harlem, and Negroes naturally want an anti-lynching bill.

Senators and congressmen alike will tell you that the anti-lynching bill will pass if it reaches the floor of the two legislative forums. The warning of such an expert on the Constitution as Senator Borah of Idaho that the law is unconstitutional makes no difference. The measure will get by because congressmen generally want their records to show they are tolerant of all races.

And, they argue, who can say positively that enactment of the law, and the discussion it arouses over the nation, will not help the South wipe out lynching?

At any rate, the issue is primarily sectionalism, even though the purpose of the law is to put a stop to an evil that has harassed the South for many a year.

Happily, there is one important difference between sectionalism three-quarters of a century ago, and sectionalism in this industrial era.

No hot heads are going to try to secede in this day of complex economics. Every section of the United States needs the protection of every other section. John Q. Public will see to it that his congressman acts accordingly.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5726

Knoxville Tenn Banner
November 18, 1937

A BILL TO BE KILLED

Southern Senators are amply justified in their firm resistance to the enactment of the antilynching bill.

The measure passed the House at the last session. Every Democratic member from Tennessee placed himself on record against it, the only votes it received from this State being cast by Representatives Taylor and Reece.

The measure has behind it the administration leaders. The enlightened sentiment of the South, as truly as that of any part of the country, condemns lynching; public opinion has been steadily crystallizing against it for many years. The decrease in the number of such illegal acts affords clear proof that not only is public opinion strong in opposition, but law more assertive and effective.

In a speech last April, when the bill was under consideration in the House, Mr. Sumners of Texas, in opposing it, presented a significant record in that connection. He showed in the decade from 1882 to 1892 there was an average of one lynching for each 380,000 people; from 1893 to 1903, inclusive, there was one lynching for each 555,000 population; in the next eleven years, 1904 to 1914, inclusive, there was one lynching for each 1,308,000 population, and for the next period, 1915 to 1925, one per 2,129,000 population. The next period, 1926 to 1935, inclusive, saw one lynching for every 7,488,000 population, and during last year there was one lynching per 15,000,000 population.

The Texas Representative told his associates of the House that he would be willing to make the proposition to any member that he would vote for the bill if any member could point to a single major crime in America that has been reduced as rapidly as that of lynching.

THE BANNER strongly condemns lynching, but it is an offense which should be left to state courts and state law. The measure before Congress embodies a manifest, flagrant, and indefensible attempt to usurp the police powers of the states. Surely the denial of the rights of the states, the undermining process to which they have been subjected, and latterly the deepening policy of the Federal Government to ignore or nullify them, have gone far enough.

The passage of this bill constitutes the most vindictive and unjust blow at the South which has been witnessed since the days of Reconstruction. While designed in enmity to the South, it would affect every section. The bill mobs the Federal Constitution and those of the states.

This true indictment was drawn against it when the bill was first presented to the House:

"The bill does more than destroy state rights; it completely destroys state sovereignty, and makes the states, including all state and county officers, responsible, not to the state governments of which they are a part, and to which they have sworn allegiance, but responsible to the ukase of federal officers, federal courts, and federal bureaucrats.

"The despised force bill of Reconstruction days was no more a wanton or reckless disregard of the inherent and exclusive rights of the states than this vicious measure.

"In addition to placing state and county officers of state governments, from Governor to constable, under supervision and control of federal laws and federal courts and subject to prosecution in federal courts for acts committed, not in their individual, but in their official capacity as state officers; the bill goes still further in penalizing counties, which are subdivisions of state governments created by the states and which cannot be sued, even in state courts, except by grant of the state, and are in this bill made responsible in civil damages recoverable in federal courts, in suits brought by federal district attorneys.

"Furthermore, individual citizens who are not officers may be prosecuted in federal courts, upon the whim and caprice of federal judges, for violation of state laws."

Among other provisions in this outrageous measure are those which would make "wilful neglect" (and a federal and not state court would pass judgment on the conduct of the officer) of an officer to protect a prisoner or failure to prosecute the members of a lynching mob a felony carrying a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and the county where lynching had occurred would be made liable to each person injured, or to his or her heirs if the injuries resulted in death, in a sum not less than $2,000 or not more than $10,000 as monetary compensation. Again the federal court would have jurisdiction.

Furthermore, any judge of a United States district court could switch the trial to any community anywhere in the district, regardless of where the alleged offense was committed, which his desires or prejudices might deem advisable.

A distinguished member of Congress declared: "This is a direct attempt to destroy and remove the last vestige of power of a sovereign state to make and enforce its own laws. If this bill becomes a law, then we will no longer have sovereign states, but they will be mere puppets, subservient to the Federal Government. This bill is a death blow to the rights of the states to exist as such, and the Federal Government sets itself up as the guardian and administrator of state governments, state courts, and state officers, and need will no longer exist for the maintenance of state governments."

That both Senators from Tennessee will be recorded in opposition to this vicious measure may be taken for granted.

Montgomery, Ala. Journal
November 18, 1937

WAGNER IS TO BLAME!

If President Roosevelt's emergency program for business and agricultral recovery is being held up in Congress, it is not the fault of the senators who are taking their stand against the indefensible anti-lynching act.

If the nation's welfare is being jeopardized by delay in meeting a vital economic crisis, the men who are resisting federal invasion of state law enforcement are not responsible.

The man responsible is Senator Wagner, of New York, and his associates. Upon them the full blame for trifling with the national well being should be placed. Senator Wagner is putting Harlem votes ahead of national welfare. He is holding up farm legislation, industrial legislation, tax legislation and other essential items of the emergency agenda in order to win the votes of a few thousand constituents north of the Harlem river.

In the first place, this vote-getting anti-lynching law has no business being considered at a session of Congress called to meet an extraordinary emergency. If it must be considered at all it should come up in regular order at a regular session of the Congress. The favored position it occupied at the head of the senate calendar was not secured with any thought that it would be taken up at a special session, but rather that it would take its turn at a regular assembling of the lawmakers.

In the second place, this Wagner law is unconstitutional and is so regarded by every thoughtful student of the Constitution in the senate, led by Senator Borah, perhaps the ablest Constitutional lawyer in that body. There is nothing in the Constitution which permits the federal government to invade the states and enforce criminal laws for local offenses where no interstate act is involved. There is no constitutional justification for fining the taxpayers of a county $10,000 for the act of someone else and for which they are entirely innocent. The proposed law is a fraud upon its face, drawn with the definite and specific purpose of pleasing an Eastern organization of negroes which has as its purpose the stirring up of race strife and friction.

Finally, the proposed law is dishonest. It would punish mob action in a Southern state and protect mob action in New York. It would punish members of a mob in one section, and leave the members of a mob of Senator Wagner's constituents in racketeering and gangster-ridden New York untouched.

No wonder the senators from the South are outraged by this dishonest attack upon the motives and capacity of the Southern people for self-government. No wonder they propose to fight to the last ditch against such a monstrous proposal. No wonder they meet the author of this iniquitous measure face to face and pour forth their scorn upon him. They are not to be blamed for delay in the emergency program. They are to be commended for their courage. The man to be blamed for all this attention being given an extraneous subject at a time when millions of people are faced with hunger and want is Senator Wagner of New York, and the people of this country should not be allowed to forget the man who considers his own political hide of more importance than the economic welfare of all the millions of people of this great nation.

Congress Has Been Wrangling Over Lynch Bill Since 1902; Few Allies, But No Pushover

LOUISVILLE, Ky. —(SNS)— Federal anti-lynching legislation, which again has provoked a Senate filibuster, has had a long and stormy history. Probably no other issue has had the stamina to survive so many defeats; few have met such stubborn opposition.

Few sessions of Congress have lacked anti-lynching bills since the first was introduced in 1902 but most of these proposals have been killed quietly. It was not until 1922 that the Dyer bill was passed by the House, only to meet slow death in a Senate filibuster. The next affirmative action by Congress was in the regular 1937 session when the Gavagan bill passed the House, and a Senate fight on a similar measure was averted by agreement to delay action until the next session.

The reasons for the long delays between the public appearances of the anti-lynching issue are manifold. It is political dynamite, containing sources of racial and sectional strife, a grave constitutional question, and, at present, the threat of party disruption.

Once Not Sectional

The lynching problem was not always primarily racial or sectional. In 1884 for example, of the 211 mob executions in the United States, 160 were of whites and 51 of Negroes. Lynch law was a prevalent in the newer states of the West as in the South; vigilantism was a tradition of the frontier.

But the picture changed rapidly. By 1892, only sixty-nine whites died at the hands of mobs, as compare with 162 Negroes; in 1902, the year of the first attempt at Federal regulation, seven whites were killed and eighty-five Negroes; last year, all nine lynchings were of Negroes.

The problem also took on a marked sectional aspect. Between 1889 and 1933 the states which had more than 100 lynching each were Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina. The institution became identified with the South.

States Guarded Rights

This naturally increased the difficulty of obtaining Federal legislation. Though not many voices were raised in support of lynching itself, any proposal to send Federal officials into a state to check the evil was regarded as a reflection on that state. It brought up recollections of the Civil War and Reconstruction, and touched sectional pride.

Typical of this attitude is Representative Hatton W. Summers, of Texas. He has asserted that he opposes national legislation "because I am opposed to lynching." He points out that under state laws lynching deaths have declined from 3.4 out of each million population in 1892 to .07 in 1936; that public opinion in the South is becoming more and more opposed to the practice, and that it may be expected to disappear without placing the stigma of special Federal action on the South.

There is, indeed, evidence to prove that lynching has lost caste. Not only has the number of lynchings declined markedly (only seven have occurred this year) but Governors, grand juries and sheriffs have taken a far less lenient attitude of late. True, it is still difficult to obtain convictions in lynching cases, but there is at least more activity in that direction. Last year a jury in the Federal district court of Louisiana awarded $2,500 damages to the parents of a lynching victim. The suit, brought against a Louisiana sheriff for negligence in permitting the lynching, was taken to the Federal court because the parents were residents of Alabama.

Even more striking is the fact that the Commission for Racial Cooperation, an organization of Southern whites, which long has been working to produce public opinion opposed to lynching, recently advocated Federal anti-lynching legislation.

Constitutionally Questioned

Nevertheless, the Wagner-Van Nuys bill now before the Senate cannot expect the support of any Southern Senator, and will be opposed by some Northern Republicans. William E. Borah, for one, has attacked the measure on constitutional grounds as an infringement of the police power of the states. The measure has been drawn in an attemut to bring it within the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment, which provides that no state shall deny the equal protection of the law or deprive any one of life without due process of law. The act sets up a test—that is, if a state or one of its subdivisions fails to employ the lawful means at its disposal to protect persons against lynching, it shall be deemed to have violated the amendment.

Democrats Bothered

In addition to possible constitutional complications, the anti-lynching bill has caused marked cleavage in the Democratic party. Before 1932 agitation against lynching came almost wholly from Republican sources. Now the leadership in the fight for the bill is Democratic. Moreover, the cleavage has not come on conservative New Deal lines, for in the last session both Royal S. Copeland and Robert F. Wagner, who were on opposite sides in the Supreme Court fight, worked for the anti-lynching measure.

Commentators have remarked that the present filibuster does not seem actuated by as much bitterness as attended the earlier efforts to put anti-lynching bills across. This may be due to the weakening of the former solid front of Southern public opinion against such measures. In the last session it was asserted that the conservative Southern Senators did not intend to take any extraordinary precaution against the passage of the bill, but would vote against it

HILLSBORO, TEX. MIRROR
DEC. 28, 1937 17

LATEST FIGURES PROVE PROPOSED FEDERAL ANTI-LYNCHING LAW UNNECESSARY INVASION OF STATE RIGHTS

For the past several sessions of congress efforts have been made to pass a federal anti-lynching law, and its intrusion into the recent special session of congress contributed its share to the failure of that session to pass a single major bill, outside of an appropriation to pay the expenses of congressmen to and from home.

Efforts to pass the measure are very properly regarded as a slap at the south and a still further invasion of state rights.

Law-abiding people of all sections of the United States have opposed mob law, and the sentiment against it in the south as well as elsewhere has grown so strong that it has become one of the most rare rather than most prevalent of crimes. If evidence was needed that the southern people as well as southern officers were determined that the law should take its course, even in the most dastardly of crimes, it is provided in the figures just released by the Tuskegee Institute.

It will be noted that, while all the lynching of the year 1937 occurred in the south, of the 56 instances in which lynchings were prevented by officers, 51 of them were in the south.

The release of Tuskegee Institute follows:

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, Dec. 23, 1937.

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow toreh; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or othr precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1

Very truly yours,

F. D. Patterson, President.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5727

TEXAS FOR ANTI-LYNCHING BILL.

Unfortunately, the publicity achieved by Senator Tom Connally in his filibuster against the anti-lynching bill gave exaggerated importance to his stand. There are many people throughout America who, because of the senator's ranking, believe that Texas is against a federal anti-lynching bill. But the facts show that Senator Connally only represents the old reactionary and bitter element of Texas, which happens to be very much in the minority on this particular question.

Just last week a poll of the students of the University of Texas showed that 61.5% of them were in favor of a federal anti-lynching law, 21.7% of them were against it, and the others expressed no opinion at all. The reaction of the students of the University of Texas is indicative of the attitude of the younger element of Texas throughout the state.

As further evidence of the attitude of the people of Texas, Congressman Maury Maverick of San Antonio spoke for the bill and voted for it. According to reports from Representative Maverick's office, he did not receive a single protest from his district on account of his stand on the anti-lynching bill. The San Antonio Express, The Fort Worth Press, and The Houston Press have advocated the passage of a federal anti-lynching bill and have heard no appreciable protest or adverse reaction from their readers.

In a negative way it should be taken into account that no worthwhile daily of Texas has put up any active fight against the anti-lynching bill. For a long time demagogues like Senator Connally of Texas were able to arouse Southern fears by the old bugaboo of Negro dominance and Negro menace to the virtue of white women. While the old school of the older citizens are still likely to become nervous and angry when the questions are raised, the younger people see these oratorical rackets for what they are, namely, political tricks to stir the emotions and blind the hearers so that they will not see straight.

Not many people are fooled by the argument that Congress is wasting time considering the anti-lynching bill and should "get down to business." Neither are many people moved by the argument that the North should first stop lynching before attempting to pass an anti-lynching law. Even the old threadbare argument of the invasion of states rights has failed to blind the people in this instance. Not only is Texas in favor of an anti-lynching law, but a survey conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion showed that 67% of all Southerners favored an anti-lynching law. The accumulation of repeated lynchings has nullified the old argument that the South is able to take care of its problem and will work it out themselves. The women of the South, and a vast majority of the citizens under the age of 40, believe that it will take a federal law to permanently and effectively stamp out this evil.

The significance of this attitude of the majority of the citizens ow Texas and of the South cannot be exaggerated. For if the sentiment was not in favor of an anti-lynching law, it would not do a great deal of good to pass the law. But with the sentiment in favor of the law, it will be enforced and backed up, and the officials who will have to execute it will have the support of the community. By agreement the anti-lynching bill will be taken up again January 6. No doubt, Senator Connally will again expose his shriveled soul to public gaze in another filibuster, but Texas is for the bill.

Ft. Myers, Fla., News Press
December 19, 1937

Lynchings Since 1882

Statistics produced in conection with the anti-lynching bill in congress dating back to 1882 show that 3,679 human lives were sacrificed by mobs in this country during these fifty-five years. Of the victims, 2,979 were negroes. The rest, 700, were whites. Every state in the Union but seven has contributed one or more human sacrifices to mobs which took the law into their own hands. These seven states are Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Vermont. Mississippi leads all states with a total of 485 lynchings; Georgia has 469 to answer for; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 348; Arkansas, 241; and Tennessee, 210. — Wall Street Journal.

Dillon. S C., Herald
December 16, 1937

Different Forms of Lynch Law

THE Herald sees no reason why the south should get excited over the proposed anti-lynching law. There is no reason to believe that the bill is aimed at the south.

Lynch law is both morally and legally wrong. It flaunts defiance in the face of the courts, and tends to create disrespect for and break down the barriers of justice. Every human being charged with a crime is entitled to and should have the benefit of trial by jury.

Lynch law doesn't merely mean stringing a man up to the limb of a tree and riddling his body with bullets. That is the method used in the south, but there are various forms of lynching.

Deliberately shooting an unarmed man to death without warning is a form of lynch law. In the large cities of the north where gangsters are numerous the crime of lynching is more prevalent than in the south or elsewhere in the nation. Men meet in groups and deliberately plan the blotting out of some person or a rival gangster. The method generally used is to take the victim "for a ride."

These gangster killings in the north outnumber lynchings in the south probably five to one. The penalties to be imposed by the proposed law will fall heavily on New York and Chicago where gangdom thrives and lynchings make a mockery of the law.

Hazelhurst, Miss. Courier
December 23, 1937

IT DOESN'T MAKE SENSE

The press reports that agreement was reached in the Senate on last Monday, to bring up for action the Anti-Lynching Bill on January sixth, three days after the new session begins.

The idea of the President, as it is reported, is to bring this proposal up for immediate action and dispose of it, so that pressing legislation, to be proposed at the regular session can be put through.

This has as much sense to it as the Governor saying to the Legislature, we will first dispose of the matter of consolidating our counties and reducing the number to forty instead of eighty-two.

This has as much sense to it as telling a group of four men, representing the Baptist, Catholic, Holy Roller and Sons of David, faith to agree which faith was best, and then get busy on constructive work.

The Republicans and Democrats voted together to send the Wage-Hour bill back to committee, the Eastern Democrats are publicly talking about reprisals against the Farm Bill for Southern Democrats helping defeat the Wage-Hour bill.

Congress as a whole is much more interested in passing legislation to aid business, this being a subject close to the folks back home, and a subject the members are hearing about. But President Roosevelt has shown no sincere desire to encourage this interest.

It just doesn't make sense to throw fat on the fire, and expect calm deliberation.

There can only be one definite action guaranteed to take place, a filibuster by southern senators, which is as constructive and friendly as kicking a man's feet from under him on an icy pavement.

Grenada, Miss. Sentinel
December 17, 1937

INGLORIOUS PAGE IN AMERICAN HISTORY

Judge Lynch, after his own ruthless code, usurps the functions of prosecutor, judge, jury and executioner; he knows no law and recognizes no authority save to defy them. Men, becoming infected with temporary beastial insanity and blood-madness, rush to the kill.

Lynchings bring shame to Christian communities—but Federal restraint in the form of Federal meddling with the police powers of the States to the extent and manner prescribed in the pending anti-lynching bill would only mean another law for lynchers and mobsters to violate, and would not accomplish the results intended. The Government cannot legislate sanity and reason into minds and hearts of men gone mad.

While the crime of lynching occupies an inglorious page in American history, it does not rival in degree of infamy the low cunning of a few demagogs, alias honest men, who seek to arouse and use racial hatreds and sectionalism as a stalking horse for negro votes. On the other hand, sincere men and women support the measure solely on the premise that any move for curbing mob violence is better than no effort.

Why should we have Uncle Sam arrogate the role of policeman for the States' own private back alley? According to Florida's Senator Pepper, "There is plenty to talk about and there is plenty to do instead of wasting our time on something that is not one of the major problems of American public life."

Lynchings - 1937
& Legislation Relating to.

5728

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
July 5, 1937

Kill That Bill!

UP in the county of Morgan, in the midst of the Tennessee Valley development, a hot New Deal newspaper, The Decatur Daily, is published. We do not infer, however, that the editorial page of The Decatur Daily is bound by any political ties. It is simply a matter of belief and The Decatur Daily, looking around at its fields and rivers, feels that the New Deal, and more particularly that phase of it dealing with the Tennessee Valley, has been a success. Therefore, The Decatur Daily is listed among the newspapers of Alabama as a New Deal sheet.

But the Decatur Daily knows when to balk and it knows when to squawk, and its squawk, we fear, has been even more violent than that of The Tuscaloosa News on a New Deal measure, aired in the North for the benefit of the South—namely, the anti-lynching bill.

So bitterly does The Decatur Daily feel about this bill that it will welcome a filibuster on the Supreme Court bill "if that means that the same tactics are going to be used to bring about the death of the federal anti-lynching bill."

"Right now, however," the Daily informs us, "we would like most of all to hear some old-fashioned, pure Southern democracy, yelled out loud on the Senate floor to the effect that senators from this part of the United States do not intend to have any such legislation as the anti-lynching bill rammed down their throats and that they intend to do something about it.

"We have a sneaking suspicion that the majority of Southerners are not going to be content with lip service in the fight on the lynching measure. A mere negative vote is not likely to be satisfying to them.

"There are more ways of killing a cat than choking it to death. Southerners have not forgotten that when other measures aimed at the South were up for passage in the Senate, there were representatives of the people there with sufficient courage and ability to defeat them. Frankly, Southern people are looking to their Southern senators to perform the same service for them now.

"There is nothing to be gained by talking about party solidarity, party loyalty, party success and all the rest of the tommyrot which will be poured into the ears of Southern senators in an effort to make them sell their birthright for a mess of political pottage.

"What we want is action! What we expect is action!

"The people of the South expect their senators to tear the lynching bill to pieces and senators who may have permitted their eyes to stray to foreign political fields had better take a look behind them at the people at home."

All of which we roundly applaud—and add this: The word from Washington is to the effect that an anti-lynching bill, already passed in the House and approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, will be adopted at this session, in one form or another. If and when this measure is adopted, however, we will not expect our senators to come back home with the plea that "we couldn't help it." They can help it, by filibuster, and if any man in the South challenges the propriety of a filibuster, we simply remind him that the conditions of the Reconstruction days would have been made permanent had not it been for this maneuver. The filibuster has worked in the past, and it will work now. The Senate does not dare to clamp down the cloture rule. It was afraid to use it on Huey Long. Surely it will be afraid to use it on the entire South.

The New Deal leadership of the East and Middle West, aided and abetted by a large faction of the Republican Party, has aped this anti-lynching thus far on its journey, and we blame them for it. But if that anti-lynching bill passes in the Senate, it will be the fault of the Southern men and Southern men alone. If they do not have the courage to fight this measure, aimed solely at the South and exempting violations of the law equally as repugnant in other parts of the country, they will receive the blame—and the South will make a point not to forget them when the next election rolls around.

'SYMPATHETIC' PROMISED LYNCH BILL

WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)—Senate proponents of anti-lynching legislation received assurance today from Majority Leader Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, that he will give "sympathetic consideration" to their demands that the senate act on the issue this session.

In return, Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, agreed to cease his efforts to pin the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynch bill on administration measures as a "rider."

ANTI-LYNCHING RIDER IS TABLED BY SENATE

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP)—The senate sidestepped consideration of anti-lynching legislation today.

It tabled, 41 to 34, a proposal by Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, to add anti-lynch bill by Senators Wagner, Democrat, New York, and Van Nuys, Democrat, Indiana, be considered as amendment to the McCarran train-limit bill.

Southern senators shelved the issue with the aid of several other senate factions.

Lynching Act Revived With Sudden Coup

Senate Involved Anew In Row In Projected Federal Mob Statute

Wagner Triumphs

Issue Forced In Face Of Objections By Borah And Barkley To Proposed Law

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A motion to debate the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill caught administration leaders in the Senate napping today, upset their legislative program, and threatened to delay adjournment of Congress.

When they awoge to the situation the leaders sought to sidetrack the motion by adjourning—but their parliamentary move lost, 35 to 27.

With the revolt then clearly out of hand, Republican Leader McNary moved to recess and his motion carried, 36 to 23. This means the bill will be before the Senate again tomorrow, whereas an adjournment would have side-tracked it.

The net result wa sthat the Senate faced a bitter and perhaps lengthy fight over the measure, which the House already has passed.

Senator Wagner (D), New York, made the motion to take up the bill, and vowed that he would not withdraw it.

Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, protested that he had arranged a tentative program whereby Senator King (D), Utah, was to be recognized to take up a District of Columbia bill, and other measures were to follow that.

But Vice-President Garner interrupted to state that since Wagner was the only man who had arisen and asked for recognition from the chair, he had to be recognized.

Wagner said he did not want to disarrange th eprogram, but "I do not believe a bill of this importance ought to be set aside."

Barkley said he had no objection to consideration of the bill, but felt it should be taken up when it would not delay emergency measures. He suggested that Wagner had been "unfair" in making his motion.

Senator Clark (D), Missouri, quickly challenged aBrkley. He said a number of "shocking lynchings" made the bill extremely important emergency legislation."

Senator Borah (R), Idaho, then launched into a discussion of the constitutional phases of the legislation, asserting it would jeopardize the nation's dual system of government. He condemned some of the provisions as "perfectly outrageous."

"If you can go into a state and take charge of an individual or group of individuals who have committed a crime, and bring them under the Federal Government's jurisdiction," he said, "then the last vestige of local government will have disappeared."

Senator Minton (D), Indiana, cited the Supreme Court's Scottsboro, Ala., case decision that the State by excluding negro jurors had violated the due process clause of the constitution and therefore the negro rape defendants should have a new trial.

Borah quickly asserted the decision had "no relation whatever to Federal legislatoin," and was supported by Senator George (D), Georgia.

Lynching Bill Seen To Pass Next Session

Barkley Ends Dispute By Pledging Priority Of Measure In Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.— (AP) — Administration leaders ended the struggle over the anti-lynching bill today by giving the measure preferred status for next session.

Senators Wagner (D), New York, and Van Nuys (D), Indiana, agreed to withdraw their motion for immediate consideration.

Majority Leader Barkley (D), Kentucky, faced with a filibuster by Southern senators which was upsetting all legislative plans, made the motion to give the bill right of way next year.

He said this meant the measure would be passed early in the next session, and become law. He said there were 70 votes for it in the Senate.

Several Southern senators objected strenuously to Barkley's motion. Senator Connally (D), Texas, complained against binding the next session with any "signed in the blood promises."

"This legislation is a fraud on its face," he said, asserting it was designed to give to a special group rights and privileges denied to others.

Accusing the proponents of merely seeking votes, he shouted:

"I'd rather go back home and practice law in the justice of the peace court than sacrifice my principles for a few votes."

Connally's argument that the bill is unconstitutional was supported by Senator Borah (R), Idaho, who asserted there is nothing in the constitution giving the Federal Government the right to go into a state and establish a civil liability for damages between citizens.

Pact Being Shaped On Crop Loans

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Members of the Senate agriculture committee expressed confidence tonight President Roosevelt would approve crop loans if Congress agreed to take up crop control legislation in the first week of the next session.

This arrangement would end the impasse between Mr. Roosevelt and farm blocs in both Houses demanding crop loans, thus easing the way to adjournment.

Senator Wallace told reporters yesterday the Government should not make loans to peg commodity prices without legislation to control production.

The agriculture committee today, after conferring in executive session with Wallace, approved a concurrent resolution which would bind both houses to make crop control legislation the first order of business next session.

Chairman Smith (D), South Carolina, said Wallace told the committee he thought this pledge would satisfy the President.

After disposing of the Bilbo resolution, the committee went into session tonight to consider crop subsidy plans before it.

These include a committee bill providing for loans on the basis of 10 cents a pound for cotton, 70 cents a bushel for wheat, 50 cents a bushel for corn, eight cents a pound for tobacco and 55 cents a bushel for rice.

Other commodities could be included on such a basis as the Commodity Corporation prescribed.

Also before the committee were bills by Senator Bilbo for a 12-cent cotton loan and by Senator Connally (D), Texas, for a direct 2 1-2 cents a pound subsidy for cotton.

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
August 13, 1937

Anti-Lynch Bill Shelved

The Wagner Van Nuys anti-lynch bill, proposed as a means of giving the federal government authority to come into southern states, where lynchings occur, and prosecute those believed responsible, has been shelved for this session of congress.

Let us hope that it gets lost in the pigeon hole of unfinished business. It is discriminating and if placed into force would infringe upon state's rights and tend to destroy the principle of local government.

Southern states are capable of punishing those engaging in mob violence without the assistance or interference of the federal government.

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
August 12, 1937

Evils of the Anti-Lynch Bill

While we are not among those who go around saying yes to everything our political leaders say or do in the halls of congress or out of the corridors of this law-making body, we are nevertheless impressed with a statement made in the senate yesterday by Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, during debate on the Wagner-Van Nuys, anti-lynch bill, thrust upon the senate by the gentleman from New York.

Senator Borah, recognized as an authority on constitutional government and a student of the constitution, told the senate "If you can go into a state and take charge of an individual or group of individuals who have committed a crime, and bring them under the federal government's jurisdiction, then the last vestige of local government will have disappeared."

We agree with the senator and are naturally in accord with his views on this piece of legislation which would single out the south and discriminate against it because in the past there have been cases of mob violence. Lynchings today occur no more frequently in the south than do gang slayings and hoodlum massacres in the north and the west, yet we do not see the senate or its leadership becoming exercised over what goes on in the north.

The south is capable of handling its affairs where lynchings are involved. There are laws in every state in the south designed to discourage lynchings and mob violence and to punish those who stand charged with participating in mob action. These measures embody practically the same provisions of the act Messrs. Wagner and Van Nuys are attempting to saddle upon the south.

Such a measure would not only jeopardize the nation's dual system of government but would also constitute a serious infringement upon states rights and the rights of the people to govern themselves, and would serve to further destroy local government and work as another step toward the movement for centralization of control.

If the state courts of the south are adequate for handling such capital cases as murder, burglary, criminal assault and arson, then it stands to reason they are adequate for handling cases in which mob violence is involved. We do not need federal interference with our courts and law enforcement agencies and we do not need to be dominated to do something that is being accomplished so successfully—discouraging of lynchings.

If Senator Wagner and his group of sectional supporters want to render a service to the nation, then let them forget such discriminatory and right-revoking proposals at the anti-lynch bill and turn their attention to some of the really serious problems facing the nation.

The south can take care of lynching cases without dictation from the national capital or inferences by northern and eastern senators that we are not a law-abiding people. Such insults as the bill would thrust upon the south are so unnecessary that they are utterly ridiculous.

Rome, Ga. News-Tribune
August 19, 1937

RESTING BUT NOT DEAD

THE anti-lynch bill has gone over for the time being, due to the powerful opposition of Southern representatives but it is by no means dead. It will bob up at the next session with its advocates determined to achieve success at that time.

The struggle over this bill is interesting for several reasons, one being the light it throws upon the attitude of some public officials when they are torn between their duty to observe their oaths of office and their desire to curry favor with certain political groups.

Senator Borah, who could by no process of reasoning be charged with looking with tolerance upon law violations, has stated on more than one occasion that the pending act is clearly unconstitutional and has given his reasons for so stating. In this his position is unassailable, yet numerous members both of the house and senate continue to advocate this violation of the Constitution they are sworn to uphold.

The explanation, of course, is that they wish to retain their jobs and feel that they can best achieve this end by currying favor with the colored constituents in their districts. They would sacrifice the South to their own political advantage even though they sacrificed the Constitution in the same selfish gesture.

Meanwhile any person of normal intelligence should know that the cause of law enforcement is not going to be fostered by sending federal agents into the South to nose into matters that are purely the affairs of the state, or by attempting to punish whole communities and large groups of officials for the sins of a few vicious and misguided individuals. Such violations of the constitutional rights of the states will encourage rather than discourage disrespect for law.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5729

A Klan Attack Against The Anti-Lynching Bill

Marie Sullivan, arch-reactionary columnist on the Tory Herald Tribune, yesterday struck a tone that smacks of the Ku Klux Klan.

He called the Federal anti-lynching bill a "menace to the American form of government."

Further, he dragged out all the "states rights" and "unconstitutional" poppycock which the Southern reactionaries are using in their lynch filibuster against the bill in the Senate.

According to Sullivan, it's a "menace" to enforce the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments, a "menace" to protect the rights of the Negro people, a "menace" to wipe out the savage murder of innocent human beings—in short, a "menace" to enforce the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

The Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan could not have spoken more contemptuously of the constitutional rights of the Negro—and of the democratic rights of the American people.

And the Liberty League Herald Tribune, spokesman of the Republican reactionaries, made no comment on Sullivan's Klan outburst. It yelled "Klan, Klan, Klan" during the Black controversy, but it remains as silent as a tombstone while Senate reactionaries lynch the anti-lynching bill—and the Constitution.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
November 2, 1937

This Question Should Be Decided.

Eleven men and a woman have made first moves to appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court from jail sentences and fines imposed by a Circuit Judge who held them guilty of contempt of court on the ground that they violated an injunction issued during labor trouble at Covington some months ago. The injunction forbade more than six pickets to be at the gates of the Industrial Rayon Corporation, against which there was a strike, and otherwise restricted the activities of the strikers.

If the injunction was violated, those who violated it were, of course, in contempt of court and should expect to be punished for the offense. Sometimes court injunctions issued during labor strikes have seemed unfair to the strikers, and the Covington strikers may have considered this injunction unfair, but they should have obeyed it. The courts must be respected, regardless of the fact that they may appear to make mistakes. An injunction issued by a Judge is law while it stands, and resistance to the law not only is not to be defended but entails a penalty.

Four of these defendants at Covington already have been convicted by juries of violating the Virginia anti-lynching law and have been given prison sentences ranging from nine months to four years. They were charged with attacking non-strikers at the rayon plant, and they were guilty of the charge. They precipitated a fight by attempting to prevent non-strikers from working and should receive punishment of some kind. The right to work is as sacred as the right to strike.

But the strikers at Covington, including these four, did not constitute a mob within the meaning of the anti-lynching law. Nor did they kill or attempt to kill anybody. No one was seriously hurt in the fight at the gates of the rayon plant, and conviction of the four strikers under the anti-lynching law would seem to have been a perversion of the statute. There have been reports that an offer was made to suspend the prison sentences of the four men if they would accept lighter sentences for violation of the injunction limiting the activities of the strikers, but that they declined the offer and determined to appeal their cases.

It is well that these four defendants will ask the State Supreme Court to say whether the anti-lynching law can be invoked in cases of strike disorders. It is important that the High Tribunal decide that question. The purpose of the anti-lynching statute was to put an end to mob murders, but if it can be so interpreted as to apply to disturbances between strikers and non-strikers in a labor dispute, or between other persons or groups of persons, it should be amended by the next General Assembly.

Banquo's Ghost

LIKE Banquo's Ghost of old, the anti-lynching measure on the calendar of Congress, listed as number two item, arises to trouble the enemies of justice and protection of Negro life in the deep South. In itself, however, it is without either portent or power, but the purpose—the basic idea underlying its authorship—is spiritually powerfull enough to arouse thinking men and women of both sections of this country, although no two individuals may look upon it in the same light. Its enemies, the preponderant number of whom are southerners, of course, oppose it more out of an adherence to a putrified tradition than they do out of a well defined reason. Their objection to its enactment is at once an illogical misconception of what is the right of a citizen living under the aegis of the American union of states. They point to it as an illegitimate intruder upon the personal rights of a dominant class of citizens who are yet reluctant to discard the barbarity of something worse than heathenism for the humanity of true civilization.

On the other hand, those who favor the bill, in certain instances, have gone to as great extremes, oppositely, of course, as have its enemies. Some believe it, if and when it is enacted into federal law, will be a panacea for all the mobocratic ills that now afflict the South. This is hardly true. For, while a federal anti-lynch law may have a salubrious effect upon infrequency to mob action, it should not be expected to magically change the spirit of the men who form mobs overnight. Even the victory of the boys in blue could not and did not change the spirit of the South to the degree where it metamorphosed race hatreds into inter-racial love and brotherly communion. The spirit of man is beyond the power of laws and wars—today, as well as yesterday.

Nevertheless, every lover of justice should hope for the enactment of the present anti-lynch bill. It is hardly possible that it will make conditions any worse than they now are as relates to the Negro's treatment in the South. And it IS possible that federal legislation of this nature will serve as a check to the present unbridled spirit of mobocracy rampant in the South. Even Banquo's Ghost served a good purpose.

Fools

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The Senate side-tracked the administration program today as it prepared to take up the controversial anti-lynching bill. —The Associated Press.

What idiocy and callous impudence!

Passage of the Federal anti-lynching bill would not contribute any weapon that civilization needs to fight the evil, but would lead to many injustices to the innocent.

Anybody who believes that a Federal grand jury or a Federal petit jury in Alabama, or Florida, or Georgia, or Mississippi, would be more aggressive in punishing mob murderers than jurymen from a State circuit, is full of sour prunes.

It seems to The Advertiser that any man of sense should know that what one Alabama juryman thinks and feels another Alabama juryman would think and feel, whether he is summoned to the Federal building or the county courthouse.

The proposed anti-lynching bill would impose heavy fines upon counties whose sheriffs permitted lynchings. That would prove expensive to taxpayers, but would it cool the flaming passions of mob-killers? Would it?

No, the Federal government can do no more than the State governments are doing to quell the mob spirit because of the fact that Federal jurymen are the neighbors and friends of State jurymen. But in the North politicians know that anti-lynching agitation is "good medicine," and so they are making the most of their opportunities, while the American people as a whole suffer bitterly because of basic economic ills.

A politician regards it as his first duty to be re-elected, not to save his country, and Congress is packed with politicians. If pending anti-lynching legislation delays consideration of far graver measures, those who are responsible for the crime against society should be appropriately stigmatized.

Any politician in Congress who takes refuge in the phony anti-lynching bill to delay passage of national economic legislation is a fool.

Congress is in a nasty mood and is prepared in its heart to fight the President to the bitter end. We do not quite understand this mood, because it is obvious that the President today is the most powerful politician in America. He is still the most inspirational leader of the Western world. Yet Congress is preparing to gut him. Mark the prediction!

Distressed agriculture continues to be the primary concern of every honest and thoughtful person in public life. Until agriculturists are put on their feet, nobody else can hope to walk without the benefit of a cane.

American genius will at last solve the problems of American agriculture, or the people of this country will have to accept a permanent lower standard of living, and like it as well.

American business has a right to expect the White House to be on its side, but until now American business has believed that the White House was hostile to it. All of the rhetoric issuing from the White House has been disturbing to harassed and beaten business men—until now.

Now the President seems conciliatory. Lately he has consulted business men and in his message to Congress he speaks respectfully of them. That's a help.

Taxation must be reconsidered! The American surplus must be preserved!

Agriculture must be stabilized, probably by force, as Senator Bankhead demands!

Any politician in Congress who breaks faith with the American people by occupying the time of his colleagues with a discussion of lynching instead of basic economic measures affecting the whole people is, as we have said, a fool.

The republic of our fathers languishes! Patriotism and common decency are the issues of this hour.

Anti-Lynching Parley Slated

Special to The Commercial Appeal

DURANT, Miss., Dec. 1.—A state Anti-Lynching Institute will be held here tomorrow and Friday under the auspices of the State Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

The association seeks to reduce lynching and mob violence through a program of education.

Among organizations in Mississippi committed to a program of education are the Diocese of Mississippi, Episcopal Church, the North Mississippi Methodist Conference, the Mississippi Federation of Women's Clubs; Mississippi W. C. T. U. and the Mississippi and North Mississippi Women's Missionary Societies of the Methodist Church.

SENATE ARGUMENTS AGAINST LYNCH BILL ANALYZED

Pine Bluff Commercial 12-3-37 Memphis Press-Scimitar

New York, Dec. 3.- All the arguments advanced against a federal anti-lynching bill in the Senate during the filibuster from November 16-22 have been analyzed carefully by members of the legal committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and replies have been formulated for the debate which is certain to be taken up again when the anti-lynching bill reaches the floor about December 10. The Congressional Record was used by the legal committee in analyzing the arguments. Those present at an afternoon and evening session here in New York were: Arthur B. Spingarn, national chairman of the N.A.A.C.P. legal committee; William F. Illig, Erie, Pa.; Leon A. Ransom, Washington, D. C.; Charles H. Tuttle, Herbert K. Stockton, Hubert T. Delany, all of New York City; and Charles H. Houston and Thurgood Marshall of the national office legal staff.

Anti-Lynching Bill Reveals Sectional Differences

Christian Century

SENATORIAL debate on the anti-lynching bill has been marked by a filibuster which is criticized by administration supporters as holding up the President's program, by the maiden speech of Senator Dixie Graves, who owes her seat in the Senate to appointment by her husband, the governor of Alabama, and by the rift which the topic developed between northern and southern Democrats. A filibuster in the Senate is not startling news. Neither is there any particular novelty in such a speech as that of Mrs. Graves to the effect that "I hate lynching, but —," with the stress of the argument not upon the admitted evil but upon the invasion of state rights that would be involved in an application of federal power to abate it. The new feature of the situation is that, perhaps on account of the increased number of Negro voters in many northern constituencies, where the Negroes really do vote, the bill has won such strong support from northern Democratic senators that there is a prospect of its passage. This sectional tension within the party came to a climax in the heated interchange between Senator Van Nuys of Indiana, one of the authors of the bill, who defied anyone to "produce" a longer record of loyalty to the Democratic party" than his own, and Senator Smith of South Carolina who replied: "And now you wash it all out by attempting to humiliate the section which kept the Democratic party alive." It is, of course, mere rhetoric to say that anybody wants to humiliate anybody by the passage of this measure. It is equally far from the facts to assert that the differences of attitude toward it reflect any basic difference of opinion in regard to the sovereignty of states. Southern Democrats were, for example, much more ready than northern Democrats to concede to the federal government the right to prohibit the liquor traffic. But the debate on the federal anti-lynching bill touches the sharp edge of a political reality when it comes up against the fact that southern senators have more Negroes in their states while northern senators have more voting Negroes in theirs.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5730

5730

Eupora, Miss. Progress
April 22, 1937

Anti-Lynching Legislation

Now pending in the national Congress is the so-called Gavagan Anti-lynching Bill.

From time to time during the past few years anti-lynching bills have been introduced in the national Congress but have been successfully filibustered against by Southern lawmakers and kept off the statute books. At present there are 59 such bills pending in Congress, with the Gavagan proposal already having passed the House by a 277 to 119 vote.

The present bill provides that officers permitting a prisoner to be taken from them by a mob shall be subjected to a fine of $5,000 and five years in prison. There is a further provision that counties in which the prisoner is seized might be subjected to damages ranging from $2,000 to $10,000, payable to the victim's family. Officers would be tried in a federal court if state officers failed to prosecute within 30 days, or in the event the federal judge is convinced the state court would be partial.

Such a measure as that proposed by Congressman Gavagan, representative of a large negro district in New York City, we feel would be undesirable.

The bill in operation would in many cases, no doubt, punish a victim of the mob, the sheriff, and not the actual offenders. Instead of going out and punishing the mobsters such a measure merely strikes feebly at one of the actors in mob drama, the officers who in most instances are helpless in the face of the temporarily insane mass which is a mob.

The Gavagan act, by the provision providing for payment of damages to the victim's family, penalizes a whole county for the act of a few people To a poor county, such as our own, $10,000 would be a staggering sum, especially at a time when taxes are already unbearable, and an assessment of such damages to a whole county, often out of sympathy with and actually condemning mob murder, is grossly unjust.

Over-looked, or at least unheeded by the proponents of anti-lynching legislation, is the fact that a mob murder is the same as any other murder, the only difference being in the number of persons carrying out the overt act, and that all states have laws punishing murderers. The law doesn't even hit at the mob ring leaders, who are actually responsible, and who are the actual murderers. Such legislation acts to correct only a small factor, that is the laxity in some cases of officers, and allows the actual perpetrators to go unpunished.

Officers have in many cases been unwise in their handling of persons accused of heinous crimes and some officers may have been actual accomplices to lynchings by turning prisoners over too readily to mobs, but when a small group of officers is confronted by several hundred temporarily insane people they are virtually helpless. Resistance would often result in only more bloodshed.

With fear of the expense to the county and fear of personal punishment, if the Gavagan act passes, county officers throughout the nation would be continually after state governors to send in the state militia to protect prisoners. Mississippi cannot afford to bear the expense of National Guard conducted trials and she should not be made to do so., Mob murders are brutal, but they are not nearly so brutal as the almost daily fiendish slayings of men, women and children carried out by some insane man. Mob murders are infrequent in comparison with other types of murders, and states should not be made to bear the expense which the Gavagan act calls for because a few people go temporarily wild now and then.

Anti-lynching legislation is psychologically unsound. It will not be worth one iota as a mob preventative. Backers of such measures disregard the fact that mob craze is a state of insanity and that the men who make up a mob will not stop to consider money cost to their county or punishment to their sheriff when bent upon seizing some hapless prisoner. And if the bill won't help prevent lynchings, and it evidently will not, what's the use of forcing it upon us? Laws are passed not only to punish guilty persons, but to serve as preventative measures as well.

But above all, even if such legislation could be effective and we feel that it cannot, is the fact that it is a tryannical and unwarranted invasion of state's rights, sacred to every Southerner and every true American.

Anti-lynching legislation would extend the ever out-reaching hand of Federal jurisdiction too deeply into the states, and would usurp state handling of a matter affecting only a few people in a small section of a state. States have always held inviolate the power of removing from office and punishing their officials. County officers are not federal officials in any sense, and their relations with the people should be determined by the state or by the people making up their constituency. The Federal constitution expressly provides that in all matters not expressly placed under Congressional jurisdiction or prohibited to the state the states or the people shall have jurisdiction. From this provision it is evident that Federal trial and Federal punishment of county officials is an absolutely favor it, whether believing in it or sponsoring it for political motives, are not in sympathy with state's rights and consequently cannot be in sympathy with the system of government which our forefathers did so much to establish and which we have sought to protect.

If we are to allow the national government to step in and interfere with our legal procedures in this manner we might as well turn our judiciary over to the Federal government. The Gavagan act is undoubtedly a step toward complete Federal autocracy and dominance. Under the act U. S. district judges are authorized to determine whether or not they think trial would be conducted properly and impartially in state courts and if not, in their opinion, to call for trial in the Federal courts, thus making of the Federal court system the "tyrannical oligarchy" which Thomas Jefferson said it would become.

The motive behind anti-lynching bills has not been one of humanitarianism but has been purely a political move to gain support of the large negro bloc in the north. Anti-lynching legislation is unsound, un-American and unwarranted. Those who

Columbia, S. C. Record
May 14, 1937

Mississippi's Part.

It will be interesting to see what the senate does with the anti-lynching bill, already passed by the house, the enactment of which was a campaign promise to the negro voters in many Northern states last year. Southern members in the house and senate are almost hysterical in their opposition. House members are still making speeches about it in the Congressional Record. Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, has a long speech from which may be quoted:

"This bill is not a new proposition. It is simply the old force bill of carpetbag days in a little different form. In those days it was sponsored by corrupt Republican carpet baggers—the most vicious set of thieves that ever plundered and murdered the helpless white people of the Southern states . . .

"A few demagogues on the Republican side brought this measure in and shoved it through the house in 1922. The more decent members of that party became ashamed of it and let it die in the senate. Today the measure is brought here fostered by an irresponsible element of so-called Democrats for the purpose of taking care of their own political hides at home."

Representative Rankin should not however overlook the very important role played by Mississippi's lynching record in promoting and encouraging the enactment of the anti-lynching bill. Every unpunished lynching—and when was there a punished lynching in Mississippi?—is an argument for federal intervention.

"A blow torch," as the Danville (Va.) Register puts it, "is more convincing than logic."

Prattville, Texas. Progress
May 17, 1937

Topics of the Day

THE INCORRIGIBLE BILBO

Theodore G. Bilbo, not satisfied with having seriously handicapped Mississippi's system of higher education, is now upset because a group of Millsaps College students petitioned him to vote for the Gavagan anti-lynching bill. And the senator demands an investigation of all student organizations to smoke out what he says is Communistic activity on the Millsaps campus.

Millsaps College, fortunately, is not a state institution, and when Bilbo, as governor, reorganized the state college and university system in Mississippi he was unable to interfere at Millsaps. Perhaps the senator has been waiting for an opportunity to take a crack at this institution which has been beyond his sphere of influence. And just because a group of students ask him to support an anti-lynching bill Bilbo goes into a dither and roars that students have been "misled, misguided and deceived" into joining a Communist organization.

President Key, of Millsaps College, is to be congratulated for his forthright statement upholding the students' right to "express their views to their senator on a question before the Congress that concerns them as citizens. I believe that the views expressed may possibly be erroneous, but that they are not a legitimate ground for public protest and criticism."

That is a sensible and logical answer to a senator who seems only remotely acquainted with logic.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Sylacauga, Ala., News
May 7, 1937

ALABAMA STATESMAN

In a recent issue of the Selma Times-Journal appeared the following article from the Honorable Hobson Owen Murfee, distinguished educator of Alabama on the address of Congressman Hobbs in the discussion of the Anti-Lynching Bill before Congress:

Editor, Times-Jaurnal:

A Federal Anti-lynching Bill designed to usurp States' Rights and to destroy constitutional guarantees of freedom was introduced in the present Congress by Representative Gavagan of New York. After debate, this Bill was passed in the House on April 15 by a vote of 277 for, to 119 against.

To the honor of Alabama, every member of the House from Alabama voted against this unwise measure. To the honor of Alabama, the most notable speech against this bill was made by Congressman Hobbs who now wears worthily the mantle of Senator John Tyler Morgan. He would be an honor to The Senate as he is now an honor to the House.

Congressman Hobbs said in part:

"This bill is a rape of justice. This bill is itself the rope with which this mob would lynch the constitutional guarantees which we have cherished through the years. This bill is not an anti-lynching bill. It is a prolynching bill. It will stimulate that dying, almost extinct, disgrace to our civilization-lynching.

"All good citizens glory in the progress we have made towards the goal of a land completely cleared of the stigma of lynching. Even one is a disgrace to civilization. All of us feel that way. But while some have been risking their lives to prevent mob violence, others introduce bills.

"There is not a man in this Chamber, not a man in either branch of Congress, who is not against lynching. Scarcely a citizen in the whole nation fails to condemn it. I respectfully submit, therefore, that this resort to mob violence to lynch the Constitution by the passage of this outrageius law should not be sanctioned and that the pending motion should be voted down. (Applause.)

::Does the spirit of mob violence which is driving this bill through this House make it right? No, It is just as wrong as the hinges of hell; it is just as wrong as any action that was ever taken by a mob, judged by the morals of the situation. You have the votes; you have the power, but you have not the right! (Applause)

In these splendid final words, Congressman Hobbs speaks with soberness and with truth "the authentic voice of the best political thought of the English race." Thus Woodrow Wilson praised the immortal Edmund Burke who said likewise:

"'The eternal rules of justice and reason are above not only the will of eletorates, but above all orders of the State."

"The votes of a majority of the people, whatever their infamous flatters may teach in order to corrupt their minds, cannot alter the moral any more than they can alter the physical essence of things."

"Neither the few nor the many have a right to act merely by their will in any matter connected with duty, trust, engagement, or obligation."

This is the wisdom of Edmund Burke, of Woodrow Wilson, and of Congressman Hobbs of Alabama.

Hopson Owen Murfee.
Prattville, Ala., April 20, 1937.

Orlando, Fla., Morning Sentinel
November 15, 1937

MORE FEDERAL POWER

Thruout Orange County and Florida speeches are being made and letters written favoring a Federal anti-lynching act which may be bitterly debated in this special session of Congress opening Monday.

Senator Charles O. Andrews seems to sum up the matter rightly when he stated recently: 'Nobody would want disorder such as is shown in a lynching but it is up to the State to enforce these laws and not the Federal Government."

In other words lynching is home rule, a home problem, a local matter which must be settled at home; a condition which is gradually lessening; a strictly Southern affair where two races are living under happy conditions unduplicated elsewhere in the world.

"Members of the Senate and the House and the best of the South are not in favor of lynching, but when it comes to the Federal Government arming itself with a law that would nullify the sanctity of States rights that is something different," continues Senator Andrews.

Federal control and centralization of power is becoming so pernicious that, if it keeps going, State's Governors, cabinets and administrations may as well go out of business, leaving to bureaus and commissions at Washington the power to regulate and dictate affairs in precincts and counties.

There can and will be no solution of a strictly local problem by throttling home control by a 3,000-mile long police billy wielded by Uncle Sam who so far cannot solve matters of finance, unemployment and relief, labor. Solving the big things should come first not adding confusion to State affairs.

Lynchings~1937
Legislation Relating to.

5731

SPECULATE ON ATTITUDE OF WHITE HOUSE

Press Service of the N.A.A.C.P.

Washington, Nov. 5.- As the time for the special session of Congress draws near, there is much speculation upon the attitude of the White House toward the federal anti-lynching bill, scheduled as the number two item of business on the Senate calendar. Ever since 1934 President Roosevelt has indicated informally on many occasions that he is against lynching and willing to see the federal government try to put a stop to mob violence. But while the President has condemned lynching, he has never given his personal blessing in a formal statement to a federal anti-lynching bill. During the last session it was stated im Washington that the White House was known to favor an anti-lynching bill, but no public statement of that attitude has ever been made in a press conference or to Senate and House leaders officially. 11-5-37 Newspaper, Dayton

The section of the public which is supporting this legislation believes that the President is friendly, but there has been from time to time considerable criticism because he has failed to speak out. It has been thought by observers here that the President might use the Justice Black episode (without referring directly to it) as an opportunity to reassure the minority groups that his position on civil liberties, and especially on protection from mob violence, has not changed.

Houston, Miss. Post
November 4, 1937

With Other Editors

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL
(Columbus Commercial Dispatch)

Under the heading, "Not Worth the Price," the Lynchburg, Va., News, published by Senator Carter Glass and Sons, prints this intelligent discussion of the proposed anti-lynching bill:

When the congress adjourned in August there remained on the program several measures advocated by the president, including one which, while not on the "must" list, had received his approval. This was the so-called anti-lynching bill and it held preferred place on the calendar. It will be one of the first measures to be considered when the special session is convened and the general impression seems to be that it will be passed by both houses and, of course, signed by the president.

There are several reasons for belief that passage is virtually certain, several things that make its passage virtually certain. They are:

1—There are votes in it. The negro has been emigrating into the northern and middle western sections of the country for some time. He is a power in the politics in those sections. His vote is angled for by all candidates for office; in some sections united opposition of the negro vote is decisive; no candidate can be elected under that circumstance. It has been true for some time but there has been a difference. Until recently the negro vote was solidly republican and where it was large democratic candidates had little chance. Knowing that the negro vote was unattainable, or unexpected, democratic members of the congress have been willing for the most part to go along with the southern members in opposition to "anti-lynching" legislation. However demagogic they might be they couldn't hope to profit much in that direction. They left sponsorship of "anti-lynching" legislation to the republicans. That was their game. Now it is different. The negro vote is divided; the negro is growing more independent. Democrats as well as republicans angle for his support, and a fine bait in sections in which there is an important negro vote is to shout and vote for "anti-lynching" legislation. So they are shouting and they are going to vote for it—and there are more northern and western democrats than there are southern democrats.

2—Liberalism has become a fetish. To be considered liberal is de riguer. And, for some strange reason, advocacy of increased federal government powers has come to be a hall mark of this spurious liberalism. Furthermore, humanitarianism and liberalism have become confused and because humanity revolts at lynching anything that is labeled a measure to prevent lynching wins approval. This brings to the measure both the wishful thinkers and the demagoguges who hope to profit politically by pretense of liberalism and of humanitarianism.

3—President Roosevelt supports it. Members of the congress from the south who have never favored anti-lynching legislation because of lack of interest in the welfare of the negro will now vote for such legislation because it has received the approval of the president. The rubber stamp element of the congress will be for it.

4—Local self-government, from being a fetish, has become anathema to those who like to think of themselves as modern. The doctrine of state's rights is old-fashioned, therefore is to be jeered at. The fundamental principle, that of keeping government close at home, is lost sight of. Anything to obtain desired ends! Anything to be up-to-date!

That the passage of "anti-lynching" legislation will have any appreciable effect upon the mob has never been demonstrated. Even those who are so horrified at assaults upon civilization and the inherent rights of individuals to fair trial that they forget the price that must be paid for vesting police powers in a central government and for giving that central government powers of coercion have never been able to argue convincingly that after paying the price the supposed benefits will be reaped. They can only hope. The states have not prevented lynching, they point out, and so they are willing to try something else.

The News would be frank about this matter. It doesn't fected, what is to be the end when there are votes in it? And whence does the federal government derive the power to deprive a state of its rights because it has neglected to perform its duties? To admit that there is a power to correct and to save the states from themselves is to deny to the states any rights the central government may wish to deny them. It is to re-write the constitution so as to eliminate the provision reserving to the states the rights not granted the central government and make that provision read: "The powers not delegated to the states by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the United States, are reserved to the United States."

And that would mean the end of the federal government and the substitution of a central government without constitutional restrictions worthy the name upon its powers. There are those who desire such a government, but those who do not thirst after a spurious liberalism, who believe the essence of true liberalism is opposition to coercive government must look upon all legislation threatening its establishment with apprehension, no matter what rosy promises of immediate good are held out.

Editor Virginius Dabney, of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, believes (1) that a federal anti-lynching bill is going to be passed and (2) that the South isn't going to mind it as much as some southerners think. We move to add (3) that it isn't going to cut half the good most Northern liberals think it will do and its passage is going to rob these gentlemen of an issue they made a test of liberalism so long that they will miss it terribly. Lynching, already on the way out in the south, will disappear altogether when and only when southern public opinion and southern economic conditions are right.

Thomasville, Ga., Times-Enterprise
November 9, 1937

ANOTHER STEP TO BREAK DOWN THE COLOR LINE

The anti-lynching bill in its present shape is even worse than the political opponents of it have stated it was. The bill would provide for the collection of ten thousand dollars from the county in which it occurred and the payment of that sum to the widow or relatives of the deceased.

Therefore it would seem that the penalty to be inflicted is to be widespread, divided equally among the taxpayers, regardless of their complicity or even knowledge of the crime and it is usually the case that the mob is composed of ninety-nine, who pay no taxes and one who may have a small tax bill.

The use of the money for the widow of the deceased is another form of farce. The relatives may come in for it and they may sometimes join the mob to lynch him in order to share the wealth. The jolt comes with the sheriff or his officers who do not prevent the lynching. No matter what he may do to prevent it, unless he succeeds, off comes his official head. If he dies in defense of the prisoner he may not be summarily disgraced. Unless he does he will be, no matter what the odds.

This subject is one on which we often come close to seeing red because it is so patently a partisan and splenetic feeling on the part of those who are just as guilty of criminal negligence and carelessness as the southern people who permit lynchings. The manslaughters committed in other sections are as disgraceful as any other form of public crime. We are all guilty in a sense to encouraging crime by not having the guts to stamp it out by the aid personal activity and participation in the procedure.

The call for the bill is born in hate, sectional partisanship of the vilest type and is but another step to break down the color line, something that no end of fines and lynchings combined can ever bring about.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
November 5, 1937

The Antilynching Bill

[Chattanooga Times]

THE Washington correspondent of The New Republic writes in the magazine's current issue that it has been reported for weeks that the Southern senators "would secretly like to see the antilynching bill pass." Concerning the Southerners, the correspondent adds:

"They will pretend to filibuster against it, but they will take pains to see that the filibuster fails. In this way anti-New Deal Southerners hope to gain an issue to use against the Administration in next year's primaries. Men who must stand for re-election—for example, Senator George of Georgia—are said to feel that white supremacy is almost the only issue on which they can defeat pro-Roosevelt rivals."

That is interesting, to be sure, but it does not make too much sense. The same writer comments that "probably a majority of the Southern congressmen are hostile to Mr. Roosevelt and his policies," yet "they show no signs of letting themselves be pushed into open rebellion." If, as The New Republic's correspondent believes, Southerners in Congress are working against the Administration's wages-and-hours bill, and perhaps against the farm bill, "while simultaneously protesting doglike devotion to Mr. Roosevelt's person," they will be likely to protest the same "doglike devotion" if the antilynching bill is enacted.

One does not have to imagine that the Southern senators are, as a group, particularly high-minded in order to discount The New Republic's explanation of why Southern opposition to antilynching legislation is less vociferous than it has been. The South has refused to deal with the problem. Federal antilynching legislation would not stand a chance of passage if the South could show that a single State has followed Virginia's lead in dealing effectively with mob violence.

Anti-Lynching Bill Assailed by Knox

JESUP, Ga., Nov. 17 (AP)—Superior Judge Gordon Knox told the grand jury today that the anti-lynching bill now before congress "is unfair, unjust and uncalled for. The present bill is a damnable proposition," he said.

He praised the state highway patrol and stated he thought it a wise move. He also commended officers of the patrol.

R. M. Milliken, ex-mayor of Jesup, was elected foreman of grand jury.

In his discussion of the anti-lynch bill, the judge emphasized he was "heartily in favor of blotting out lynching."

Shreveport, La., Times
November 14, 1937

Proposed Law Would Fine Counties Where Lynchings Occur

The federal lynch law controversy was pushed into the limelight early this year when the House of Representatives passed an anti-lynch bill sponsored by Representative Gavagan (D., N. Y.)

The Gavagan Bill, which will come before the Senate at this sitting, proivdes: (1) Fine or imprisonment for any peace officer who fails to make "all diligent efforts" to protect a prisoner from a lynch mob; (2) Imprisonment for any peace officer who conspires to turn a prisoner over to a mob; (3) Damages of $2,000 to $10,000 to be assessed against any county in which a prisoner has been seized by a mob or in which a lynching occurs. The damages thus collected are to be turned over to the lynch victim, if he survives, or to his "legal representatives." A number of other anti-lynching bills which are also pending before congress, notably the Wagner-Van Nuys bill, contain much the same provisions.

Opposition to a federal lynch law is not confined to Southern members of congress. Senator Borah of Idaho has also opposed federal action on constitutional grounds. But the main arguments against the lynch bill have been put forward by Southern Senators. Senator Bailey of North Carolina summed up the case when he said recently:

"What power has the federal government over a sheriff in North Carolina? The sheriff is responsible to North Carolina, and when you destroy that responsibility you destroy free government."

Those who favor federal action base their case on the Fourteenth Amendment, which provides that "no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction equal protection of the laws." The proponents of a congressional lynch law claim that since a lynching violates the provisions of this amendment the federal government has a right to step in.

The public's vote in favor of federal action is undoubtedly influenced by the enormous publicity given to lynchings. Actually, however, many more lynchings are prevented by vigilant local officers than are carried out. In 1935, the latest year for which records are available, there were 53 instances in which the police prevented mob action, as against 20 successful lynchings. And the 20 lynchings of 1935 represent a sharp decline from a generation ago. In 1901 there were 130.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5732

aneville, N. C., Times
October 18, 1937

As Well Face The Music

WHETHER they like it or not, Southerners may as well prepare for the enactment of a federal anti-lynching law within the next several months. This is the counsel of Virginius Dabney, Editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch in his article published yesterday in The Citizen-Times.

But Mr. Dabney says that the majority of the South approves this further centralization of federal authority, that most of the leading newspapers favor it, the others for the most part being neutral. Passing over the importance of the subject itself, the most interesting feature of Mr. Dabney's description of this situation is his account of the shift of Southern sentiment in the last twenty years.

Two decades ago, Mr. Dabney pictures the newspapers almost unanimously "pawing the air" at the very thought of such a law. Southern legislators voting for an anti-lynching bill would have been deluged with protests. Representative Maury Maverick of Texas, the only Congressman from the deep South who supported the House bill, reports that he heard not a single outcry from his constituents of the San Antonio district.

The Times belongs to the minority that deplores the imminence of this legislation. But Mr. Dabney accurately presents the major cause at work in the minds of the people—in 99 per cent. or more of lynching cases no punishment ever has been meted out. When local authority virtually abdicates, federal authority moves in.

rew, Miss. Leader
October 21, 1937

That lynch law bill which will be presented in Congress at this extraordinary session is going to cause a rumpuss. Facts of the case it should not be presentd, and if it should the President should soft pedal it. It is a menace to the south. For down in the southern states rape means rope, and no power can stop it unless court immediately convenes and the penalty of death is given and takes place instanter.

Ruleville, Miss. Record
October 21, 1937

That lynch law bill which will be presented in Congress at this extraordinary session is going to cause a rumpuss. Facts of the case it should not be presentd, and if it should the President should soft pedal it. It is a menace to the south. For down in the southern states rape means rope, and no power can stop it unless court immediately convenes and the penalty of death is given and takes place instanter.

Danville, Va., Register
October 24, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Among the measures to receive early consideration by the special session of Congress that convenes on November 15 is what is known as the anti-lynching bill. The Senate, in the hurly-burly of adjournment in August, agreed to make it a special order of business at the next session and give it attention immediately after farm legislation is out of the way.

The bill passed the House by a considerable majority. A filibuster by Southern senators prevented it from reaching the stage of formal debate and a vote in the upper chamber. The consensus of well-informed opinion in Washington seems to be that the bill will be enacted into law at the special session. Not all of the Southern senators are opposed to it, and there are a number of influential newspapers in the South that are demanding its passage.

The proposed legislation, agitated in one form or another by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and politicians in the North with large negro constituencies, rests for its authority as a federal statute on the due-process and equal-protection provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States. The claim of its proponents is that lynching deprives the victim of the protection guaranteed him under this clause. There is no argument on the point.

There are, however, provisions in the anti-lynching bill that raise serious doubt that the proposed law will prove effective in suppressing the crime of lynching. On that ground, if on no other, Southern senators have ample justification for opposing its enactment, even by resort to filibuster. Mob fury is a terrible thing and to oppose the pending law is not to to condone lynching, even when the provocation to wreak vengeance on the perpetrator of a hideous crime is great.

It is wholly unfair to impute unworthy motives to senators who oppose this bill. It may be that the states, not alone in the South, have failed to enact laws sufficiently stringent to prevent lynchings. Virginia has a very effective law dealing with the crime, enacted during the administration of Governor Byrd. It is no answer to the charge that the states have failed in their responsibilities to prevent violence by mobs to demand passage by the federal Congress of a bill containing such drastic, yet ineffective, provisions as are included in the measure under discussion.

The bill makes any county or city of a state liable to the next kin of a victim of lynching within its borders in the amount of not less than $2,000 or more than $10,000. On this point it provides that the compensation may be recovered in a civil action in the federal courts, and empowers the attorney general of the United States to bring and prosecute the suit.

The measure makes sheriffs, jailers and other officers of the state or its subdivisions who fail to prevent the lynching of a prisoner in their custody, or who fail to apprehend or prosecute members of a lynching mob, liable to a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both.

The bill makes it the duty of the attorney general of the United States, when a lynching has occurred, to conduct an investigation to ascertain whether there has been a violation of the act.

The law would make the taxpayers liable for monetary damages for a lynching that might occur in a county, with a federal court empowered to try the case and enforce collection. Under it the sheriff of Pittsylvania or any other Virginia county would be subject to a fine and imprisonment by a federal court in the event he refused to shoot it out with a mob bent on taking and lynching a prisoner in his custody. Only by a preponderance of evidence that the sheriff had not neglected his duty could he escape punishment. Mobs, as a rule, do not send advance notices to the sheriff or jailer holding a prisoner sought by them that they are on their way. Usually the lynchers appear at the prison when the sheriff or jailer is alone and when they may be easily overpowered. Under the proposed law the officer, in these circumstances, would be expected to give his life in a futile effort to save his prisoner.

The proposal to make a county or other state subdivision liable for damages in the event of a lynching is a novel one in the administration of justice and, if approved by Congress will open up a pioneering field in law enforcement.

These are some of the actual provisions of the bill that make it objectionable. The principle involved in the measure does violence to the doctrine of state's rights, but of that little need be said because that old and sound theory of the relation-hen the Eighteenth amend abandoned the principle when e constitution.

ective is worthy, is thor ough impracticable. It will n ship between the state's and the federal governmen as long since been relegated to the limbo of things forgotten. Virginia and most of the Southern states ment was written into the co
The bill, while its objective will not prevent lynchings

Lynching Measure Opposed by Cox

Telegraph

Representative Says Bill Is Communistic Movement

11-3-37

MOULTRIE, Ga., Nov. 2 (AP)—Congressman E. E. Cox says the proposed federal anti-lynching law is "a law against our people, born in hate and intended to be used as a communistic movement to break down the color line in the south."

The Second Georgia district representative speaking at the courthouse here said he opposed the bill at the regular session of congress because it would "extend into the state and local communities federal power to administer local laws."

He said the bill provides counties in which a lynching occurs are liable to relatives of the person lynched for damages and the sheriff may be charged with federal law violation if he does not intervene where it is within his power.

ANTI-LYNCHING DRIVE ANGERS DIXIE SOLONS

Petition Is Prepared to Bring Wages and Hours Measure to Lower Branch

Telegraph

REPUBLICANS JEER RIVALS

Failure to Have Farm Plans Completed Is at Root of Confused Situation

11-17-37

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Administration leaders helplessly watched their well-laid plans go awry today and President Roosevelt's special session program came to an abrupt, if temporary, halt.

In the senate, meantime, Southerners conducted an old-fashioned filibuster against anti-lynching legislation, adorned with the usual trimmings of full-throated oratory and lengthy reading from old congressional records.

In the house, while confusion got the better of Speaker Bankhead's gavel, Republicans spoke bitingly of calling a special session with no work ready to be done. Then they blocked an effort to adjourn until Friday.

The root of the difficulty was the fact that, while both houses had agreed to take up crop control legislation immediately upon reconvening, their agriculture committees were not ready to submit a bill for consideration on the floor.

The president had called for a farm bill, wage and hour legislation, government reorganization and regional planning, and had given a signal to go ahead with preliminary work on tax revision.

Reorganization Bill is Ready

Only government reorganization legislation was ready. House leaders decided yesterday that the time was inopportune for considering it, and in the senate the anti-lynching issue was interposed today.

The chairman of the committees which have charge of revenue legislation indicated that tax revision, which has been demanded as a means of encouraging business, might be deferred until January.

The wage and hour bill passed last session by the senate was still securely sewed up in the house rules committee, but an effort was begun today to rip it loose by means of a petition. If 218 signatures are obtained, the bill will go on to the floor automatically.

Chairman Norton (D.-N. J.) of the house labor committee instituted the action. At the beginning of the day's session she laid the petition on the speaker's desk and a long queue of representatives awaited an opportunity to sign.

Only 45 had the chance during the short session for signatures must be attached while the house is meeting. But, when the adjournment was taken, a sizeable line was still waiting.

Senate in Intricate Snarl

The senate, meeting for the first business day of the new session, quickly found itself tangled in an intricate parliamentary snarl.

The cause was that in addition to designating crop control as the first order of business, the senate had made the anti-lynching bill the second item upon its program.

Senator Barkley (D.-Ky.) the majority leader, tried in vain to work out a back-stage agreement with proponents of the anti-lynching measure, under which the senate could go ahead with the government reorganization bill of Senator Byrnes (D.-S. C.)

11-17-37

Byrnes, a bitter foe of anti-lynching bills, as well as the author of the reorganization measure, stole a march on the supporters of the former by obtaining the floor at the beginning of the session.

However, in the afternoon Senator Wagner (D.-N. Y.) succeeded in making a motion that the anti-lynch bill be debated.

Then the filibuster began. Bitterly, Senator Connally (D.-Tex.) warned his colleagues that an effort to pass the bill would cause "some little delay." He went into a long dissertation on the fact that the special session was called to enact the president's program.

"I fail to find anywhere in the president's message any mention of this matter," he said. "What was the session called for? I ask the leaders of the majority and the minority."

Grinning broadly, Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader, answered: "We don't know, ourselves."

"I do know," said Senator Barkley and he enumerated the bills listed by the president, observing, however, that under the circumstances, consideration of the anti-lynching bill would not violate the special order of business.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT FOR ANTI-LYNCHING LEGISLATION

Almost immediately after a Mississippi mob had seized two Negroes—during their trial at Tupelo for killing a white man—and burned them to death with gasoline blow-torches, thereby outraging justice and humanity, the House of Washington passed the Gavagan Anti-Lynching Bill by a large majority (277 to 119). Many Southern Democrats voted for the measure, which was almost identical with the Dyer Bill—introduced in 1918, but never duly considered.

San Antonio Express

Had any Southerner supported the Missouri Representative's proposal at that time, probably he would have committed political suicide. The vote in the House last April indicated the remarkable change in sentiment toward lynch-murder which has taken place within the past few years. At last the civic conscience is waking up and demanding that the infamy be eradicated.

11-16-37

On the other hand, in this regard "State rights" sentiment appears to be dying out. Consequently, a Federal law against lynching now is inevitable. Though the Senate succeeded in sidetracking the highly controversial measure last summer, that was merely a parliamentary coup. The bill is not dead; it has preferred standing on the calendar and probably will come before the special session just convened. In any event it will be considered early next year.

His survey of senatorial sentiment has convinced Bertram Benedict, political analyst for Editorial Research Reports, that the bill will pass. That conclusion may derive strong support from the American Institute of Public Opinion poll. To the question, "Should Congress pass a law which would make lynching a Federal crime?" 72 per cent of the citizens questioned answered, "Yes."

San Antonio

Perhaps the most surprising response came from the South, where almost all the lynchings occur—and where State rights sentiment is traditionally strong: Among the Southerners questioned—and they were chosen scientifically to represent a cross-section of the entire electorate—57 per cent voted "Yes".

Let those Southern Senators who fear to support legislation against mob crimes, lest their constituents retire them at the next election, consider that showing. Even in the "deep South," it appears, only four citizens in every 10 questioned oppose Federal action against lynching. The other six—an impressive majority—would like to see G-men put immediately on the mob's trail.

Dr. George Gallup, the Institute's director, concludes that the educational work which newspapers, colleges, churches and special organizations have been doing these many years past is becoming effective. A considerable share of the credit for the change in public sentiment belongs to the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has gathered convincing data showing the futility of expecting State and local authorities to deal effectively with lynch-murder.

In that connection consider the message from Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Texas), warning Governor White of Mississippi that should his State fail to punish the savage Duck Hill murderers, Southern Congressmen would be handicapped in their efforts to keep lynching out of Federal jurisdiction. Still, there is no record of any serious official effort to arrest the persons responsible for that atrocity.

Recognizing the futility of expecting State action, San Antonio Express supported the Dyer Bill when it was introduced. Then Texas was frequently a leader in the annual records compiled by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute. For example, in 1922 this State reported 18 lynchings.

If conditions have improved, education plus official alertness, courage and competency deserve the credit. The Federal law now proposed would strengthen those and related forces making for common justice and civic decency.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5733

DIXIE PAPERS ASK ANTI-LYNCHING BILL, CITING TENN. MOB MURDER

NEW YORK—The lynching on August 17 of Albert Goodson in Covington, Tenn., has been advanced by large and small Southern dailies as irrefutable argument for passage of Federal antilynching legislation early in the next session of congress.

Some of the editorials collected by the NAACP follow:

Albany (Ga.) Herald

The anti-lynching bill has been side-tracked for the present session of Congress, but its supporters have won for it preferred legislative status when the Senate reconvenes. Its enactment by the present Congress is considered highly probable.

New Orleans (La.) Tribune

Tennessee's latest lynching may score a point for the sponsors of Federal antilynch bills.

The question arises: Would such lynchings be likely to occur if they called out Federal police and subjected communities and States to special penalties? Perhaps they would be less likely to occur.

Federal law would work no regenerative miracles among such men as made up the Memphis lynch crew. It might, however, put a little whole-some fear in them.

HARRISON PREDICTS LYNCH LAW APPROVAL

Senator Says Bill Sure To Pass Next Session

QUESTIONS ITS LEGALITY

Mississippian Declares Measure Is Unconstitutional—Cites Heavy Burdens To Be Imposed On Taxpayers

By The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 16.—Prompt passage of the Federal Anti-Lynching Bill at the next session of Congress, "despite its unconstitutionality," was conceded here today by Senator Harrison.

"There is no way to stop it," he said.

"While it is clearly unconstitutional and a complete usurpation of the police power of the states, it is being pressed by every negro organization outside of the South.

Praises Borah

"It is a popular measure and next year being a congressional election year, candidates on Republican and Democratic tickets outside the South will proclaim their votes for it in order to win negro votes.

"Praise is due Senator Borah of Idaho for the courageous independent and statesmanlike character of opposition he has displayed to the legislation.

"The law, if enacted, will impose heavy burdens upon innocent taxpayers in every county where heinous offenses have been committed and death imposed upon culprits without legal methods. In such cases the bondsmen of the sheriff must pay $10,000 and the taxpayers of the county $10,000 to the widow of the culprit who committed the foulest offense.

"Federal judges may be transferred from other districts in other sections to try the cases. Changes of venue may be invoked for the trials.

Will Continue Opperation

"Every good citizen desires the observance of law. Unlawful hanging or killing cannot be rightfully defended, but the purposes of the anti-lynching bill desecrate the constitutional rights of American citizens. It is wholly at variance with the high conception of the constitution.

"If the Federal Government can assume the police powers of the State in the instance of a lynching, then it can do so in the case of burglary, robbery and every other character of crime.

"I shall oppose, as I have in the past, this anti-lynching proposal, but I am not fooled and when the vote is taken in the Senate, only a few senators outside the solid South will vote against it."

Negro Veteran Hopes Legion Will Support Anti-Lynching Bill

Legionnaire on Welcoming Committee Looks Forward to Action on Scottsboro Boys and Adoption of Program of Peace

The hope that the 1937 convention of the American Legion would go on record against lynching and for the freedom of the four Scottsboro boys was expressed today by Aubrey Brooks, Negro member of the Mitchell Royal Post, 1095, the Bronx. "The example of the Bronx County Legion convention which demanded the passage of the Wagner anti-Lynching bill was a notable one," the Negro veteran, who served in the 350th Field Artillery overseas, said.

"I think too often the outstanding record of the Negro soldiers during the World War is forgotten," Brooks continued. "And that the vets within the Legion should make a continuous fight for the recognition of Negro rights."

FOR PEACE

He added that there was no discrimination in his own Post, but was doubtful about Legion Posts in the South.

"There are Negro delegates to this convention," Brooks said, "but the fact remains that there is not an equal representation, considering the number of Negroes that served in the War."

The Negro ex-serviceman is 100 per cent for peace, he pointed out. "We, too, saw what war was and want the convention to go on record for a program that will keep us out of another conflict. You'll find the Negro vets in the forefront fighting for peace."

Brooks condemned red-baiting and vigilanteism within the Legion and said the progressive stand taken by Harry Colmery, national commander, in the last year, was a forward step.

POLITICAL RIGHTS

"I feel," said the Negro vet, "that every person has a right to his political beliefs and that hoodlums with clubs give a bad name to any organization. I believe the Legion has found that out."

Brooks said he hoped the convention would take action on the Nazi camps being formed in America. "These organizations are a menace to democracy and the Legion certainly should go on record in opposition to them."

Brooks is serving on the welcoming committee at the Legion's trailer camp, 138th St., and Mott Ave. Hundreds of vets, who cannot afford to stay at the Pennsylvania and Astor Hotels, are coming in their autos and bunking in trailers at the lot.

Although only the first contingents had arrived yesterday, it was expected that the parking place would be jammed Saturday and Sunday.

That the first delegates were travelling a long way for the national conclave was indicated by license plates from California, Wisconsin and Ohio.

Jackson, Miss., News
September 19, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Senator Pat Harrison says that an anti-lynching law will be enacted at the January session of Congress in spite of the sturdy opposition of Southern members of the body.

"Northern members, even Democrats, will vote for it because they want to win negro votes," says Senator Harrison. Congressional elections will be held next year.

All right.

Let it come.

When it does come we are going to have an epidemic of lynching throughout the nation. They will be as frequent in the North as in the South.

Rape means rope here in the Deep South—always has and ever will. They are getting the same idea up North where beasts in human form roam at large and ravish innocent little children.

There is mighty little respect in the public mind today for our state courts or law enforcing authorities.

Federal courts still command some measure of respect.

That will vanish with the passage of an anti-lynching law.

Lynchings are nasty, ghastly and unpleasant, but there will be just lots and lots of them after Congress places an anti-lynching law on the statute books.

Columbus, Miss., Commercial Disp.
October 28, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Under the heading, "Not Worth the Price," the Lynchburg, Va. News, published by Senator Carter Glass and Sons, prints this intelligent discussion of the proposed anti-lynching bill:

When the congress adjourned in August there remained on the program several measures advocated by the president, including one which, while not on the "must" list, had received his approval. This was the so-called anti-lynching bill and it held preferred place onthe calendar. It will be one of the first measures to be considered when the special session is convened and the general impression seems to be that it will be passed by both houses and, of course, signed by the president.

There are several reasons for belief that passage is virtually certain, several things that make its passage virtually certain. They are:

1—There are votes in it. The Negro has been migrating into the northern and middle western sections of the country for some time. He is a power in the politics of those sections. His vote is angled for by all candidates for office. In some sections united opposition of the Negro vote is decisive; no candidate can be elected under that circumstance. It has been true for some time but there has been a difference. Until recently the Negro vote was solidly republican and where it was large democratic candidates had little chance. Knowing that the Negro vote was unattainable, or unexpected, democratic members of the congress have been willing for the most part to go along with the southern members in opposition to "anti-lynching" legislation. However demagogic they might be they couldnt hope to profit much in that direction. They left sponsorship of "anti-lynching" legislation to the republicans. That was their game. Now it is different. The Negro vote is divided; the Negro is growing more independent. Democrats as well as republicans angle for his support, and a fine bait in sections in which there is an important Negro vote is to shout and vote for "anti-lynching" legislation. So they are shouting and they are going to vote for it—and there are more northern and western democrats than there are southern democrats.

2—Liberalism has become a fetich. To be considered liberal is de riguer. And, for some strange reason, advocacy of increased federal government powers has come to be a hall mark of this spurious liberalism. Furthermore, humanitarianism and liberalism have become confused and because humanity revolts at lynching anything that is labeled a measure to prevent lynching wins approval. This brings to the measure both the wishful thinkers and the demagogues who hope to profit politically by pretense of liberalism and of humanitarianism.

3—President Roosevelt supports it. Members of the congress from the south who have never favored anti-lynchiing legislation because of lack of interest in the welfare of the Negro will now vote for such legislation because it has received the approval of the president. The rubber stamp element of the congress will be for it.

4—Local self-government, from being a fetich, has become anathema to those who like to think of themselves as modern. The doctrine of state's rights is old-fashioned, therefore is to be jeered at. The fundamental principle, that of keeping government close at home, is lose sight of. Anything to obtain desired ends! Anything to be up-to-date!

That the passage of "anti-lynching" legislation will have any appreciable effect upon the mob has never been demonstrated. Even those who are so horrified at assaults upon civilization and the inherent rights of individuals to fair trial that they forget the price that must be paid for vesting police powers in a central government and for giving that central government powers of coercion have never been able to argue convincingly that after paying the price the supposed benefits will be reaped. They can only hope. The states have not prevented lynching they point out, and so they are willing to try something else.

The News would be frank about this matter It doesn't believe that any "anti-lynching legislation is likely to be effective. It is confident that any promising any effectiveness would be unconstitutional and that a constitutional amendment is necessary if there is to be legislation with any real hope of accomplishment. But, even were there great hope of accomplishment and even if such legislation were held constitutional, The News would be opposed to it. It is opposed to it because it does not believe that the promised good, even if possible of attainment by the proposed means, would be worth the price. To be brutally frank, it does not believe the saving of a few lives and the imposition of the outward form of civilization upon groups of uncivilized men is sufficient inducement for action that will bring the end of local and state government so near to annihilation that annihilation itself will be only a matter of years. If murder by a mob can bring federal authorities and federal police swarming into a state, willy-nilly, why not murder by an individual? Why not supersede local police and local courts with federal police and federal courts whenever there are votes in it? If neglect by the states of duties is to bring action by the central government, whether the privileges of people in other states are or are not affected, what is to be the end when there are votes in it? And whence does the federal government derive the power to deprive a state of its rights because it has neglected to perform its duties? To admit that there is a power to correct and to save the states from themselves is to deny to the states any rights the central government may wish to deny them. It is to re-write the constitution so as to eliminate the provision reserving to the states the rights not granted the central government and make that provision read: "The powers not delegated to the states by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the United States, are reserved to the United States."

And that would mean the end of the federal government and the substitution of a central government without constitutional restrictions worthy the name upon its powers. There are those who desire such a government, but those who do not thirst after a spurious liberalism, who believe the essence of true liberalism is opposition to coercive government, must look upon all legislation threatening its establishment with apprehension, no matter what rosy promises of immediate good are held out.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5734

Brunswick, Ga., News
September 20, 1937

LYNCHING A FEDERAL OFFENSE

For the first time in years, the enactment of an anti-lynching bill appears to be a foregone conclusion. From time immemorial, the Republicans in congress have attempted to pass such legislation, but the southern Democrats from the west have managed to defeat all these bills. However, the matter has grown to a serious stage and at the last session of congress such a bill, sponsored by Democrats came near passing. On account of important legislation, it was agreed to carry the bill over until the next session with the understanding that it would be placed on the calendar for the first order of business when congress convenes in January.

The southern congressmen and senators, almost unanimously opposed the legislation and succeeded in staving it off, but with the convening of the new congress, it appears that its defeat is not likely. The reason for the change of sentiment towards the bill is allegedly on account of the negro vote in the east and west, these people having lined up with the Democrats in the past two presidential elections.

If the bill becomes a law, it will apply, of course, to all states providing severe penalties for mob violence and lynching making lynching a federal offense which would throw all such cases into the federal courts for trial. However, we do not believe that any more convictions could be secured in the federal courts than are now found in the state courts. After all the same personal citizenship would be serving on the federal juries as now serve on the state juries.

Lynching in the south is no longer a common occurrence, but the number has decreased to a minimum. It is a serious question whether the enactment of an anti-lynching law would improve conditions. We are of the opinion that a drastic anti-lynching law would cause a resentment on the part of the people. Of course the aim and object behind the measure is brought on on account of politics and the hope of playing in favor for the negro vote in the national elections.

Anniston, Ala. Star
September 19, 1937

Roosevelt's Two Speeches

In view of legislation now pending in the Congress of the United States, such as the anti-lynching bill, the wages and hours bill and the effort to bring about more equitable interstate freight rates, the people of this section of the country will be particularly interested in the two addresses the President delivered Thursday and Friday of last week, the one having to do with the 75th anniversary of the battle of Antietam and the other the 150th anniversary of the signing of the federal Constitution.

At Antietam, the President very properly deplored the loss in lives and in our economic resources that was caused by the War Between the States and the spiritual losses incident to reconstruction, which gave rise to a growth of sectionalism that retarded the advance of the nation as a unified whole. He declares that during the last four years we have been "not only acting but thinking in national terms," and we should like to believe that this is not mere wishful thinking on the part of the speaker.

That part of the President's Antietam address that particularly appealed to us, however, was this: "Deeply we appreciate," he said, "that the distress or difficulty of any one part of the Union adversely affects each and every other part. We stand ready in all parts to lend a helping hand to those Americans who need it most." We should like to believe, also, that this statement is true. We do believe it is a true representation of the mind of the President, but it is not the attitude of some of his advisers nor of the people as a whole in that section whence he comes.

If that were true, the anti-lynching bill, which has no more justification than would a law to punish Northern counties where gang murders occur, which will give rise to a recrudescence of sectionalism and racial hatred, would be dropped at once. Pat Harrison of Mississippi says this bill is certain to pass, however, and in that event it is to be hoped that it will be promptly vetoed by Mr Roosevelt. Otherwise our only recourse will rest with the Supreme Court and in that event we should be thankful that we will have Justice Hugo Black of Alabama there to represent our interests.

Again, if it were true that every part of this nation stood ready to help those Americans who need it most, neither would we be discriminated against in the matter of freight rates; for there is no question as to the fact that the South needs the help of the federal government more than any other region and our economic development is being throttled by the false freight rate differential that we have to overcome. Moreover, without better advantages economically we shall continue to be denied equality of educational opportunity and a consequent loss in cultural advancement—consummations devoutly to be wished not only in behalf of this section but of the country as a whole.

In his other address Friday evening, Mr. Roosevelt renewed his plea for a "rejuvenation" of the Supreme Court and coupled with that plea an argument for a resuscitation of the wages and hours bill, which was chloroformed in the rules committee of the House. And if that bill is brought back to life, the President, in a light of his commitment at Sharpsburg, will have to insist that there be written into the bill an unequivocal pledge looking toward the preservation of the wage differentials to which we here in the South are entitled by reason of a God-given climate and other natural advantages.

Another great objection to this bill is that it tends toward a further centralization of authority at Washington, where the section of the country that needs help the most already is inadequately represented on the various boards and bureaus that have been growing in number and in power for many years. Consequently this is an invitation to that dictatorship about which the President spoke in his radio address Friday evening.

Of course, every disinterested person in the country profoundly sympathizes with the professed objectives underlying this measure. No decent person would attempt to justify the sweat shop wages that have come back into the national economy since the NRA was outlawed and every sound economist believes in a wider distribution of the national wealth. But just as the evils of the NRA outweighed its virtues, even so is this true of the wages and hours bill as it originally was drawn. It has been amended in the House and probably will be modified more before it is allowed to become a law. Otherwise, there is little doubt that it will be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

The Anniston Star is as eager as is Mr. Roosevelt for a liberal interpretation of the Constitution of the United States. We believe that he is well advised when he says that "we have had an unending struggle between those who would preserve this original broad concept of the Constitution as a layman's instrument of government and those who would shrivel the Constitution into a lawyer's contract." Accordingly this paper supported the President in his fight with the court until the court had receded from its legislative attitude and had become more responsive to the will of the people.

Nevertheless, The Anniston Star sincerely hopes that the President will not press his fight for a further "rejuvenation" of the court at this time. To do so would be to jeopardize his leadership and that could mean nothing less than a return of the Republican party to power, in which event the South once more would become the step-child of the nation.

CONCURS WITH PAT

Mississippian Believes Anti-Lynching Bill Is Bad

To The Commercial Appeal:

I noticed in the press where Senator Harrison states that the anti-lynching bill will be a bad thing for the country, and that he will fight it. I surely concur with the senator.

One good way to stop lynchings in the South is this: If the negro race will discontinue pouring money into the coffers of Sam Liebowitz to come down here and get brutes turned loose and then carried to New York ready for vaudeville, it will have more effect than all the laws passed until doomsday.

I was proud to note that the "four poor black boys" of Scottsboro who were taken to New York for vaude e by Mr. Liebowitz were given a very cold reception even in Harlem. I imagine they are out digging ditches by now.

PURD W. SPARKS.

Tupelo, Miss.

North Emporia, Va. Messenger
September 10, 1937

CHANGE SOUGHT IN "LYNCH" LAW

1937

VIRGINIA FEDERATION OF LABOR ATTACKS USE OF BYRD LAW IN HANDLING COVINGTON RAYON DIFFICULTY.

A drive to obtain a change in the Byrd "anti-lynching" law to prevent its use in labor disputes has been indicated by the Virginia Federation of Labor in a situation which also criticized the C. I. O. for its method of handling the Covington rayon mill strike. The conviction of three C. I. O. unionists under the Byrd law—they were given penitentiary sentences—grew out of a disturbance on July 7th when the strike-bound plant was reopened. A fourth striker was given a 9-month sentence on a simple assault charge.

Joseph Rossano, president of the Virginia Federation, and W. D. Anderson, its legislative chairman, issued a statement which said the organization should seek to have the Byrd law amended by the General Assembly at its next session. They attacked the use of the Byrd law in the Covington labor trouble.

DRIVE UNDER WAY
FOR ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Press Service of the N.A.A.C.P.

New York, Oct. 15.- Warning that supporters of the federal anti-lynching bill must not be lulled into inactivity by the predictions that the bill is sure to pass, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People launched today a new drive for passage of the bill in the Senate during the special session of Congress which has been called for November 15 by President Roosevelt.

10-15-37
New York 9:27

On all sides, even in the deep South, the word has gone out that there is little chance to stop the passage of the anti-lynching bill. The N.A.A.C.P. urges colored people and their friends not to be caught napping by this propaganda. Senators who happen to be in their home districts should be visited by committees of citizens and personally urged to support the anti-lynching bill and to resist a filibuster if one develops. The N.A.A.C.P. pointed today to the newspaper reports from Washington all of which state that the anti-lynching bill is a "complication" in the special session.

"The anti-lynching bill is definitely on the calendar as the number two item of business", the N.A.A.C.P. statement said, "and it will come up for consideration immediately after the farm bill. However, it must be remembered that there is always a possibility that a filibuster will be conducted against the bill and senators favoring this legislation must be prepared to resist a filibuster until victory is won. Filibusters are not as effective in the early part of the session as they are at the end, when everyone is trying to get his favorite legislation through and go home, therefore a filibuster is more easily beaten in an early session than in the closing days.

"We must expect that all kinds of last minute propaganda will be used in an effort to postpone action on the bill, but we must accept no excuses. We have the votes to win and if we maintain steady pressure the bill will be passed."

The association also stressed the ever-present need of funds to carry on the work. The vacation period always brings a drop in income which is not resotred until December. With a special session scheduled for November, money is urgently needed to press the fight before Christmas.

Lynchings—1937
Legislation Relating to.

5735

ANTI-LYNCH BILL COMES UP AGAIN

Wagner's Surprise Move in Senate Threatens to Upset Legislative Program

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP) — A motion to debate the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill caught administration leaders in the senate napping today, upset their legislative program, and threatened to delay adjournmnt of congress.

When they awoke to the situation, the leaders sought to sidetrack the motion by adjourning—but their parliamentary move lost, 35 to 27.

With the revolt then clearly out of hand, Republican Leader McNary moved to recess and his motion carried, 36 to 23. This means the bill will be before the senate again tomorrow, whereas an adjournment would have side-tracked it.

The net result was that the senate faced a bitter and perhaps lengthy fight over the measure, which the house already has passed.

The bill would hold counties responsible for abductions within their area for the purpose of lynching. Officers who failed to protect their prisoners, or to prosecute lynch mobs, would be guilty of felony.

Lynching would be so defined as to exclude labor violence, or gangster violence.

Barkley Protests in Vain

Senator Wagner (D-N. Y.) made the motion to take up the bill and vowed that he would not withdraw it.

Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky, protested that he had arranged a tentative program whereby Senator King (D-Utah) was to be recognized to take up a District of Columbia bill and other measures were to follow that.

But Vice President Garner interrupted to state that since Wagner was the only man who had arisen and asked for recognition from the chair, he had to be recognized.

Wagner said he did not want to disarrange the program, but "I do not believe a bill of this importance ought to be set aside."

Barkley said he had no objection to consideration of the bill, but felt it should be taken up when it would not delay emergency measures. He suggested that Wagner had been "unfair" in making his motion.

Borah Attacks Bill

Senator Clark (D-Mo.) quickly challenged Barkley. He said a number of "shocking lynchings" made the bill extremely important emergency legislation."

Senator Borah (R-Ida.) then launched into a discussion of the constitutional phases of the legislation, asserting it would jeopardize the nation's dual system of government. He condemned some of the provisions as "perfectly outrageous."

"If you can go into a state and take charge of an individual or group of individuals who have committed a crime, and bring them under the federal government jurisdiction," he said, "then the last vestige of local government will have disappeared."

Senator Minton (D-Ind.) cited the supreme court's Scottsboro, Ala., case decision that the state by excluding Negro jurors had violated the due process clause of the constitution and therefore the Negro rape defendants should have a new trial.

Borah quickly asserted the decision had "no relation whatever to federal legislation," and was supported by Senator George (D-Ga.).

ANOTHER DIXIE BARBARITY

Richmond (Va.) Times Dispatch,

The Federal anti-lynching bill has assumed considerable danger of being crowded out in the furor over the court bill, but now another ghastly lynching has taken place in the South. If anything could pump life into the drive to secure the bill's enactment at the current session, despite the apparent obstacles growing out of the parliamentary situation, the mob murder of two Negroes yesterday in Florida should turn the trick.

It will be recalled that in the spring, the drive for the bill was bogging down, and the Southern senators and congressmen were advancing their customary contention that the Southern States should be allowed to "manage their own affairs," when the sickening blow-torch lynching of two Negroes at Dick Hill, Miss., roused the country to a complete realization that in such States as Mississippi, "managing their own affairs" means letting lynchers go unpunished. So the House promptly passed the Gavagan bill by the overwhelming vote of 277 to 119.

Then the Senate began consideration of the similar, although not identical, Wagner-Van Nuys, bill. That measure was reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee late last month by a 12-to-3 vote, and its advocate were hopeful that it could be scheduled for debate on the floor in the not distant future. But Senator Robinson's death and the violent controversy over the court bill has invalidated all calculations. It appears probable that Congress will either be immersed in the court battle for months, to the virtual exclusion of everything else, or the court bill will be quickly chloroformed this week, and adjournment will follow soon thereafter.

Thus it is quite possible that the Federal anti-lynching bill cannot be passed by the Senate until next session. On the other hand, almost anything can happen in view of what has happened in recent weeks.

LYNCH BILL IS SET FOR ACTION IN 1938

Wagner Agrees to Delay as Filibuster Threat Imperils Administration Program

GETS PREFERRED STATUS

Measure to Follow Crop Control in Next Session—Southerners in Bitter Attack

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—A situation which threatened to prolong this session of Congress indefinitely and at the same time imperiled the enactment of the Administration program now pending before Congress was reached up late this afternoon when the Senate voted to postpone consideration of the Wagner-Van Nuys Anti-Lynching bill until the next session of Congress.

A motion by Senator Wagner to take up the legislation was before the Senate and an indication of the filibuster that would follow in the event the motion prevailed was evidenced on all sides. It appeared certain that a vote on the Wagner motion could not be reached until some time next week, and after that would have come the debate on the bill itself. Some Senators were of the opinion that the debate would have lasted at least a month.

When the Senate convened at noon today Senator Connally of Texas took the floor to discuss the Wagner motion to bring the bill before the Senate and three hours elapsed before he yielded the floor to Senator Pepper of Florida, another opponent of the legislation. A dozen Senators, most of them from the South, were ready to speak when opportunity offered.

Becomes Unfinished Business

The Administration leadership realized the seriousness of the situation and Senator Barkley, the leader, called Senators Wagner and Van Nuys into conference and placed before them the proposal to postpone action until next year. Messrs. Wagner and Van Nuys agreed to accept the proposal.

Under the agreement the anti-lynching bill wil become the unfinished business of the Senate immediately after passage of a crop control bill, which under a resolution recently passed, must be the first business of the Congress when the second session convenes in January.

When the Senate convened today Senator Connally took the floor and Senators Borah, George of Georgia, Byrnes of South Carolina, Glass of Virginia and other opponents of the measure were in their seats al of them ready to speak if necessary. It was apparent that unless something in the form of a compromise was reached Congress might remain in session many weeks, and the rift in the Democratic lines would be widened.

Senator Connally charged Senator Wagner with a willingness 'to embarrass the President and the Senate leadership" by insisting that his "pet" measure be considered at this session. It was worth noting, the Texas Senator added, that gangsters were not includede in the proposed law but were "left free" to go their ways without fear of Federal interference 'or molestation. Senator Connally said that the bill was so drawn as not to apply to Senator Wagner's constituents on Second Avenue and in Harlem. He intimated that it was political in nature and aimed at the Southern States.

Gangster Exemption Stressed

Senator Wagner insisted that the bill applied equally to all the States and that it was an effort "to provide that the humblest person whether he be charged with or suspected of a crime, whoever he may be, may go through the legal processes of being presumed to be innocent until proved guilty, and that instead of being lynched he may have a fair trial where his guilt or innocence may be determined."

"Why did the Senator exempt gangsters then, if he wanted the measure to be of universal application?" Senator Connally asked.

"Gangsters," replied Senator Wagner, "are not in this bill because we are dealing here with lynching. There is ample law on the statute books, passed by us within the past three years, to apprehend and to prosecute gangsters and racketeers."

Senator Glass Interrupted

"I asked the Senator from New York two years ago," he said, "when I presented the Virginia statute severely treating all lynching cases, if there was a single sentence in the statutes of New York against lynching, and the Senator could not produce one. And there are more crimes committed in New York in one day than there are in Virginia in years."

Senator Wagner said that there was a statute against lynching in New York, a statute against murder.

Borah Calls Bill Illegal

Senator Borah declared that the anti-lynching bill was unconstitutional, a clear invasion of the rights of States, the giving to the Feneral Government the right of intervention to enforce the criminal laws of a State, the right to intervene even when the violation was intrastate and not interstate in character.

Senator McKellar of Tennessee interjected himself into the picture at this juncture.

"If the Senator will permit me," said Senator McKellar, "I will call his attention to something which recently occurred. I read in a newspaper a few days ago that a little girl, 3 or 4 years of age, was brutally, criminally assaulted in the City of New York, and then killed, and it was afterward alleged that the man who had committed this crime had destroyed more little girls during the last year than there were persons lynched in 1936. In that year only eight lynchings occurred in the United States. Yet here was one man, who had not yet been punished, so far as I know, and no efforts had been made to punish him—I think he is going to be sent to an asylum—think of it, for destroying 3 or 5-year-old little girls! Yet we find the Senator from New York here trying to pull motes out of the eyes of people of other States and letting his own go to wrack and ruin."

"I would like to know," said Senator Borah, "and I would like some one to explain that which has not yet been explained—why it was thought necessary specifically to exempt gangsters.

"We know that gangsterism for the last quarter of a century has been a serious national evil. Now it is the most astounding thing that I know of in legislation that in framing a measure against violence you are carefully exempting gangsterism from the operation of the law."

Senator Pepper said the bill was useless legislation, for the reason, he said, it could not be enforced. Senator Pepper, after a few words, yielded the floor to Senator Barkley, who announced that an agreement had been reached to postpone action until next year. Senator Wagner then withdrew his motion for immediate consideration of the bill, and the agreement was approved without a roll-call.

Gadsden, Ala., Times
August 5, 1937

SACRIFICE OF THE SOUTH

HOW little "ice" Southern Democrats cut when Democrats of the North feel that they can improve their position by turning against the South, is demonstrated in the attitude on the anti-lynch bill as well as in the wage-hour proposal.

There is Senator Copeland, for instance, who, as a side line, is running for Mayor of New York. He has become a rabid supporter of the anti-lynch bill because he feels that it will appeal to the 250,000 negroes who reside in Harlem and who have a large voice in the election of public officials. That the bill constitutes a flagrant violation of state rights and is a distinct blow to the Democratic South, concerns him no whit.

And what is true of Copeland in New York is true of some other Democrats in states like Ohio, Illinois and Indiana, where the negro vote is a big factor in elections.

The prevailing idea seems to be that the South is Democratic anyway; that its vote can be countered upon no matter what happens, and so plenty of things are happening these days.

Washington D.C.
United States News
Aug-9, 1937

Plea of Negro Press For Anti-Lynch Vote

ANTI-LYNCHING legislation, enacted by the House in April, faces an uncertain future in the Senate. An attempt to finesse its passage as a rider to another bill failed when it was held not to be germane. It may yet be voted on separately before adjournment.

The Senate bill as amended in Committee provides in general that the Federal Attorney General may prosecute a peace officer who culpably fails to save a prisoner from a mob; may recover for the estate of a lynched victim $2,000 to $10,000 damages from the city or county where the lynching occurred; that "lynching" be not deemed to include violence in labor disputes.

NEGRO newspapers, supporting the anti-lynching bill before Congress, ask of leaders of their race a spirit of cooperation, and a spirit of confidence that Congress will allow a record vote on the measure.

Most urgent is the plea of the New York Amsterdam News, which feels that, after action in the Scottsboro case, there is need for "a fight unto death for justice."

The Pittsburgh Courier, noting that a plan has been formed to send 100,000 telegrams and letters to Congress members in favor of the measure, estimates "at least 65 sure votes in the Senate," and that "leading southern Senators, opposed to the bill, have promised to confine their actions to speeches and votes against the bill, not to filibuster."

The Pittsburgh paper emphasizes the constitutional question and argues: "It is manifestly unconstitutional for Negroes to be 'spirited' from jails and lynched without investigation or trial when officers whom they support with their taxes are supposed to protect them. And yet, although these American practices are clearly unconstitutional, how many of these professed lovers of the Constitution intend to do anything about it?"

Cartoonist Warren in the Buffalo Evening News
Unbridled Regulation

An appeal to American justice is made by the Kansas City Call with the argument:

"There is history to support our contention that the United States has need to give thought to the condition of its black citizens. Obviously it should cultivate the good there is in them for the good they can do."

The Call also declares:

"Justice and equality, liberty and opportunity have made this country the leader among nations. They can keep it secure. They and they alone are its insurance against class warfare and the downfall of the chief exponent of the government by the people and for the people."

The contention that "the cause of the Negro is too great to be sacrificed on the altar of personal likes and dislikes, or personal jealousies", is made by the St. Louis Argus, which contends:

"As we review the path over which the anti-lynching bill came to its final passage in the House of Representatives, we venture to make the statement that the bill would be in much better shape to pass the Senate than it is today if the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Congressman Mitchell had been working together, and we don't think it takes a 'Solomon' to see the wisdom of this. If there are those who do not see the wisdom of this, let them wait; time will tell.

"We do not agree with those who insinuate that Arthur W. Mitchell, as a Congressman, has not the interest and well-being of his race at heart; but we rather think that those who make this charge have some ulterior motives."

Talladega, Ala., Daily Home
November 18, 1937

ATTACK FROM NORTH

The Northern attack on the South is now waged on three fronts. Two of them have to do with the South's economic well being and the other, let us say is just pure cussedness, in the absence of a better reason. New England industrialists are resisting the effort of the South to obtain an equality in freight rates while Northern dairy interests are putting up opposition to the expansion of the industry down here by demanding that farm legislation prohibit the acres taken out of cotton from being used for the production of cattle or dairy feeds. These constitute the onslaught of the economic fronts, while the anti-lynching bill which has sprung up again in congress seek to penalize Southern governmental subdivisions where lynchings occur by making them liable for damages to the families of the lynchers' victims. No decent, law-abiding white man or official condones lynching under any circumstances, and those who attempt to uphold the law and pay the taxes should not be made to pay for the acts of hoodlums, however much they may be deplored. And should the anti-lynching bill pass, it would do more to cause bloody work. As we see it, no good can come from the anti-lynching bill, and therefore it must be pressed for pure cussedness.

Lynchings.-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5736

Gadsden, Ala., Times
June 15, 1937

SECTIONAL BILL APPROVED

THE Senate Judiciary committee has approved the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill but it is explained for the benefit of gangsters and killers in other portions of the country that its provisions will not reach them.

Senator Van Nuys, following the committee's approval of the measure, took pains to let it be known that the bill does not apply to "mobl violence by gangsters or deaths due to labor differences," thus frankly exposing its sectional nature and the narrowness of its application.

This highly restrictive element in the proposed law proves the truth of the charge that it is a proposal cooked up exclusively as a vote-getting contrivance among negroes in doubtful states. Had the motive been broader there could have been no objection whatever to making applicable to mobsters everywhere rather than merely in the South.

But the sectional nature of the bill and the sinister political element behind it, constitute only two objections. A most serious objection lies in the broad invasion of state rights that is sought to be authorized.

Outbreaks of mob violence are state offenses, as this bill recognizes in other portions of the country, yet it is proposed to have the federal government intervent in such matters in the South in spite of the fact that it is a violation of a constitutional, as clearly as the case, but the hope is entertained that this may possibly be overcome by packing the Supreme Court—a result which, however, is becoming exceedingly nebulous. If the court isn't packed this anti-lynch law will undoubtedly be thrown out, granting that it survives the vigorous fight Southern representatives will make upon it.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
June 16, 1937

Years of Silence

Had President Franklin D. Roosevelt uttered the word "No" three years ago when the Wagner "anti-lynching" bill was pressed in the senate, all this uncertainty of the attitude of the national Democratic party toward the "negro question" in the South would have been avoided. If there be danger of a split in his party by reason of this question he created the danger by the three years of silence which he does not break.

Columbia, S. C., Leader
June 12, 1937

PUNISHING LYNCHING BY THE STATE

A few weeks ago when the Gavigan anti-lynching bill was up in the House for consideration, the Southern Congressman who believe in lynching but haven't the courage to say so, pleaded that the bill should not be passed as the lynching states could and would themselves stop lynching. Of course, they know that they couldn't or wouldn't. They know that the only way that lynching can be stopped is by punishing the hoodlums who lynch including the cowardly officers who take part or connive with the rats who do and that is the object of the Gavigan anti-lynching bill. Well, a few months ago a Negro was lynched in Alabama. It is now pretty well established that the victim was an innocent man too. Alabama has a governor who really thinks that lynching is incompatible with the majetsty of the state and a disgrace to a Christian civilization. He thinks too that a sheriff or other officer who connives wth the mob or abjectively surrenders a prisoner to it and who, in the bargain, is so blind that he can't recognize a single person, has no right to remain in office. Following out this idea, he ordered his attorney-general to institute impeachment proceedings against the sheriff who turned his prisoner over to the mob. The action was before the State Supreme Court. Now, no one could have the least suspicion that any member of that body had any part in the lynching but lo and behold, that court acquitted the sheriff. And so, he is free to go on canniving with mobs. A jury of neghbors—some of whom mght have been a member of the mob—could not have done any better by that sheriff. And yet, the states will stamp out lynchings! No, lynching will become a thing of the past when a federal anti-lynching law is enacted. Uncle Sam's G-Men will do that.

LYNCH BILL VOTED BY SENATE GROUP

Threats of Filibuster Are Not Forthcoming.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill emerged from the senate judiciary committee today without the threats of filibuster that have greeted similar proposals in the past.

The committee voted, 13 to 3, for the bill.

Anti-lynching bills have been killed by filibusters more than once. Though some legislators forecast the same fate for the bill approved today, Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, said he did not believe there would be a filibuster.

Connally said he would oppose it.

The bill would make any local peace officer who wilfully neglected to protect a prisoner, or failed to prosecute a lynch mob, guilty of a felony. He would be subject to a fine up to $5,000 or five years in jail, or both.

Counties where lynching mobs seized a prisoner would also be liable for civil damages of from $2,000 to $10,000.

Anti-Lynch Bill Is Sent To Senate

Threat Of Filibuster Believed Subsided

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill emerged from the Senate judiciary committee today without the threats of filibuster that have greeted similar proposals in the past.

The committee voted 13 to 3 for the bill.

Anti-lynching bills have been killed by filibusters more than once. Though some legislators forecast the same fate for the bill approved today, Senator Connally (D), Texas, said he did not believe there would be a filibuster.

Introduced by Senators Wagner (D), New York, and Van Nuys (D), Indiana, it is somewhat similar to the Gavagan bill, but according to its friends, simpler and more easily enforceable.

It would make any local peace officer who wilfully neglected to protect a prisoner, or failed to prosecute a lynch mob, guilty of a felony. He would be subject to a fine up to $5,000 or five years in jail, or both.

Counties where lynching mobs seized a prisoner would also be liable for civil damages of from $2,000 to $10,000.

Louisville, Miss. Journal
June 25, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill emerged from the Senate judiciary committee this week without the threats of filibuster that have greeted similar proposals in the past. The committee voted, 13 to 3, for the bill.

Indications are that there will be little fight made against the bill this time, since the Winona mob "threw the fat in the fire" just at the most opportune time. However, the passage of the bill, unfortunately, will not stop lynchings in the south if the cause of lynchings continue, but will create quite a bit of trouble that will be ineffective. Of course the bill is unconstitutional, but that is of little consequence any more. We would suggest to the people of the south, if the bill does pass, that hereafter when a case comes up that calls for a lynching bee, that we call it a "gangster raid," like they do in the north. Let no newspaper in the south ever again mention "lynching" in its columns, but instead, adopt that much of the Yankee's language; call it "gangster raid." You know that is a much more cultured word, and the gangster usually has much money.

Columbus, Miss., Commerc'l Disp.
June 22, 1937

THE SOUTH'S BATTLE

The approval of the anti-lynching bill yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee now brings this measure before the Senate. The southern Senators will make a strenuous fight to defeat this bill.

It would work a hardship upon the South.

would necessitate a "standing army" for Mississippi in order to try to enfore this measure. Every sheriff in the state would call for militia protection and the governor would be forced to comply with the sheriffs' requests for troops.

This measure is being sponsored by northern Democrats who are making a strong bid for the northern negro vote. It is a sectional appeal that does injustice to the Democrat Party.

The South has never favored lynching. Yet the South has its problems which can best be solved by state legislation.

We believe that this measure is an invasion of state's rights. Just another example of some Democrats striving to hurt rather than help the southern negro problem.

At one time the South did enjoy a "veto" in national Democratic conventions. But that was changed when Jim Farley put over his majority ruling in national convention voting.

The battle is on but the southern Senators will not stand by idly.

The Mason and Dixon Line again becomes a visible line of demarcation.

It is a sectional fight and the South must again stand up and fight for a principle.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
July 1, 1937

For An Anti-Lynching Law.

"By a 13 to 3 vote the Senate Judiciary Committee has approved the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill and returned it to the Senate with the recommendation that it be passed. So it is again time for the friends of justice to rally to the support of a measure designed to end for all time the barbarism which has stigmatized the South for generations." So says the Danville (Virginia) Register.

"The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved by a vote of 13 to 3 the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill. . . . The bill, of course, is another interference with the affairs of the States. But those States which have tolerated lynchings are to blame. They have had ample opportunity to clean house and have refused to do it. Now the Federal Government is moving to take a hand." So says the Newport News (Virginia) Daily Press.

A few years ago few if any Southern newspapers favored a Federal anti-lynching law. Southern newspapers opposed such legislation on the ground that it would infringe the rights of the States. But the newspapers were honest and sincere in their position, they deplored mob lawlessness as strongly as any of their Northern colleagues, and while opposing Federal legislation on the subject they called upon the States to set their faces sternly against the mob and stamp out the evil of lynching.

Today many if not most of the Southern newspapers advocate a Federal anti-lynching law because they have despaired of the suppression of mob lawlessness by the States. There are not as many mob murders now as there used to be, but several such outrages are committed every year, and the lynchers continue to go unwhipt of justice. The States not only do not punish the mobs; they do not pass laws designed to discourage mobs. Virginia is about the only State in the South that has enacted a law of that kind, and during the ten or twelve years that the law has been on the statutes there has not been a lynching in Virginia.

It is significant that newspapers of a State that apparently has suppressed the mob have joined other Southern newspapers in support of the Federal anti-lynching bill which has passed the House and is now before the Senate. Lynching is almost exclusively a Southern problem. Virginia is a Southern State, and the newspapers of Virginia are interested in wiping out an evil that is a disgrace to the South.

Edgefield, S. C. Advertiser
June 30, 1937

To Force It On Us?

Anti-lynching sentiments dominant in the South, in which leaders both intelligent and humane long have battled and with growing effectiveness against this form of lawlessness, but the South knows that the federal anti-lynchnig bill now before congress is likely to do more harm than good.

The South, therefore, does not want it.

Yet indications increase that the South will get it anyhow.

The senate's judiciary committee has voted 13 to 3 for the measure and President Roosevelt's Democratic administration is supporting it strongly.

The Democratic administration in this matter is giving the Democratic South something to remember it by.

The Wagner Anti-Lynching Bill

(The Washington Times)

An unusually nauseating Southern lynching occurred Monday, when a Tallahassee (Fla.) mob dressed as Ku Kluxers jerked two colored boys out of jail and shot them to death. The boys were in jail on charges of having stabbed a white policeman, and would have been tried in due time.

Senator Wagner announces that he will pass his anti-lynching bill for Senate passage beginning right after the court fight. The bill, which has already passed the House, would apply to all States, North or South, and would—

"(1) make any peace officer convicted of wilful negligence in resisting or prosecuting a lynch mob liable to a Federal Government fine up to $5,000, or five years in jail, or both; and (2) enable the Federal Government to fine any county where a lynching occurred from $2,000 to $10,000 and turn the money over to the lynch victim or his estate."

This bill, if it becomes law, won't stop lynching altogether. But it will enable the Federal Government to go after a savage custom which the Southern States cannot or will not rub out of their own volition. The Government has had great success in putting down kidnapers, counterfeiters, interstate bank robbers. We'd like to see the Government turned loose on lynchers.

However, there is widespread and well founded belief that the basic causes of lynchings down South are—economic—rather than sentimental. Southern poor whites do most of the Southern lynching; and observers tell us that they do it not so much out of the much touted reverence for Southern womanhood as out of hatred for colored people who get ahead in the world.

The South by and large is the poorest part of the United States as regards cash income, so that the struggle for existence on the lower levels of Southern society is a fierce one. When poor whites see colored people making gains in this eternal struggle, the poor whites see red.

So the long-range remedy for lynching would seem to be lift the living standards, somehow, of both the poor whites and the colored people down South. This, the New Deal has been trying to do, and has succeeded in some areas, notably the TVA area. The President wants Congress to pass more New Deal legislation before it adjourns—hour-and-wage laws, help for share croppers and handicapped farm tenants, a substitute AAA to keep farm income up to par. The latest Southern lynching is one more argument for some real New Deal action before this session of Congress ends.

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
August 3, 1937

Dangers Little Dreamed Of

To be sure, as Senator Smith said last week in his speech opposing the Black-Connery bill, that measure, the anti-lynching bill, the abolition of the Democratic party's "two thirds rule", divers other schemes, are part of a general scheme whereby the great cities would control the Democratic party. The News and Courier has said heretofore that the peril to the South is no less than it was in 1861. The South is facing a greater subjugation. In 1861 it had leaders. Generally, its people were united. The present designs are more insidious than were those of Stevens and Wade in 1867—and whether the subjugation shall be effected by a "Democratic" or a "Republican" party is no matter. If the New Dealers shall see failure to control the South by the Bankheads, Byrneses, Harrisons and other "conservatives" they will vote the Southern negroes in the Farley-ickes Democratic party. That is their plan. The "anti-lynching plan" is a part of it. The South has little dream of the danger confronting it.

Lynchings- 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5737

Anti-Lynching Bill Stirs Congress; South Found in Favor of Such a Law

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—One of the bitterest issues to reach the floor of congress this session is focused in the Wagner-Van Nuys bill to make lynching a federal crime. Southern congressmen have attacked the measure in strong terms as an infringement of the rights of the state.

The White House has shown little desire to handle an issue which is considered so full of sectional dynamite.

Yet a poll conducted last January by the Institute of Public Opinion indicated that there is virtually as much sentiment for a federal anti-lynching measure among southern voters as among other citizens. Southern voters averaged 65 per cent in favor of such a law, while the national vote was 70 per cent in favor.

Subsequent polls will show whether the debate over the Wagner-Van Nuys bill has changed sentiment.

Hammond, La., Vindicator
August 13, 1937

THE SUPREME COURT VACANCY

In spite of his erratic and frequently inconsistent stand on political questions and platforms, Senator Borah of Idaho has earned a reserved reputation for boldness when it comes to the Constitution of the United States. Active as a lawyer before his election to the Senate some 30 years ago, he has lost no opportunity to broaden his familiarity with that remarkable document, and today he occupies a commanding position among authorities who profess to understand the economic, social and political factors which went to make up its groundwork.

The country recalls the exhaustive study Senator Borah made of the gold question, which resulted in the conclusion that Congress has the right to authorize a devaluation of the currency, a stand upheld by the Supreme Court. It also recalls his keen reasoning in support of the right of the states to prescribe the qualifications of voters, particularly the Southern States; and his contention that the anti-lynching bill is unconstitutional in that it undertakes to usurp the power of the states to suppress crime.

Now, Senor Borah has sent the Constitution experts to their books with the insistence that there is no legal vacancy on the Supreme Bench. He contends that Justice Van Devanter, who retired under the Summers Act, is still a member of the court and that President Roosevelt has no right to nominate a successor.

There is little probability that the Senator's contention will prevail, but it must be conceded that he has raised an interesting question.

The Supreme Court is rooted not in an act of Congress, but in the Constitution itself. Congress may create inferior courts, but the Supreme Court is the creature of the Constitution. The only way a vacancy may exist is through death, resignation or removal. Unless and until one of these contingencies occurs, a justice serves during good behavior.

Some years ago Congress provided that district judges must retire at the age of 70 and continue to draw their salaries. A few months ago this concession was extended to circuit and supreme judges. Justice Devanter was the first to take advantage of it.

The question is whether mere retirement can be interpreted as a resignation. The act does not say, as it could legally say, that a justice might resign and still receive his salary. On the contrary, it says that he may still function as a judge, subject to the call of the chief justice. If, when the Supreme Court convenes in October, Chief Justice Hughes found the docket crowded, he could recall Justice Van Devanter and assign him to active work.

President Roosevelt refuses to admit the seriousness of Senator Borah's contention. Though declining a formal statement, he points to an opinion by Attorney General Cummings which holds that the President does not have to name a successor while the Senate is in session, but may wait until adjournment and make a recess appointment. This is taken to mean that the attorney general upholds the Summers Act and concedes that a vacancy exists.

Aside from the purely legal phases of the question is that of public policy, the policy of providing for the retirement of public servants in their aging years. The government has long recognized this. Virtually every department of the public service is taken care of under retirement laws. There is no valid reason why a judge who has given his best years to official duties and approaches an age when the duties become irksome should not be able to lay down his burden and receive the same consideration that an army or naval officer or a postoffice clerk.

The mere fact that Justice Van Devanter took advantage of the act and hints that Justice Sutherland is considering a similar course, indicates that members of the Court regard it as constitutional. In fact, nobody seemed to doubt its constitutionality until Senator Borah came to the front. In any event, it furnishes an entertaining diversion for an otherwise dull and listless prolongation of a hot and wornout Congress. —Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Washington, D. C. Post
August 13, 1937

The Anti-Lynching Bill.

Senator Borah's vehement opposition to the Wagner-Van Nuys-Gavagan anti-lynching bill was probably an important factor in the Senate's decision to lay it aside. No member of the Senate is a more conscientious champion of human rights than Mr. Borah. Nor is any better qualified to speak upon the fundamentals of American government. When the Senator from Idaho threatens to filibuster against a bill to prevent lynching it should certainly be examined with the greatest care.

No civilized person attempts to justify this barbarous American practice. The growing indignation of the country against the illegal murder of persons suspected of crime is reflected in the reduction of lynchings from over 100 per year prior to 1900 and more than 25 per year before the World War, to only 9 in 1936. Consequently, there is widespread sympathy with the efforts of legislators completely to wipe out atrocities of this sort. It is the method by which the aim would be achieved that raises controversy.

Opponents of the postponed bill are convinced that its detrimental influence on our structure of government would be more important than its beneficial effects on law enforcement. It would impose severe punishment upon local authorities failing to protect any person from lynching. In short, the Federal Government would become a policeman to enforce the law upon local policemen. Even when the Government attempted to enforce the prohibition law against local violators there was intolerable confusion. A Federal attempt to enforce a statute against local officials elected by the people might produce a still more serious tangle.

The weakest provision of the bill, however, is that which would permit the Government to bring suit against a city or county in which a lynching might occur. All the people of that county would be hu-

...alleged and punished for the dastardly crimes of a few individuals. To some extent lynching might be discouraged by this practice. On the other hand, reversion to the tactics of the "carpetbag" days might permanently retard the encouraging rise of anti-lynching sentiment in the South.

"It is a perfect outrage," says Senator Borah, "to turn the Federal Government into the public affairs of the States and cities." Under our scheme of government problems of this sort are traditionally left to the States. There are some notable disadvantages in that plan, as in all forms of self-government. But the advantages of local autonomy should also be considered before such basic changes are made.

Under these circumstances it is gratifying that the anti-lynching bill has been postponed until the next session of Congress. In a less hurried atmosphere Congress may be able to see the problem with clearer perspective. Its task will then be one of actively discouraging the lynching evil without destroying the equilibrium between Federal and local functions of government.

SOUTHERN SENATORS ...

...their anxiety to get away ... their foot slip on the anti-lynching bill. They were in position to filibuster it to death, as they have done on other occasions. But in their eagerness ... disposed ... temporarily, they gave Senator Wagner an advantage in the next session which he has never had in this or any previous session. By agreeing to make the bill second order of business there is hardly any danger from its passage. For the first time it is a matter of prior concern ... can not be displaced. A filibuster cannot be sustained from the beginning to the end of session. There are enough votes to pass it now, and in all probability it will be passed. The opposition for the first time lost an opportunity to kill the bill. It will be exceedingly alive when the Congress returns.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
August 16, 1937

Fine Prospects for Passage

PASSAGE of the Federal antilynching bill at the next session of Congress seems virtually assured. It is still possible, of course, that a filibuster by Southern senators will kill the measure, as on two former occasions, but that appears improbable.

Be it noted that the Administration has now agreed to give the WAGNER-VAN NUYS bill a preferred place on the Senate calendar when Congress reconvenes, either in its regular session in January, or in an earlier special session. In other words, a Federal antilynching bill is now assured of getting to the Senate floor, for the first time. Motions to take up such bills in the past have always been filibustered to death or defeated, but the agreement reached with Administration leaders insures consideration of the measure on its merits early in the next session.

Since an almost identical bill has passed the House already by the overwhelming vote of 277 to 119, since the Senate committee reported the Senate bill out by a 13-to-3 vote, and since the Senate as a whole is understood to be 2 to 1 in favor of the measure, its passage can hardly be a matter of serious doubt, particularly in view of the fact that a successful filibuster is far more difficult at the beginning of a session than near the end.

THE TIMES-DISPATCH is happy at the prospect of the bill's passage. It does not expect the measure to usher in the millennium, but it is convinced that a number of the Southern States have no idea of taking effective action against lynchers, and that if such action is to be taken by anybody, it will have to be the Federal Government.

At the very time when Southerners were protesting on the floor of Congress this spring that the States ought to be allowed to "manage their own affairs," two Negroes were being put to death by torture with a blowtorch in Mississippi. Then some months later, when the argument was renewed, two more Negroes were lynched in Florida. If anybody has even been arrested for either of these crimes, the news escaped us.

That sort of thing is going to keep on happening, if the Federal bill is defeated. Virginia set the other Southern States a fine example in 1928, when it wiped out lynchings by passing a strong State law, but the other States did not follow suit. The lynching curve has revealed no definite trend, either up or down, in the past 14 years, and, of course, almost all the lynchings during the period have been in the South.

It may be that the Federal law will have to be amended in certain respects, in order to bring the best results. We are not contending that it is insusceptible of improvement. We do contend that the enactment of Federal antilynching legislation is the only thing which gives any hope of wiping out lynching in this country. And as this is the only so-called civilized country where lynchings occur, and since the South is the locale for almost all the lynchings in America, we think their complete eradication is something which every Southerner should desire.

Miami, Fla. Herald
August 22, 1937

A CASE IN POINT

IF CONGRESS, in the hurly burly of its closing hours, finally passed the Wagner-Connery antilynching bill and the President approves it and the Supreme court finds it constitutional, which it probably will not, the situation hereafter in a few counties of the country may be illustrated by what transpired a few days ago in Covington, Tipton county, Tennessee.

Tipton county has not had a lynching since the Civil war, until last Monday. . . .

A negro had been accused of murdering a police officer. He was arrested and taken into Nashville for his protection pending his trial.

When the time came for the trial the sheriff of Tipton county, without taking anyone into his confidence, secretly went to Nashville to bring back the prisoner. He took every precaution to prevent news of his trip becoming public.

On his return he made his way over unfrequented roads. He was met on one of them by five men, all heavily armed, who took the prisoner from the sheriff despite his pleas to let the law take its course and despite his personal exertions to prevent the capture.

The negro was taken away by the masked men and lynched.

Now, so far as is known, only those five men in all Tipton county discovered that errand of the sheriff and prepared for the lynching, while thousands of the citizens of the county, wholly opposed to lynching, as the record shows, were ignorant of what was taking place.

Under the proposed law those thousands of innocent people, had the lynching taken place after its enactment, could be made to pay in taxes from $2,000 to $4,000 to the relatives of the lynched negro.

The innocent must suffer with the guilty under this law.

ANTI-LYNCH LAW USED ON STRIKERS

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 13.—Penitentiary sentences are being imposed, under the Virginia Anti-Lynching Law, on strikers convicted of taking part in a melee at the gate of the Industrial Rayon Corporation's mill at Covington on July 7. Union pickets tried to prevent non-union men from returning to work. Two automobiles were overturned, but no one was seriously injured.

Instead of preferring assault and battery charges against the strikers, which would have subjected them to a maximum penalty of twelve months in jail, warrants were sworn out under the Anti-Lynching Law, passed in 1928. That act provides that "any and every person composing a mob which shall commit an assault and/or battery on any person without authority of law, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be confined in the penitentiary for not less than one year nor more than ten years."

Definition of "Mob"

A mob is defined as "a collection of people assembled for the purpose and with the intention of committing assault and/or battery upon any person, without authority of the law."

Under the ruling of the court at Covington, any member of such a mob is criminally liable for every act committed by any other member.

The anti-lynching law had never been invoked before in a Virginia labor dispute. Sponsored by Harry F. Byrd when he was Governor, with a view to putting an end to the occasional lynchings which were still taking place in Virgina, the act achieved that result, for there has not been a lynching in the State since its enactment.

Three Get Long Terms

The three strikers thus far convicted, members of the C. I. O. textile union, have received terms of from two to four years from a jury brought from neighboring Highland County, which is almost wholly agricultural and has not a mile of railroad.

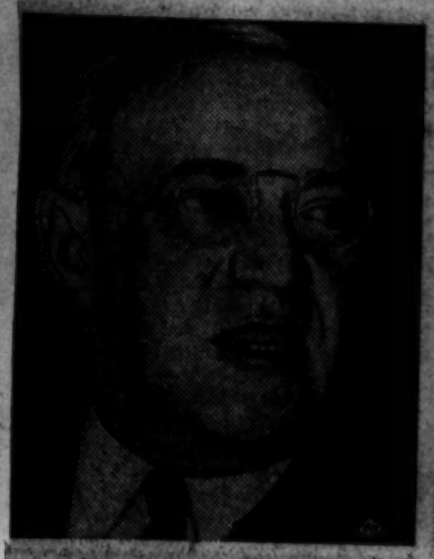
The Richmond Times-Dispatch has protested several times editorially against the severity of the sentences, and has a staff correspondent at the trials. Other Virginia papers have largely ignored the affair.

Attorneys for the T.W.O.C., the C. I. O. textile union, among them Arthur P. McNulty of New York, will appeal every conviction to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, for they believe that if a single conviction of this sort is permitted to stand the organized labor movement in Virginia will be virtually destroyed.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5738

Senate Board Approves Anti-Lynching Measure



ROBERT WAGNER

FREDERICK VAN NUYS

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — A favorable report from a senate judiciary sub-committee on the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill sped another major controversy toward the senate floor today.

Chairman Van Nuys (D., Ind.) of the subcommittee said he hoped to win approval of the bill by the full committee Monday. This would send the controversial measure to the senate, where southern senators have filibustered against such legislation in the past.

Van Nuys said the subcommittee approved the measure by himself and Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.), as a substitute for the Gavagan bills recently passed by the house. He added he had informed Representative Gavagan (D., N. Y.) is agreeable to the change.

"The senate bill is simpler and more easily enforceable," Van Nuys told newspapermen.

Friends of anti-lynching legislation insisted it would pass the senate this session.

The senate bill would use federal power to force state prosecution of lynchers.

Lynching Is Defined

The measure would define lynching as violence committed by a "mob" of three or more persons who attempted by physical violence to exercise punishment upon an individual in the custody of a peace officer.

Violence between gangsters or in labor disorders would be specifically excluded.

The bill would make a local peace officer guilty of a felony and subject to a fine up to $5,000, or imprisonment up to five year, or both if he failed to make diligent efforts to protect a prisoner or wilfully neglected to apprehend a lynching mob.

The attorney general of the United States would be authorized to investigate violations of the law on the basis of sworn information that a local officer had not discharged his duty.

A provision of the bill, regarded by its friends as vital, would make counties in which lynchings occurred liable for civil damages to victims or their legal representatives.

Civil damage could be sought in federal district court, and claims prosecuted by the United States attorney general.

HOUSE LEADER WARNS STATES ON LYNCHINGS

5-28-37

Sovereign Rights at Stake If Violence Continues, Texan Tells Society

From The Commercial Appeal
Jackson, Mississippi, Bureau

BY KENNETH TOLER

JACKSON, Miss., May 27.—States must extend their governmental responsibility to the suppression of lynching if they are to remain sovereign, Representative Hatton W. Sumners of Texas, chairman of the House judiciary committee, said here today.

"Unless this is done, the federal government will step in and usurp this power and the states will no longer retain their sovereignty," he told a mass meeting of the Mississippi division, Society of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

Violence Reduced

Citing the improved condition in respect to law enforcement, Mr. Sumners said since 1892 the number of lynchings has been reduced 85 per cent.

"Yet," he said, "at this session of Congress over 60 bills to prevent lynching by giving the federal government the right to prosecute states were introduced.

"The people backing these bills are those residing in big gang-ridden cities where combinations of crooked politicians and gangsters murder and terrorize and rob. They are looking with a spyglass into the southern states for something to bestir righteous indignation.

"They do not give us any encouragement for the improved condition, which last year revealed less than nine lynchings. We are working out this condition, and if let alone will have it under complete control.

Two Negroes Lynched

"We did not have any hope of defeating the Gavagan bill in the House recently, but we had expected to send it to the Senate with a bigger negative vote than followed the Dyer anti-lynching bill in 1922.

"But, in the middle of our fight, and on the eve of a vote, a mob in a southern state (Mississippi—the double lynching at Duck Hill) took two prisoners from officers and lynched them."

Mr. Sumners said during his more than 24 years in the House, it had fallen to his lot to defend the sovereign right and duty of the states to govern within the scope of their governmental capacity.

He said he favored state suppression of lynching instead of federal intervention.

Understand People

"We have reduced lynching 98 per cent and we can finish the job," he said. "Why not leave us alone and see what we can do about it further? We know how to do the job better than the federal government, because we understand our people.

"You cannot make a government of a free people, our sort of government, functions from the top downward. A great governmental overlord cannot be established in Washington to place the hand of superior authority above the voice of the elected representatives of the people, and perpetuate this system of government.

"If there ever was a time when we needed to turn in the other direction, it is now.

"The bill now before the Senate would give the federal government the power to lay its hands in coercion upon the governor of a state and upon the officers of a state upon the sovereign states themselves, to hale them before a federal court and put them in stripes if perchance they fail to obey the mandate of the federal government wtih regard to procedure in the discharge of their state governmental duties.

"God Almighty in His knowledge and wisdom has devised the plan of teaching people how to do a thing by having them to do it. No people ever preserved the power of self-government except by exercising that power. Memphis Press

Law of Nature

"They must govern or they lose the power to govern. That is fixed by a law of nature universal in its application.

"No people ever were able to preserve their liberty who lost the ability to operate a system of free government. No people were ever able to preserve that ability or any other ability except by continuing to use it.

"I come from the south, and I speak advisedly about this thing.

"We do not want the necessity to govern in this matter taken from us. It is not because we want to see these poor people lynched, but because we know that only the communities can protect."

Athens, Ga., Banner-Herald
June 10, 1937

ANTI-LYNCHING BILLS BEFORE CONGRESS

While the anti-lynching bills before Congress have been laying dormant for some time, it is no indication however, that these bills will be allowed to remain pigeon holed until after adjournment. These bills have been introduced by Democratic congressmen and senators and, of course, supported by the Republicans, their enactment into law is practically assured.

The senators from the southern states are unanimously opposed to their passage, but with a combination of eastern and western states' Democrats and the Republicans, a majority is expected. The proposed bills provide for imposing a responsibility on the states, where lynchings occur to discharge certain financial obligations to the dependents of the victims.

The Gavan anti-lynching bill has been passed by the House with a majority of 277 to 120. This bill is now before the senate, but it has been held up by senators from the South. The senate has passed the Wagner-Van Nuys bill which has been sent over to the House for ratification, but it is being delayed for the time being, by southern congressmen. This bill has been referred to a committee composed of advocates of the anti-lynching bills. The committee has as its members, Dietrich, of Illinois; McCarren of Nebraska; both Democrats and Austin of Vermont, Republican, the chairman of the committee is also an anti-lynching advocate. Naturally, with the complexion of this committee, a favorable recommendation for passage will be returned.

For a number of years, bills of the character of those now pending in the House and Senate, have been introduced in Congress, but through the filibustering of southern senators, they have been able to defeat or carry them over until such bills died a natural death. This time, however, the movement being inaugurated and supported by eastern and western Democrats, the condition is entirely different.

On several occasions in the past, Senator George succeeded in defeating former anti-lynching bills which were intended to affect the southern states, but under its present relations with the administration, he may not be able to bring about the defeat of these objectionable bills which are purely class legislation and not for the good of all the people.

Of course, it is readily understood that the activities of the Democratic congressmen and senators from the western and eastern states are purely political in order to catch the negro vote which in the balance of power in elections.

Charleston, S. C., Evening Post
June 12, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILLS

The decision of the Senate judiciary committee's subcommittee to recommend a favorable report on the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill attracted less attention in the South than one would have supposed such a development would attract, signifying as it does a definite advance along the way toward the pitched battle that is expected to ensue when the measure reaches the Senate floor. The subcommittee voted to substitute the Wagner-Van Nuys bill for the Gavagan bill that passed the House of Representatives and that is not good news for the South, either, inasmuch as the Gavagan measure contained provisions that many people were confident would cause it to be invalidated by the courts, so that it seemed preferable to have it passed, if one had to be passed, than a more carefully prepared measure.

Southerners opposed to the anti-lynching legislation have been counting on enough opposition in the Senate to prevent the passage of any measure of the kind, which they oppose not because they are unwilling to see steps taken to prevent lynching, but because no attempt has been made to conceal the fact that the legislation is aimed especially at the South and proposes federal interference in a field of activity that can best be cared for by the individual States. They feel that in the Senate they will receive strong support from such outsiders as Borah of Idaho and that there is less likely to be the quick yielding to pressure from the leaders that was witnessed in the House. Yet they are aware of the fact that negro voters, to whom the anti-lynching legislation has been made to appear as a highly effective protection, have become political factors to be reckoned with in a dozen States and will bring all the force of their influence to bear on as many Senators as possible.

People in the South who are seriously opposed to lynching and have had a part in the movement that has resulted in reducing the number of lynchings year by year until they are now very few by comparison with what they formerly were do not believe that passage of either the Gavagan or the Wagner-Van Nuys bill would discourage lynching further, but on the contrary might lead to new troubles and lawlessness through clashes that would arise when the federal authorities sought to take away from the States the jurisdiction that has all these years seemed to belong to them. Certainly Southerners count on Southern Senators, regardless of their relations with the administration, to make a determined fight against the bill.

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
June 15, 1937

Anti Lynching Bills

During the recent trial of the sheriff of an Alabama county for alleged negligence and cowardice in failing to prevent the lynching of a Negro in his custody, the Attorney General declared in open court that he was prepared to prove that the mob had got the wrong man. He asserted, furthermore, that he could show that, due to popular excitement, the sheriff had felt himself "forced" to arrest the innocent victim.

The Alabama Supreme Court ruled that this statement had nothing to do with the case and that the "wrong man" issue was not before it. The accused sheriff was then acquitted.

The lynching process is not merely that of a mob acting as court and executioner over a guilty man. It brings in its train a host of evils, all of them peculiarly sinister.

It is these sinister aspects, involving the possible mobbing of innocent men, that give rise to the repeated attempts to bring the Federal power to bear on lynching cases. The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill now about to reach the United States Senate has its defects and its questionable provisions, such as that making counties in which lynchings occur liable for civil damages, but it does represent a desperate effort to check an intolerable evil.

It is not enough to raise opposition to such defective bills. Some means must be found for erasing the cause of lynchings. It will then be simpler to deal with the effects.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
June 24, 1937

Why An Anti-Lynching Law?

OUT of Washington comes conflicting and disturbing news about the proposed federal anti-lynching law. One day, a journalistic authority informs us that such a bill is dead for this session, while the next day the Senate Judiciary Committee gives overwhelming approval to the Wagner-Van Nuys measure and one of its opponents, Senator Connally of Texas, predicts that it will pass.

In view of these things, it is foolhardy to be overconfident about the defeat of the anti-lynching bill, but it is also too early to lose hope. We urge only one thing, that the members of the Senate from the South remain vigilant.

For decades, Northern fanatics, pandering to negro voters in their own states, have tried to ram a federal anti-lynching law down our throats but the senators of the South, through a threat of filibuster, have always prevented it and they can do the same thing this year if they choose. The power which our Southern men wield in the Senate, with its unlimited debate, can be illustrated also by the "force bill" days.

That the Wagner-Van Nuys bill is a sectional measure, aimed directly at the South in spite of the fact that lynchings in this region have been reduced 5,000 per cent in the last 50 years, is borne out by the fact that its provisions do not extend to violence by gangsters or racketeers and that it has no effect upon labor controversies.

Just why, we do not know. We do not condone lynch mobs, but we think it no less worse for a lynch mob to hang a rapist than it is for a gang to machine-gun a rival, or than it is for a labor mob to beat the brains out of a victim with clubs.

Those in the lynch mobs are murderers. The gangster who kills is a murderer. The man in a labor crowd which deals in death is a murderer. They are all murderers, and they should all be treated as murderers—and state courts, if we are not mistaken, usually handle murder cases.

If we must have federal laws to deal with the lyncher, why does not Congress pass federal laws to deal with the gangster killer or the labor killer? There are ten, twenty, or thirty times more lives lost each year at the hands of gangsters and labor mobs than at the hands of Southern lynchers. Worse still, we are clamping down on the lynchers tighter each year. The gangster remains bad, and the labor mob has become frightening in the eyes of all law-abiding citizens.

The South will keep a close watch on its members of the Senate, and it will remember those who lend their aid in the fight against this anti-lynching bill. It will also remember those who, filled with national political ambitions, dodge around the corner when the bill is called up for debate.

Greenville, S. C. Piedmont
June 24, 1937

To Force It On Us?

ANTI-LYNCHING sentiment is dominant in the South, in which leaders both intelligent and humane long have battled and with growing effectiveness against this form of lawlessness, but the South knows that the federal anti-lynching bill now before Congress is likely to do more harm than good.

The South, therefore, does not want it.

Yet indications increase that the South will get it anyhow.

The Senate's judiciary committee has voted 13 to 3 for the measure and President Roosevelt's Democratic administration is supporting it strongly.

The Democratic administration in this matter is giving the Democratic South something to remember it by.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to.

5739

New Orleans, La., Times-Picayune
July 29, 1937

Antilynching Bill

AN INTELLIGENT visitor from Mars or England or anywhere else might find himself confused by the effort to tack a bill against lynching to a congressional measure limiting the length of freight trains. We gather that there was no special enthusiasm over the McCarran bill, as passed by the Senate without a record vote, but seemingly the act was just one of those things which Congress does in its off moments. Opponents of the measure argued that the cost will be passed along to the public, as doubtless will be the case, but some railroad men see merit in the scheme. All of us, if we can put our minds to the problem long enough, hate to think of the cruel jolting to which a train of 100 cars is subjected by the sudden application of air brakes.

In a sense it was accidental that Senator Copeland, the nominal contender for the New York mayoralty, should try to annex the lynching bill to the McCarran measure. The vote of 41 to 34, tabling the scheme, was close enough to suggest that sooner or later the proposal may be attached to a flood control measure or a bill for a new postoffice in Podunk. Just why legislation should be that way is not clear to ordinary folk, but laws are made by our chosen representatives.

Gradually the South is dealing with lynching in the only way it can be handled, which is to create sentiment against it. For every sheriff who proves a coward, there are scores of law officers who risk their lives, or at least their tenure of office, to do their sworn duty. Sooner or later, we sincerely hope, this idea will crystallize into a system of public morals. One of the surest ways not to bring about such a result is to couple it on, like an absurd caboose, behind 70 box cars.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
July 23, 1937

For an Antilynching Law

[Bristol Herald Courier]

A FEW years ago few if any Southern newspapers favored a Federal antilynching law. Southern newspapers opposed such legislation on the ground that it would infringe the rights of the States. But the newspapers were honest and sincere in their position, they deplored mob lawlessness as strongly as any of their Northern colleagues, and while opposing Federal legislation on the subject they called upon the States to set their faces sternly against the mob and stamp out the evil of lynching.

Today many if not most of the Southern newspapers advocate a Federal antilynching law because they have despaired of the suppression of mob lawlessness by the States.

It is significant that newspapers of a State that apparently has suppressed the mob have joined other Southern newspapers in support of the Federal antilynching bill which has passed the House and is now before the Senate. Lynching is almost exclusively a Southern problem, Virginia is a Southern State, and the newspapers of Virginia are interested in wiping out an evil that is a disgrace to the South.

Dothan, Ala. Eagle
August 1, 1937

UNITED AGAINST IT

The latest press dispatches say that practically the entire Southern delegation in Congress is against the Black wage-hour bill. This is not strange, for the delegation is representing the sentiment of Southern people.

For many days the civic organizations of various cities and towns in the South have protested to Senator Black that this bill is objectionable from many standpoints.

And every newspaper coming to The Eagle's exchange table, with one or two minor exceptions, is exposing the evils of the proposed law. Southern people, Southern institutions and Southern newspapers are as united against the wage-hour bill as they are against the anti-lynching bill. Nor is this opposition confined to the South. Many Northern newspapers are against it, as well as many former intimates of Roosevelt.

Two great papers, for example, that are as far apart as the poles in their philosophy as The New York Times and The New York Herald-Tribune, are against the bill.

Under the heading of "The New NRA," The Times says: "When the authors of the bill attempted to codify labor standards for the country as a whole, they ran squarely into the fact that economic and geographical conditions vary enormously in different sections of the country; that there are prevailing 'wage differentials' which are of decisive importance to American industry as it is now organized; that there are depressed areas and depressed trades which cannot stand a jump in wages or a cut in hours; that costs of living vary widely between one section and another, and that almost countless other local influences are actively at work in determining conditions of employment." The Times concludes that the wage-hour problem should be left to the individual States.

And The Herald-Tribune: "It is not a wage and hour bill at all, but a measure to endow five $10,000 political appointees with every weapon available in the legal armory to do about what they like with the economic structure of the United States."

Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal
August 5, 1937

The Supreme Court Vacancy

In spite of his erratic and frequently inconsistent stand on political questions and platforms, Senator Borah of Idaho has earned a deserved reputation for boldness when it comes to the Constitution of the United States. Active as a lawyer before his election to the Senate some 30 years ago, he has lost no opportunity to broaden his familiarity with that remarkable document, and today he occupies a commanding position among authorities who profess to understand the economic, social and political factors which went to make up its groundwork.

The country recalls the exhaustive study Senator Borah made of the gold question, which resulted in the conclusion that Congress has the right to authorize a devaluation of the currency, a stand upheld by the Supreme Court. It also recalls his keen reasoning in support of the right of the states to prescribe the qualifications of voters, particularly the Southern States; and his contention that the Anti-Lynching Bill is unconstitutional in that it undertakes to usurp the power of the states to suppress crime.

Now, Senator Borah has sent the Constitution experts to their books with the insistence that there is no legal vacancy on the Supreme Bench. He contends that Justice Van Devanter, who retired under the Summers Act, is still a member of the court and that President Roosevelt has no right to nominate a successor.

There is little probability that the Senator's contention will prevail, but it must be conceded that he has raised an interesting question.

The Supreme Court is rooted not in an act of Congress, but in the Constitution itself. Congress may create inferior courts, but the Supreme Court is the creature of the Constitution. The only way a vacancy may exist is through death, resignation or removal. Unless and until one of these contingencies occurs, a justice serves during good behavior.

Some years ago Congress provided that district judges must retire at the age of 70 and continue to draw their salaries. A few months ago this concession was extended to circuit and supreme judges. Justice Devanter was the first to take advantage of it.

The question is whether mere retirement can be interpreted as a resignation. The act does not say, as it could legally say, that a justice might resign and still receive his salary. On the contrary, it says that he may still function as a judge, subject to the call of the Chief Justice. If, when the Supreme Court convenes in October, Chief Justice Hughes found the docket crowded, he could recall Justice Van Devanter and assign him to active work.

President Roosevelt refuses to admit the seriousness of Senator Borah's contention. Though declining a formal statement, he points to an opinion by Attorney General Cummings which holds that the President does not have to name a successor while the Senate is in session, but may wait until adjournment and make a recess appointment. This is taken to mean that the attorney general upholds the Sumners Act and concedes that a vacancy exists.

Aside from the purely legal phases of the question is that of public policy, the policy of providing for the retirement of public servants in their aging years. The Government has long recognized this. Virtually every department of the public service is taken care of under retirement laws. There is no valid reason why a judge who has given his best years to official duties and approaches an age when the duties become irksome should not be able to lay down his burden and receive the same consideration that an army or naval officer or a postoffice clerk.

The mere fact that Justice Van Devanter took advantage of the act and hints that Justice Sutherland is considering a similar course, indicates that members of the Court regard it as constitutional. In fact, nobody seemed to doubt its constitutionality until Senator Borah came to the front. In any event, it furnishes an entertaining diversion for an otherwise dull and listless prolongation of a hot and wornout Congress.

Chattanooga, Tenn. News
July 28, 1937

A Test Vote on the Anti-Lynching Bill

TAMMANY'S espousal of the Anti-Lynching Bill in Congress for political purposes is well known. Tammany has no lynching problem, and it wishes to woo Negro votes, particularly in the North and in Harlem. Hence, it favors the bill to have the Government handle the lynching problem. The News has campaigned against lynching in season and out, but we believe the Southern States should handle the problem themselves—until it is thoroughly demonstrated they are unwilling or unable to do so.

Monday, Senator Copeland, Tammany's candidate for Mayor of New York, introduced the Anti-Lynching bill as a rider to the McCarran bill to limit the length of freight trains. The rider was tabled by the rather narrow vote of 41 to 34. Leading opponents are said to fear that the Anti-Lynching bill will pass the Senate, as it has already passed the House.

The vote on the Anti-Lynching bill as a rider was interesting. Southern Senators voted against it almost to a man, Mr. Tydings being the only exception. Senator La Follette and Senator Frazier, Progressives, sided with the Administration, which favored defeat of the rider.

Students of politics can see much of significance in the roll call on this rider. While some of those who voted for it's passage are loyal Roosevelt men, most of the Administration's staunch supporters can be found on the side favoring tabling.

Study the vote:

FOR TABLING—41

Democrats—37

Adams	Duffy	Neely
Andrews	Ellender	Overton
Bailey	Harrison	Pepper
Barkley	Hatch	Pittman
Bilbo	Johnson (Col.)	Radcliffe
Black	King	Russell
Bone	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Brown (N. H.)	McCarran	Sheppard
Byrd	McGill	Smith
Byrnes	McKellar	Thomas (Utah)
Caraway	Minton	Van Nuys
Chavez	Murray	Wheeler
Connally

Republicans—2

Davies, Frazier

Progressive—1

La Follette

Farmer-Labor—1

Lundeen

AGAINST TABLING—34

Democrats—24

Brown (Mich.)	Green	Pope
Bulkley	Herring	Schwartz
Bulow	Hitchcock	Smathers
Copeland	Holt	Thomas (Okla.)
Dieterich	Hughes	Truman
Donahey	Lee	Tydings
Gerry	Lewis	Walsh
Gillette	Logan
	Maloney

Republicans—10

Austin	Lodge	Vandenberg
Borah	McNary	White
Capper	Steiwer
Hale	Townsend

Rome, Ga. News-Tribune
August 4, 1937

SACRIFICE OF THE SOUTH

HOW little "ice" Southern Democrats cut when Democrats of the North feel that they can improve their position by turning against the South, is demonstrated in the attitude on the ani-lynch bill as well as in the wage-hour proposal.

There is Senator Copeland, for instance, who, as a side line, is running for mayor of New York. He has become a rabid supporter of the anti-lynch bill because he feels that it will appeal to the 250,000 negroes who reside in Harlem and who have a large voice in the election of public officials. That the bill constitutes a flagrant violation of state rights and is a distant blow to the Democratic South, concerns him no whit.

And what is true of Copeland in New York is true of some other Democrats in states like Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana, where the negro vote is a big factor in elections.

The prevailing idea seems to be that the South is Democratic anyway; that its vote can be countered upon no matter what happens, and so plenty of things are happening these days.

Ft. Myers, Fla., News Press
August 2, 1937

YANKEE POLITICS

The South might as well get ready to put up with a vote-getting measure for Yankee politicians which is pending in congress under the guise of an "anti-lynching" bill. It has already passed the house and a test in the senate last week indicated enough votes to adopt it there. Coming up as a rider to the "long train" bill another measure with more politics than merit in it—the anti-lynching amendment was defeated 41 to 34 but the idea was to get rid of it as a rider and let the train bill through. With that accomplished several senators who voted to table the lynching amendment explained they were really for it, and enough of the 41 went on record to show that the bill will carry if it ever comes to a vote. The only thing that can stop it is a filibuster and while southern senators will enlist for the duration in that enterprise there is no assurance that they can prevail against a majority determined to wear them out.

They can, perhaps, make something less offensive of the anti-lynching bill than its present form or force its application on other sections as well as the South. As it stands it merely constitutes a nuisance in the southern states by casting slurs which politicians, both democratic and republican, will capitalize in angling for negro votes in the North. However, no matter how unenforceable the law may be it will be a very real nuisance and will leave a trail of trouble if it ever gets on the statute books.

Briefly, it provides that any governmental unit (city or county) in which a lynching occurs "shall be liable to each person injured, or next of kin, for a sum not less than $2,000 or more than $10,000 as monetary compensation for injury or death," with the case to be tried in federal court. This means that should a lynching occur in Fort Myers the city would have to pay from $2,000 to $10,000 with the federal government prosecuting through the U. S. attorney general and a federal jury determining the damages.

The bill does not provide for strictly regional application but the insincerity of professions that it covers the entire country is evidenced by an exception that "lynching shall not be deemed to include such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers, nor violence occurring during the course of picketing or any incident in connection with any labor dispute." In other words northern towns aren't going to be held responsible for their gang wars and riots but southern towns must pay for outbreaks over which control is even less practicable.

The bill is frank in making a record of sectional animus and its proponents make no bones about stating on the floor of the senate, as Senator Copeland did the other day in offering the rider, that their motive is to cater to the negro vote. That is all there is to the anti-lynching bill. It is Yankee politics pure and simple. However, it is a brand of politics from which there is no escape when a majority goes in for it. The South was a party to something like that when it joined in fastening prohibition on sections of the country which did not want it. We may have to take our dose in return but there is no way of making us like it.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle
August 4, 1937

Senator Smith Fears Democratic Party May Be Disrupted

Abolition of the Democratic party's "two thirds rule," the anti-lynching bill and other measures, are part of a general scheme whereby the great cities will control the party, Senator Smith of South Carolina declares.

Whether Senator Smith is unduly alarmed over recent events, only time will tell. Certainly we hope, and we know such is the wish [illegible]

[illegible] were united. [illegible] more insidious than [illegible] in 1867—and [illegible] be effected by a [illegible] party is no mat- [illegible] all see failure to [illegible] Bankheads, Byrneses, [illegible] Harrisons and other 'conservatives' they will vote the Southern negroes in the Democratic party. That is their 'anti-lynching plan' is a part of it. The South has little dream of the danger confronting it."

Lynchings-1937
6
Legislation Relating to.

5740

Filibuster Is Aimed At Lynch Bill

Southerners In Senate Start Fight As Crop Measure Is Delayed

Program Is Upset

Republicans Tangle House Procedure By Attacking Call To Special Session

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—Administration leaders helplessly watched their well-laid plans go awry today and President Roosevelt's special session program came to an abrupt, if temporary, halt.

In the Senate, meantime, Southerners conducted an old-fashioned filibuster against anti-lynching legislation, adorned with the usual trimmings of full-throated oratory and lengthy reading from old Congressional Records.

In the House, while confusion got the better of Speaker Bankhead's gavel, Republicans spoke bitingly of calling a special session with no work ready to be done. Then they blocked an effort to adjourn until Friday.

The root of the difficulty was the fact that, while both Houses had agreed to take up crop control legislation immediately upon reconvening, their agriculture committees were not ready to submit a bill for consideration on the floor.

The President had called for a farm bill, wage and hour legislation, government reorganization and regional planning, and had given a signal to go ahead with preliminary work on tax revision.

Only Government reorganization legislation was ready. House leaders decided yesterday that the time was inopportune for considering it, and in the Senate the anti-lynching issue was interposed today.

The chairman of the committees which have charge of revenue legislation indicated that tax revision, which has been demanded as a means of encouraging business, might be deferred until January.

The wage and hour bill passed last session by the Senate was still securely sewed up in the House Rules Committee, but an effort was begun today to rip it loose by means of a petition. If 218 signatures are obtained, the bill will go onto the floor automatically.

Chairman Norton (D), New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, instituted the action. At the beginning of the day's session she laid the petition on the speaker's desk and a long queue of representatives awaited an opportunity to sign.

Only 45 had the chance during the short session for signatures must be attached while the House is meeting. But, when the adjournment was taken, a sizeable line was still waiting.

The Senate, meeting for the first business day of the new session, quickly found itself tangled in an intricate parliamentary snarl.

The cause was that in addition to designating crop control as the first order of business, the Senate had made the anti-lynching bill the second item upon its program.

Senator Barkley (D), Kentucky, the majority leader, tried in vain to work out a back-stage agreement with proponents of the anti-lynching measure, under which the Senate could go ahead with the Government reorganization bill of Senator Byrnes (D), South Carolina.

Byrnes, a bitter foe of anti-lynching bills, as well as the author of the reorganization measure, stole a march on the supporters of the former by obtaining the floor at the beginning of the session.

However, in the afternoon Senator Wagner (D), New York, succeeded in making a motion that the anti-lynching bill be debated.

Then the filibuster began. Bitterly, Senator Connally (D), Texas, warned his colleagues that an effort to pass the bill would cause "some little delay." He went into a long dissertation on the fact that the special session was called to enact the President's program.

"I fail to find anywhere in the President's message any mention of this matter," he said. "What was the session called for? I ask the leaders of the majority and the minority."

Grinning broadly, Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, answered: "We don't know, ourselves."

"I do know," said Senator Barkley and he enumerated the bills listed by the President, observing, however, that under the circumstances, consideration of the anti-lynching bill would not violate the special order of business.

Connally accused Wagner of introducing the bill "to go off on a vote catching expedition in Harlem." The Texan pleaded for quick action on farm legislation, asserting that "the cotton farmers in my State and in other Southern States are suffering as they have never suffered since 1914." He added sarcastically:

"And we will give them an anti-lynching bill to relieve your depression! The great farm leader from New York, Mr. Wagner, offers this as a panacea for their ills."

At another point, he said:

"I know you're going to pass this bill and I know a lot of you will be ashamed when you do it and more ashamed after you do it . . .

"But I don't blame you folks who need the votes and have to have them to be elected."

Then he began an argument that the anti-lynching bill is unconstitutional.

"But the Supreme Court is still across the street," he shouted, while senators smiled, recalling the fight over the reorganization of the court last session. "It's still there."

Thanks God For Court

"And I know one justice who will vote that this bill is unconstitutional. He is Mr. Justice Black, of Alabama."

"Thank God, the old court's over there and when they put Mr. Justice Black over there, they put a man over there who's going to hold this bill unconstitutional."

Connally then produced what he called a "prejudgment opinion by Mr. Justice Black" on the constitutionality of the bill. The document was a filibuster speech made by Black when the anti-lynching bill was before the Senate in 1935.

Connally sent it to the desk and most of the remainder of the afternoon was taken up in a reading of the 14-page address by the clerk.

In the House, Representative Rayburn, the Democratic leader, asked unanimous consent for adjournment until Friday, as soon as the chamber had convened. But Representative Church (R), Illinois, who blocked such a move yesterday, intervened.

"Mr. Speaker, I object," he shouted, and then, pandemonium broke loose.

While Rayburn tried to make himself heard in a motion to adjourn until tomorrow instead, many members vainly attempted to obtain the floor.

Above the tumult, Representative Rich (R), Pennsylvania, finally bellowed:

"We were called here by the President of the United States to transact business. Is this any way to do business?"

He was howled down, and Rayburn made his motion to adjourn until tomorrow. Representative Snell (R), New York, the minority leader, forced a roll call vote, upon which the motion carried.

Effort To Shift Burden Blocked

They blocked, 42-25, an effort by Southern senators to shift a part of the burden of their filibuster to the shoulders of the Senate reading clerk.

The vote came when Senator Pepper (D), Florida, proposed that an address delivered by Majority Leader Barkley (D), Kentucky, on his recent European trip be read to the chamber. Senator Minton (D), Indiana, objected. So did Barkley.

Senator Harrison (D), Mississippi, and Senator Connally (D), Texas, opponents of the bill, contended the speech should be read as a demonstration of respect for Barkley. They demanded a vote.

When the result was announced, Barkley told the chamber, "That's one vote this session in which I was able to command a majority."

Deprived of an opportunity to rest his voice, Pepper resumed his address. His voice rising to oratorial heights, he flailed the proponents of the bill, which makes wilful failure to prevent a lynching a Federal offense. At one time he took the proponents to task for "dabbling time away with this measure when the country is crying for correction of the maladjustments of the present economic disturbance."

Senator Wagner (D), New York, one of the authors of the measure, reminded Pepper that the farm bill, most important of the President's proposals to the special session, was not ready.

Connally said that proponents of the anti-lynch bill were "failing to uphold the President's hands." He contended they were pressing other legislation ahead of Mr. Roosevelt's program.

This brought a retort from Senator Clark (D), Missouri, that Connally hadn't always upheld the President's hands, referring to Connally's vote against the President's court reorganization proposal in the last session.

"I am not one of those senators," Connally replied, "who wraps his robe about him and proclaims at home that he is upholding the hands of the President and then by devious and uncertain ways maneuvers to thwart the aims of the President."

Tradition came into its own when Senator George (D), Georgia, went to the defense of states rights, as his share of the argument against the measure.

"There is a strange, new doctrine that the United States may do anything by stretching and twisting," George declared.

The House, whiling away another day with a series of vehement, if unrelated speeches, heard Republican members take up the cry. One of them, Eaton, of New Jersey, insisted that Congress, "stop twiddling its thumbs in idle bewilderment" and "meet the menacing conditions of the hour."

Farm Bill Shaped

Meanwhile, there were signs of progress in the preparation of a farm bill, first item on the Roosevelt special session program.

Chairman Smith (D), South Carolina, of the Senate agriculture committee, announced an agreement upon a "ever normal granary" bill, fashioned after the administration pattern, except that more compulsory crop control may be imposed for cotton.

A House subcommittee decided to propose marketing quotas for wheat, subject to a referendum of the farmers involved, and a 20-cent processing tax. The full committee on agriculture, however, remained widely divided on the best method of attacking the problem.

Leaders hope that a farm bill is perfected by the present period of confusion and delay will be mitigated. The Senate is ready to shelve the lynching discussions whenever the measure is brought in.

Anti-Lynching Bill Provisions Listed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The anti-lynching bill under discussion in the Senate provides:

That counties and municipalities shall be responsible for lynchings within their borders.

That such governmental subdivisions shall be liable to a lynching victim, or his next of kin, for a sum not exceeding $10,000.

That the subdivisions may offer as "affirmative defense" that the police officers in charge used all their powers to prevent the lynching.

That an officer who fails to make diligent effort to prevent a lynching may be fined to a maximum of $5,000, imprisoned for five years or both.

Tax Revision Plea Shakes Congress

Harrison Reminds Loss Of Revenue Must Be Made Up Elsewhere

Farm Bill Shaped

Backers Of Anti-Lynching Bill Win Skirmish With Blow At Long Filibuster

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A seemingly inexorable demand for tax revision to energize business arose today from both Houses of Congress while the legislative machinery continued to idle.

Abruptly, the plea cut into the Senate's persisting filibuster against anti-lynching legislation. It produced a short, sharp discussion and a warning from Chairman Harrison (D), Mississippi, of the finance committee, that reductions in one tax schedule must be offset by increases in another, so that no loss of revenue might result.

Backers of the anti-lynching bill won a test in the Senate today.

LYNCH BILL FOES MAP PLANS

Strategic Battle Is Being Conducted By Opposition

WRITER QUOTED

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Of interest to colored people throughout the country is the strategic battle against the anti-lynching bill being waged by the Southern bloc headed by Senators Tom Connally Texas, Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina and William Bankhead Alabama.

With increasing demand of the general public that the administration "do something for business," champions of the bill must face the possibility that the anti-lynch measure may have to yield its place on the Senate calendar to the widely discussed tax revision program, recently promulgated by President Roosevelt.

Proponents of the anti-lynch bill, however, headed by Senators Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, New York and Frederick Van Nuys, Democrat of Indiana, are demanding that their measure shall maintain its position of precedence over all other bills on the calendar after the farm bill has been disposed of.

LATEST CHECK UP

The latest checkup of the Senate reveals at least 73 votes for the bill and only 23 opposed to it and its passage is virtually assured, when and if, the minority's filibuster ends. Declared Senator Connally after last week's longwinded verbal tirade against the bill: "We (the Senators) talked a whole week about it, and only talked once in place." Since then, 60 amendments have been filed or are about to be filed on it, so it appears debate on the amendments could go on indefinitely.

Observers here inclined to the opinion that the Southern Senators hope that after the farm bill is passed, there will be no more than two weeks left in which to consider the anti-lynch bill, in accordance to its position of precedence on the calendar. If this happens, the opponents can easily filibuster until the Christmas holidays intervene.

"DOUBLE CROSSING"

There are others who openly charged the administration with "double crossing" the proponents of the anti-lynch bill and with sidetracking it in the maze of Senatorial subterfuges. They point to the failure of the President to rally to their cause and declare himself as favoring its immediate passage. It has been generally conceded that a definite statement from the President, ordering it up for consideration at the present extra session, would assure the bill's passage. Federal anti-lynch legislation, was given a "behind the scenes" view of the recent filibuster in the November 24 issue of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Writing under the caption, "Comedy," Paul Mallon, noted writer and political analyst, said:

"It can now be told the anti-lynching comedy which ran the first week of the Senate session was a well-planned show. Mr. R. (the President) did not order the bill up. He wanted reorganization but Leader Barkley could not get the votes for it. So they used the anti-lynching filibuster to smoke the farm bill out. THERE WAS NO REAL PRESSURE BEHIND ANTI-LYNCHING. . . Even Senator Wagner now knows that the anti-lynching bill will not pass this session."

Mallon Is Quoted

"Commenting on the Mallon article, and deploring the inactivity of the President in connection with the bill, Atty. Chester K. Gillespie, Cleveland lawyer, a former member of the Ohio Legislature and former president of the Cleveland Branch NAACP, last Friday wrote Walter White, national secretary NAACP, as follows:

"If this article is true, our Association is undoubtedly being laughed at behind closed doors in Washington. It seems to me the time has arrived when we should put all the pressure we can on the President, because it appears definitely he is not doing anything for the bill. Everyone knows that a word from the President would place the bill in a position where it could be voted on. There seems to be no doubt that two-thirds of the Senators and Congressmen will vote for the bill if they ever get a chance to do so."

Claims Bill Unfair To South

Resolution Given Ga. Senate For Approval

A resolution condemning the anti-lynching bill, now a matter of business in the United States Senate, was adopted by the State House of Representatives and sent to the State Senate, it was revealed Tuesday.

"The anti-lynch bill is manifestly unjust, unfair and would work an oppressive burden upon the entire south," the resolution charges.

Representatives Harrell of Brooks, Cochran of Thomas, Coleman of Downdes and Dollar of Grady, in offering the resolution, suggested that Georgia's United States senators and congressmen be "commended" for "their valiant opposition" to the Wagner anti-lynch bill in Congress.

The resolution offered by the representatives charges that strikes, rioting and similar disorders in the industrial centers of the north and east have caused more loss of life "than all the lynchings in the south."

In drawing up the resolution the four representatives urged that the General Assembly suggest to the Georgia congressional delegation that "should this bill (Anti-Lynching Bill) be enacted into law the losses of life of strikers and peace officers be compensated in the same manner as in cases of lynchings and that the county authorities be charged with liability and subject to the same penalties."

CURRENT OPINION

DEBATING THE LYNCHING BILL

(From the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Nov. 17, 1937).

The filibuster is a questionable legislative device at best, but when it is designed to thwart the will of majorities of better than 2-to-1 in both branches of Congress, it is more dubious than ever. Now that the Federal anti-lynching bill is to be taken up as the next order of business in the Senate, it will be interesting to see how far Southern senators are willing to go in defeating the will of the people.

There is no question that this country wants the anti-lynching bill. There is no question in our minds, either, that the South is willing to accept the measure, even though a good many Southerners are either openly skeptical or actively hostile. As far as Virginia is concerned, eight daily newspapers are advocating the passage of a Federal bill, and their attitude seems to have provoked little or no excitement among their readers.

The GALLUP poll has just completed another survey of sentiment throughout the country on this issue, and again it shows that such sentiment is overwhelming. Even in the South, 57 per cent of the people are found to favor "making lynching a Federal crime," and elsewhere the percentage is considerably higher. The favorable proportion in the country as a whole was found to be 72 per cent. It will be recalled that similar results were obtained by this same survey last winter, when 65 per cent of Southerners were recorded as favorable. Incidentally, the accuracy of the GALLUP system has recently been vindicated by gain in the electoral triumphs of MAYOR LaGUARDIA in New York and RICHARD READING in Detroit. Both results were predicted almost exactly by the GALLUP poll.

Now that the rest of the week is apparently available for debating the anti-lynching bill, is it too much to hope that the Southern senators will discuss this measure on its merits, instead of consuming days in flamboyant and combastic posturing, in apostrophes to the fair name of Southern womanhood, and in hysterical outbursts concerning the future of Southern civilization?

The time at their disposal is about right for a thorough and informing debate of the true issues, without interferring with PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S program in any serious particular. The Administration hasn't any legislation ready for presentation this week, except that for re-organizing the Federal Government and a few days' delay in its consideration will not matter particularly.

If the Southern senators will only keep their shirts on, and debate the anti-lynching bill as it should be debated, we can have an orderly disposition of the measure by the end of the week, and no item on the President's program requiring prompt attention will have suffered. If, on the other hand, the fire-eaters from Dixie insist on interspersing their burning tributes to Southern womanhood with interminable extracts from the Bible, the Congressional Record and treatises on the love-life of the earwig, they may stall the legislative machinery indefinitely, at a time when this will be decidedly bad for the country.

It remains to be seen how the Southern senators will behave in this emergency.

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5741

Truth On Lynching Issue Plea Of Senator Graves

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—A turbulent filibuster against the anti-lynching bill calmed down for twenty minutes today while the Senate listened attentively to a quiet, emotional talk by Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves, the new Alabama Senator.

Mrs. Graves's address against the bill, her maiden talk in the Senate, drew applause—a rare compliment in the chamber.

Appointed by Governor Bibb Graves, her husband, to fill the Senate vacancy resulting from the resignation of Justice Hugo L. Black, Mrs. Graves attacked the anti-lynching bill on the ground that it would "strike down the sovereignty of indestructible States."

Attired in a simple black dress piped with white, the Senator used only the simplest gestures during her talk. Some watchers in the gallery thought they saw tears in her eyes when she told the Senate that some advocates of the anti-lynching bill had been misinformed about conditions in the South.

Very much at ease, she stood erectly at her desk. She spoke slowly and distinctly, with an extemporaneous fluency, envied by many a Senator. When she had finished, Senate rules were forgotten in a burst of applause and senators crowded about her with their congratulations.

"During the brief time that I shall be here," she had said, "I should like to make one plea—that you do not press down on the brows of your sister States this brand of shame (the anti-lynching bill)."

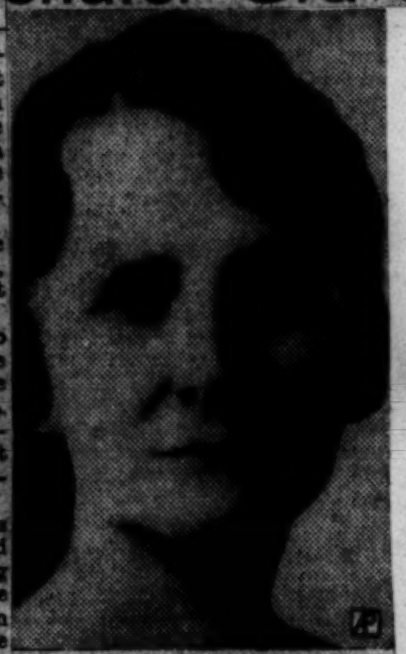
"I plead with the members of the Senate," she continued, "to seek and find the truth. You should seek the truth, know the truth and the truth will make you free."

Mrs. Graves said every section of the country had a heritage of extra-legal punishment. The South, by effective law enforcement, aided by an aroused public opinion, reduced lynchings in the last ten years, she said, and in another five years it will be wiped out entirely.

"Isn't that an amazing record?" she asked.

The Senator said she abhorred lynching, but added:

"Only a compelling emergency should cause this body to strike down the sovereignty of indestructible States. The situation is being solved. Would it be wise to change to another remedy—a remedy untried?"



SENATOR GRAVES

When her short address ended, both Republicans and Democrats clustered about her desk to extend congratulations.

The bill would penalize officers who failed to make diligent efforts to prevent lynchings. Counties in which lynching occurred would be liable to damages.

Before and after Mrs. Graves talked, shouting, gesticulating senators exchanged thrusts. Senator Connally, (D), Texas, one of the most active filibusterers against the anti-lynching proposal, criticised Senator Clark, (D), Missouri, because Clark had an anti-lynching poster hung on the Senate wall.

Waving his arms, Connally shouted that he resented "the Senate being made the sewer for the vaporings of the Senator from Missouri."

Clark later had the sign removed, saying that it had "served its purpose." He said, however, it would be hung up again later.

Another outburst occurred when Senator Van Nuys (D), Indiana, and Senator Smith (D), South Carolina, clashed over Van Nuy's assertion that the anti-lynching filibuster was "holding up the President's program."

Contending the measure was aimed at capturing negro votes, Smith shouted:

"Instead, let's make [illegible]

tion for us to buy the negro votes on the South Side of Chicago and in Harlem and see how much it will cost, but don't let us try to buy them by doing this thing to a great section of the country."

Smith, whose sallies brought frequent guffaws from the galleries, shouted at one point:

"I could call a pole cat a geranium but it would be no less a pole cat. You can call this bill humanitarianism but it's still the same thing."

Senator Overton (D), Louisiana, attacked the provision of the law which excludes racketeering deaths from the lynching penalties. He said the law "protected" racketeers.

LYNCH PROPOSAL TALK FLOOD STOPS UPPER CHAMBER

Proponents Refuse To Take Up Matters Specified in Special Session Call Until Plan of Last Congress Is Acted Upon

WAGE-HOUR DRIVE GETS UNDER WAY

45 Representatives Sign Petition To Wrest Bottled Up Measure From Committee Graveyard.

President Roosevelt's program for special session comes to abrupt, if temporary, halt in congress; farm bill, first order of business, still is in committee; southern senators filibuster against anti-lynching bill; tax revision may be deferred until January. (Page 1.)

Senate farm leaders ask Secretary Wallace to help clarify confusion over various crop control proposals; dispute over cotton threatens to delay crop control bill. (Page 1.)

Wisconsin dairy products, fearing "subsidized industry" in the south, start drive against agriculture bill. (Page 5.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Administration leaders helplessly watched their well-laid plans go awry today and President Roosevelt's program for the special session came to an abrupt, if temporary halt.

In the senate, meantime, southerners conducted an old-fashioned filibuster against anti-lynching legislation, adorned with the usual trimmings of full-throated oratory and lengthy reading from old Congressional Records.

In the house, while confusion got the better of Speaker Bankhead's gavel, Republicans spoke bitingly of calling a special session with no work ready to be done. Then they blocked an effort to adjourn until Friday.

Committees Not Ready.

The root of the difficulty was the fact that, while both houses had agreed to take up crop control legislation immediately upon reconvening, their agriculture committees were not ready to submit a bill for consideration on the floor.

The President had called for a farm bill, wage and hour legislation, government reorganization and regional planning, and had given a signal to go ahead with preliminary work on tax revision.

Only government reorganization legislation was ready. House leaders decided yesterday that the time is inopportune for considering it, and in the senate the anti-lynching issue was interposed today.

Hint Tax Delay.

The chairmen of the committees which have charge of revenue legislation indicated that tax revision, which has been demanded as a means of encouraging business, might be deferred until January.

The wage and hour bill passed last sesion by the senate was still securely sewed up in the house rules committee, but an effort was begun today to rip it loose by means of a petition. If 218 signatures are obtained, the bill will go on to the floor automatically.

Chairman Norton, Democrat, New Jersey, of the house labor committee, instituted the action. At the beginning of the day's session she laid the petition on the speaker's desk and a long queue of representatives awaited an opportunity to sign.

Sign Petition.

Only 45 had the chance during the short session for signatures must be attached while the house is meeting. But, when the adjournment was taken, a sizeable line was still waiting.

The senate, meeting for the first business day of the new session, quickly found itself tangled in an intricate parliamentary snarl.

The cause was that in addition to designating crop control as the first order of business, the senate had made the anti-lynching bill the second item upon its program.

Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, the majority leader, tried in vain to work out a backstage agreement with proponents of the anti-lynching measure, under which the senate could go ahead with the government reorganization bill of Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina.

Byrnes Steals March.

Byrnes, a bitter foe of anti-lynching bills, as well as the author of the reorganization measure, stole a march on the supporters of the former by obtaining the floor at the beginning of the session.

However, in the afternoon Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, succeeded in making a motion that the anti-lynch bill be debated.

Then the filibuster began. Bitterly, Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, warned his colleagues that an effort to pass the bill would cause "some little delay." He went into a long dissertation on the fact that the special session was called to enact the President's program.

"I fail to find anywhere in the President's message any mention of this matter," he said. "What was the session called for? I ask the leaders of the majority and the minority."

Grinning broadly, Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, answered: "We don't know, ourselves."

"I do know," said Senator Barkley and he enumerated the bills listed by the President, observing, however, under the circumstances, consideration of the anti-lynching bill would not violate the special order of business.

...Negro vote in Harlem.

Connally accused Wagner of introducing the bill "to go off on a vote-catching expedition in Harlem." The Texan pleaded for quick action on farm legislation, asserting "the cotton farmers in my state and in other southern states are suffering as they have never suffered since 1914." He added sarcastically:

"And we will give them an anti-lynching bill to relieve your depression! The great farm leader from New York, Mr. Wagner, offers this as a panacea for their ills."

At another point, he said:

"I know you're going to pass this bill and I know a lot of you will be ashamed when you do it and more ashamed after you do it.

"But I don't blame you folks who need the votes and have to have them to be elected."

Then he began an argument to show the anti-lynching bill is unconstitutional.

Thankful for Court.

"But the supreme court is still across the street," he shouted, while senators smiled, recalling the fight over the reorganization of the court last session. "It's still there."

"And I know one justice who will vote that this bill is unconstitutional. He is Mr. Justice Black, of Alabama.

"Thank God, the old court's there and when they put Mr. Justice Black over there, they put a man over there who's going to hold this bill unconstitutional."

Connally then produced what he called a "prejudgment opinion by Mr. Justice Black" on the constitutionality of the bill. The document was a filibuster speech made by Black when the anti-lynching bill was before the senate in 1935.

Reads Black Opinion.

Connally sent it to the desk. The 14-page address was read by the clerk.

In the house, Representative Rayburn, the Democratic leader, asked unanimous consent for adjournment until Friday, as soon as the chamber had convened. But Representative Church, Republican, Illinois, who blocked such a move yesterday, intervened.

"Mr. Speaker, I object," he shouted, and then, pandemonium broke loose.

While Rayburn tried to make himself heard in a motion to adjourn until tomorrow instead, many members vainly attempted to obtain the floor.

"Called for Business."

Above the tumult, Representative Rich, Republican, Pennsylvania, finally bellowed:

"We were called here by the President of the United States to transact business. Is this any way to do business?"

He was howled down, and Rayburn made his motion to adjourn until tomorrow. Representative Snell, Republican, New York, the minority leader, forced a roll call vote, upon which the motion carried.

GEORGE ASSAILS ANTI-LYNCH BILL

Prompt Attention to Tax Revision, Other 'Must' Measures Asked in Talk.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—In one of the longest speeches he has made on the floor since becoming a member of congress, Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, today demanded recall of the controversial anti-lynching bill and immediate attention to tax revision and other vital matters mentioned in the President's message to congress.

The President did not mention anti-lynching in the message but called congress in extraordinary session to consider legislation designed to dam the recession in business, he said.

"The President," Senator George declared, "called us in extraordinary session and set forth matters in which he wished congress to address itself. He enumerated certain things, and the first of these was farm legislation.

Business Recession.

"He directed attention to the fact that we have a recession in business—that is, that the general tide of business, commerce and industry in the United States is lagging and receding, and he has invited congress to give special attention to that situation."

The Georgian minced no words in severely criticizing a Democratic congress for catapulting into a business recession a measure which he described as particularly obnoxious to the south, pointing out that the present economic situation was sufficient in and of itself to arrest the undivided attention of congress.

He declared it was no answer to say that none of President Roosevelt's "must" legislation was ready for consideration.

"Would it not be heartening to the American people," he asked, "if responsible committees of the senate were seriously considering the very subject matter mentioned in Mr. Roosevelt's message? Would it not make an impression on business if congress had the courage to say, and say emphatically, that it would not trifle away its time with anti-lynching legislation?"

Warns Colleagues.

Previously, he had warned his colleagues that the country was bound to look with more or less derision upon the senate if it continued to waste its time in an effort to bring up anti-lynching legislation.

"There is nothing in the President's call for this extraordinary session to indicate that he had in mind anti-lynching legislation," the senator asserted. "Both leaders in the senate and in the house recognize the necessity of considering only those things mentioned by Mr. Roosevelt. In fact, they made such an appeal through the press of the nation.

"I say, because I believe that the people of the country will, the senate is doing little more than trifling with an opportunity to serve the real interest of America if it continues consideration of anti-lynching.

"The south, my part of the country, is agricultural by 80 or 85 per cent, and in many instances 90 per cent. There was nothing fanciful in the President's address to congress when he reminded us that there was a recession in the tide of business, commerce and industry.

"Farm legislation is too important to every senator from the south and the southeast. It is no possible excuse to say that there is nothing ready. I desire to repeat that it would be far more heartening to the American people, to the great forces of democracy, to every little business enterprise that is closing down and discharging employes, if newspapers could say that the committees of the senate, particularly finance, were given time from the floor to give real consideration to tax matters.

Would Have Progressed.

"I have not the slightest doubt but what we would have made much progress in formulating policies with tax legislation if we had begun consideration when we first met in special session."

He then asked what a senator from the south should do in response to the President's message.

Answering his own query, he declared: "It was the purpose of southern senators, whether the agricultural committee met of not, to work on farm legislation."

An anti-lynching bill, he said, was pending on the senate calendar when he came to congress 15 years ago and might have been pending 15 years before that, adding "it is still with us."

"Any fair and just court in the land," he said, "will declare this one unconstitutional, I am sure, because the rights of the states were not destroyed even by War Between the States."

Greensboro Daily News
Nov. 18, 1937

GOT SOMETHING THERE.

Mention of the pending anti-lynching measure in the senate has served to set off the historical fireworks, just as it has invariably done in the past.

To the forefront of southern defenders of the faith who rushed into a filibuster was Texas' Senator Tom Connally who stressed the emergency nature of the program submitted by President Roosevelt and urged that the Congress give attention where attention is gravely needed instead of blocking consideration by launching into an argument over the long delayed Wagner bill.

The Texas honorable really appears to have something in his advocacy for action upon measures which are needed, upon bills which will aid suffering and hard-pressed humanity, upon legislation which will remedy crying ills. Well to the forefront amongst measures which will fill these purposes is the anti-lynching hill itself. Can Senator Connally or his confreres envision anybody who is in worse shape or, in greater need of governmental aid and protection than a hapless individual who is seized by a mob and barbarously done to death for some crime which he may or may not have committed? The prostrate law, constitutional guarantees, trampled and lynched along with the physical victim, are likewise in acute need for rescue, rehabilitation and strengthening. Farmers getting seven or eight cents a pound for their cotton may be in a bad way. But how many of them would change places with a lifeless object that dangles at the end of a rope and waits for negligent, irresponsible officers of the law to come and cut it down?

There's no emergency, nothing pressing about federal anti-lynching measures, eh? By the way, will somebody in the argu-

...lying around, preferably from among the valiant filibusterers tell us how many lynchings have occurred without retributive action, as if that lack were not understood, while Congress has hemmed, hawed and orated to high heaven about the very act aimed at preventing them and at putting the fear of justice into the hearts of prospective perpetrators?

C. L. Urges Wide Fight For Anti-Lynching Bill

Following is the state of the Young Communist League on the Federal Anti-Lynching Bill:

The reactionary forces and lynch Senators from the South have lined up for a filibuster to strangle all efforts for the passage of the Anti-Lynching Bill.

The passage of such a bill to cope with the barbarous crime of lynching is of vital concern to all progressive Americans. The representatives of Southern feudalism must be defeated in their attempts to evade punishment for the dastardly crime of burning human flesh with gasoline and blowtorches.

The rope and faggot must be destroyed as a menace against humanity. Adequate compensation for the victims of lynch terror must be provided. The lynching evil must go if the Negro and white people of the South are to be allowed to improve their wretched lot and free themselves from the rule of tyranny and barbarism.

The National Council of the Young Communist League calls upon all progressive young people and organizations in the South and throughout the country to flood their Senators with telegrams demanding the passage of the Anti-Lynching Bill. In all cities

Carl Ross,
National Executive Secretary,
Angelo Herndon,
National Vice-President

Lynchings-1937
Legislation Relating to.

5742

THE SOUTH TODAY

Dixie Faces a Lynching Bill

by VIRGINIUS DABNEY

(Copyright, 1937, by Southern Newspaper Syndicate)

Editor's Note—Virginius Dabney, born at the University of Virginia, was for many years chief editorial writer, and is now editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Under Mr. Dabney's editorship, the Times-Dispatch was one of the few Southern papers which actively supported the anti-lynching measures that have been before the national congress. Dabney is a regular contributor to the New York Times and has contributed to national periodicals. His book, "Liberalism in the South," received high praise from the critics in this country and abroad.

A federal anti-lynching bill, long the bugaboo of many Southerners, is almost certain to be passed at the next session of congress. Virtually the last chance of beating the measure vanished just prior to the recent adjournment, when senate leaders agreed to put it in a preferred position on the calendar at the next session, thus assuring that it will be debated and voted on. No anti-lynching bill has ever gotten that far in the senate before. In 1922 and 1935, similar measures were filibustered to death by Southern senators before they were ever formally taken up.

The Wagner-Van Nuys bill could hardly be stopped by a filibuster now, for it will become the order of business early in the next session. A successful filibuster is far harder to execute when congress is to sit for five or six more months, than it is at the fag end of a long legislative grind.

As a matter of fact, there is much doubt whether a filibuster will even be attempted, with sentiment in both branches of congress so overwhelmingly favorable to federal anti-lynching legislation. The Gavagan bill passed the house this year by the lopsided vote of 277 to 119 and the Wagner-Van Nuys bill was reported out by the senate judiciary committee not long afterwards by 13 to 8. It is understood that at least 70 of the 96 senators will vote for the latter measure. Mr. Gavagan has agreed to allow substitution of the senate bill for his, so that we may look for the Wagner-Van Nuys bill to go on the statute books.

* * *

Shift in Sentiment

Hardly any Southerners in the house voted for the Gavagan bill. The only ones who did were Representatives Maverick of Texas, Crawford Robison of Kentucky, and Reece and Taylor of Tennessee. Five of the seven Missouri members who voted supported it; all six of Maryland's and West Virginia's did likewise, as did four of Oklahoma's. When the bill comes up in the senate, almost all the Southern senators are expected to vote against it.

One wonders, however, whether in doing so they will be representing their constituents. There is a deeply ingrained tradition that the South is violently opposed to any federal "interference" with its handling of the race problem—but has that tradition a substantial basis today? Two or three decades ago, there could have been but one answer to such a question, but there has been a decided shift in sentiment in recent years.

Consider the results of the Gallup pool taken last winter to ascertain the attitude of each section of the country toward federal anti-lynching legislation. This poll, it will be remembered, accurately predicted that President Roosevelt would be re-elected overwhelmingly, despite the contrary findings of the Literary Digest. The Gallup survey showed no less than 65 per cent of the Southern people favorable to a federal anti-lynching bill. In the other sections, favorable sentiment ranged from 65 to 75 per cent.

If there was nothing to confirm the Gallup findings, it might be possible to argue that the poll was inaccurate. But confirmatory evidence is at hand. Whereas twenty years ago, the leading Southern newspapers would have been pawing the air almost daily at the mere thought of such legislation, today a large percentage of them are advocating a federal law and most of the others are neutral.

* * *

Little Protest

Not only so, but if there has been any great outcry from the readers of Southern papers which have favored the law, it has not reached my ears. The paper with which I am connected has had numerous editorials advocating a federal enactment against lynching, but the volume of protest has been wholly negligible. Representative Maury Maverick, the only congressman from the deep South who supported the bill at the recent session, not only voted for it, but spoke for it on the floor. He was quoted some weeks later as saying that he had not received a single protest from his constituents in San Antonio.

The Wagner-Van Nuys bill provides that when a lynching has occurred, and information under oath is submitted to the attorney general of the United States that an officer of officers failed to protect the victim the attorney general shall have an investigation made by G-men to ascertain whether the charges are justified. Any official against whom such charges are formally preferred will be tried in the United States District Court, and conviction will carry with it a fine not exceeding $5,000 or prison term of five years or both.

When a county or city in which a lynching takes place is unable to show that its officials charged with the duty of preserving the peace used proper diligence to prevent the lynching, that political subdivision is liable for an amount ranging from $2,000 to $10,000, such amount to be recoverable in the United States District court, and made payable to the victim, if he survives, or his next of kin, if he doesn't.

The bill contains no provision for the prosecution of the members of a lynching mob, its sponsors have deemed it best from various standpoints to hold the peace officers responsible, and to penalize the community with a fine, when mob violence takes place.

Opponents of this legislation contend that it ought to extend to all kinds of killings, such as gang killings and those incident to labor disputes. Southern members of congress have been especially outspoken on this point.

The answer usually made is that the bill is aimed only at those killings in which the state or local government is a silent participant, in that it withholds adequate protection from the victim. It is argued that there is generally no breakdown of the law enforcement machinery when a gang killing or a labor killing occurs, and that the police, the prosecutor and the court usually function normally, under such circumstances. In view of the fact that more than 5,100 persons have been lynched in this country since 1882, and the further fact that no punishment whatever has been meted out in over 90 per cent of the cases, it is only too obvious that lynching is a crime in a class by itself.

Of course, the Wagner-Van Nuys bill may be unconstitutional. There is a substantial body of eminent legal opinion on both sides of this question, and no one can say what the final ruling of the United States supreme court will be.

South, however, must as well prepare for the enactment of a federal anti-lynching bill in the next several months. If there is a special session in November, passage may come at that time, or if not, the measure should be on the statute books by spring. President Roosevelt is said to favor it, and its advocates have far more than enough votes to win, when the ballots are counted.

Such is the situation, and pragmatic Southerners should face it. Will they really mind this federal "interference" as much as some of them seem to think they will? I doubt it.

Albany Decatur, Ala Daily
October 30, 1937

Anti-Lynching Bill

Since none of the Alabama senatorial candidates seem perturbed about the probable passage of a federal anti-lynching bill (at least not to the extent that they publicly state their purpose to filibuster against it until its backers yield), we commend to them for their earnest consideration the following discussion of the bill in an editorial published in the Lynchburg, Va., News, which is published by Senator Carter Glass and Sons:

"When the congress adjourned in August there remained on the program several measures advocated by the president, including one which, while not on the 'must' list, had received his approval. This was the so-called anti-lynching bill and it held preferred place on the calendar. It will be one of the first measures to be considered when the special session is convened and the general impression seems to be that it will be passed by both houses and, of course, signed by the president.

"There are several reasons for belief that passage is virtually certain, several things that make its passage virtually certain. They are:

"1—There are votes in it. The negro has been emigrating into the northern and middle western sections of the country for some time. He is a power in the politics of those sections. His vote is angled for by all candidates for office. In some sections united opposition of the negro vote is decisive; no candidate can be elected under that circumstance. It has been true for some time but there has been a difference. Until recently the negro vote was solidly republican and where it was large democratic candidates had little chance. Knowing that the negro vote was unattainable, or unexpected, democratic members of the congress have been willing for the most part to go along with the southern members in opposition to "anti-lynching" legislation. However demagogic they might be they couldn't hope to profit much in that direction. They left sponsorship of "anti-lynching" legislation to the republicans. That was their game. Now it is different. The negro vote is divided; the negro is growing more independent. Democrats as well as republicans angle for his support, and a fine bait in sections in which there is an important negro vote is to shout and vote for 'anti-lynching' legislation. So they are shouting and they are going to vote for it—and there are more northern and western democrats than there are southern democrats.

"2—Liberalism has become a fetich. To be considered liberal is de riguer. And, for some strange reason, advocacy of increased federal government powers has come to be a hall mark of this spurious liberalism. Furthermore, humanitarianism and liberalism have become confused and because humanity revolts at lynching anything that is labeled a measure to prevent lynching wins approval. This brings to the measure both the wishful thinkers and the demagogues who hope to profit politically by pretense of liberalism and of humanitarianism.

"3—President Roosevelt supports it. Members of the congress from the South who have never favored anti-lynching legislation because of lack of interest in the welfare of the negro will have any appetite to those who like to think of themselves as modern. The doctrine of 'That the passage of 'anti-lynching' legislation will now vote for such legislation because it has received the approval of the president. The rubber stamp element of the congress will be for it.

"4—Local self-government, from sight of. Anything to obtain demonstrated. Even those who are so horrified at assumption upon the mob has given that central government powers of coercion have never been able to argue convincingly that after paying the price the supposed benefits will be reaped. They can be up-to-date! Anything to obtain results upon civilization and the in-

...ny hope. The states have not prevented lynching, they point out, and so they are willing to try something else.

"The News would be frank about this matter. It doesn't believe that any 'anti-lynching' legislation is likely to be effective. It is confident that any promising, any effectiveness would be unconstitutional and that a constitutional amendment is necessary if there is to be legislation with any real hope of accomplishment. But, even were there great hope of accomplishment and even if such legislation were held constitutional, The News would be opposed to it. It is opposed to it because it does not believe that the promised good, even if possible of attainment by the proposed means, would be worth the price. To be brutally frank, it does not believe the saving of a few lives and the imposition of the outward form of civilization upon groups of uncivilized men is sufficient inducement for action that will bring the end of local and state government no near to annihilation that annihilation itself will be only a matter of years. If murder by a mob can bring federal authorities and federal police swarming into a state, willy-nilly, why not murder by an individual? Why not supersede local police and local courts with federal police and federal courts whenever there are votes in it? If neglect by the states of duties is to bring action by the central government, whether the privileges of people in other states are or are not affected, what is to be the end when there are votes in it? And whence does the federal government derive the power to deprive a state of its rights because it has neglected to perform its duties? To admit that there is a power to correct and to save the states from themselves is to deny to the states any rights the central government may wish to deny them. It is to re-write the constitution so as to eliminate the provision reserving to the states the rights not granted the central government and make that provision read: 'The powers not delegated to the states by the constitution, nor prohibited by it, to the United States, are reserved to the United States.'

"And that would mean the end of the federal government and the substitution of a central government without constitutional restrictions worthy the name upon its powers. There are those who desire such a government, but those who do not thirst after a spurious liberalism, who believe the essence of true liberalism is opposition to coercive government, must look upon all legislation threatening its establishment with apprehension, no matter what rosy promises of immediate good are held out."

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
October 29, 1937

The Vicious Anti-Lynch Law

Passage of a vicious anti-lynch law by the senate at the approaching session of congress would be a stinging affront to the south and would place Dixie in the position of not being capable of self-government.

Such a measure has been passed by the house and has been made the first order of business for the special session of congress to be convened next month, and observers believe the senate will enact the legislation.

Attempts were made in the last session to push the bill through the senate, after it had been passed by the house, but it was beaten down by southern opposition, yet the outlook for defeating it again is not as bright as it was last year.

Representative Henry B. Steagall, of the Third Alabama district, who, like all other southerners, is opposed to lynching, looks upon the measure as being a vicious one and a direct stab at the south.

Others who have studied the bill regard it in the same manner and realize that it will take away from the states the right to prosecute criminal cases originating within their boundaries, giving the federal government authority to step in and take handling of the cases out of the hands of southern court officials.

This is contrary to state's rights and denying of the right of the states to govern themselves and will have the effect of saying southern courts are ineffective and unfair—that justice can be done only when the hand of the federal government moves the wand.

The bill is discriminatory on its face and reveals that it is directed primarily at the south where there have been mob slayings, just as there have been in other sections. But other sections are not levelled out. It is the south that has been pointed to accusingly, and it is southern justice the authors of the bill are challenging.

We are opposed to mob slayings and of individuals taking the law in their own hands. Lynchings have been discouraged and minimized in the south in recent years, but we cannot say as much for the mob and gang killings in other sections.

This newspaper has always been opposed to mob demonstrations of any kind and pleads for the prosecution of all implicated in such outrages, yet it beleives prosecution should come through the normal process of the state courts without federal interference or intimidation.

Justice can be done in the state courts of the south the same as in federal courts.

LYNCH LAW OF NO ADVANTAGE SAYS MITCHELL

Lambastes Newspapers As Usual In New York Church Address

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 — "There is no real advantage in the anti-lynching bill. It will mean absolutely nothing to the Negro's defense against lynching," Congressman Mitchell told a crowd of 200 at Metropolitan Baptist church in Harlem, Sunday afternoon.

"Organizations like the one I chanced to drop in on, composed of students of colleges of the south, discussing problems of race relations, can and will do more to stop lynching than all the anti-lynching bills you can get over," Mr. Mitchell said further.

"There is a law against stealing in this country; a law against gambling; a law against holdups and highway robbery in this country, but have they stopped? If the Negro would stop and consider his own faults more and think less about those of the other fellow he would get much more done, and solve more problems of interest," were among the things the Chicago congressman told his listeners.

In Own Defense

Mr. Mitchell's speech, some two hours long, beamed with interest at intervals though he appeared to be defending his own cause most of the way. Time after time he took time out from his subject to lambast the press for its attitude toward him and on one occasion, while not naming the organization (interpreted by many to have been the N. A. A. C. P.) he scored one particular body as being hostile to his every move. "They fight to put over a number of things themselves, but oppose everything I do," the congressman said.

The congressman took as his subject discussion of bills before the House and Senate, adhering to the Rev. Abner Brown's request that he have something to say on the anti-lynching bill. But he did not tarry long on this subject. He did however, say the President had assured him, off the record of course, that in the event of the bill's passage he would sign it readily.

"Be it constitutional or not, it represents a cause that can do no harm," Mr. Mitchell quoted the President as saying. The congressman also said he had received sufficient indication from members of the Senate, to believe that body would follow in the footsteps of the House and pass the bill.

Talks On Others

In addition to the anti-lynching bill, Mr. Mitchell spent considerable time on other bills including the one he claims to have been responsible for killing, the "Southern" bill.

This one, introduced by the late Senator Robinson of Arkansas was the case of the white soldier who killed the Race man in France during an argument over the attentions of a French girl. The bill, according to Mr. Mitchell, would restore the slayer's citizenship because of his release from prison on parole.

The congressman also told of the suit he has against the Rock Island railroad for discrimination in the south, and his fight for proper accommodations for members of the Race. He did not ask for or suggest the abandonment of jim-crow cars. Instead he pleaded for the same accommodations for both races. Nor did he at anytime in his speech come out either for or against the anti-lynch bill. His speech dealth with assuring the audience that it will in all probability be passed.

Another subject dealt with at length by the congressman was that of appointments to West Point and Annapolis. He said he does not believe in jim-crow, therefore would name boys of both races just as he has done in the past. He also told of his fight to get some recognition for Mat Henson, sole survivor of ...ad Peary expedition to the North Pole.

Here he paused to give credit to one New York editor who had written several letters to him asking that something be done. However, at the same time, the congressman lambasted one of his colleagues, the congressman from New York as being insincere toward the Race and of taking him (Mitchell) to task for stepping in on the New York territory in the Henson case.

In his attack on the press, Mr. Mitchell stated emphatically that he saw no reason why he should have to of necessity tie up with the papers in order to get along in Congress.

"I am one Race leader who sees no reason to adhere to the wishes of others to get along in this world," the congressman said.

Mr. Mitchell made no reference at all to the case of Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, though many thought he would.

LYNCHINGS GRADUALLY DECREASE

From the Savannah Morning News.

In a senate speech opposing the anti-lynching bill, U. S. Senator Dixie Graves of Alabama remarked that state law enforcement and public opinion combined had reduced acts of mob violence by two-thirds in the last ten years and in another five years would end them altogether. It is to be earnestly hoped that her prediction may be fulfilled, but at the present rate of progress an extension of time for final accomplishment may be necessary. Her clue is at least a hopeful one.

Lynchings - 1937
Legislation Relating to

5743

Columbia, S. C. Record
August 7, 1937

No Longer in the Saddle.

The Southern senators—South Carolina's Smith and Byrnes among them—who saw themselves defeated in their efforts to prevent the passage of the wages and hours bill will learn from the experience that the South no longer sits in the Democratic party saddle.

And when the federal anti-lynching bill comes to a vote its Southern opponents will find themselves in much the same position and may expect to see the bill go through with Democratic support

Nashville, Tenn. Banner
August 13, 1937

UNFAIR TO THE SOUTH

Senator Borah struck the nail on the head when he declared that the antilynching bill involved a plain violation of the reserved rights of the States.

The measure would define as felons any officers who failed to protect their prisoners from lynch mobs or who failed to prosecute lynchers. Abductions in labor violence or gangster forays would not be considered within the law's provisions.

The Idaho Senator told the Senate that the measure would make the Federal Government the sole judge of the performance of duty by every state officer. He asserted that the bill would jeopardize the nation's dual system of government and condemned some of the provisions as perfectly outrageous. He declared:

"If you can go into a state and take charge of an individual or group of individuals who have committed a crime, and bring them under the Federal Government's jurisdiction, the last vestage of local government will have disappeared."

The sentiment of the South is against lynching and the opposition to it is steadily increasing, but the Southern States maintain that it is they and not the Federal Government who should have jurisdiction of the crime. The interference of the National Government would inevitably create irritants that would make the situation worse rather than better.

Washington seems to have had for many years a desire to meddle in the affairs of the Southern States. The National Government apparently does not realize that local self-government is not a dead principle in the States below the Ohio. A mercenary or misguided spirit is responsible for the surrender by these States of many of their obligations and responsibilities in matters financial to the Federal Government, but the process of surrender has not gone to the point where the South would accept, without immediate and vigorous protest, an effort by federal authority to impose its will upon the officers of the law in the Southern States.

SENATE IS WARNED ON TENNESSEE LYNCHING

Washington, Aug. 20.- Citing the lynching of Albert Gooden at Covington, Tenn., on August 17 as a warning to the Senate that action on a federal anti-lynching bill must be taken speedily in the new session, Senators Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana, placed descriptions of the Tennessee lynching in the Congressional Record.

Press Release N.A.A.C.P. 8-20-37

The action of the sponsors of the anti-lynching bill in the Senate was taken at the suggestion of the N.A.A.C.P. In the last desparate efforts to secure action on a federal anti-lynching bill at this session of Congress, Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary, repeatedly recalled to friends of the bill in the Senate that if action were postponed, the Senate would be in a measure responsible for lynchings which take place in the interim.

New York Times

The N.A.A.C.P. also has sent a letter to Governor Gordon H. Browning, of Tennessee, urging him to use every weapon of the state to assist local authorities in speeding the apprehension and punishment of the lynchers of Gooden. The N.A.A.C.P. letter cited the fact that nothing has been done by the states of Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida following lynchings in those states this year. In Alabama, the state attorney general asserted before the state supreme court that Wesley Johnson, lynched on February 2, was innocent of any crime and had been arrested by the sheriff just to satisfy local clamor for an arrest. It was admitted that the sheriff knew that Johnson was innocent at the time of the arrest. Despite the fact that an innocent man was lynched, Alabama has done nothing.

As it was to have been expected, Mississippi has made no move whatsoever even to investigate the brutal blow-torch double lynching at Duck Hill, April 13. Despite pronouncements of Governor Fred P. Cone, of Florida, the authorities of that state have done nothing to apprehend the lynchers of two boys in Tallahassee on July 20.

The N.A.A.C.P. asserts that the record of the local and state authorities in the six lynchings of 1937 demonstrate that a federal law is necessary if any progress is to be made toward wiping out mob violence.

Roanoke, Va., World News
August 16, 1937

The Anti-Lynching Bill

There are many thoughtful Southerners who are convinced of the futility of striving to eliminate lynching by appeals to reason. These, who have been forced to the conclusion that the problem is one for the Federal Government to handle. Even so, the Wagner-Van Nuys bill, now before Congress, has little to commend it to them.

Liberal Southerners, who look upon lynching as a challenge to law and order, are interested in Federal intervention only because they believe mob rule can be more effectively wiped out thus. They can hardly be expected to grow enthusiastic, however, over a measure whose primary feature seems to be vindictiveness toward local authorities who fail to enforce the law or to prosecute after a lynching.

It is absurd, of course, to pretend that local authorities are unable to recognize any member of a lynching mob. The truth is that mobs are often composed of influential men who control votes and who could throw powerful political forces against officers who might arrest them. This being true, few officers have the courage to do their sworn duty when they know that they will suffer ultimately as a result. Even if arrests are made, the defendants are tried by a jury composed of residents of their own community, who are quite likely to share the prejudices which led to the lynching. Under such conditions, a verdict of not guilty would be the rule rather than the exception. Therefore, lynching continues.

In contrast with this state of affairs, a Federal officer owes his job to no small group of people in one county or town. If he is sent into a community to investigate a violation of the law, he can proceed in the face of a hostile local sentiment, buoyed by the knowledge that he is supported by public opinion generally. Then, when defendants are brought to trial, the jury is composed of men selected from points throughout a wide area who naturally do not feel the prejudices common to men living in one community. The result should be greater fairness and impartiality.

It is because of this that many Southerners had resigned themselves to the idea that a Federal anti-lynching law was needed. They hoped that Congress would pass a law, overlapping the authority of the various States, just as in the matter of illicit distilling. Then it would remain for Federal authorities to enter the picture whenever they felt that they could get at the bottom of a mob attack more effectively than local officers. Proponents of such a measure believed that it would not only make it easier to bring mob members to the bar of justice but that it would tend to prevent lynchings by creating in the minds of potential mob members the fear of Federal prosecution.

Instead, a measure is offered which leaves it to local authorities to enforce the law. And if they do not, the bill seems to say, between the lines, "you'll have the fear of God thrown into you." Accordingly, the law enforcement officers would be prosecuted themselves for failure to carry out their manifest duties.

No matter how much contempt we may have for a law enforcement officer who condones violence rather than jeapardize his own position, it hardly seems reasonable to hope that the solution of the problem lies in prosecuting him. Everyone may be sure in his own mind that an officer knew certain members of a mob, but to prove in court that he recognized them might not be as easy as it seems in academic discussion. It would be easy in numerous instances to get factual evidence that certain men were members of a mob, but to prove what transpired within the mind of an officer might be a trifle more difficult.

The Wagner-Van Nuys bill is akin to some of the reconstruction legislation foisted on the South after the close of the War of Secession. It approaches a problem peculiarly Southern with more vindictiveness than understanding. It is gratifying to know that by agreement of the leaders it will be laid aside for the remainder of the present session, with a promise to its sponsors, however, that it will be given a preferred status on the calendar when Congress meets again in January.

New Orleans, La., Times-Picayune
August 14, 1937

Lynching 'Compromise'

THERE being no such thing as a collective sense of humor, the Senate did not roll in its aisles with mirth over its action on the lynching bill. The Senate could pass or defeat such a bill in five minutes, but instead sent it on to the next session, where it is given preferred status. This means, we are told, that it then will be enacted, since 70 votes are claimed in its support. In other words, the lawmakers reached a compromise on a measure which, according to its proponents, is calculated to prevent the illegal taking of human life. How one can compromise on murder is a problem not without its grim suggestion of the ridiculous.

The bill has been sponsored by a group that apparently knows nothing about conditions which lead to lynching in the South, and which seems to have made little study of the national constitution. Senator Connally of Texas, and the more astute Borah of Idaho, are among those pointing out that our basic law would prohibit the federal government from going into a state and establishing a civil liability for damages between citizens; but logic never has governed such matters.

The Senate chamber, we believe, is air conditioned, so whatever the outdoor temperature of Washington, there seems no reason for the solons to suffer or lose their judicial balance while considering vital legislation, as this happens to be in a literal sense. Most intelligent persons in the South believe the lynching bill to be a deliberate incentive, rather than a preventive step, and instead have urged more equable and quicker enforcement of law, and a sentiment which would shame and retire to private life the law enforcement officer who is "overpowered" and gives up his prisoner to a mob. Creation of such sentiment is a matter of education and persistent effort, but it is not fostered by an agreement of the elder statesmen to let lynching go unconfined for six months and then jam on brakes which many experts say will not work.

Greensboro, N. C., Record
November 15, 1937

Legislation On Lynching

(By David H. Bradshaw, associate professor of history and government at Kentucky State Industrial College, at Frankfort, in a letter to the Editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal.)

With the approach of November 15 all eyes in the country are turning in the direction of Washington and to the special session of Congress called by the President in the exercise of his constitutional authority. Among the subjects on the agenda for legislative consideration is one concerned with the enactment of legislation to prevent lynching. Aside from questions of constitutionality, it is extremely doubtful that any law to prevent lynching, whether federal or state can be enforced at the present time. Admirable as any attempt to legislate lynching out of existence may be, all efforts at legal eradication of the evil must wait for success upon the creation of a public opinion opposed to lynching in the localities where it is now practiced.

No legislature has ever yet been able to legislate goodness into people. The problem is more fundamental than what at first is apparent to the eye. In so far as the enactment of anti-lynching legislation may serve to focus attention upon the evils of lynching and thereby help create a feeling against it such legislation may be beneficial. But only to that degree. The solution to the problem, it seems to me, is to be found, not in the field of legislation, but in that of education.

If this is correct, then its success will of necessity involve the passage of a period of years. Education is at best a slow and tedious process. Especially is this true where it must do its work in an informal way. To accomplish the desired end the schools, the press, pulpit, radio and all other agencies that help formulate public opinion must co-operate. When public opinion has been educated to see the evils attendant upon all of society as a result of lynching, then it will be that laws to eradicate the practice may become really effective.

Certainly I have no wish to depreciate the attempts to stop lynching; it merely appears that the efforts being made in this regard are pointed in the wrong direction. The enactment of such legislation may create a tendency in the right direction, but only in so far as it does will the legislation be of any value. For as difficult as it has been to get legislation of this nature enacted, the enforcement of any such laws would be even more difficult in the present state of public opinion. The man in the street does not realize that when some person is lynched not only does that person lose his life as a result of the taking of the law into the hands of lawless individuals, but what is more, the law itself is in a sense lynched. So long as these practices are tolerated, respect for law and order must remain on a low level. Enactment of law does not make for respect for law; only through education that is skillfully applied can we bring about a desire on the part of all people for fair play to all persons regardless of race or class.

Lynchings—1937
Legislation Relating to.

5744

ANTI-LYNCHING BILL WRITTEN BY PATRICK FOR NEXT SESSION

Birmingham Congressman Answers Opposition To His Stand On Similar Measure; He Wants Mob Rule To Become A Federal Offense

Rep. Luther Patrick revealed today he is at work preparing an anti-lynching bill which he hopes will be acceptable to the South.

Returned from Washington, Mr. Patrick said his proposed bill "would sic the G-men on lynchers."

"Lynching is now a state offense," Mr. Patrick said. "My bill would make it a Federal offense."

The Ninth District representative, who was roundly criticised in a number of quarters for opposition to the Gavagan anti-lynching bill which was defeated at the last session of Congress, said he would favor any reasonable anti-lynching measure.

Wouldn't Penalize County

"In contrast to the Gavagan measure, my bill would not make the county bear the expense of a court trial in which the lynching was committed unless the citizenship of that county took part," Mr. Patrick said. "I would not penalize an innocent county."

Mr. Patrick said one of the features of the Gavagan bill to which he objected was that it was aimed at the sheriff.

"That bill is an insult to every sheriff in the South," he said. "It subjects him to five years' imprisonment for having his prisoner taken away. Had the bill passed, sheriffs would have to run away from prisoners instead of attempting to hold them in custody."

Expects Special Session

Mr. Patrick said he favored a "reasonable wages and hours bill," but added: "How can you effect a good wages and hours bill under which Southern industry can beat up without first abolishing the unfair freight rates now burdening the South?"

Mr. Patrick believes President Roosevelt will call Congress into session in October or November.

He expects to remain in Birmingham until that time. At present Mr. Patrick is staying at the Redmon Hotel with Mrs. Patrick, who has been ill several weeks. She was reported improved today. She is being treated by Dr. J. G. Vance, who managed Mr. Patrick's congressional campaign.

His Record

Mr. Patrick is a member of three committees in the National House of Representatives—executive expenditures, mines and mining, public buildings and grounds.

Mr. Patrick had an active part in obtaining a grant from the Works Progress Administration for the $225,000 out-patient clinic now being built at Hillman Hospital.

Today he disclosed he is doing his utmost to assist in getting a $2,500,000 allocation from the Public Works Administration for a white model housing project at McLendon Park.

Danville, Va., Register
August 25, 1937

THE SOUTH SAYS 'YES'

Just how accurately the American Institute of Public Opinion interprets the views of the American people we do not profess to know. The organization established by Dr. George Gallup did predict the outcome of the 1936 election with remarkable precision and thereby gained an important victory for its method of "sampling" public opinion over the older method of taking straw votes. Yet the "sampling" method is too new, has been checked too infrequently to be endorsed without qualification.

It is interesting to note, however, that the first check of Southern sentiment on an anti-lynching law, made by the Institute of Public Opinion, shows that the people of the South are almost two to one in favor of a law along the lines of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill which would make lynching a Federal crime. The Institute poll shows that Southern voters averaged 65 per cent in favor of an anti-lynching law compared with an average of 70 per cent in favor of the law throughout the nation. In other words, the Southern people favor an anti-lynching law in the same proportion that the people of the nation favored President Roosevelt in the last election when they gave him a record-breaking majority which every newspaper labelled a "landslide."

These figures are astounding in view of the fact that Southern Senators and Representatives have consistently carried their opposition to any anti-lynching law to the point of filibustering against measures which otherwise would be passed by a comfortable majority. Though some of these congressmen say they oppose an anti-lynching law because it constitutes an unwarranted invasion by the Federal Government into State prerogatives, most of them will admit privately that they do not object personally to the plan to curb lynching but that they feel their constituents are opposed to the proposed bill.

While they are home, therefore, these Southern Senators and representatives would do well to check up again on the views of their constituents. For all these years they have acted on the assumption that the people of the South opposed an anti-lynching bill, yet the only check so far made has showed that the people of the South are overwhelmingly in favor of such a bill. Moreover, a large number of Southern newspapers which had opposed such a bill have swung over to the other side during the past few years, indicating that public sentiment too has been changing.

Since, therefore, the Wagner-Van Nuys bill has already been made a special order on the Senate calendar when it reconvenes, those Southern senators who will be called upon to vote on the measure in the near future should dismiss their preconceived notions and really sound out sentiment in their communities. They should go into their churches, into their civic clubs, into their mills and factories, out on their farms, on their streets and ask their constituents, the people of the South, how they feel about the proposed anti-lynching bill.

If they will, we are confident that the Institute poll on this particular measure will prove accurate. The great majority of the Southern people are heartily ashamed of the dark blot on the name of the South; the great majority of the Southern people believe in law and order; the great majority of the Southern people want every man, white or black, given a fair trial; the great majority of the Southern people believe in justice.

Especially does The Register invite Senator Glass and Senator Byrd to come to Danville before Congress reconvenes and ask our people if they do not want a law passed to stamp out the barbarous practice of lynching. If we have any understanding of the hearts and minds of our neighbors, they will give the Senators of Virginia a thunderous "Yes."

PITTSBURG KS. HEADLIGHT
AUG. 16, 1937 A31

Among the lynchings of the year, when Tuskegee Institute makes up its records for the last half of 1937, must be listed the lynching of the anti-lynching bill in the United States Senate.

New Orleans, La., Times-Picayune
August 23, 1937

Up to Local Authority

SOUTHERN congressmen are fully warranted in the determined opposition to a federal lynching law that would invade the states' right to deal out criminal justice among their own people. We have more than enough of federal interference with local government and sad are the remembrances of prohibition agents.

But the sporadic demand in Washington for a lynching law will not die so long as the sponsors of reform by federal statute are supplied with ammunition similar to that provided by the outcome of that lynching near Covington, Tenn. The fact that this was the first lynching in Tipton county for at least 70 years, of course, is no admissible defense for the community in the court of public opinion. A negro accused of the murder of the town marshal of Mason, Tenn., was taken from the sheriff, not by a mob, lashed to fury, but by six masked individuals, and lynched with a plow line. After a month in which it seems no special energy was devoted to investigation, the grand jury interrogated several witnesses who said they heard shots but saw nothing of importance. The sheriff himself was not called and the grand jury recessed without reporting any finding.

Agitation for a federal statute will be downed only when lynchings, which certainly are not confined to the South, are checked. Intelligent and resolute effort by local and state officers to apprehend the lynchers, followed by energetic prosecution after they are caught, is the formula that will do just that. Eventually lynchings will be done with except in extreme cases, and it is better that this be brought about without the intervention of the federal sleuth.

Moultrie, Ga., Observer
September 8, 1937

NATIONAL LYNCHING LAWS

At the next session of congress there will be some old "unfinished business" brought up. It will be an anti-lynching bill. There are better prospects for the passage of some national lynching law now than there has ever been before. The democrats in the northern and central states have been profiting by the Negro vote. The republicans have always been making bids for this vote and when they run out of bait they take up again the anti-lynching law. If the democrats in the north and west join with the republicans, as seems possible, they will force the bill through congress.

Leading southern democrats know the situation. We presume they have a plan of action. Something besides obstruction will have to be resorted to. Tactics on the floor or in committee can be resorted to to hold back legislation at the close of a session, but the majority cannot be restrained through an entire session.

One of two things must be done.

The first is for state governments in the South to take a strong stand against lynchings and set up legislative machinery for punishing lynchers.

The second is for southern representatives and senators to seek to eliminate from the bill features that would be particularly objectionable to the states.

There is strong opposition to lynching in the South. There are many who would not consider it objectionable to make lynching a federal offense, thereby transferring the lynching cases to the federal courts. If there was federal jurisdiction, it would make quite a difference. It would work no hardship and bring no humiliation to the innocent and those who stand for law and order. Our lynching days should be over. If the states are unable to cope with the situation then it may be well to turn the problem over to Uncle Sam.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Daily Times
November 19, 1937

THE PROBLEM REMAINS.

The filibuster on the antilynching bill which is the curtain raiser to consideration of the President's program in the Senate presents at their worst the Southern Senators who are participating in it. For one thing, it is hard to imagine a lower level of debate than Senator Connally, of Texas, reaches when he asserts that sponsors of the anti-lynching measure are appealing to the Negro population for votes when they believe the Supreme Court of the United States will declare such legislation unconstitutional.

A considerable element in Congress believes that a Federal anti-lynching law would result in an invasion of the police power reserved to the States. It is true, as Senator Connally asserts, that Mr. Justice Hugo L. Black revealed as a Senator his belief that such an Act would be unconstitutional. But the sentiment in Congress for a Federal law against lynching is not based on an appeal to Negro voters but on an appeal from mob violence which is by no means confined within the Southern States. The pending bill is not an ideal measure. It is debatable whether its provisions, even if upheld by the Supreme Court, would enable the Federal Government to stamp out lynching. But it is a mistake to imagine that demand for such a law reflects merely the influence of Northern and Eastern politicians.

Senator Connally concedes that the pending bill will pass the Senate. A poll of the membership in the last session revealed that approximately seventy votes will be cast for the measure. When it is put on the statute books, the problem confronting this section will be how to create a sentiment for local enforcement of law that is strong enough to make Federal intervention unnecessary. The State of Virginia has had for ten years a law embodying some of the provisions of the proposed Federal statute. That law has been successful; there has not been a lynching in Virginia since the law was enacted. The State of Virginia will not be "invaded" by the Federal Government for the reason that Virginia takes care of its own problem. Whether the Supreme Court holds a Federal antilynching law valid or invalid is incidental to a problem which can be solved in the South whenever the Southern people demand that lynching be stopped.

G.A.R. ASKED TO ENDORSE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Press Service of the N.A.A.C.P.

New York, 9-10-37 Sept. 10.—The Grand Army of the Republic, in convention this week in Madison, Wisconsin, was requested by the N.A.A.C.P. to pass a resolution endorsing the passage of a federal anti-lynching law. The N.A.A.C.P. request cited the lynching toll of more than 5,000 persons in the last fifty years and stated "the great cause of human freedom for which you fought would be advanced by the adoption of this resolution and this would be a continuation of the highest principles of Americanism to which the Grand Army of the Republic has always adhered."

Columbus, Miss., Commerc'l Disp.
September 19, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

Senator Pat Harrison predicts that the anti-lynching bill will pass at the January session of the Congress.

He will vigorously oppose it, as will practically all Southern Congressmen.

The bill is a vicious and unwarranted invasion of State's rights.

It permits the Federal government to come into a community and exercise rights hithereto unheard of in our system of government.

It will impose heavy penalty burdens, in money, on the taxpayers of a county through the provision of the bill which requires a county to pay the family of a lynch victim thousands of dollars in indemnity.

No right thinking people condone lynchings.

Neither do right thinking people condone the wholesale slaughter of racketeers in the great cities of the North.

Therefore, the existence of lynching and other crimes doesn't warrant Federal invasion of sacred State's rights.

The anti-lynching bill will pass as purely a political measure—next year being election year for Congressmen.

It is bait for the negro vote in the North and for the radical element's support.

Congress may pass the anti-lynching bill, bu its constitutionality will be challenged at th first opportunity.

And it will be invalidated.

Lynchings—1937
Legislation Relating to.

5745

Columbia, S. C. Record
June 23, 1937

Anti-Lynching Experiment.

The anti-lynching bill—in the Wagner-Van Nuys version—has now been started on its way through the senate with the approval of the senate judiciary committee, 13 to 8.

A majority of the senate favors its passage and the bill's enactment can be prevented only by filibuster as other federal anti-lynching bills in other years were defeated. But the chances of successful resort to filibuster by the Southern minority is less this year than usual. The end of the session is too far off and too many bills in which the Southern senators are interested remain to be passed upon. Senator Connolly, of Texas, one of the three committee members who voted against the bill, doesn't even believe that the filibuster will be attempted.

The measure's enactment, in one form or another, seems therefore practically certain. The Southern senators should however see to it that the work of the judiciary committee in defining lynching so as to limit the measure's application to only those manifestations of mob violence that follow the arrest of some accused person, specifically excluding lynchings by gangsters, racketeers or mob violence in connection with labor disputes, is undone.

There is no reason to be half-hearted about the attempt to use the federal authority to curb the mob, no excuse for leaving these loopholes. The act may not abolish lynching—federal prohibition didn't abolish drinking—but at least the endeavor, another experiment noble in motive, should not be handicapped from the beginning.

Outside the high cost of living, there isn't much to the report that the Scotch are dying out as a race.

Baton Rouge, La., Times
June 22, 1937

AIMED AT THE SOUTH

Not only is the administration in Washington passing measures inimicable to the ecenomic interests of the South, but there is now a strong possibility that the anti-lynching bill, which South haters in the North have tried to put through for half a century, is actually to be passed by the present congress.

No one in the South defends lynching. We are as much against lawless mob rule in Dixie as we are against the mob activities of the C. I. O. communists in northern cities, but lynchings sometimes happen in the South, and when they do, involving generally assaults upon white women no federal law is going to check but rather add to the community feeling. Under the Wagner act a peace officer who does not defend a prisoner from a mob is subject to both fine and imprisonment, and a trial before a federal court, while the parish in which the lynching occurs can be sued by the relatives of the mob victim for civil damages, also in the federal courts.

Aimed entirely at the South—for there is nothing in the act that requires peace officers to maintain law and order in strike ridden territory—this measure already passed the Democratic house, yesterday came out of the Democratic senate judiciary committee with a favorable report, and now goes to the senate for final passage by a Democratic senate.

The late Senator Lodge and his Force bill came a few years too early. The Old South hater should have waited for an almost solid Democratic congress before launching his attack on the South.

Calhoun, Ga., Times
June 24, 1937

LYNCHING OF LAW ALSO BAD

It is interesting to observe that there are a score or more of "anti-lynch" bills hovering about the congress, all designed to create "greater respect for law in the South."

Meanwhile it is equally interesting to observe that not a single bill has been offered looking to greater respect for the law in those large portions of the nation outside of the South.

Not a single representative has arisen to suggest some means of ending the persistent lynching of the law in such states as Michigan, Ohio and Illinois, where the law has been lynched to such a degree that few longer pay attention either to the law or the courts that seek to enforce it.

The South is making vigorous efforts to enforce the laws against lynching and is succeeding much better than are the officials in those states where contempt for the law has become commonplace, and the congress could proceed with much more fidelity toward the institution of law were it to look upon the matter as a national rather than a sectional problem.

Lynchings of individuals are horrible and are frowned upon with as much severity in the South as in the North, but the fact should be borne in mind that the worst lynching of all is when the law itself is lynched, as has become a daily occurence in the North.—Rome News-Tribune

Gadsden, Ala., Times
June 27, 1937

WHY AN ANTI-LYNCHING LAW?

OUT of Washington comes conflicting and disturbing news about the proposed federal anti-lynching law. One day a journalistic authority informs us that such a bill is dead for this session, while the next day the Senate Judiciary Committee gives overwhelming approval to the Wagner-Van Nuys measure and one of its opponents, Senator Connally of Texas, predicts that it will pass.

In view of these things, it is foolhardy to be overconfident about the defeat of the anti-lynching bill, but it is also too early to lose hope. We urge only one thing, that the members of the Senate from the South remain vigilant.

For decades, Northern fanatics, pandering to negro voters in their own states, have tried to ram a federal anti-lynching law down our throats but the Senators of the South, through a threat of filibuster, have always prevented it and they can do the same thing this year if they choose. The power which our Southern men wield in the Senate, with its unlimited debate, can be illustrated also by the "force bill" days.

That the Wagner-Van Nuys bill is a sectional measure, aimed directly at the South in spite of the fact that lynchings in this region have been reduced 5,000 per cent in the last 50 years, is borne out by the fact that its provisions do not extend to violence by gangsters or racketeers and that it has no effect upon labor controversies.

Just why, we do not know. We do not condone lynch mobs, but we think it no less worse for a lynch mob to hang a rapist than it is for a gang to machine-gun a rival, or than it is for labor mobs to beat the brains out of a victim with clubs.

Those in the lynch mobs are murderers. The gangster who kills is a murderer. The man in a labor crowd which deals in death is a murderer. They are all murderers, and they should all be treated as murderers—and state courts, if we are not mistaken, usually handle murder cases.

If we must have federal laws to deal with the lyncher, why does not Congress pass federal laws to deal with the gangster killer or the labor killer? There are 10, 20, or 30 times more lives lost each year at the hands of gangsters and labor mobs than at the hands of Southern lynchers. Worse still, we are clamping down on the lynchers tighter each year. The gangster remains bad, and the labor mobster has become frightening in the eyes of all law-abiding citizens.

The South will keep a close watch on its members of the Senate, and it will remember those who lend their aid in the fight against this anti-lynching bill. It will also remember those who, filled with national political ambitions, dodge around the corner when the bill is called [illegible]

June 25, 1937

To Humiliate South?

SPEAKING of the anti-lynching bill and other current matters having a bearing on racial relations, Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina tells Walter Brown, Washington correspondent:

"It seems to be the object of the so-called Democratic party to humiliate the South and the sooner the South knows who her friends are the better it will be."

This comes from an old time Democrat, whose loyalty to the Democratic party of old has never been questioned through decades of notable public service, and it is significant.

Southerners increasingly are asking themselves if they are receiving justice at the hands of the party which has enjoyed their faithful and undivided support.

Albany-Decatur, Ala., Daily
July 5, 1937

Washington Silence

Like the mills of the gods, the legislative hoppers grind slowly, yet day by day a vote is getting closer on the federal anti-lynching bill and a pall of silence continues to hang over Washington.

What would we give for one loud, lusty yowl of complete and utter defiance from some Southern senators, letting the radicals know that they are not going to get away with this trick of ramming that damnable piece of legislation down Southern throats!

The Gadsden Times already has sounded a warning that the people of Dixie are not going to be content with corner dodging on this bill and we thoroughly agree with the view. What we want is action—in a great big way.

If action is not forthcoming in Washington, you may rest assured another sort of action will be forthcoming at the polls!

Poplarville, Miss. Press
July 1, 1937

THE ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill emerged from the Senate judiciary committee this week without the threats of filibuster that have greeted similar proposals in the past. The committee voted, 13 to 3, for the bill.

Indications are that there will be little fight made against the bill this time, since the Winona mob "threw the fat in the fire" just at the most opportune time. However, the passage of the bill, unfortunately, will not stop lynchings in the south if the cause of lynchings continue, but will create quite a bit of trouble that will be ineffective. Of course the bill is unconstitutional, but that it of little consequence any more. We would suggest to the people of the south, if the bill does pass, that hereafter when a case comes up that call for a lynching bee, that we call it a "ganster raid," like they do in the north. Let no newspaper in the south ever again mention "lynching" in its columns, but instead, adopt that much of the Yankee's language; call it "gangster raid." You know that is a much more cultured word, for the ganster usually has much money.—Winston County Journal.

Asheville, N. C., Times
July 2, 1937

The Anti-Lynching Bill

READING the statement of some proponents of the anti-lynching bill—"an increasing majority of Southerners desire an effective federal anti-lynching bill"—many besides Southerners doubtless will wonder over the accuracy of this assertion.

But it seems to be true. Take the poll of last January compiled by the American Institute of Public Opinion, for example.

That ballot showed the nation at large favoring such a law by 70 to 30 per cent. In the South the poll was favorable by 65 to 35 per cent.

That is impressive, even after all allowances are made for errors or for general unreliability of straw polls.

Furthermore, powerful Southern newspaper support for a federal anti-lynching law is in evidence. The Richmond Times-Dispatch, The Danville Register, The Louisville Courier-Journal, The Columbia State, The Birmingham Age-Herald, The Greensboro News, The High Point Enterprise and some other newspapers of the South have surveyed the issue and thrown up their hands in despair over the simultaneous preservation of state rights in this field and of lawful process for all persons charged with crime.

Waiving the question of constitutionality—though such a lawyer as Senator Borah asserts that the bill under consideration is unconstitutional—the advocates of the measure shut their eyes to the gradual and substantial reduction in the number of lynchings. They disregard the fact that a federal law on lynching will be to many a rebuke to state pride engendered by long, persistent and tremendously successful efforts to mobilize public opinion against lynching.

If such a law is enacted, all good citizens of course will give it their ungrudging support. But the chief burden of action will inevitably be shifted from local to federal agencies.

The federal Prohibition law failed of its high purpose, and that even in states where Prohibition sentiment piled up enormous affirmative votes in the regular elections.

Shreveport, La., Times
November 18, 1937

THE SENATE FILIBUSTER

Opponents of the anti-lynching bill which is now before the senate have launched a filibuster, with the aim of delaying action until a farm bill is ready for consideration. That would postpone a vote on the anti-lynching measure until late in the session.

This newspaper has opposed the anti-lynching bill. Our belief that it is an unwise attempt to expand federal powers in the field of policing is unchanged. But the weakness inherent in the present filibuster must be recognized.

At the last session of congress, the house approved the anti-lynching bill which is now before the senate, and the senate, in August just prior to adjournment, agreed to take up the bill at the next session, as soon as the general farm bill was disposed of.

Thus, the anti-lynching measure stands in second place on the calendar of the senate. And it will continue to hold that position in the regular session which begins in January if the filibuster succeeds in preventing a senate vote at the special session.

So the filibusterers, admittedly advocates of a worthy cause, face the task of blocking a senate vote not just for a month or two, but for a period of six or eight months. Any attempt to do that would mean serious disruption of legislative activity in both houses of congress.

The difficulties are apparent. At a time when congress should be functioning efficiently, the filibusterers would be placed in the position of setting up a solid blockade. They would be blamed for prolonging the uncertainties of the congressional session.

Such a position could not be held for six or eight months. The only reason that past filibusters to block similar legislation succeeded is that the legislation did not come up for a vote until late in a session.

The situation should be understood by all who oppose a federal anti-lynch law. If the filibuster fails or is abandoned no blame should be placed on any southern senators. They have been maneuvered into a tight corner from which there is no path of escape.

Lynchings-1937
N.A.A.C.P.— Reports on.

5746

Ancient American History?

-- 1935 Version --

Because of the lynch record in America the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People asks: "CAN THE STATES STOP LYNCHINGS?"

Opponents of federal anti-lynching legislation have constantly advanced the argument that lynching should be handled by the states, that the states could and would stop lynching.

During the 1935 filibuster in the United States Senate this argument was made by several senators:

"I am not in favor of the passage of that (Costigan-Wagner) bill, believing that the subject matter can be best handled by the states."—Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas in a letter to the Crisis, December 1, 1934.

Note: Three lynchings in Texas since this statement —no serious effort by local authorities of the state to have lynchers punished.

There is no doubt that the same argument will be used in the present session of Congress as expressed in the following statement:

"I am opposed to the anti-lynching bill, as I believe it to be an effort to bring within the jurisdiction of the federal government a matter which properly belongs to the various states . . . "—Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas letter to N.A.A.C.P., November 29, 1936.

5,105 persons, men and women, white and black, have been lynched in America since 1882. No punishment whatsoever was inflicted on the lynchers in 99.2 per cent of the lynchings; and in the 8-10 of one per cent of the lynchings where punishment of the lynchers followed, the punishment was slight. The two exceptions during 1935-6 are the two Black Legion lynchings of Silas Coleman and Charles A. Poole where the lynchers were given life. Michigan had not had a lynching prior to these Black Legion lynchings in 33 years.

The purpose of the following is to demonstrate the fallacy of the argument that states can or will prevent lynchings. The record of lynchings in 1935 is shown with the record of the local authorities and states in efforts to punish the lynchers. This data was issued by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

January 11: Franklinton, La.—A small group of men forced its way into the Washington Parish jail, shot and beat Jerome Wilson to death, dumped his body alongside a lonely road three miles from town and dispersed. Wilson had been convicted the previous August of slaying Deputy Sheriff D. C. Wood in a gun fight on the Wilson place near Franklinton, but the Louisiana Supreme Court had just reversed the conviction and granted him a new trial — which the lynching thwarted.

State Action: Sheriff Block of Franklinton declared that the only clue to the lynchers was a large hammer, and promised to investigate. No one has been arrested.

February 24: Maringouin, La.—Anderson Ward was taken from jail by a mob, hanged, and his body riddled with bullets. Ward had been arrested because of a fight with a white man.

State Action: According to rumor, Maringouin officials made an investigation, but as the lynchers were said to be "parties unknown," no one has been arrested.

March 12: Slayden, Miss.—Ab Young was hanged to a tree in a school yard three miles East of Slayden, Miss., by a mob of about fifty men. Young had been sought in connection with the shooting to death of Hardy Mackie, a state highway worker. He was placed on an automobile with a rope around his neck, the other end of the rope being suspended to a tree. One of his captors drove off in the car, throwing him from the top. (Young was seized near Rossville, Tenn., and transported across the state line into Mississippi.—New York Post, March 13.)

State Action: According to the coroner's jury, Young "came to his death by hanging at the hands of parties unknown." The prosecuting attorney stated that, "So far as the proof is concerned, we don't know whether it was a hanging or a suicide." The justice of the peace who was standing nearby him when the mob riddled the dangling body with bullets said, "I'm an officer. But my friends mean more to me than being an officer." No one has been arrected.

March 22: Lawrence County, Miss.—The body of R. J. Tyronne, a prosperous farmer, was found shot to pieces in the woods by his house on the night of March 26, where he had been lynched by a mob of whites about March 22. Tyronne was said to have been too prosperous for his white neighbors.

State Action: None.

March 30: Hernando, Miss.—The body of the Rev. T. A. Allen, of Marks, Miss., was found weighted down by a chain, in Coldwater River. He had been killed in trouble between sharecroppers and plantation owners. In his pockets were found papers concerning sharecroppers' organization work.

State Action: None.

April 7: Letahatchee, Ala. (NAACP Investigation)—Tom Scott, Negro, had a fight with a white man. Scott escaped, but "the white fellow got up the KKK and overtook him and cut him and hung him on a pine three limb. Shot him to death."

State Action: None.

May 20: Selma, Ala. (NAACP Investigation)—Willie Foster, Negro organizer for the International Labor Defense, went to Selma to investigate arrests of members of the sharecroppers' union during the cotton choppers' strike. He was arrested as soon as he arrived in Selma. He was taken out by a gang, killed and secretly buried. His body was found by friends.

State Action: None.

May 25: Detroit, Mich.—Silas Coleman, Negro World War veteran, was shot to death by Dayton Dean, Black Legion "Trigger Man," and members of the Black Legion. The only reason given for the killing was that Dean enticed Coleman to a lake for the purpose of "target practice" because Harvey Davis, a member of the mob, "wanted to see what it felt like to kill a Negro." Judge Van Zile, commenting on the killing of Coleman, told the defendants: "It is hard to understand why you killed this man, who had never done anything to you and whom you did not even know."

State Action: This lynching was brought to light after investigation of the Black Legion brought about by the slaying of Charles A. Poole (white). Five members of the mob, already sentenced to life terms for the lynching of Poole, were convicted of first-degree murder and on December 4, 1936, received life sentences for the killing of Silas Coleman.

June 22: Wiggins, Miss.—R. D. McGee, 25-year-old Negro, was hanged to a tree and his body pierced with bullets for an alleged attack on an 11-year-old white girl. The night before the lynching McGee was taken from his bed by a posse of citizens and secreted in the woods away from officers until the next day, when he was carried before the girl and identified by his clothing. The mob then carried him across the town into a side road, where he is said to have admitted attacking the girl.

State Action: Not even a casual investigation made.

July 11: Greensboro, Ala.—Joe Spinner Johnson, leader of the sharecroppers' union in Perry County, was called from his cotton patch by a small mob, bound hand and foot and beaten. He was placed in the Selma jail. Inmates heard screams that night. Next

NO ARRESTS IN LYNCHINGS DURING 1937

Mississippi Double Killing Was Most Brutal Of Year -38

NEW YORK. — There were eight lynchings during 1937 in the United States and not a single arrest of any suspected lynchers, the N. A. A. C. P. reports here this week.

The most brutal lynching of the year was the double killing of Roosevelt Townes and "Boot Jack" McDaniels by a mob at Duck Hill, Miss., April 13. The two men were tied to trees, stripped, and tortured with blow torches before being killed.

The most tragic lynching of the year was that of Wesley Johnson at Abbeville, Ala., February 1. Attorney General A. A. Carmichael of Alabama stated to the Alabama supreme court on June 5 that investigation had established that Johnson was completely innocent, that the sheriff knew he was innocent when he arrested him but took him into custody in order to satisfy local public opinion.

Even with this knowledge, the sheriff did nothing to prevent Johnson's being lynched.

Florida led the year with three lynchings, followed by Mississippi, two, and Alabama, Georgia, and Tennessee, one each.

morning Johnson was not in the jail. His body had been dumped in a secret grave near Greensboro, where it was found by his friends.

State Action: None.

July 15: Lowndes County, Miss.—Bert Moore and Dooley Morton, Negro farmers about 26 years old, were taken from a deputy sheriff and hanged about eight miles from Columbus. They were arrested after two alleged attempts to assault a white woman. The Negroes were driven through Columbus to a Negro church eight miles South of the city, where they were hanged.

State Action: None.

July 19: Fort Lauderdale, Fla.—Rubin Stacy, accused of frightening a white woman with a knife, was snatched from six deputies near Fort Lauderdale and hanged to a tree within sight of the home of the woman, his body being riddled with bullets. Subsequent investigation revealed that Stacy, a homeless tenant farmer, had gone to the house to ask for food; the woman became frightened and screamed when she saw Stacy's face.

State Action: Despite several investigations by private organizations and the sending of information to local authorities, there has been no state action. A coroner's inquest returned a verdict of "homicide by persons unknown."

July 30: Louisburg, N.C.—Govan Ward, 23-year-old Negro, axe-slayer of C. J. Stokes, was taken from a sheriff and deputy sheriff, and hanged. His body was riddled with bullets. Ward had been arrested after the killing of Stokes and was being hurried from the county as a precaution against lynching. Ward was known to be insane.

State Action: So far, none. Lynching in broad daynight. Sheriff lived in community all his life and knew all the inhabitants. An NAACP investigation by a Southern white man revealed the names of nine members of the mob who lynched Ward, which names were turned over to the governor and solicitor general of North Carolina. Among the number were several county and city officials. "Investigations" by officials were barren of results; and as the Anderson (S.C.) Record states, "It is our guess that this investigation will end like the rest."

August 3: Yreka, Calif.—A mob of twenty-five men took C. L. Johnson (white) from the county jail and hanged him. Johnson was said to have confessed to being one of two men who shot down two officers when the officers stopped the men to question them about a series of robberies.

State Action: None. Night Marshal Richard W. Cheesborough, who was stationed in the city jail next door, said that he retired inside his own jail when he heard the mob of 25 men storming the county jail "because I didn't want to have anything to do with giving the keys to the mob." When asked if he had notified the authorities of the lynching, he asked, "What's the use?"

August 5: Pittsboro, Miss.—Bodie Bates, accused of attempting to attack a white woman, was lynched by a mob which stormed the Calhoun County jail. The body was found swinging from a rope under a bridge. Twelve hours after the body was cut down officers said they had no information regarding the identity of members of the mob.

State Action: None. After lynching Bates, the mob returned to the jail and carried off another Negro whom officers could not locate. No effort was made to defend this second prisoner and no one has been arrested.

August 22: Lowndes County, Ala. (NAACP Investigation)—Jim Meriweather, leader of the Sharecroppers' Union and of the cotton pickers' strike, was arrested by a sheriff's posse which took him away and killed him. The posse gave the excuse of "self-defense."

State Action: None.

August —: Lowndes County, Ala. (NAACP Investigation)—Smith Wadkins, leader in the Sharecroppers' Union, was taken by a band of vigilantes during the cotton pickers' strike, beaten, then shot to death.

State Action: None.

September 3: Hope Hill, Ala. (NAACP Investigation)—Edward Bracey was shot and killed by a gang of vigilantes during the cotton pickers' strike. The mob opened fire on the house and shot Bracey as he tried to escape through the back door.

State Action: None.

September 17: Oxford, Miss.—A mob lynched Ellwood Higginbotham, 28-year-old Negro, near Oxford while a jury was deliberating a verdict on charges that he killed Glen Roberts, a white planter. Higginbotham was seized in the county jail by a crowd of between 100 and 150 persons and hanged to a tree two and a half miles from town.

State Action: None. Inquiries have been answered by an announcement that no persons in the mob had been identified.

September 28: Vienna, Ga.—Lewis Harris, arrested on a charge of drunkenness and having threatened the arresting sheriff, was taken from the sheriff by a mob and hanged.

State Action: None.

October 16: Moultrie, Ga.—"Bo" Brinson was killed by a posse of citizens which was searching for John Henry Sloan, said to have slain a white man in Georgia. (Two National Guard companies were ordered to Moultrie to attend the trial of Sloan.)

State Action: None.

November 5: White Bluff, Tenn.—Baxter Bell, arrested allegedly for slapping a white woman, was taken by five relatives of hers from a city marshal and a deputy sheriff and shot to death. The killing was done with the deputy sheriff's gun, which the relatives borrowed from that official at the same time they took the prisoner. The gun was returned to the officer about twenty minutes later. Reports published in the Nashville Tennessean stated that the woman was drinking beer in a Negro store at the time the slapping is said to have occurred.

State Action: The five men were indicted for murder and acquitted by a jury. Judge Courtney declared, "I am astonished at your verdict."

November 12: Colorado County, Texas—A mob estimated at 700 persons, including several women, took Benny Mitchell and Ernest Collins, accused of the murder of a nineteen-year-old white girl, from Colorado County officers and hanged them to a tree four miles from Columbus, Texas. The mob then scattered in search of another Negro believed to be implicated in the murder. The two youths, 15 and 16 years old, were being taken from Houston to Columbus for trial on November 13 in Juvenile Court for the crime, said to have been committed on October 17.

State Action: None. County Attorney O. P. Moore issued a statement, saying, "I do not call the citizens who executed the Negroes a mob. I consider their action an expression of the will of the people." County Judge Hahn said, "I am strongly opposed to mob violence and favor orderly process of the law. The fact that the Negroes who so brutally murdered Miss Kollman could not be adequately punished by law because of their ages, prevents me from condemning those citizens who meted justice to the ravishing murderers last night."

December 9: Tampa, Fla.—Joseph Shoemaker, Eugene F. Poulnot and Sam J. Rogers, three white men, were kidnaped, flogged, tarred and feathered by a masked mob. Shoemaker died of his injuries. The three men had been questioned by the police for "Communistic activities." They were not Communists, but members of a political party known as the Modern Democrats.

State Action: Under pressure from private organizations, a series of indictments against twelve persons for kidnapping, and one against eight persons for the murder of Shoemaker, were returned. In May, 1936, five former Tampa policemen were placed on trial, convicted of the kidnapping of Poulnot, and sentenced to four years' imprisonment each. They appealed, and hearing on the appeal was set for January 28, 1937. The defendants have never been confined in jail and are now at liberty on bail. No other defendants except the five former policemen have been placed on trial, and these only for the kidnapping of Poulnot. There has been no trial for the kidnapping of Rogers or the murder of Shoemaker.

8 Lynchings in '37, No Arrests

NEW YORK — There were eight lynchings during 1937 in the United States and not a single arrest of any suspected lynchers, the NAACP reported this week.

The most brutal lynching of the year was the double killing of Roosevelt Townes and "Boot Jack" McDaniels by a mob at Duck Hill, Mississippi, April 13. The two men were tied to trees, stripped, and tortured with blow torches before being killed.

Innocence Proved

The most tragic lynching of the year was that of Wesley Johnson at Abbeville, Alabama February 1. Attorney General A. A. Carmichael of Alabama stated to the Alabama supreme court on June 5 that investigation had established that Johnson was completely innocent, that the sheriff knew he was innocent when he arrested him but took him into custody in order to satisfy local public opinion. Even with this knowledge, the sheriff did nothing to prevent Johnson's being lynched.

Florida led the year with three lynchings followed by Mississippi, two, and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee one each.

EIGHT DIE BY MOB, BUT NO ONE IS ARRESTED

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—There were eight lynchings during 1937 in the United States and not a single arrest of any suspected lynchers, the N.A.A.C.P. reported.

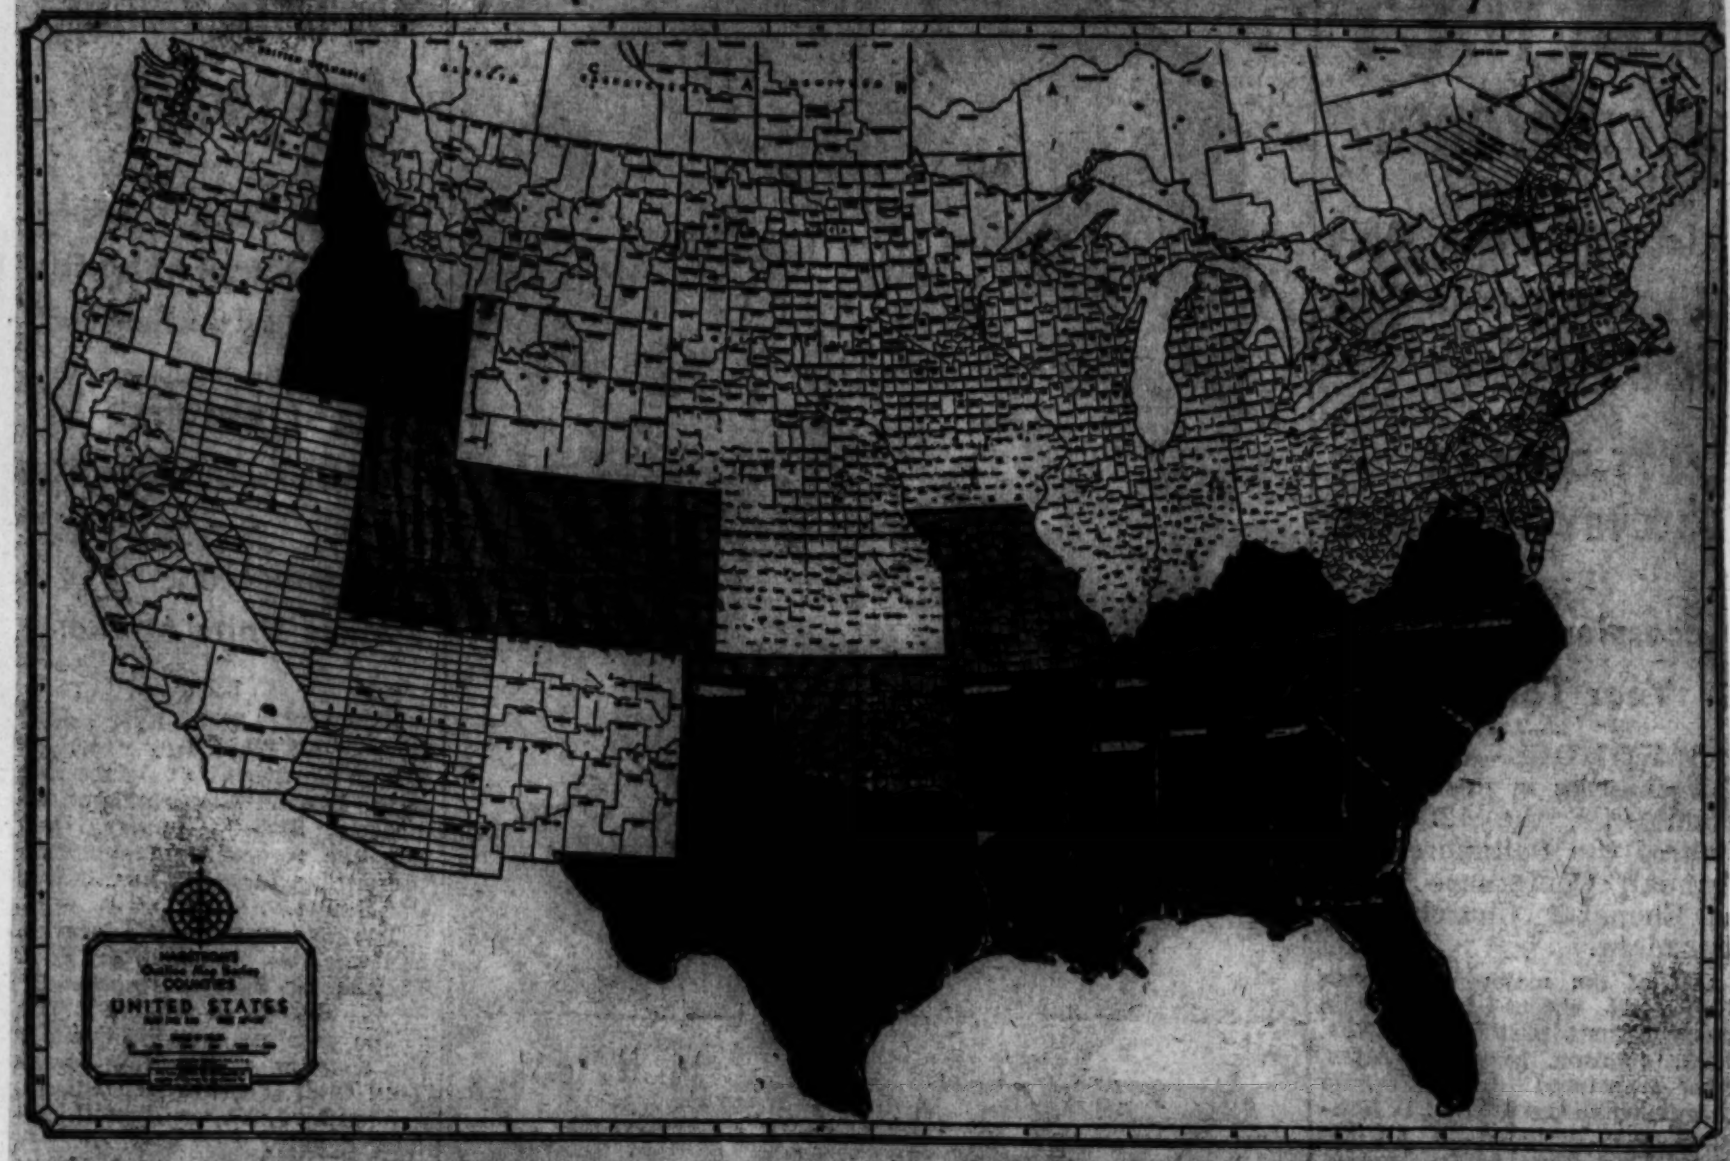
The most brutal lynching of the year was the double killing of Roosevelt Townes and "Boot Jack" McDaniels by a mob at Duck Hill, Mississippi, April 13. The two men were tied to trees, stripped, and tortured with blow torches before being killed.

The most tragic lynching of the year was that of Wesley Johnson at Abbeville, Ala., February 1. Attorney General A. A. Carmichael of Alabama stated to the Alabama Supreme Court on June 5 that investigation had established that Johnson was completely innocent, that the sheriff knew he was innocent when he arrested him, but took him into custody in order to satisfy local public opinion. Even with this knowledge, the sheriff did nothing to prevent Johnson's being lynched.

Florida led the year with three lynchings, followed by Mississippi, two, and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee, one each.

NO ARRESTS IN ANY OF SOUTH'S 1937 LYNCHINGS

THE BLACK (LYNCHING-VOTELESS) BELT



Look at the above map, made vivid by the recent NAACP antilynching fight which forced a victorious vote in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Look at that black section of these United States known familiarly as the Solid South, which voted solidly against the Gavagan Antilynching Bill, and follow us in some thinking.

Will this Solid South be able, by hook or crook, to halt the passage of the Gavagan bill when it reaches the Senate? It may, if—

And that "if" is, if the tail of prejudiced reaction is able to wag the dog of that vast section of this country that stands for some measure of civilized decency; and—

If Senators who do believe that a Federal antilynching law should be passed will put on the "heat"; and—

If President Roosevelt will get into the fight with the same force with which he has gotten into the Supreme Court fight; and—

If colored voters in this instance rise in one solid phalanx and demand that no small coterie of Southern Senators be allowed to thwart the will of the majority of the American people.

* * * *

Then look at that map and prepare to do some more serious thinking.

In that group of Southern States which stood solidly against the antilynching measure, 8,634,158 of the 11,891,143 colored people in this country live—as almost votless and submerged human beings.

If the 3,256,985 who live in the section of the country where they have the ballot have been able to make their votes respected, what could the eight millions do with theirs if they could go to the polls as free American citizens and cast their ballots?

This black (lynch and votless) belt below the Mason and Dixon Line is a picture no thoughtful citizen should forget. It is tied to us all like a body of death. We cannot escape it.

The fight of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against the lynch terror is vitally important. But that same organization's fight for the ballot and the equalization of educational opportunities is vastly more important, for it—and the fight others will make—will arm these eight millions of citizens with the ballot.

Whatever voting strength we have in that part of the country where the ballot is not denied people on account of their color, race or religion should not be wasted. Every eligible man and woman should register and thereby gird himself or herself with the weapon of civic self-defense.

And it will be to our interest to help that eight million get free. Help them by stiffening the backbone of our own representatives. Help them by strengthening the work of the N.A.A.C.P. and other organizations working to lift the color bar.

Again we ask, will the great and powerful section of the country represented by the white section of this map let the black, lynch and disfranchising group, of Southern States stand in the way of the passage of the Gavagan antilynching bill?

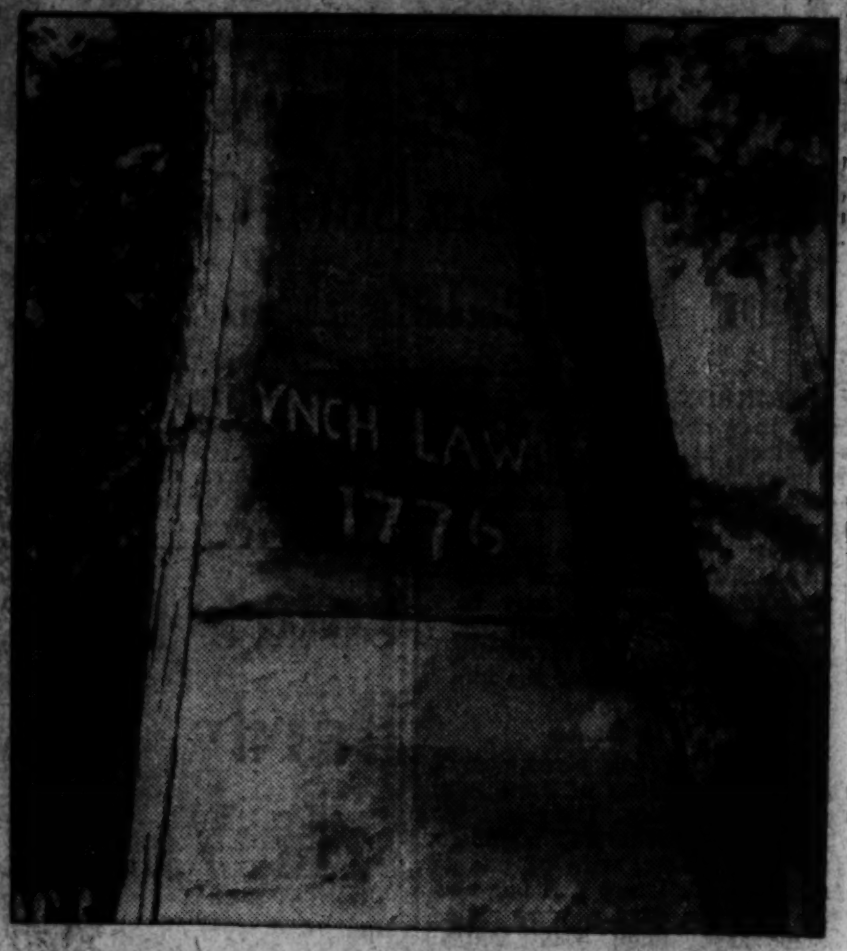
Lynchings-1937
N.A.A.C.P. - Reports.

5-8-37

S747

Unwritten American History

(SKETCHES OF AMERICAN LIFE — 1936)



MORE OF THESE OR AN ANTI-LYNCH LAW

This summary was compiled and issued by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

CARTHAGE, Texas, Jan. 16—Mace Gray, 40, was slain by a posse, charged with having run down two white girls with his car. Gray is said to have barricaded himself in a barn to resist capture. His body was riddled with bullets.

Sate Action: None.

MANGUM, Okla., Feb. 14—Willie Jones, accused of attacking a white woman and her daughter, was shot and killed by a mob of 300 men who were searching for him. Robbery was said by the sheriff to have been the motive for the attack on the woman and daughter.

Sate Action: None.

CUSSETA, Ga., March 14—Philip Baker, 35, hanged and shot by a mob of 30 or 40 men. He had been arrested December 31, 1935, charged with attacking two white women and a Negro woman, and had been carried to Macon for safekeeping. The sheriff was bringing him back to Columbus late at night for trial the next week when the mob took the prisoner on the road to Columbus.

Sate Action: None.

COLBERT, Ga., April 28—Lint Shaw was shot to death by a mob of about forty men eight hours before he was to go on trial on a charge of attempted criminal attack. A mob attempted to seize him at Danielsville, Georgia, but was thwarted by Judge Moseley who left a sick bed to hold off the mob until Shaw could be moved. He was moved to Macon, Georgia. He was returned to Danielsville but because of a mob was moved for safekeeping to Royston, a small town just about ten miles from Danielsville, and placed in a small one-story jail with the night chief of police the only officer on duty. The citizens learned of the transfer and followed.

State Action: None. Night Chief Dickerson said all of the men were strangers to him. Coroner's verdict was death by gunshot wounds at hands of persons unknown.

LEPANTO, Ark., April 29—Willie Kees, 19, was accused of an attempted attack on a white woman April 18. He was whipped and ordered to leave town. Kees returned and was arrested. On the way to the jail the mob seized him and shot him to death.

State Action: None. Coroner's verdict was death by gunshot wounds at hands of persons unknown.

PAVO, Ga., May 3—John Rushin, 55, accused of the murder of a white man. Rushin was seized by a large group of men. Deputy Sheriff Herbert Kennedy said the prisoner was "snatched" from him as he turned his head to answer a query while on the way to his auto.

State Action: None.

DETROIT, Mich., May 13—Charles A. Poole, 32, white W.P.A. worker, found shot to death. He was accused of beating his wife. Investigation revealed that Poole was shot by members of the Black Legion as a "ritual slaying."

STATb ACTION: Five members of THIS mob were convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

EARLE, Ark., June 8—Frank Weems and others, during the strike of sharecroppers called by the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, were attacked by carloads of planters and beaten. Weems was beaten into unconsciousness, carried into a store. No one was allowed near the store. His body disappeared. On June 17 and 18 the governor of Arkansas and sheriff announced they would soon produce Weems alive, but Weems has never been seen since June 8.

State Action: None. October 28 the N.A.A.C.P. wrote to the governor asking if Weems had been lynched. November 30 the governor's secretary answered that the governor's office had no evidence of the lynching of Weems. December 4 the N.A.A.C.P. wrote the governor asking if his office had any evidence that Weems had not been lynched and was still alive. December 8 the governor's secretary answered "This office has no record at all concerning Frank Weems."

DALTON, Ga., Sept. 6—A. L. McCamy, 21, accused of attempted attack on a white woman, was hanged near Dalton. He was removed from Whitfield to Dalton, less than ten miles away for "safekeeping." The jailer gave up the keys. The woman denied she had been attacked and said she could not identify the man who came to her room.

State Action: None.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 12—Tom Finch, accused of rape of a woman of low mentality in an Atlanta Hospital where Finch was an orderly. The crime is alleged to have occurred in a small closet just off the crowded reception room of the white clinic with white doctors in offices on either side of the closet. The doctors, nurses and staff unanimously affirm their belief that the alleged crime could not have been committed. No complaint was made at the hospital and none to the police for thirty-six hours. The police secured the address of Finch at 9 p.m. and Finch was brought to the hospital in a dying condition at 4 a.m.

State Action: None. Police cooperated with lynchers and reported Finch killed in attempt to escape.

GREENVILLE, Fla., Sept. 11—Buckie Young, accused of attacking white woman, shot to death. The shooting was kept a secret for more than two weeks.

State Action: None.

LAUREL, Miss., Dec. 4—J. B. Grant, 17, shot to death by a mob. After his body was riddled with more than a hundred bullets, it was tied to an automobile and dragged through the streets, then hanged to a trestle.

State Action: None.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

Alabama

5513

Negro Wounds Auburn Officer

Brought To Montgomery For 'Safe-Keeping'

AUBURN, ALA., March 7—(AP)—Police Chief G. F. Hawkins was slightly wounded late yesterday by Dave Cherry, negro, who later was arrested and taken to Montgomery "for safe keeping."

Hawkins was grazed by a pistol bullet which he said was deflected by a fountain pen and memorandum book in his vest pocket.

Surrendering following the shooting Cherry was taken to the Montgomery County jail.

Sheriff W. E. Holt, of Lee County, said a crowd of "50 or 75 men gathered around the jail here, and I thought I'd better get Cherry out of town."

Policeman Homer Roberts said he attempted to arrest Cherry on a charge of disorderly conduct at Opelika Saturday afternoon. The negro overpowered him and escaped with the policeman's pistol.

Hawkins said he went to Cherry's house after being notified of the Opelika affair and as he approached the negro shot at him.

"I dodge behind a tree when he started shooting, but one of the bullets hit my vest pocket," he said "If it had not been for my fountain pen and memorandum book, I guess I'd be a dead man now."

Hawkins said Cherry surrendered when his ammunitnon was exhausted. The negro was taken to jail, but removed later when a crowd began to gather.

Sheriff Holt said Cherry would be charged with robbery and assault with intent to murder.

Tuskegee Negro Held At Kilby For Safety

Hillard Chambless, 30, negro, was placed in Kilby Prison yesterday morning as a precautionary measure after he allegedly made an improper proposal to a white woman near Tuskegee, Sheriff Haygood Paterson said.

Chief Deputy Sheriff R. E. Bryan, of Macon County, said the negro "insulted" the woman late Thursday about a mile from Tuskegee near a negro resettlement project where he labored.

Although no charge was placed against Chambless, there is said to have been "high feeling" in Tuskegee over the alleged incident. Last night the feeling was reported subsiding.

NEGRO ATTACKER HELD

Suspect Removed to Kilby Prison After Being Identified

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 16.—(AP)—A negro was held tonight "for safekeeping" in Kilby Prison in connection with an attack on an 18-year-old Montgomery girl, forced with a male companion last night into a cemetery at the point of a gun.

Sheriff Haygood Paterson said the negro was taken to nearby Kilby for safekeeping and charges would be preferred against him tomorrow.

"The girl," said Sheriff Paterson, "positively identified him, as did her companion."

The girl told officers she and her companion were accosted by an armed negro while walking home from a baseball game and forced into the cemetery under threats of death. The man, she said, was forced to lie face-down in the grass while she was attacked.

NEGRO GIRL JAILED TO FRUSTRATE MOB

Domestic Threw Rock Into Crowd of Boys.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 5. (UP)—Mary Ann Dunn, 18-year-old negro house girl, was held in jail for safekeeping tonight after police rescued her from an angry mob which threatened violence because she threw a rock into a group of boys.

The mob, numbering about 50 persons, gathered at the home where the girl was employed.

She told police she threw the rock because the boys had been pelting the side of the house.

One of the boys, Robert Wells, was struck by the rock and two stitches were required to close a head wound.

YOUTH IS HELD FOR ABBEVILLE ATTACK

He's Removed To Kilby For Safekeeping

By United Press

MONTGOMERY, Sept. 8.—Jabe McClendon, 22-year-old white man, was held in Kilby Prison today for safekeeping after being arrested in LaFayette, Ala., yesterday on a warrant charging him with assaulting a young woman in Abbeville.

He was brought here under guard of Sheriff J. L. Corbitt of Henry County and two state highway patrolmen, who reported the trip from LaFayette was made without incident.

Name of the youth's alleged victim was not revealed.

A mob last February took Wes Johnson, Negro accused of assault, from the Abbeville Jail and lynched him. Sheriff Corbitt was charged with negligence in the lynching but was later exonerated by a four-to-two decision of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Henry County Assault Case Suspect In Kilby

Jabe McClendon, a 22-year-old LaFayette white man, was held "for safekeeping" in Kilby Prison last night, charged with assaulting a young woman with whom he had a "date" in Abbeville Monday night.

The accused youth was arrested at his home early yesterday by Sheriff C. H. Milford, of Chambers County, at the request of Sheriff J. L. Corbitt, of Henry County.

Corbitt said he had a warrant against McClendon. He declined further comment.

Circuit Judge D. D. Bernstein ordered McClendon brought to Kilby "for safekeeping" when officers said public feeling reached a high pitch.

Corbett and two deputies brought McClendon to the State prison late yesterday, accompanied by State Highway Patrolmen Bob Slay, H. C. Chandler and D. A. Ware. The officers said the trip over a circuitous route was uneventful.

Sheriff Holds 5 Negroes In Coffee Death

Planter Dies Of Injuries Received Mysteriously; Ax Seen As Weapon

ENTERPRISE, ALA., Sept. 13.—(Special)—Ralph Gunter, 42, prominent Coffee County farmer of near New Brockton, died this afternoon at Gibson's Hospital of head wounds mysteriously received in a field near his home a week ago today.

Yesterday afternoon Sheriff W. B. Paul arrested five negroes in connection with the case and removed them from the county for safe keeping. Two went sent to Troy, one to Montgomery and the remaining two to undisclosed points as feeling was reported running high in the county.

The arrested negroes were listed as Son Pugh, tenant on the Gunter farm; and Son Clark, Berry Simmons, Charlie Moore and Bud Phelps Herron.

Found By Son

Gunter, in an unconscious condition, was found by his son, Howard Guy Gunter, lying near a tractor. He was suffering from three severe blows, two in the forehead, the other at the back of his head. Nearby investigators found an ax and a monkey wrench. Gunter was rushed to the hospital where he was found to have one or more skull fractures. He died without uttering a coherent statement.

Gunter was reported last seen about noon. His son left him at that time to attend a funeral of a neighbor and was gone about three hours. When he returned he found his father unconscious.

Clues Indicate Murder

"It looked like an accident at first," said Sheriff Paul, "but later investigation indicated it might be murder." Blood was reported found on the tractor seat, disproving a theory the farmer might have fallen from the tractor.

"It looks like murder to me," said H. W. Nixon, State toxicologist, called here to assist in the investigation. He has the ax and monkey wrench for a laboratory examination.

One of the arrested negroes was reported to have had trouble with the slain farmer. Officers, acting on a report the negroes had been seen in the vicinity where Gunter was found, during the son's three-hour absence, arrested them for questioning. What they learned was not available as the sheriff tonight was "not ready" to divulge that information.

Mr. Gunter was chairman of the Coffee County Aggricultural Conservation Association and of the county agricultural committee. He was a nephew of Jim Gunter, former chief of police of Enterprise and a son-in-law of Sam Morgan, Elba, for years Coffee County treasurer.

He is survived by his widow, his son, two daughters, Katherine and Ralphine; a brother and several sisters. Funeral will be held tomorrow at 3 p.m. from the Baptist Church at New Brockton.

Mobile Negro Brought To Kilby For Safety

MOBILE, ALA., Oct. 9.—(AP)—Sheriff R. L. Holcombe said tonight that Tom Kemp, negro accused of murder in connection with the fire box death of Mick Draughn several weeks ago was being transferred to Kilby Prison in Montgomery for safekeeping.

Holcombe said rumors of high feeling in Mississippi from which State Draughn came for Mobile several months ago led to his request for a court order sanctioning the transfer. The sheriff added, however, there had been no disturbances in connection with the case here.

Two deputies sheriff and two State Highway patrolmen were en route to Montgomery with the prisoner.

Draughn's death was at first believed accidental but Solicitor Bart B. Chamberlain said later that negro witnesses had told him they saw Kemp pull Draughn, white engineer, into the furnace of a crate factory in suburban Mobile.

State Officers Assigned To Negro's Trial

Twenty Men To Carry Son Pugh From Kilby To Enterprise

A detail of 20 State Highway Patrol Officers will have charge of the transfer from Kilby Prison to Enterprise, of Son Pugh, negro, who will go on trial there tomorrow for the murder of Ralph Gunter, prominent Coffee County planter, and will remain on duty in and about the courthouse while the trial is in progress, Chief Walter K. McAdory said last night.

In assigning the State Officers to the transfer and trial, Mr. McAdory added, he had complied with a request from Circuit Judge W. L. Parks, and Sheriff A. B. Lightner of Coffee County. While there was no indication of violence or disorder at Enterprise when Pugh was taken there for arraignment Monday, it is understood that in view of the prominence of the late Mr. Gunter and the circumstances surrounding the crime with which the defendant is charged, authorities deemed it prudent to have the State officers supplement the sheriff's forces until the case has been disposed of.

Mr. Gunter was found beside a tractor on his plantation last August, unconscious from two deep wounds in his head. He died about a week later without rallying sufficiently to make a statement. One of a number of suspects subsequently arrested, Pugh has since made two confessions to the crime, according to officers. In the first he was quoted as saying he and Gunter quarreled over a crop settlement; that Gunter attacked him with a heavy wrench; that he fled and Gunter pursued him, and that he then picked up an ax leaning against the tractor and, in self defense, struck Gunter in the head with it.

In the second confession, it was said, Pugh repudiated his alleged former statement, declaring he struck the planter with the ax from behind as Gunter was placing some pine brush under one of the tractor wheels that had bogged down, in an effort to get the machine clear. At his arraignment Pugh pleaded not guilty, and Judge Parks appointed three lawyers to defend him at the trial which he set to begin tomorrow.

NEGRO TAKEN FROM MOB AT COLUMBIANA

By United Press

COLUMBIANA, Dec. 27. — A Christmas Day lynching was narrowly averted, it was revealed today when Sheriff C. H. Fore and two deputies took Ed Tannehill, Negro, from a mob of about 100 persons.

Tannehill and four companions, Sheriff Fore said, had resisted arrest and attempted to overpower Patrolman W. B. Ozley. Officer Ozley said the Negroes were drunk when he attempted to arrest them. One slipped up behind him and grabbed his gun.

Officer Ozley, however, obtained another gun from his automobile and shot one of the Negroes. All fled. Officers arrested three, placed the wounded Negro in a hospital and still are searching for the fifth.

Negro Is Rescued From Shelby Mob

Race Feeling Rises When Black Disarms Officer

COLUMBIANA, ALA., Dec. 26.—(AP) Three negroes were held in jail and another was in a hospital tonight, following a threat of mob violence when one of a group of negroes seized a highway patrolman's pistol near here.

When Highway Patrolman W. B. Ozley attempted to arrest a group of negroes on a charge of drunkenness, one of them slipped up behind him and took his pistol. Sheriff C. H. Fore said. When they fled, one of them, Ed Tannehill, was shot by the officer who took another gun from his car, according to Fore.

Fore said he and two deputies took the negro from a mob of about 100 persons and carried him to a hospital. Still another negro is being sought, he said.

Arkansas.

Lynchings—1937
Prevented 6

5755

SUSPECT ACCOSTING GIRL

Negro Held In Unannounced Jail For Attempted Assault

CAMDEN, Ark., Oct. 20—Sheriff [illegible] W. Ellis said today that Elery Cranford, 16, negro accused of attempted assault, was taken to a jail "in another part of the state" for safekeeping following his arrest this morning after accosting a 13-year-old girl at Fairview, three miles south of here.

The girl's screams frightened the negro away. She fought him after he had drawn the .32-caliber pistol and tried to force her to accompany him into the woods.

The negro was arrested early today by Constable Graham Milner. Sheriff Ellis found the pistol and said the negro youth had admitted accosting the girl. Cranford will be tried at the November term of Ouachita Circuit Court.

LYNCHINGS - 1 9 3 7 ARKANSAS

5756

PREVENTED

From Mrs. Ames' Report

Date	Place	County
Aug. 13	Texarkana,	Miller County

Negro accused of criminal asaault on white girl. Prisoner moved from jail to jail to prevent mob violence. Tried and sentenced to death on Sept. 13.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented. 6

California.

5757

Kidnap Subject Saved From California Mob

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—(AP)—Several hours after Dolores Snyder, 4, was abducted and released unharmed today, police whisked Gustave Mohr, 45, from an enraged crowd and charged him with suspicion of kidnaping the child.

4-10-37

Mohr was identified by Dolores as the man who seized her from in front of her home on the south side of Los Angeles, drove her about, bought her some candy, then drove away without harming her.

"That's him—don't let him get me again," the child cried when Mohr, married and the father of two children, was brought by police into the store operated by Dolores' parents.

As he was being taken from the store, a crowd of persons who gathered outside cried, "Lynch him! Take him away from the police and kill him!"

Lynchings–1937
Prevented

Florida

5517

5517

GRAND JURY TO PROBE FLORIDA LYNCH CASE

APALACHICOLA, Fla., June 9.—(AP)—A special Franklin county grand jury will meet Monday to consider charges that Robert Hinds, negro, assaulted a white woman here.

The accused was spirited away from Apalachicola after his arrest last month, when talk of mob violence arose, and has been kept secreted in an unannounced west Florida jail.

Tallahassee, Fla. Democrat
June 10, 1937

Cone to Send National Guard To Protect Negro Defendant In Apalachicola Court Trial

Judge Johnson Requested Protection, Sheriff Advises Governor

Circuit Judge John B Johnson asked Governor Fred P Cone today for two companies of national guardsmen to protect Robert Hinds, a negro, when he is tried for assaulting a white woman at Apalachicola.

Sheriff C L Robbins of Franklin county conveyed the judge's request to the governor, whose secretary, Branch Cone, said the troops would be ordered out when a date is set for the trial.

Sheriff Ducked Mob

A national guard company has 78 members. Sheriff Robbins said officials wanted one machine gun company and one infantry company to provide adequate protection for the negro.

Sheriff Robbins rushed Hinds away from Apalachicola several weeks ago when a mob formed there and threatened to lynch the negro. The sheriff kept ahead of the mob in a wild dash through the western part of the state.

Hinds now is held in an unannounced jail for safekeeping. He has not been returned to Apalachicola.

Grand Jury to Meet

The Franklin county grand jury will meet at Apalachicola June 21 to consider Hinds' case. State Attorney Orion C Parker, jr, said the negro would not be taken before the grand jury.

If Hinds is indicted, a date will be set for his trial. William Hopkins, of Tallahassee, appointed by the court to defend the negro, announced he would request transfer of the trial to some other county. It may be moved to any county in the state, but such transfers usually are to a nearby county.

This county, where the state capitol is located, is in the same county circuit as Franklin county, 90 miles south of here.

Says Guards Necessary

Sheriff Robbins told attaches of the governor's office he acted for Judge Johnson, presiding judge of this circuit, in asking guardsmen to protect the negro. He said he considered such protection necessary because of lynching threats.

Sheriff Robbins said he had two deputies in Apalachicola, and that he did not believe they could protect the negro if mob violence developed at the trial.

NEGRO SUSPECT GUARDED

Militia Circle Jail Holding Accused Attacker For Trial

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 15.—(AP)—National Guardsmen ringed the Leon County courthouse to protect Robert Hinds, negro, who will be tried tomorrow on a charge of attacking a woman.

The negro was transferred from Pensacola today. He is charged with an attack in Apalachicola last May.

There was no demonstration against the negro here and officers said they had no difficulty bringing him from Pensacola, where he has been held since a band of men sought to lynch him after his arrest in Apalachicola.

GUARD NEGRO FROM MOB

Troop Units Called Out For Attack Case Trial

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 4—(AP)—Florida threw a ring of bayonets around a negro prisoner today to climax order in his trial of life. Two companies of National guardsmen, armed with machine guns, rifles and arms and tear gas, were charged with seeing that the law took its course with Robert Hinds, accused of attacking a woman.

Governor Cone ordered the militia to report for duty after State's Attorney Orion C. Parker and Sheriff C. L. Robbins of Appalachicola said they feared there might be an attempt to lynch Hinds.

Hinds, Protected By Guardsmen At Trial, Electrocuted In Fla.

RAIFORD, Fla., Aug. 5.—(Special)—Robert Hinds, executed here a few days ago, will be the last man to be claimed by the electric chair since electrocution replaced hanging as the legal method of executing death sentences in this State, on the first of the present year.

Following lynching threats, Hinds was tried at Apalachicola while National Guardsmen patrolled the court house grounds and surrounding streets, and found guilty of criminally assaulting a white woman, was sentenced to death.

NEGRO RUSHED TO PRISON

Florida Man Taken to Pen For Safe Keeping After Attack Attempt

MARIANNA, Fla., Sept. 24.—(INS)—Saul Clemson, 18-year-old negro inmate of the Florida Industrial School here, today was rushed to the state prison for safe keeping following charges that he attempted to attack a 30-year-old white woman.

Constable Fred Clark, who investigated the case, said the woman's 5-year-old child frightened the negro away when she began screaming for help for her mother.

Birmingham, Ala. Post
September 24, 1937

MOB VIOLENCE FEARED

MARIANNA, Fla., Sept. 24.—Saul Clemson, 18-year-old Negro inmate of the Florida Industrial School here, was rushed to the state prison at Raiford today when he was charged with the attempted criminal assault of a white woman. Authorities feared mob violence.

Marianna, Fla., Times Courier
September 24, 1937

VIOLENCE TO WHITE WOMAN LANDS FIS BOY IN RAIFORD

Alleged Assault On Mother, 25, Not Successful

Fear of possible mob violence and perhaps a duplication of the Claude Neal lynching here three years ago, adtuated the swift and secretive removal of Saul Clemson, 18 year old Negro inmate of the Florida Industrial School, to Raiford Prison yesterday.

The negro youth, accused of attempted criminal assault of a white woman, on an affidavit sworn out by the woman herself, was carried to the state prisoncamp by officials of the schools for his own safety, according to Constable Fred Clark.

The attempt at assault occurred Wednesday morning at about 11:00 o'clock Clark said, when the Clamson youth was pulling corn in the fields of the school. Apparently, the depty reported Clemson slipped away from the field and accosted the white woman and her five year old daughter on the road nearby.

Clamson spoke to the woman asking her severeal questions which she refused to answer, according to Clark. She told him to leave but the negro persisted finally resorting to violence.

[illegible] Clemson [illegible] a hand over her mouth. Her struggles and the screams of her daughter apparently frightened the negro into leaving her alone. He ran away.

No mention of the attempt to assault was made by the woman until much later in the day, according to Clark, who said that apparently she had not wanted her husband to cause trouble. The husband was told several houra after the violence.

Frist complaint to the local law enforcement officers was made by the husband who bought his wife down to swear out an affidavit, formally accusing Clemson with the crime.

Actual charge against the Negro will probably be brought this end of the week by State Attorney, John H. Carter, Jr., or County Attorney, B L Solomon, who are today in Panama City on business.

Clemson, who was in the Florida Industrial School here on a larceny count, may be charged and returned to the Jackson County jail but it is hardly likely, according to officials.

He is from Dade City, Florida.

LYNCHINGS- 1937 FLORIDA

PREVENTED

5758

From Mrs. Ames' Report

Sept. 9. Lakeland, Polk County
It was reported that a mob of 300 gathered and tried to take a Negro man and his wife, the man being accused of attacking a 2-year old white child who was left in his wife's care.
Reported that they were "taken to unknown jail for safekeeping."

LYNCHINGS - 1937 GEORGIA

PREVENTED

5748

From Mrs. Ames' Report

April 29. Waycross, Ware County
Levy L. Rozier, white man, accused of attacking two girls, (one Negro, 1 white) on Feb. 17; also other attacks at other times. Arrested at Alma and brought to Chatham County jail (Savannah) for safekeeping.

(See Augusta Chronicle, 4/30/37

Tried and sentenced to be electrcuted.

Lynchings—1937
Prevented

Georgia

5751

Charleston, S. C., Evening Post
May 31, 1937

GUARDSMEN HELD READY

Atlanta Fears Attempt to Lynch Confessed Slayer

Atlanta, May 31. (U.P.)—Heavily reenforced police guards patrolled "mob-proof" Fulton tower today where a 35-year-old negro chauffeur was held for the hammer slaying of Mrs. R. M. Fluker.

Two blocks away picked squads of Georgia national guardsmen were ordered to stand by at the 122nd infantry armory after rumors circulated a mob would attempt to take the accused slayer from the jail.

The negro—Milton Jackson—confessed under police questioning last night that he attacked Mrs. Fluker with a hammer, struck her several blows on the head and then fired her home after saturating it with gasoline.

Her charred body was taken from the ruins of her new home in exclusive Peachtree Hills by firemen early Saturday night.

Jackson was arrested in the negro section three hours later after neighbors told police he had driven away in the family car when the house began to burn. Police said he was intoxicated at the time of his arrest.

R. M. Fluker, husband of the dead woman, gave the only clue for a motive when he testified at the inquest that Jackson believed his employers owed him 75 cents. Fluker testified that the negro probably became intoxicated and angry over the alleged debt when he made the attack.

Screams Heard

Although an autopsy revealed Mrs. Fluker's skull was crushed by the blows from the hammer, neighbors testified at the inquest they heard screams when the house began to burn and indicated the woman was burned to death.

A heavy hammer, which police believed was the death instrument, was found in the garage of the Fluker home. It had been dipped in white paint as if to cover bloodstains. Police said Jackson had been painting the house earlier Saturday.

Assistant Solicitor General Ed A. Stephens of Fulton superior court said he would ask the grand jury for a first degree murder indictment tomorrow. He said he would move for a trial two weeks hence, earliest possible date on the court calendar.

Although all possible precautions were taken to prevent mob violence there was no outward indication that any efforts would be made to take the negro from jail. Emmett Quinn, chief of Fulton county deputies, said he had heard rumors of possible trouble, however, and that the nation guard would use "machine guns and tear gas" to disperse any mob that appeared.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

Georgia

5752

NEGROES UNDER GUARD IN TORCH DEATH PLOT

Two Held After Rescue Of Storekeeper

DALTON, Ga., Dec. 27.—(UP)—Two negroes, suspected of attempting to make a human torch of a crippled storekeeper were under heavy guard tonight.

The negroes, Fred Simpson and Zora Dillard, assertedly were identified by Walter Snider, who was rescued by a neighbor.

Mr. Snider told Chief of Police W. H. Soutter that two negroes entered his store last night, flourished a pistol and demanded receipts of the day.

When he refused, one of the negroes rammed a handkerchief down his throat. It was imbedded so deeply, a physician had to use instruments to remove it.

Finally they bound him to a counter and drenched the interior of the store with kerosene. Dropping a match, they fled.

Doctors said he would recover.

Rome, Ga. News-Tribune
January 3, 1937

Law Upheld

LAW enforcement is adequate when officers of the law are determined to uphold the law. That is a truism worth stating only because of the great number of instances in which law enforcement officers are derelict in discharging their plain duty to the public. A lynching was frustrated in Rome, Georgia, Tuesday night by Sheriff M. E. Horton, of Floyd county, and Jailer Charlie Gillam, who took precautionary measures which, in the circumstances, would probably not have occurred to officials less alert to the public interest than they.

In the Floyd county jail are, or were, two Negroes charged with an attempt on the life of a citizen of Dalton, Georgia. The crime with which they are charged is a heinous one; a merchant was bound and locked within his store and the building set fire. He was able to crawl to the front of the burning building and escape the flames. Two Negroes were arrested and the merchant identified them as his assailants. The Negroes were soon transferred to the jail at Rome. A cavalcade of automobiles occupied by armed men formed in Dalton Tuesday night and set out for Rome. Sheriff Horton was informed by telephone of what was apparently "in the wind." He acted promptly.

Occupants of the vanguard of Dalton automobiles were met in the jail yard at Rome by a number of armed men. Sheriff Horton and his deputies were prepared to resist any show of force. Their duty is to uphold the law, and they were prepared to do their duty. What might have been a mob intent upon committing murder became, instead, a large number of men who realized suddenly that their own blood was a price too high to pay for the vengeance they sought. They presumably returned to Dalton. There was no violence.

To assert that lynching and other forms of mob violence cannot be stamped out by the same sort of prompt, intelligent, courageous action is to misinterpret the spirit of a mob. Men in the mass who have armed themselves with murderous intent are a cowardly lot whose taste for violence is limited strictly to the violence of which they themselves are authors. A threat to put them on the receiving end will usually result in the sort of exhibition of which the Georgia officers at Rome can well be proud.—Chattanooga Times.

Two Men Rescue Negro From Burke County Mob

Will Hopkins, Charged With Assaulting White Woman, Jailed in Savannah

Telegraph

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 29 (AP)—Will Hopkins, Negro farmhand, was brought to the Chatham county jail for safe keeping tonight by Sheriff J. L. Herrington of Burke county, who said the Negro had been rescued from a mob by two "level-headed" citizens.

4-30-37

Hopkins, charged with assaulting a white woman near Blythe, Ga., lay huddled in the floor of a car while Sheriff Herrington made arrangements for placing him in jail.

The sheriff said the two citizens, who asked that their names not be quoted, carried the Negro away in their automobile when a mob started gathering near Midville.

The pair kept him in their car, driving around seldom used roads until they were able to get in touch with the sheriff. They accompanied him to Savannah.

Earlier, the sheriff had said that he did not believe Hopkins, hunted by his deputies for three days, would ever be found alive.

"Even if our men had found him first," the sheriff said, "the temper of the crowd was such that we might have lost him."

The Negro was accused of attacking a 38-year-old white woman at her home near Blythe early Monday morning. She was treated at an Augusta, Ga., hospital.

Hopkins was recognized by townsmen when he walked into Midville, Ga., to apply for work.

Mob Gathers Quickly

The Negro was found employed at a highway construction camp on the Midville-Swainsboro road. Taken by five men in an automobile, he was whisked away even as two Burke county sheriffs deputies were on their way to Midville, arriving only five minutes after the accused had been removed.

The incarceration of the Negro at Savannah came as a climax to a 72-hour man-hunt conducted by citizens of Burke and Richmond counties, which started Monday morning near the scene of the alleged crime.

Word that the Negro had been found spread rapidly. The news was passed from citizen to citizen in the Blythe section of both Burke and Richmond counties. A mob began to gather before noon; succeeding hours increased its size.

Preconceived plans called for the mob to gather at Farmers' Bridge, just southeast of Keysville, Ga., and almost within throwing distance of a railroad trestle over which the Negro was seen fleeing 48 hours before with Burke officers in close pursuit.

One hundred or more persons formed the vanguard to the bridge. The mode of their apparel varied almost as much as the type of firearms so abundantly in evidence. Some in the party wore "Sunday clothes," others gave the appearance of having just quit the field.

Turned Over to Officers

Throughout the afternoon, automobiles loaded with farmers and business men wound through the little town of Keysville, and to the bridge.

Hours, it seemed, they waited, until finally an automobile drove up. The driver, whose identity was not learned, raised his voice above the babble of the others:

"Follow me," he shouted.

Farmers and business men rushed to their cars and left the scene in hot pursuit of the leader. They drove several miles to a store. The leader stopped. On the porch of the store stood a spokesman. He said loud enough for all to hear:

"The Negro has been turned over to the sheriff and is in the Richmond county jail at Augusta."

While astonished, and somewhat chagrined members of the mob stood apparently stunned by the news, another automobile arrived. From it emerged a man. He climbed to the porch; he addressed the crowd, all standing more or less dumbfounded.

"I have turned the Negro over to Sheriff Herington," the spokesman said, "and the Negro now is in the jail at Savannah."

WHITE MEN ASSIST IN ESCAPE

Atlanta Interracial Leader Praises

"Samaritans" MOB DISPERSED

SAVANNAH. — (SNS) — Two white men Friday were credited with having saved a colored farmhand, accused of attacking a white woman near Blythe, Ga., from possible mob vengeance.

The "good samaritans" who didn't want their names mentioned, outwitted a posse near Midville, about 100 miles northwest of here, late Thursday, and safely delivered Will Hopkins to Sheriff J. L. Herrington of Burke county. Hopkins was brought here by Sheriff Herrington for safe-keeping.

Words of praise for the manner in which the accused farmhand was saved from the hands of the mob came Friday from R. B. Eleazer, of Atlanta, who is secretary of the Interracial Committee there. He said that the "citizens' action in riding the man around in an automobile through rural Burke county was one of the most creditable things ever done in such a case."

The movements employed by the "level-headed citizens" in foiling the would-be lynchers, drew wide comment in this city. According to police reports, the white woman declared she was attacked last Monday and that her attacker was last seen making his way to a near-by swamp.

A posse searched the swamp but was unable to locate the alleged criminal. Later, it was reported that Will Hopkins, who fitted the descriptions given by the white woman, was recognized as one of the men working on a road gang near Midville.

In order to check the approaching mob, five men, riding in an automobile, forced Hopkins into their machine and escaped with him late Thursday. It was feared that these men were members of the posse and little hope of the accused man ever returning alive was advanced.

But it so happened that these five men were working in the interest of Hopkins. Three of them left the car and the colored man was covered up on the floor of the machine. After riding around the town several hours, Sheriff Herrington was contacted and arrangements made for Hopkins to

The dissatisfied mob which had been waiting at the bridge near Midville dispersed when it was told that Hopkins was being carried to Savannah for safe-keeping.

Although the sheriff refused to give names of the men who aided in saving the life of Hopkins, he expressed his opinion as "their luck thought and action probably prevented a lynching."

Judge Lynch Outdone

Georgia owes a debt of gratitude to two middle aged farmers who live near Blythe. They are those whose quick thinking and determined judgment prevented the wounding of Georgia [illegible] another lynching.

A Negro was accused of assaulting a white woman near Blythe. A mob formed. Sheriff's deputies were seeking the Negro. Word reached the sheriff that the man was found.

Elected peace officers took the understandable but uncommendable attitude:

"Even if our men had found him first, the temper of the crowd was such that we might have lost him."

That was conceding obeisance to lynch law even before the mob had got its man.

But the two solid farmers (their names first were undisclosed but now are reported as Fred Pennington and Ben Fulcher) did not concede. What they did was no condonement of the crime the Negro was accused of. It was a splendid demonstration that even persons close to such an outrage may keep their wits about them, and may remain human beings although the raw beast inside has been aroused.

The Negro was found working on a highway construction camp. News reached the mobsters and they started for him. Apparently deputies did make an honest effort to save the Negro, but they reached the scene a few minutes after five men had whisked him away in an automobile.

Details of how two men outwitted the mob have been somewhat obscure. But apparently they took him from the first quintet at the mob's appointed execution place shortly before the crowd reached there. When the murderous caravan arrived two spokesmen—their names still are unreported—announced the Negro was in official custody. One said he was in Savannah; the other that he was in Augusta.

Actually, the two men who saved their state from another lynching disgrace took the Negro in their car and drove around side roads for several hours, finally turning the captive over to Sheriff J. L. Herrington of Burke county. Sheriff Herrington, who a few hours before had considered the Negro lynched, commended the men for being "level-headed".

Georgians must some day understand that the mass lawlessness of lynching is as depraved and awful as the unmasked savagery of the crime that lynch assumes to punish. Legal justice must be kept supreme.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
May 2, 1937

Judge Lynch Outdone

Georgia owes a debt of gratitude to two middle aged farmers who live near Blythe. They are those whose quick thinking and determined judgment prevented the wounding of Georgia justice with another lynching.

A Negro was accused of assaulting a white woman near Blythe. A mob formed. Sheriff's deputies were seeking the Negro. Word reached the sheriff that the man was found.

Elected peace officers took the understandable but uncommendable attitude:

"Even if our men had found him first, the temper of the crowd was such that we might have lost him."

That was conceding obeisance to lynch law even before the mob had got its man.

But the two solid farmers (their names first were undisclosed but now are reported as Fred Pennington and Ben Fulcher) did not concede. What they did was no condonement of the crime the Negro was accused of. It was a splendid demonstration that even persons close to such an outrage may keep their wits about them, and may remain human beings although the raw beast inside has been aroused.

The Negro was found working on a highway construction camp. News reached the mobsters and they started for him. Apparently deputies did make an honest effort to save the Negro, but they reached the scene a few minutes after five men had whisked him away in an automobile.

Details of how two men outwitted the mob have been somewhat obscure. But apparently they took him from the first quintet at the mob's appointed execution place shortly before the crowd reached there. When the murderous caravan arrived two spokesmen—their names still are unreported—announced the Negro was in official custody. One said he was in Savannah; the other that he was in Augusta.

Actually, the two men who saved their state from another lynching disgrace took the Negro in their car and drove around side roads for several hours, finally turning the captive over to Sheriff J. L. Herrington of Burke county. Sheriff Herrington, who a few hours before had considered the Negro lynched, commended the men for being "level-headed".

Georgians must some day understand that the mass lawlessness of lynching is as depraved and awful as the unmasked savagery of the crime that lynch assumes to punish. Legal justice must be kept supreme.

Huntsville, Ala., Times
April 30, 1937

NEGRO RESCUED FROM LYNCHING

Two White Men Hide Farm Hand While Mob Gathers

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 30 (AP)—Two Georgia farmers were given credit today for saving from possible violence a negro farm hand, accused of attacking a white woman near Blythe, Ga.

The Augusta Herald named the two men as Fred Pennington and Ben Fulcher, "about 50 years old," of Blythe, a town of 209 population in east-central Georgia.

The negro, bonded as Will Hopkins, was brought here for safekeeping late yesterday after he had been delivered to Sheriff L. Herrington of Burke county by the two men who outwitted a mob gathered near Midville, about 100 miles northwest of here.

In Atlanta, R. B. Eleazer, secretary of the interracial commission, said the citizens' action in riding the negro around rural Burke county in an automobile until they could locate the sheriff was "one of the most creditable things ever done in such a case."

"A bright spot in the lynching situation is that more and more are being prevented by intelligent citizens and conscientious officers," he added.

The attack on the white woman occurred near Blytheville on Monday, but the suspected negro eluded posses in a nearby swamp. Hopkins was recognized while at work on a construction gang near Midville yesterday and was whisked away in an automobile occupied by five men.

Authorities were fearful the five were would-be lynchers and expressed doubt the suspect would be found alive.

But it developed, Sheriff Herrington said, the men who seized the negro were merely acting to forestall others they knew to be moving on the camp. After the negro was taken, three of the men left the car, while the other two rode around rural roads for several hours and continued their efforts to communicate with Sheriff Herrington.

Tallahassee, Fla., Democrat
April 30, 1937

CITIZENS FOIL LYNCHING MOB

Accused Negro is Kept For Sheriff

SAVANNAH, (AP)—Two Georgia farmers saved a negro farmhand accused of attacking a white woman near Blythe, Ga. from mob violence.

The Augusta Herald said the two men are Fred Pennington and Ben Fulcher, both "about 50 years old," of Blythe, a town of 209 population in east-central Georgia.

The negro, bonded as Will Hopkins, was brought here for safekeeping late yesterday after he had been delivered to Sheriff J L Herrington of Burke county by the men who outwitted a mob gathered near Midville, about 100 miles Northwest of here.

In Atlanta, R B Eleazer, secretary of the Interracial Commission, said the citizens' action in riding the negro around in an automobile until they could locate the sheriff was "one of the most creditable things ever done in such a case."

The suspected negro was recognized while at work on a construction gang yesterday and was whisked away in an automobile occupied by five men.

Authorities were fearful the five were would-be lynchers and expressed doubt the suspect would be found alive.

But it developed, Herrington said, that the men were merely acting to forestall others they knew to be moving on the camp. Three of the men left the car while the other two rode around rural roads for several hours.

A rendezvous was established with the sheriff and Hopkins was brought on in here, huddled on the floor of the two men's automobile. The men then went back to Midville and advised the mob, assembled near a bridge just outside town, that the negro was in the strong Chatham county jail.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle
May 5, 1937

BLYTHE MEN, SHERIFF OF BURKE PRAISED FOR PREVENTING LYNCHING

A resolution expressing appreciation to those in authority who through prompt and efficient action averted a miscarriage of justice recently in preventing a lynching in this community, was passed unanimously and enthusiastically by the members of the executive board of the Augusta Woman's club yesterday.

The resolution was introduced by Mrs. David Nachman, who pointed out that the club, since its inception, had carried on an active campaign for strict law enforcement. The resolution commended the action of the sheriff and his deputies and the two "level headed citizens" who turned over a Negro, Will Hopkins accused of a criminal attack upon a Burke county white woman, to the authorities.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented.

Georgia.

5753

INSIDE STORY OF THWARTED LYNCHING TOLD BY REPORTERS ASSIGNED TO COVER MURDER

DRINK WHISKEY AND GAMBLE WHILE THEY WAIT FOR VANISHED VICTIM

Mobbists Threaten "Double Crossers"

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 13.—(ANP)—Three white reporters for the Augusta Herald, who went near Blythe to await a lynching which was averted when two level-headed white farmers kidnaped the intended victim, gave him to a sheriff, and helped rush him to Savannah for safe keeping, gave graphic, eyewitness reports of the thwarted mob.

Over 20 automobiles were parked in a hollow three miles from Blythe. A mob of 100 men, both farmers and merchants, waited patiently for the arrival of a car in which was Willie Hopkins, 21 years old, and reputedly feeble-minded, who was charged with attacking a white farm woman.

Although every citizen in Blythe knew the location of the lynching ground, according to the reporters, deputy sheriffs from several counties stood around talking in the little town square claiming no knowledge of the pending atrocity.

"Would we be here if we knew where the lynching will take place?" they replied to the newsmen's questions.

Strangers in the area were viewed with suspicion. But citizens finally told the reporters where to go, and one man said "Ain't no officer got him now—he's as good as dead right now. They gonna lynch him sure as I'm standing here."

At the site, men stood around. The ground was wet. They wore high-top boots. Holsters bulged with pistols and leather thongs of black jacks were seen above hip pockets. On the rear seat of an automobile lay two high-powered rifles and an automatic shot gun.

There was the sound of a cracking tree branch. Men looked up. One said, "It's some guy just practicin' with his gun."

After hours of waiting, one in the crowd walked a few paces and drew a line on the wet ground. "Let's pitch it for a nickle a shot," he said. Ten men joined and the game lasted until the few nickles gave out.

They took drinks from quart jars of liquor. Finally one overall-clad figure walked in the middle of the road and said in a loud voice, "My God, I've never seen so many ugly people together at one time in my life. I didn't know there were so many in Burke county."

A carful of women, who had gone to the country to pick flowers, rounded the curve before reaching the hollow. They stepped back when they saw the line of parked automobiles and men with sticks standing there.

After a period of time that seemed endless, an automobile filled with men skidded to a stop on the edge of the crowd. An occupant shouted, "All who have automobiles, follow me."

At a filling station a few miles away, the mob was informed by another farmer, "There ain't going to be any lynching as the Negro has been turned over to the law."

Several threats were muttered by the crowd when they learned they had been thwarted. Some shouted cries of "double crossers!" The men milled about, wanting to know why. The speaker answered, "Listen, we don't want to go on the chaingang."

Soon afterward the mob dispersed.

The two men who saved Hopkins from being lynched were Fred Pennington and Ben Fulcher, prominent farmers of the area.

From Atlanta came word of praise by R. R. Eleazer, white, secretary of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, who said this action was "one of the most creditable things ever done in such a case."

Columbia, S. C. State
May 5, 1937

More "Level-Heads" Needed.

From Georgia, a few days ago, came the story of an averted lynching. A Negro accused of attacking a white woman was in danger from a mob gathering at a nearby town. A few "level-headed men," as the report terms them, determined that there should be no mob violence in their community. They took the Negro in charge and drove him around the county until they found the sheriff of Burke county. They delivered the Negro to the sheriff, who took the prisoner to jail in Savannah for safe-keeping.

"Level-headed" is a good adjective for men who combine strong will and intelligent action to prevent lynching. Mobs cannot think; they only feel; they have lost their heads. The men who are not swept off their feet by passion, who do not in hasty rage lose their capacity for clear thought, are those who can and will support the law. They are those who know that lawless punishment of crime only breeds more lawlessness, more crime.

We need more of these level-headed citizens.

LYNCHING AVERTED, BUT—

Most of our readers are aware of the lynching that was averted in Burke County by the commendable efforts of two worthy citizens of that county and courageous action of the sheriff in spiriting the accused to the Chatham County jail. The blood thirsty mob was thus thwarted. The sheriff and court officials were fully determined to prevent any unlawful demonstration in regards to the case and acted wisely toward that end. The accused was indicted for the crime, and the very next day, without any notice of the trial in order to keep down demonstration, he was given a trial, convicted and sentenced to the electric chair. Those who were eager for his blood, were aghast and disappointed. Matters not how hurried the trial was, it was noted as an improvement over lynch law. Heretofore the excuse for lynching was because of the delay of the law in trying cases. This is a refutation and should satisfy the fault-finders. There should be no need for such forced trials. There should only be an orderly procedure along legal lines. Those persons who are so blood-thirsty for speedy punishment, should be consistent and set an example for law enforcement, by not threatening mob law or interfering with orderly court procedure. The instigators of mob law should be dealt with a heavy hand. Do this and mob and lynching parties in the state will be acts of the past.

Anniston, Ala. Star
May 15, 1937

ESCAPES LYNCHING

Negro Safe After Attack On White Men

ATLANTA, Ga., May 15. (U.P.)—Elmer Stanford, 20-year-old Negro, was in a prison hospital today, safe from a mob of 200 men that threatened to lynch him for attacking two white men.

Stanford, intoxicated, ordered E. H. Goggins, a white man, off the sidewalk. When Goggins refused, the Negro hit him with a brick. As a crowd gathered, Stanford picked up a club and felled W. C. Steed, 55, another white man.

Stanford fled and took refuge in a nearby house after his pursuers had shot him in the hip. Police rescued him.

St. Augustine, Fla., Record
April 30, 1937

"Level-Headed" Pair Save Georgia Negro From Mob

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 30 (AP)—Two "level-headed citizens" who didn't want their names known were praised today for saving from possible mob violence a negro farmhand accused of an attack on a white woman near Blytheville, Ga.

The negro, bonded as Will Hopkins, was brought here for safekeeping late yesterday after he had been delivered to Sheriff J. L. Herrington of Burke County by the men who outwitted a mob gathered near Midville, about 100 miles northwest of here.

In Atlanta, R. B. Eleazer, secretary of the Interracial Commission, said the citizens' action in riding the negro around in an automobile until they could locate the sheriff was "one of the most creditable things ever done in such a case."

The suspected negro was recognized while at work on a construction gang yesterday and was whisked away in an automobile occupied by five men.

Authorities were fearful the five were would-be lynchers and expressed doubt the suspect would be found alive.

But it developed, Harrington said, that the men were merely acting to forestall others they knew to be moving on the camp. Three of the men left the car while the other two rode around rural roads for several hours.

A rendezvous was established with the sheriff and Hopkins was brought on in here, huddled on the floor of the two men's automobile. The men then went back to Midville and advised the mob, assembled near a bridge just outside town, that the negro was in the strong Chatham County jail. The crowd of 100 or more men dispersed with a few mutterings, the sheriff said.

ATLANTA NEGRO KEPT FROM MOB

Chauffeur Held In Hammer Slaying Of Prominent Georgia Woman

By United Press.

ATLANTA, May 31.—Heavily reenforced police guard patrolled "mob proof" Fulton Tower today where a 35-year-old Negro chauffeur was held for the hammer slaying of Mrs. R. M. Fluker.

Two blocks away picked squads of Georgia National Guardsmen were ordered to stand by at the 122nd Infantry Armory after rumors circulated a mob would attempt to take the accused slayer from jail.

The Negro—Milton Jackson—confessed under police questioning last night that he attacked Mrs. Fluker with a hammer, struck her several blows on the head and then fired her home after saturating it with gasoline.

Charred Body Found

Her charred body was taken from the ruins of her new home in exclusive Peachtree Hills by firemen early Saturday night.

Jackson was arrested in the Negro section three hours later after neighbors told police he had driven away in the family car when the house began to burn. Police said he was intoxicated at the time of his arrest.

R. M. Fluker, husband of the dead woman, gave the only clew for a motive when he testified at the inquest that Jackson believed his employers owed him 75 cents. Fluker testified that the Negro probably became intoxicated and angry over the alleged debt when he made the attack.

Screams Heard

Although an autopsy revealed Mrs. Fluker's skull was crushed by the blows from the hammer, neighbors testified at the inquest they heard screams when the house began to burn and indicated the woman was burned to death.

A heavy hammer, which police believed was the death instrument, was found in the garage of the Fluker home. It had been dipped in white paint as if to cover bloodstains. Police said Jackson had painting the house earlier Saturday.

Assistant Solicitor General Ed A. Stephens of Fulton Superior Court said he would ask the grand jury for a first degree murder indictment tomorrow. He said he would move for a trial two weeks hence, earliest possible date on the court calendar.

Negroes Jailed For Safekeeping

Montgomery Sheriff Holds 11; Attack Believed Cause

MOUNT VERNON, Ga., Sept. 1 — Sheriff Peterson placed in the Montgomery county jail last night 11 Negroes for safekeeping as the result of feeling aroused by a Negro having entered the Truman Conner home Saturday night.

After a fight with Conner the Negro escaped and has since been hunted by officers and posse in lower part of county.

Among those in jail are several members of the accused man's family. Seventy-five men were on the ground yesterday in efforts to locate the Negro.

Sheriff Peterson, anticipating trouble, brought in the Negroes on their own plea as a safeguard. Today the Negroes refused to leave the jail. Sheriff Peterson made a survey of the territory last night and found everything quiet.

Lynchings - 1937
Prevented 5

Kentucky.

5759

WHITE MAN WHO SLEW [illegible] GUARDED BY POLICE

SALYERSVILLE, Ky., November 18—(Special) — A special detachment of State police arrived here Monday to reinforce local officers in keeping down threats of violence by practically the entire population of this place against Wiley Salyer, 35-year-old white man, who shot and killed Chief of Police Lewis Marshall as the officer who had arrested Salyer on charges of being drunk and disorderly, was attempting to place him in jail Sunday afternoon.

The State officers were dispatched here at the request of Commonwealth's Attorney Earl R. Cooper who appealed to Adjutant General Lee McLain advising him the people were getting out of hand and emphasized the need for aid. The force sent was in charge of Lieutenant J. E. Harbison who, on his arrival took over general charge of preserving order.

Salyer who was shot in the stomach by the dying officer, is under treatment at a hospital where his condition remains critical.

LYNCHINGS - 1937 LOUISIANA

PREVENTED

5760

From Mrs. Ames' Report

March 14. Alexandria, Rapides Parish
Two Negroes were arrested, accused of beating and attacking a 16 year-year-old white girl. They were removed to Baton Rouge.
Later released, as no positive evidence could be obtained.

Lynchings - 1937
Prevented

Louisiana

5761

Spartanburg, S. C., Herald
July 14, 1937

A deputy sheriff in a Louisiana county followed a mob that had captured a man charged with criminal assault and found it while the noose was being fitted to the neck of the culprit. He boldly advanced to the center of the mob, took the prisoner and landed him in jail. He said that he "just talked them out of a lynching." It must have been strong talk but the deputy did what many other officers of the law might have done in the past if they had possessed the Louisianan's courage.

LOOPED ABOUT NECK, (S SAVED BY ORATORY and in his own words "just talked them out of a lynching."

Chester, S. C., Reporter
July 15, 1937

A nervy and resourceful Deputy Sheriff averted a lynching at ...ton, La., this week by going out among the mob and out-talking them. The rope was being placed around the negro's neck when the deputy arrived, and in a few more moments he would have been dangling in the air. But the cool and courageous officer elbowed his way to the center of the angry crowd, took charge of the prisoner,

Lynchings-1937

Prevented.

Maryland

5762 ill Moved to rederick After Threat

Washington

—Nov.—

ate Police Fear Lynching of Man Charged With Attacks

OCKVILLE, Md. — A threat mob law sent Maryland State ers here Monday night to es- Rancher Lee Gill, Washing- man, charged with criminal ult on two white women, to derick where he was placed in to await a special grand jury, day.

Gill is the son of Dr. Lee A. Gill, sident Washington physician, officers at his home, at 2148 treet Northwest.

Gill expressed disappoint- at a local lawyer who got d his son to be extradited to rland. The physician said he that he would keep the in the District for at least 30 days allowed by law and e him examined at Gallinger spital.

Dr. Gill who visited his son in ckville Monday, said the youth d him that he was brought in- the police court in Washington, nday and from there ordered, thout advice of counsel to be nt to Maryland.

Soon after reaching the Mary- jurisdiction there was talk lynching among groups of persons. To prevent mob state troopers hurried Gill to Frederick for safe keeping. Since Monday Dr. Gill has employed ther counsel.

The physician said he was a- kened Sunday night by five de- tives who came to his home and manded Rencher. The officers fused to tell Dr. Gill what they wanted with his son or what charge had been placed against him. They found Rencher asleep an upstairs room. Dr. Gill said the police promised that they would not abuse or ill-treat their prisoner. Dr. Gill said he also pointed out to the detective the mental condition of his son and told the officers that he was of unsound mind.

Dr. Gill saw his son Monday, and the youth told his father that he had not been abused but had signed a paper. This was taken to mean that he has waived extradiction without advice of an attorney.

The physician said he had discussed the matter with his lawyer and had agreed that the son would not be taken immediately to Maryland. Later it was learned that while the lawyer was in another part of the court Rencher was brought before the judge and ordered sent to Maryland.

Dr. Gill said his son was harmless, though mentally weak. However, he has not been treated at any local hospital. He said the youth would agree to do anything suggested to him. He scoffed at the alleged confession obtained by police.

Gill has been in Washington all his life. He frequently begins convesing with strangers in the street.

The youth is held for attacks on two white women in the fashionable Chevy Chase residential district just outside of the District line.

The first attack is said to have occurred in November and the second last Thursday. In a police line up last Saturday, the women pointed him out, although they had previously testified that the man was white. Gill is of a light complexion. In each case the women were robbed. According to Detective Sergeant Theodore Vollten, of the Montgomery County police, Gill made a statement after his arrest, admitting he had assaulted the women and also robbed them of their pocketbooks.

—Police Court Judge—

MOBS MENACE NEGRO HELD AFTER SLAYING

Woman Taken From Car, Beaten to Death

BALTIMORE, April 1.—(AP)—A killer dragged Mrs. Mary Guther, 55, mother of nine children, from her automobile and left her dead today in a wooded spot near her home.

Two negroes, heavily guarded against mobs, were questioned. A little later, an emergency police car rushed one, a 22-year-old man, to a Baltimore jail under a guard of six officers.

Mrs. Gunther was discovered beaten, slashed and gagged shortly after she drove her husband, Herman, to his work as master shipwright at the Curtis Bay Coast Guard depot.

Her son, William, 28, going to his parents' home to borrow their automobile, came upon the car, one wheel in a ditch, in a narrow lane leading to the Gunther farm.

He began a search and found his mother's body in a clump of scrub pines. A workman's cheap glove had been stuffed in her mouths as a rough gag. Her pocketbook, which had contained $20, was found a few feet away, empty.

MOTHER OF 9 IS FOUND SLAIN IN MARYLAND; 2 NEGROES ARE HELD

Woman Brutally Beaten After Taking Her Husband to Work

BALTIMORE, April 1.—(AP)—A killer dragged Mrs. Mary Gunther, 55, mother of nine children, from her automobile and left her dead today in a wooded spot a short distance from her home.

Two negroes, heavily guarded against mob attacks, were questioned in connection with the killing. A little later, an emergency police car rushed one, a 22-year-old man, to a Baltimore jail under a guard of six officers.

Miss Elizabeth Gunther identified the suspect, Irving Howard, as a negro she saw lurking by the roadside as she and her mother drove her father to work early in the morning.

Police announced stained clothing belonging to Howard had been submitted to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. They said they also had found in his pocket a knife with a stained blade.

The negro denied any knowledge of the crime.

Mrs. Gunther was discovered beaten, slashed and gagged shortly after she had taken her husband, Herman, to his work as master shipwright at the Curtis Bay coast guard depot.

Her son William, 28, came upon the car, one wheel in a ditch, in a lane leading to the Gunther farm.

He found his mother's body in a clump of scrub pines. A workman's cheap glove had been stuffed in her mouth as a rough gag.

Two miles away, a policeman driving along the road saw a negro man he had arrested previously on various charges. Later, he took the negro to the scene of the murder for questioning.

Police handcuffed the negro in a police patrol wagon and placed the blanket-wrapped body of the woman in the wagon, at the feet of the negro. For an hour he sat above it, impassive, before he was taken to the police station.

'Lynch Him,' Crowd Yells

PHILADELPHIA—Proof that mob rule and lynching can be controlled by police officers was demonstrated here Friday when Albert Johnson, 37, of the 1800 block of Sharswood Street, was rescued by police of that district for an attempted attack on a 16-year-old white girl.

Johnson is alleged to have dragged the girl into an alley on Gratz Street near Columbia Avenue.

An angered mob which went to rescue the screaming girl surrounded Johnson, and with cries of "lynch him!" attempted to take the law into their hands, but police pushed their way through the mob, arrested Johnson, and took him to the Nineteenth and Oxford Streets police station.

At a hearing before Magistrate Roberts, Saturday, Johnson was held under $10,000 bail.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

Michigan

5522

Sayed From Michigan Mob

Man, 28, Victim of Lynch Threats

DETROIT.—(ANS)—John S. Harris, 28, was brought here by police Sunday night, October 31, for safe keeping after a mob had threatened his life in Taylor Township on the outskirts of the city.

Harris was in court being tried for an attack when an unruly crowd of 40 gathered at the hearing with mutterings of "Let's get him." Police were informed the mob had a rope and a five-gallon can of kerosene in its possession.

One member of the mob was heard to say, "Give him to us. He's forfeited his life. We'll take care of him."

Protected by guards, Harris was brought to Detroit quickly by automobile.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

Mississippi.

5754

Mob Threatens Wounded Man for Alleged "Insult"

TUPELO, Miss., Jan. 21.—(ANP)—A special detail of heavily armed police stood guard before the hospital all of Sunday night to keep a sputtering mob of 50 to 75 white men from lynching an unnamed Negro who had been shot after allegedly "insulting" a white woman.

The white woman said she found a crudely written note in her automobile asking her to meet the writer Sunday night on a lonely street. She notified Police Chief E. E. Carr, who arranged for the woman to go to the designated spot in her car. As she sat there, apparently alone, the officer said a Negro approached the machine, insulted the woman, and was shot when he ran instead of halting at a command. He is not expected to live.

TWO CONFESS SHOOTING

Negro Shielded From Mob Threat —Victim's Condition Critical

GULFPORT, Miss., March 23. — P. L. Hobson, resident of the Pineville community, who was shot and seriously wounded by a negro whom he surprised in his chicken house last Saturday night, today had a "fair" chance for recovery, attending physicians said.

George Hudson and Frank Jackson, negroes, arrested in connection with the shooting, were rushed by county officers early yesterday to an unannounced jail following reports of threatened mob violence.

Both negroes, officers said, admitted having been in the chicken house when Hobson came upon them, but each accused the other of having fired upon the man. They are being held without bail on charges of burglary and shooting with intent to kill.

Rolling Fork, Miss. Pilot
April 9, 1937

YAZOO NEGRO RUSHED TO UNREVEALED JAIL

TRYS TO SEIZE WHITE CHILD

The 42-Year-Old Negro Man Later Attacked the Constable When He Sought To Arrest Him

Yazoo City, Miss., Aprsl 8.—A. T. Archer, 42-year-old negro, was rushed to an unannounced jail today because of high feeling here against the suspect whom Constable H. T. Hinson of Bentonia said attempted to seize a white child waiting for a school bus early this week, and attacked the constable when he sought to arrest him.

Hinson said the child's screams frightened the negro away. The matter was reported to Hinson, and accompanied by Jim Warnock, Bentonia citizen, he went to the negro's home to arrest him.

Hinson said that after placing handcuffs on the negro, he began to struggle, and sought to attack him. Warnock, it was reported, entered the affray and fired his pistol at the negro. The bullet struck the constable in the hand. The negro was later subdued and carried to an unnamed jail for safe keeping.

MOBS HINDERING HUNT IN SLAYING

Negro Held As Accomplice In White Man's Murder Is Threatened

By United Press.

NATCHEZ, Miss., Oct. 14.—Officials pushed their search today for Mose (Tee Boo) Ross, 32-year-old Negro charged with killing a white man, while another Negro suspect was held in Hinds County Jail in Jackson, Miss., after Sheriff A. B. Conner spirited him away from an angry mob of men.

Conner said he talked the mob out of lynch violence late Tuesday night when they stormed Adams County Jail here and demanded that he turn Scott Pruiett, 37-year-old Negro, over to them.

He complained that mob action continued to hinder officials investigating the killing of Francis Strain, 23-year-old white man employed at a box factory where both Ross and Pruiett worked.

Ross, a diminutive, cork-footed Negro, allegedly shot Strain three times following an argument. Pruiett denied a report that he held Strain during the shooting.

Sheriff Conner said persons were sniping at innocent Negroes in this vicinity.

Mob Threat In Mississippi As Sheriff Trails Man Accused Of Murder

NATCHEZ, Miss.—(ANP)—Police officials and sheriff's deputies this week were pressing their search for Mose (Tee Boo) Ross, 32, an undersized, cork-footed Negro, wanted in connection with the slaying of a white man. Another suspect in the case, Scott Pruitt, 37, was held in Hinds County jail in Jackson, Miss., after Sheriff Connor had spirited him away from an angry mob.

The sheriff said he talked the mob out of lynch violence Tuesday night when they stormed the Adams jail and demanded that Pruitt be turned over to them. The official said that efforts of the mob to take the law into their own hands is hampering their search for Ross, the alleged slayer of Francis Strain, 23, a box factory employe. Ross is said to have shot Strain three times following an argument. Pruitt denied a report that he had held Strain during the shooting. Sheriff Connor said that feeling is tense throughout the country, and that whites have been sniping at innocent Negroes in the district.

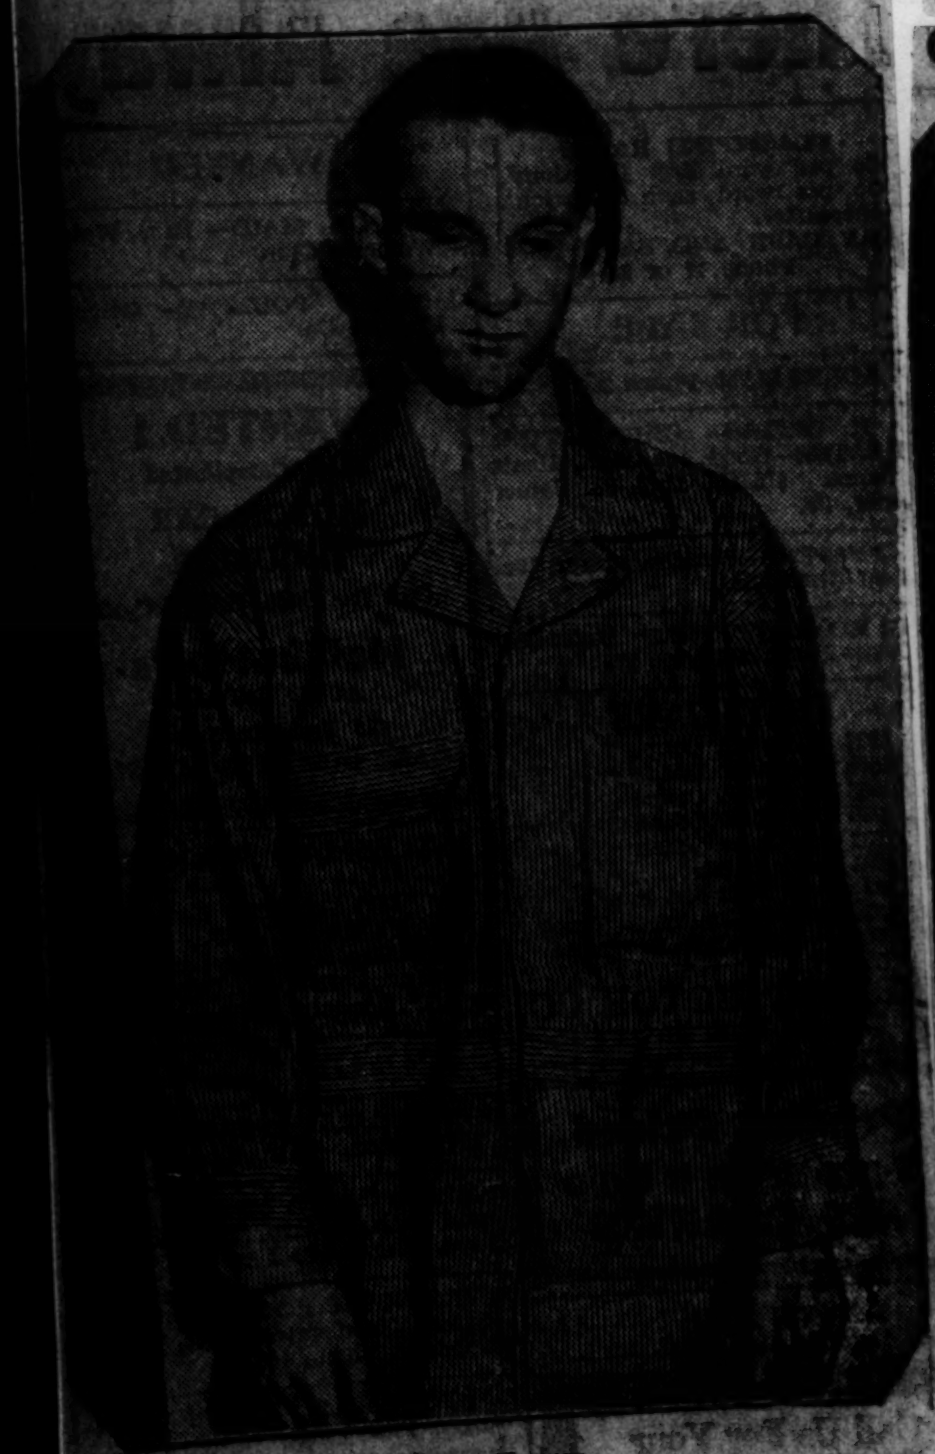
Lynchings-1937
Prevented.

Missouri.

5763

Clarksville, Tenn., Chronicle
February 6, 1937

Guard Kidnaper From Lynching

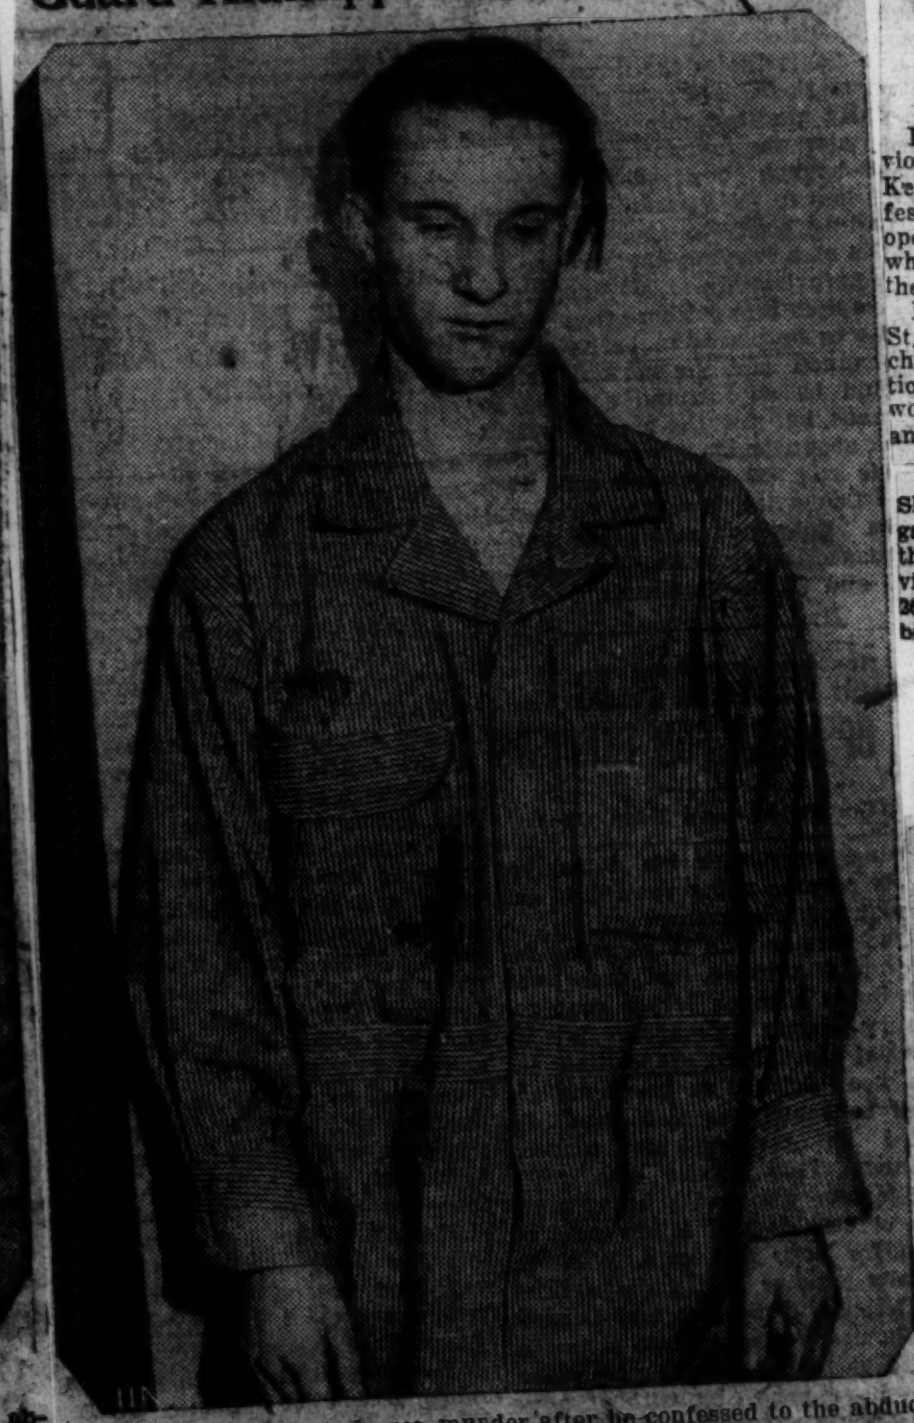


Robert Kenyon

Charged with first degree murder after he confessed to the abduction and slaying of Dr. J. C. B. Davis of Willow Springs, Mo., Robert Kenyon, 20, is held under heavy guard at Kansas City to prevent any possible lynching attempt. Emotionless and indifferent, the pasty-faced farm boy led his captors to a wooded spot near Willow Springs where the bullet-riddled body of the 67-year-old physician lay, a check book clutched in his hand, suggesting that he had tried to the last to buy his freedom from the youth and ruthless kidnaper.

Columbia, Tenn., Daily Herald
February 8, 1937

Guard Kidnapper From Lynching



Charged with first degree murder after he confessed to the abduction and slaying of Dr. J. C. B. Davis of Willow Springs, Mo., Robert Kenyon, 20, is held under heavy guard at Kansas City to prevent any possible lynching attempt. Emotionless and indifferent, the pasty-faced farm boy led his captors to a wooded spot near Willow Springs where the bullet-riddled body of the 67-year-old physician lay, a check book clutched in his hand, suggesting that he had tried to the last to buy his freedom from the young and ruthless kidnapper.

Jail Cell Saves Man from Mob In Kansas

KANSAS CITY.— Fearing mob violence, police rushed Leonard Kelley, 31, ex-convict who confessed to killing a filling station operator with a claw hammer while trying to steal some gas, to the safety of a jail cell.

Following his arraignment at St. Joseph, Mo., on the murder charge, police received information that citizens were angry and would attempt to seize the Negro and lynch him.

—Read the Editorials—

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 21.— Sheriff Pleas Wright let two delegations from [illegible] search the county jail [illegible] convince them that Frank [illegible], 26, a Negro accused of assault, had been taken out of town.

Missouri Sheriff Hides Prisoner From Lynch Mob

Coleman. The mob dispersed.
The guilt or innocence of Coleman has not been established. He was arrested (at the home of his mother on identification of the daughter of the aged woman, Mrs. M. A. Rice

COLUMBIA, Mo.—Quick action on the part of Sheriff Pleas Wright [illegible] of Boone county [illegible] lynching here this week. When a mob gathered in search of Frank [illegible] county [illegible] Coleman, 26-year-old man accused of attacking an 86-year-old woman, sheriff Wright had taken his prisoner from beyond the reach of the would-be-lynchers.

He refused to divulge in what jail he had hidden with Coleman. Not that Coleman [illegible] sheriff's [illegible] two companies [illegible] search. Both were reinforced that the jail did not contain

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

North Carolina

5764

Marion, N. C., News
September 9, 1937

National Guard Troops Will Guard Courtroom Monday As Negro Again Goes On Trial

Mistrial Ordered After Attack On Prisoner

JUDGE SPEAKS

Local Officers Feel Troops Will Not Be Needed

Morganton company of 105th engineers of the North Carolina National Guard is under orders from Governor Hoey, issued through Adjutant General Metz, to report to Marion by next Monday morning to prevent any further outbreak in the trial of Mann Smith, negro, accused of criminally assaulting a 13-year-old Marion school girl last March 31.

The orders were issued yesterday following an assault upon the negro defendant in McDowell superior court Tuesday morning by Frank Anderson, 30, Marion plumber, at the suggestion of Judge Felix E. Alley, presiding. Both Judge Alley and Solicitor Clarence O. Ridings talked to Governor Hoey on long distance immediately after the attack on the prisoner.

It was understood that local law enforcement officers felt that national guard troops would not be necessary to insure a peaceful trial of the negro, however, Captain Hatcher, commander of the Morganton National Guard unit, in Marion yesterday, said he was under order to report here Monday with as many men as he considered necessary to handle the situation. He said, likely, he would bring at least four squads of eight men each and sufficient non-commissioned officers to command the men as well as his two lieutenants.

TEXT OF JUDGE'S TALK ON PAGE 6

Complete text of Judge Felix E. Alley's address to the courtroom following the assault upon Mann Smith, as recorded by Mrs. D. B. Smith, of Morganton, court reporter, appears on Page 6.

Assailant Jailed

Anderson, the alleged assailant of the negro prisoner, was lodged in jail Tuesday immediately after he had struck the negro with an iron pipe. True bills indicting him for assault with a deadly weapon and obstructing justice were returned by the grand jury yesterday. In addition he faces possible fine or imprisonment for contempt of court.

The prisoner was seated between his attorneys immediately inside the bar, near the aisle. Anderson calmly and deliberately walked to a point behind the negro, raised his weapon and struck the negro, a glancing blow not hard enough to break the skin on the back of the negro's head.

"Grab that man—protect the prisoner," Judge Alley ordered from the bench as Sheriff Grady Nichols made a lunge for the prisoner's assailant.

The negro was knocked under the attorney's table. A deputy sheriff reached for the prisoner as Sheriff Nichols ordered "get the negro."

Judge Speaks

A scathing attack on Anderson was delivered from the bench by Judge Alley immediately after the incident. He assured the crowded courtroom that he will see that justice is administered "according to the way it is written in the law."

He termed the incident "the greatest disgrace that could befall McDowell county," and then adjourned court until 2 o'clock.

Six jurors from a special venire of 100 McDowell county men had been selected when the attack on the prisoner took place. Judge Alley then ordered a mistrial, directed the sheriff to summons another special venire of 100 men and set the trial for 9:30 o'clock next Monday morning when another set of regular jurors will be called.

John Anderson, negro of Old Fort, is among the regular jurors summoned for the term beginning next Monday. He is the first negro to be summoned for jury duty in McDowell county since Reconstruction days.

Judge Alley and Solicitor C. O. Riddings conferred immediately with Gov. Hoey by telephone and received a promise from the governor to send troops or a state highway patrol unit to Marion Monday.

News of the incident spread rapidly throughout the business section and the courtroom was filled to capacity when court reconvened. Judge Alley spoke again from the bench, assuring the spectators that there would be no mob violence and justice would be done.

Sanford, N. C., Herald
September 15, 1937

PATROLMEN AT NEGRO'S TRIAL

Ten highway patrolmen are on guard in Marion while Mann Smith, a negro, gets another trial on a charge of assaulting a 13-year-old white girl. They are present to prevent a recurrence of the violence that erupted last week when a mistrial was caused after one of the courtroom audience struck the negro on his head with an iron pipe.

A packed crowd listened to the little girl in the opening session of the court as she recited a sordid tale of being accosted in the woods as she walked home from school. It listened raptly as a web of evidence entangled Smith, a shaggy negro who sees no escape.

It is unfortunate that the courts of North Carolina cannot proceed without violence under the nose of the bar. The crime for which the negro is charged is one which subjected a little girl to horror. She will never forget it. But as long as this state is to live, it must not forget that its courts are capable of meeting out punishment. Striking a defenseless negro as he sits in the protection of the court is almost as brutal as the crime for which he is charged.

LYNCHINGS - 1 9 3 7 NORTH CAROLINA

PREVENTED

5765

From Mrs. Ames' Report

May 31. Marion, McDowell County
Two white men from Rutherford County held in jail at Marion for attacking a white girl.
(No further report on this).

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

North Carolina.

5766

Charlotte, N. C. Observer
February 5, 1937

Negro Held In Poisoning Moved After Mob Threat

LUMBERTON, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Robeson county officers took LeRoy McNeill, negro held in connection with the poisoning of Mrs. Andrew Cox of Orrum, to an unannounced destination when a crowd of armed men gathered here last night for the inquest.

Mrs. Cox died at a hospital here Tuesday from eating a poison placed in flour. Officers said McNeill admitted placing the poison in the flour. He gave no reason for his action.

Approximately 50 armed men were gathered on the street here last night. Coroner D. W. Biggs postponed the inquest indefinitely.

Mrs. Cox, her husband, and two of their children were rushed to the hospital here after becoming seriously ill. Cox and the two children showed improvement from treatment and were reported virtually out of danger today.

Suspicion was turned on McNeill when the family reported that he refused to eat biscuits served the day the family became sick but asked for some left over from the day before.

Greensboro, N. C., Record
April 3, 1937

Lynching Averted.

It has just been demonstrated in two North Carolina counties—McDowell and Scotland—that efficient and courageous local officers can protect prisoners from mobs, avert lynchings, and afford the law the opportunity of taking its due course.

A mob, evidently bent on staging a lynching, gathered near the jail in Marion, but Sheriff Grady Nichols, of McDowell county, having apprehended the young negro who waylaid and assaulted a 13-year-old white girl on her way home from school did not take him to the jail in his county but hurried him instead to Asheville where the prisoner was lodged in the Buncombe county jail.

A dispatch from Laurinburg says Scotland county's record of never having the discredit of the lynching of a negro was saved by sheriff's officers last night near Laurel Hill when a mob of negroes sought to catch and lynch a member of their own race for rape of a negro girl."

These instances are of peculiar significance just now at a time when the Congress is again preparing to consider enactment of a federal anti-lynching law.

All of the states now have laws that make lynching a crime. If the officers of the states would do their duty promptly, courageously and intelligently, as the officers in McDowell and Scotland counties, North Carolina, have done there would be no excuse for agitating a federal law to cover that which is already amply covered by law in all of the states.

Raleigh, N. C. Observer
April 2, 1937

OFFICERS AVERT NEGRO LYNCHING

Assaulter of Negro Girls Shot Down and Captured in Scotland

Laurinburg, April 1.—Scotland County's record of never having the discredit of the lynching of a Negro was saved by sheriff's officers last night near Laurel Hill, when a mob of Negroes sought to catch and lynch a member of their own race for rape of a Negro girl.

Deputy Sheriff Todd and Policemen Dunlap and Gibson with Corporal L. S. Allen of the Highway patrol stopped the Negroes, who were branshing guns and Todd and Dunlap trailed the man, Robert McLean, 20, Negro, several miles before he was shot down and captured in the darkness. After he was shot in both legs the officers still had to trail him by blood stains for some time before he surrendered.

The man, an ex-convict, "chicken thief," was believed to be sex crazy.

Sheriff W. D. Reynolds and force had been searching since Tuesday for a man of his description who robbed a Negro school teacher, Sarah P. Patrick, of a watch she valued at $40 and attempted to ravish her. Later a report came that a second Negro girl had been attacked yesterday. The third was Pauline Bostick, about 15, with whom he succeeded.

The prisoner was placed in the hospital here later to be tried for his life.

Statesville, N. C. Daily
April 2, 1937

Scotland Negroes Prevented From Lynching Member Of Their Own Race

Negro Man, Charged With Three Attacks On Women of His Race, Captured by Police.

Laurinburg, April 2.—Scotland county's record of never having experienced the lynching of a negro, possibly was saved by sheriff's officers near Laurel Hill when a mob or negroes sought to catch a member of their own race charged with criminal assault on a negro girl.

Deputy Sheriff Todd and Policemen Dunlap and Gibson, with Corp. L. S. Allen, of the highway patrol, stopped the negroes who were brandishing guns, and Todd and Dunlap trailed the man, Robert McLean, 20 negro, several miles before he was shot down and captured in the darkness. After he was shot in both legs the officers still had to trail him by blood stains for some time before he surrendered.

Sheriff W. D. Reynolds and force had been searching since Tuesday for a man who robbed a negro school teacher and attempted to assault her. Later a report came that a negro girl had been attacked Wednesday.

The prisoner was placed in the hospital here.

Hamlet, N. C., News-Messenger
April 8, 1937

Officers Avert Negro Lynching

Scotland County's record of never having the discredit of the lynching of a negro was saved by sheriff's officers last week near Laurel Hill, when a mob of negroes sought to catch and lynch a member of their own race for rape of a negro girl.

Officers stopped the negroes, who were brandishing guns and trailed the man, Robert McLean, 20, negro, several miles before he was shot down and captured in the darkness. After he was shot in both legs the officers still had to trail him by blood stains before he surrendered.

The man, an ex-convict, and chicken thief, was believed to be sex crazy.

Sheriff W. D. Reynolds and force had been searching since Tuesday for a man of his description, who robbed a negro school teacher of a watch she valued at $40 and attempted to ravish her. Later a report came that a second negro girl had been attacked. The third was Pauline Bostick, about 15 with whom he succeeded.

The prisoner was placed in the hospital in Laurinburg to be tried later for his life.

Charlotte, N. C., News
April 2, 1937

Negro Saved After Lynching Threat

Laurinburg, April 2.—(AP)—Robert McLean, 20-year-old negro, was in jail here today in connection with the alleged attempted assault of a member of his own race after, Sheriff W. D. Reynolds said, a party of negroes sought to take him in charge last night.

The sheriff said he arrested McLean near Laurel Hill last night after other officers halted a band of negroes who were brandishing guns.

LYNCHING GANG IS FOILED

Times
8-3-37

Crowd at North Carolina Jail Finds Prisoner Is Gone

STATESVILLE, N. C., Aug. 2 (AP).—A crowd of white men rode into Statesville in thirty automobiles early today, surrounded the county jail and demanded that Sheriff John Moore turn over a Negro prisoner.

The crowd, however, disbanded after Sheriff Moore took three of the men inside the jail and convinced them that the prisoner, Preach Caldwell, 35, charged with attacking a white woman near Mooresville Saturday, was not there.

The Negro was rushed from Mooresville after his arrest Saturday and taken to an undisclosed jail as a precautionary measure. Sheriff Moore estimated there were 125 men in the crowd which surrounded the jail.

Sheriff Saves Prisoner; Keeps N. C. County's Lynch Record Clean

Colored Citizens Seek Life of Alleged Rapist of Pretty Race Girl.

LAURINBURG, N. C., April 8—(ANP)—The usual procedure in lynching was reversed here last Wednesday and Scotland county's "no-lynch" record was kept clean when sheriff's officers saved a colored man near Laurel Hill from an infuriated mob of Negroes bent on lynching the man for rape attack on a pretty colored girl.

Deputy Sheriff Todd, Policeman Dunlay, and Officers and Corporal H. B. Allen of the Highway patrol stopped the man, trailed the suspect, Robert McLean, 20, and finally captured him after a chase of two miles and after shooting him in both legs.

Sheriff W. D. Reynolds and staff had been searching for a man of the prisoner's description who had robbed a colored school teacher near Wagram, and had attempted an assault on her. This was followed last week by another report that a colored girl had been attacked. The third victim was a 15-year-old colored girl, raped by two men and followed immediately by the lynching of the mob leader was placed by the officers in a hospital here, and after recovering from the bullet wounds in the leg by them, will be placed on trial for his life.

TAKES TRIO FROM N. C. COUNTY JAIL FOILS ANGRY MOB

KINSTON, N. C. — Two brothers, Sylvester and Apsom Outlaw, and their brother-in-law, Lonnie Gardner, were being held last week in an undisclosed jail after being spirited away from the Pine Hill section near here where they are alleged to have accosted an 18-year-old white girl and her male companion and at the point of a gun committed "the usual crime" on the person of the girl.

Sentiment in the neighborhood of the heinous alleged crime mounted so rapidly that he thought it best to remove the prisoners to a place of safer keeping, Sheriff D. S. Williamson said here after making the arrests public. The Negroes, he said, accosted the girl and her escort, James Suggs, 22, on a lonely road of the Pine Hill section.

It is not known whether or not the accused men have pleaded guilty to the crime as the sheriff did not disclosee the jail to which he had taken them.

Greensboro Daily News
Sept. 3, 1937

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

What Sheriff John White Moore, of Iredell county, might have done had he actually had the prisoner, desired by the 125 members of a mob when they surrounded the jail in Statesville early Monday morning, remains happily a matter for speculation because of steps that he had already taken to protect his man.

What he did do was to take three members of the group bent on taking the law into their own hands, into the jail and show them that the negro they were after was not there; already in the abundance of precaution had been removed to an undisclosed jail after the commission of a heinous crime which was calculated to incite public indignation.

North Carolina, and especially the would-be mobsters, owe to Sheriff Moore a heavy debt of gratitude for the use of common sense in his ounce of prevention as contrasted to any belated display of valor on his part or on the part of the state highway patrol which was mobilized and on its way, used to prevent another lynching, actual or attempted, from marring the state's record.

Greensboro Daily News

GOOD FOR PENDER.

Our manners to the sheriff of Pender county who carried a negro charged with attempted assault on a white woman to Wilmington for safe keeping. Not for that Wilmington is the home of the solicitor of the district, J. J. Burney, who to our notion is a trifle too sympathetic with the pranking of his rural constituents; but Burgaw has hitherto not proved itself wholly regardful of the proprieties in the matter of insuring a fair trial, to accused persons.

No, we aren't at this time going to repeat our question of whether Governor Ehringhaus ever got any sort of report of the investigation he ordered into the lynching of Dock Rogers at Burgaw. We don't believe he ever did. But it is comforting to realize that there is somebody in authority there now who wishes to avoid a recurrence of mob violence.

Sept. 3, 1937

GOVERNOR STANDS BY ORDER FOR SOLDIERS

Greensboro Daily News

Hoey Declines Request of McDowell Officials to Rescind Action to Protect Negro.

Sept 11

(Special to Daily News) 1937

Winston-Salem, Sept. 10.—Governor Hoey left tonight for Raleigh without finding it possible to rescind his recent order sending troops to McDowell county Monday morning to protect Hiawatha Mann Smith, 15-year-old negro, who will be tried for capital felony against a 13-year-old white girl.

Governor Hoey gave the order for the militia on request of Judge Felix Alley, who is to preside over the Marion court. The sheriff, Solicitor Rydings, Special Prosecutor Dennison F. Giles and other McDowell men begged his excellency not to send soldiers up there. McDowell feels that it has had more than its share of military government. But Judge Alley stands pat and Governor Hoey follows the judge. His honor, man of the mountains, sees trouble ahead without the soldiers.

Interesting law points are raised, but nobody big enough to overrule the judge has arisen. There will be another long distance conference with Governor Hoey tomorrow.

KNOW THEIR DUTY

Aug 23, 1937

North Carolina, by the grace of a kind providence and some astuteness of its officers, has avoided for the better part of two years getting into the column of states where mob rule has occurred. We are not bragging. Heaven knows it was in all too recent memory that our little page in history was so blotted. Nor is it seemly, we think, to jump up and shout our hurrahs and "We didn't have a lynching" every time a despicable crime is committed.

8-23-37

But we do believe it in place to commend local officers in two eastern Carolina communities for their recent handling of prisoners where violence might otherwise have [illegible].

It was in Bladen county that they brought [illegible] that a mob had already caught and dispatched Odell Hadley, a negro whom a big posse of citizens was hunting in a swamp for a heinous offense. The account was incorrect. Sheriff H. M. Clark, assisted by seven deputies, arrested the negro and had him in a safe jail before the rumors of a lynching had died down. Three negro men near Kinston have just been incarcerated in the central prison at Raleigh for their alleged crime against a young white woman, in whose community sentiment was reported to be growing ugly. An estimated 1,000 persons had participated in the search for these negroes.

There may have been no cause for great worry. Maybe the searching crowds were not as angry as represented. But at least it is comforting to observe that we have on the job officers who recognize their duty and know how to perform it quickly.

Lynchings - 1937
Prevented

Ohio

5767

MOB SPIRIT RISES IN OHIO TOWN AS 200 SEARCH JAIL

CLEVELAND, Oct. 14—(By Clarence L. Simmons for ANP)—Apparently, the mob spirit from the depths of the lower South has reached its long terrifying arm to the shores of this state as was evidenced here Monday when more than 200 angry and blood-thirsty citizens of Dover, a stone's throw from Cleveland, sought to apprehend Vandy Lee Matthews, 19, of Dover, and lynch him in connection with an attack on Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Lantzer, Sunday.

The 19-year-old youth was rushed to Cleveland and turned over to the authorities of Cuyahoga County jail for safekeeping. He was brought in about [illegible] p.m. Tuesday, but no one seems to be clear on the point of who brought him to the jail. The deputies claim that they had no idea how long he would be kept and what charge would be made.

Police Chief Frank H. Javens charges Matthews with shooting to wound, assault and battery, and criminal attack on the Forrests. Javens could not be reached but subordinates said they believed he was working on the "Matthews' case."

Monday night, the 200 citizens and residents of Dover obtained permission to inspect Tuscarawas County jail at New Philadelphia, Harrison County jail at Cadiz, and the Dover City jail in their hunt for Matthews, who had been arrested in nearby Mineral City.

Mob Spirit Raises Head In Ohio Town

CLEVELAND, O. — More than 200 angry citizens of Dover, a stone's throw from Cleveland, sought to apprehend Vandy Lee Matthews, 19, of Dover, and lynch him in connection with an attack on Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Lantzer Sunday.

The 19-year-old youth was rushed to Cleveland and lodged in the Cuyahoga county jail for safekeeping. The deputies claim that they had no idea how long he would be kept and what charge would be made.

Police Chief Frank H. Javens charges Matthews with shooting to wound, assault and battery, and criminal attack on the Forrests. Javens could not be reached but subordinates said they believed he was working on the "Matthews' case."

Monday night the 200 citizens and residents of Dover obtained permission to inspect Tuscarawas county jail at New Philadelphia, Harrison county jail at Cadiz and the Dover city jail in their hunt for Matthews, who had been arrested in nearby Mineral City.

Lynchings - 1937
Prevented

Pennsylvania.

5768

Girl, 11, Assaulted, Body Put In Well

Pennsylvania Father, 37, Held For Questioning

GREENSBURG, PENN., Oct. 7.—(AP)—State motor policemen questioned a 37-year-old father of two tonight about the slaying of his 11-year-old cousin, Vallie Bates, whose body was taken from an abandoned mine air shaft near Latrobe.

Harry Bates, who lived alone in a tar-papered house on the outskirts of the Allegheny Mountain town, told police he had attempted to attack the child, struck her over the head and slashed her throat with a paring knife, said Sergeant James Buckley.

Bates led state motor police to the mine shaft in the early morning darkness.

The girl's body was found wrapped in a burlap bag, 150 feet down the bottom of the shaft.

Bates, a brick worker, was removed from the Latrobe Borough jail to the state motor police barracks at Greensburg after scores of neighbors and townsfolk massed about the little jail building.

While no charge has been placed against him, Bates was quoted by Captain Jacob Mauk of the state police as saying he attempted to attack the girl after she returned from an errand at the neighboring store.

As she began to regain consciousness, Bates was quoted by the officer as saying, he cut her throat, then poured kerosene over her clothing and threw it under the porch.

Later he wrapped the body in a burlap bag and carried it to the mine shaft on the Frank Brinker farm, Mauk stated.

South Carolina.

Lynchings - 1937
Prevented

5769

S. C. Lynching Is Thwarted

Mob Heeds Pleas to Let Law Take Course

1-15-37

FLORENCE, S. C.—(ANS)—The pleas of two white men, one a sheriff and the other the father of his alleged victim, saved Isaac Scott, 30, from lynching here Monday, January [illegible].

Scott was seized from two deputy sheriffs by a mob of white men. He had been arrested on a charge of attempted criminal assault.

Hearing that the mob had seized Scott, the father of the woman whom Scott was accused of trying to attack, plead with the would-be lynchers to let the law take its course. Sheriff W. R. Wall joined the father in asking the mob to release Scott.

The mob heeded the pleas and turned Scott back over to the sheriffs.

Carolina Mob Gives Up Negro Without Lynching

FLORENCE, S. C. — An angry mob took Isaac Scott, 30-year-old Negro from two deputies after he had been arrested on a charge of attempted criminal assault on a white woman Sunday, but made no attempt to lynch him, believe it or not.

Sheriff W. R. Wall said that the father of the young woman whom the Negro was accused of molesting, joined him in pleas to the mob to let the law take its course, and they released the captive who was immediately placed in the jail here for safe-keeping.

Rock Hill, S. C. Herald
January 14, 1937

SENSIBLE "MOB."

Anderson Independent

A story from Florence county says that a "mob" captured a negro, charged with attempted assault, and instead of tying him to the nearest tree, gave him up to the officers without a fight.

There must have been several sane persons in that "mob." From news dispatches describing the incident it seems that the crowd was not a "mob" in the meaning usually attached to that word.

A black mark against Florence county and South Carolina could have been chalked up by that crowd if men had it not been for reason overcoming anger. As it is, the negro may expect to get proper punishment when his case comes before a jury.

Paradoxically, Florence county has produced a sensible "mob."

Man Charged With Assault on White School Teacher Saved From Carolina Lynch Mob

FLORENCE, S. C.—(ANP)—Taken from two deputy sheriffs by an angry mob, Isaac Scott, 30, was saved from lynching by the deputies who returned to town, got Sheriff W. R. Wall, and talked the mob into releasing their prisoner so the "law could take its course."

Scott was charged with attempted assault on a white school teacher. He was arrested at Olanta and a few minutes later "taken" from two deputy sheriffs and placed in the town jail "for investigation." No attempts to kill him had actually been made when the officers drove here, got the sheriff, and returned to Olanta. The father of the alleged victim helped persuade the mob to leave Scott back to the officers.

Scott said he was drunk and did not know where he was when he entered the woman's boarding house and crept into her bed, according to police. He was frightened away by her screams. The woman was not harmed.

Conway, S. C., Field
December 16, 1937

NEGRO SPIRITED OUT OF TOWN FOLLOWING TALK OF LYNCHING

John Jones Carried to Another County by Officers After White Youth Is Injured

Struck over the head by a Negro farm hand during an altercation late Saturday, John Henry Martin, 21 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Babe Martin of near Jordanville, received injuries which have kept him in a very grave condition in Conway hospital for several days.

His alleged assailant, John Jones, 30-year-old Negro, is in jail in another county, having been spirited out of Conway after mass feeling over the incident is said to have caused talk of a lynching and made Sheriff W. E. Sessions fear mob violence.

According to the sheriff, no charge has yet been lodged against the Negro because of the seriousness of Martin's condition. He is being held in jail in another county pending the outcome of the white man's condition and no information is being given out by the sheriff's office as to where he is held.

Jones, who enjoys a particularly unsavory reputation with the local police, was arrested by Chief of Police Tim Johnson in a colored business establishment said to be known as "Judy's" place. It is operated by a Negro woman by the name of Duett.

According to reports of the affair, Jones approached Chief Johnson Saturday afternoon and told him that he'd had an argument with young Martin and his father. He said that there had been a fight, but did not give a very detailed account of what had happened.

Chief Johnson, who was familiar with Jones' general reputation, did not, at that time, place much importance upon the news of the affair.

Upon investigation of the report Chief Johnson learned of the seriousness of Martin's injuries and started out in immediate search of the Negro. Finding him in the Duett woman's place of business he was promptly placed under arrest.

Following his arrest, Jones was turned over to the county authorities who later placed him in an automobile and carried him out of the county as news of the incident spread and threats against the Negro's life were said to have been voiced in public.

According to members of the local police department, Jones has been arrested here numerous times and only three weeks ago was locked up under a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Dr. J. A. Sasser is attending young Martin in the hospital here, and according to reports issued at the institution late yesterday his condition remains unchanged. There has been some improvement noted since the hour of his admission to the hospital, but owing to the serious nature of his injuries, considerable fear has been expressed for his life. He is permitted no visitors whatever.

5769

South Dakota.

Lynchings - 1937
Prevented

5770

BOYS HELD IN MURDER ARE HEAVILY GUARDED

Violence Feared Over Slaying In South Dakota

PIERRE, S. D., May 22.—(AP)—Two Chicago youths accused of slaying a woman school teacher who befriended them were placed under heavy guard here as a precaution against possible mob violence.

Sheriff Jack Reedy of Sully County hurriedly removed the youths from the jail at Onita last night because "feeling is running high" there. The sheriff said the slaying had caused much excitement.

Assistant State Attorney General Ellsworth Evans said the pair, Norman Westberg, 17, and Howard Christensen, 16, confessed fatally shooting and robbing Miss Ada Carey, 26, of Blunt, S. D.

Miss Carey was driving to her home after completing her year's work at Frankfort, S. D., when the boys asked for a ride. She identified her assailants shortly before her death a few hours after the attack.

Evans said the youths confessed they were motivated by a desire to get the teacher's money and car so they might continue a trip to California.

Lynchings-1937
Prevented

Tennessee

5771

Foils Mob, Rushes Prisoner To Jail In Memphis, Tenn.

MEMPHIS— (ANP)— Following the arrest Saturday night in Covington, Tennessee of Albert Gooden, in connection with the slaying of City Marshal Chester Doyle, Sheriff Will Vaughn of Tipton County learned a mob was headed for Covington jail bent on violence. He immediately smuggled Gooden out of the city, brought him to Memphis, and lodged him in the mob-proof county jail.

Sheriff Vaughn said Doyle and a colored man, Jack Bolton, 24, were shot and killed Saturday night during a raid in a 'gambling joint.' "Ten carloads of white men drove to the Covington jail for Gooden shortly after I left," he said. "They wanted Gooden, but they didn't get him. He will remain in Memphis for safekeeping."

Sheriff Foils Mob And Rushes Prisoner To Memphis Jail

Ten Carloads of White Men Frustrated After City Marshal Is Slain In "Gambling Joint."

MEMPHIS, July 29— (ANP)—Following the arrest Saturday night in Covington, Tenn., of Albert Gooden, in connection with the slaying of City Marshal Chester Doyle, Sheriff Will Vaughn of Tipton county learned a mob was headed for Covington jail bent on violence. He immediately smuggled Gooden out of the city, brought him to Memphis, and lodged him in the mob-proof county jail.

Sheriff Vaughn said Doyle and a colored man, Jack Bolton, 24, were shot and killed Saturday night during a raid in a "gambling joint." "Ten carloads of white men drove to the Covington jail for Gooden shortly after I left," he said. "They wanted Gooden, but they didn't get him. He will remain in Memphis for safekeeping."

dition today with a severe scalp wound necessitating 14 stitches and a cut on her hand that required seven stitches.

She told Sheriff Barton the Negro removed a pistol from under her pillow and beat her with it when she fought him from her bed and screamed.

The Negro fled and Mrs. Messick, afraid to leave the house for several hours, finally made her way to a neighbor's home and called the sheriff.

MOB THREATENS TO LYNCH NEGRO

Youth Charged With Trying To Criminally Assault Tennessee Woman

11-15-37

By United Press.

MANCHESTER, Tenn., Nov. 15.—Bob Robertson, 21-year-old Negro charged with attacking a Beech Grove woman, was secreted from an angry mob today by Sheriff J. A. Barton.

Barton would not reveal where he had taken Robertson but said he transferred him to jail in another county when Beech Grove residents filtered into town and threatened mob violence.

The sheriff said Mrs. Gertrude Messick, 500-year-old widow, identified Robertson as the Negro who entered her home by removing a window and attempted to assault her criminally.

Mrs. Messick was in serious con-

Tennessee

Lynchings - 1937
6
Prevented

5772

Escapes Wrath Of Mob, But Gets 21 Years In 'Pen' In 3-Hour Trial

MANCHESTER, Tenn., Dec. 2—(Special)—Hodge Robertson, 27, was indicted and, following his entering of a plea of guilty, convicted and sentenced to 21 years in the penitentiary in Circuit Court here this week, all within three hours—after a mob had previously gone to the jail and demanded the prisoner be turned over its members, only to [illegible] had been taken elsewhere for safekeeping pending trial. Robertson was charged with attempting to criminally attack a white woman, also with burglary and larceny in connection with the alleged looting of a small store operated by the woman a few miles from this city.

On the day before the trial, according to Sheriff J. A. Barton, a group of some 15 or 20 men appeared at the jail while he was absent, and apparently unaware that Robertson was being held elsewhere, demanded that his, the sheriff's wife, surrender the prisoner to them. They were told, he said, that Robertson was not there, but refused to leave until a deputy took two of their number through the jail to assure them of the truth of the statement.

LYNCHINGS - 1 9 3 7
PREVENTED

TEXAS

5774

From Mrs. Ames' Report

March 17. Henderson, Rusk Co. (Negro)
Killed Jefferson County Sheriff-
Carried to Henderson for safekeeping.

October 13. Nacagdoches. (Negro) Wounded Sheriff
Henry Cook. Brought to Angelina County jail. (Lufkin, Texas.)

Lynchings – 1937
Prevented

Texas.

5775

WOUNDED SHERIFF DIES

Negro Assailant Moved from Texas County for Safe Keeping

LUBBOCK, Texas, March 22. (AP)—Sheriff F. A. Loyd, 48, of Lamb County, who was shot Saturday while trying to arrest a negro, died today.

Deputy Sheriff Sam Hutson said Leroy Kelly, the Negro, probably would be removed from Lubbock to a jail farther from Lamb County, for safekeeping.

...STING ARREST, ...EGRO KILLS SHERIFF

LUBBOCK, Texas, March 22.—(AP) ...Loyd, ... of Lamb county—who was shot Saturday while trying to arrest a negro, died today.

Deputy Sheriff Sam Hutson said Leroy Kelly, the negro, probably would be removed from Lubbock jail farther from Lamb county, for safe keeping.

NEGRO GETS CHAIR IN SLAYING WHITE SPECIAL OFFICER

Willie Caesar, 41 of ... Campo, was given the death penalty in the criminal courts here Wednesday of this week for the murder of Tip Simpson, white, who was stabbed to death ..., 1936, at an exclusive Negro party at ... Simpson got into a fight after allegedly slapping a colored woman. ... with Negroes were ... Caesar. A mob was formed and the Negroes were rushed to Wharton, then to Bay City and ... Johnson, Minnie Richardson, Samuel Taylor and Juanita Smith.

Texas Constable Foils Lynch Mob

DALLAS—(ANP) — Constable Ogle foiled a lynch mob Monday by the simple expedient of racing away with a prisoner suspected of trying to attack a white woman at a small town near here and brought him to the Dallas county jail. 7-1-37

The prisoner allegedly entered a farm house where a woman and her two young daughters were asleep. The husband and father was away. The mother was seized but got away. The oldest child struck the marauder with a wrench while the other ran for help. The assailant escaped before neighbors arrived.

The unidentified Negro was picked up as the attempted rapist by Ogle, who had been called there. He had to pass the scene on his way back and as he slowed his car, some members of a mob of men yelled to get the Negro. The constable stepped on the gas and outdistanced his pursuers, who gave up the chase on the city's outskirts.

Lynching Mob In Tex. Duped By Law Officer

Constable Races Suspect In White Woman Attack Out Of Town

DALLAS, June (ANP)—Constable Ogle foiled a lynch mob Monday by the simple expedient of racing away with a prisoner suspected of trying to attack a white woman at a small town near here and brought him to Dallas county jail.

The prisoner allegedly entered a farm house where a woman and her two young daughters were asleep. The husband and father was away. The mother was seized but got away. The oldest child struck the marauder with a wrench while the other ran for help. The assailant escaped before neighbors arrived.

The unidentified Negro was picked up as the attempted rapist by Ogle, who had been called there. He had to pass the scene on his way back and as he slowed his car, some members of a mob of men yelled to get the Negro. The constable stepped on the gas and outdistanced his pursuers, who gave up the chase on the city's outskirts.

Texas Sheriff Lynch-Minded Mob Into Peaceful Mood

By United Press.

ATHENS, Tex., July 2.—Sheriff Jess Sweeten arose from his chair unstrapped his guns and went out into the courthouse lobby early today to face a mob that came to lynch a confessed Negro rapist.

"Boys," he said, "it's my business to protect my prisoner. I don't want any trouble but I'm going to protect him in case there is any."

That was all. There were 75 men in the lobby, some of them hardened workers from the East Texas oil fields. They wavered a few minutes between their respect for the unarmed but sharp-eyed sheriff, and their fury at the prisoner upstairs who had admitted attempting to assault six of their women.

Nobody made a threatening gesture. The sheriff went back inside.

"I think they're quieted down," he reported to the next telephone caller. 7-2-37

About 1 a. m. the mob began to disperse. The sheriff thought it might be a ruse, so he stayed in his office.

State authorities and police chiefs of neighboring towns called to offer aid. Two highway patrolmen came from Tyler and two more from Dallas. Sweeten thought that was about all the help he would need.

The crowd began gathering shortly before midnight. Sweeten just sat and waited. Deputy Sheriff Aubrey Corley walked through the lobby and the mob struck. The deputy was seized and relieved of his guns. The sheriff had five other deputies in his office but he went out alone to meet the mob.

Texas sheriffs know that it is fatal to be stripped of their guns. Sweeten didn't take a gun. It was a matter of bluffing.

The prisoner is Maceo Smith. He is only 16. He was arrested yesterday after Mrs. Bennie Swinney reported that a young Negro invaded her home while her husband was away, and knocked her unconscious.

CHECK LYNCH MOB

National Guard, Texas Rangers Ring Dixie Jail

MARSHALL, Tex., Sept. 22.—Two National Guard machine-gun squads and several Texas Rangers made up a special guard thrown around the Harrison county courthouse here to shield Harrison Young, rape suspect, from possible mob action. Young is one of two brothers charged with assaulting a white woman.

INTREPID TEXAS SHERIFF DISCARDS GUNS TO FACE MOB

Tells Would-Be Lynchers 'It's My Business To Protect My Prisoner'

(By Defender Staff Writer)

ATHENS, Tex., July 9—(By Wire)—Jess Sweeten made ... a candidate for the Texas Hall of Fame here Friday. And when he hangs up his six-shooter and takes off his spurs for the last time, people in these parts will remember how he handled unarmed, a murder-bent mob of men.

Sheriff Sweeten flung down the gauntlet to a mob of hard-boiled weather-beaten workers from the East Texas oil fields, bent on lynching a 16-year-old boy suspected of attempted assaults on six white women. The mob, a few minutes before, had stripped Deputy Sheriff Aubrey Corley of his guns.

Walks Out

When Corley came into the sheriff's office in the courthouse to excitedly tell how he lost his guns, Sweeten rose from his creaky pine chair and walked out on the steps. A yell went up from the rapidly increasing throng whose lust for blood was fast reaching the explosion stage. They thought the sheriff was out to make a half-hearted plea to them to disperse and then give them the keys to the lockup.

Instead, Sweeten, who had unstrapped his guns and had left them on his desk, threw up his hand for silence.

"Boys," said he slowly, his words biting the sun-baked air like the sound of lariat blows on the side of a recalcitrant steer, "it's my business to protect my prisoner. I don't want any trouble but I'm going to protect him in case there is any." He said no more after that.

Turbulent Scene

A Jack London or a Kipling could have written a volume after that moment when the sheriff spoke. All the forces of evil, of hatred and lust for blood surged to the front and were written in the eyes of the mob members as they wavered a few minutes between their anger at the 16-year-old prisoner upstairs and the sharp-eyed, but unarmed sheriff who stood calmly looking at them.

Not one of the gang made a false move. Sheriff Sweeten finally walked inside.

"I think they're quieted down," he reported to the next telephone caller. "They would have to break down four steel doors to reach him and I don't think they'll try it."

Mob Disperses

About 1 a.m., the mob began to disperse and by dawn all had gone.

State authorities and police chiefs of neighboring towns called to offer aid. Two highway patrolmen came from Tyler and two more from Dallas. Sweeten thought that was about all the help he would need.

The crowd began gathering shortly before midnight. They stood in front of the courthouse and talked in muttered tones. Sweeten just sat and waited. Deputy Sheriff Aubrey Corley walked through the lobby and the mob struck. The deputy was relieved of his guns. He went in to report to Sweeten. The sheriff had five other deputies in his office. He went out alone to meet the mob.

Fatal to Lose Guns

Texas sheriffs know that it is fatal to be stripped of their guns by one angry man or a mob. It gives the other man courage if he can see his foe humiliated that way. So Sweeten didn't take a gun. It was a matter of bluffing.

The prisoner is Maceo Smith. He is only 16. He was arrested Thursday after Mrs. Bennie Swinney reported that a young Race boy invaded her home while her husband was away, and knocked her unconscious.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
July 4, 1937

A Sheriff And a Mob.

Sheriff Jess Sweeten of Athens, Texas, has given a demonstration of what an officer of the law can do when confronted by a would-be lynching mob. A sixteen-year-old Negro had been lodged in jail at Athens on the charge of attempting to attack a white woman, and a dispatch from the town tells what happened:

Late Thursday night a mob of approximately 100 men swarmed into the little jail lobby, disarmed a Deputy, and then retreated before Sheriff Sweeten, who was unarmed at the time but calmly warned the crowd that he would "get rough" if they tried to take his prisoner. "Boys," the Sheriff told the mobsters, "I've taken an oath to protect my prisoner and I'm going to do it." "We'll be back!" one of them shouted. "There's no need to come back," the Sheriff replied. "You're not going to get him."

The mob has not yet come back. Deputy Sheriffs and State Highway Patrolmen stood armed guard over the jail Friday, but nobody who looked as if he might want to stage a lynching put in an appearance. Although he expressed no apprehension, the Sheriff said he might take the youth to Dallas. Certainly he has indicated quite clearly, and to the satisfaction of the mob which threatened to return, that he will do whatever is necessary to protect his prisoner. If all Sheriffs were like Jess Sweeten there would be no need for a Federal anti-lynching law, and a bill providing for such law would not have been offered in Congress.

Court Guarded From Lynch Mob At Trial of Negro

MARSHALL, Tex., Sept. 21.—Military sentries tonight patrolled the courthouse where Henderson Young, one of two Negro brothers charged with assaulting a white woman, is on trial.

Lynch mobs were reported to be in the vicinity and the County National Guard [illegible] with machine guns in the event of an attempt to remove Young from the courthouse.

Roscoe Young, the other brother, will be tried later.

LIVINGSTON FARMER ACCUSED OF RAPE OF WHITE WOMAN GIVEN DEATH BY JURY

LIVINGSTON.—(Special Staff Correspondent).—With a blank expression on his face, 28-year old Bob White, Livingston tenant farmer, heard himself sentenced to death in the electric chair for criminally assaulting Mrs. Ruby Cochran, white, on the night of August 10. A weary jury, after having wrangled over fate that they knew would be decreed, finally returned a verdict of guilty as charged and assessed the death penalty. Not a murmur was heard in the highly charged court-room as the verdict was read and Defense Attorney J. P. Rogers of Houston asked that the jury be polled. The jury was out one hour and 50 minutes. District Judge W. B. Browder polled the jury, and each juryman answered quickly and loudly in the affirmative. One juror held up for some time, contending that he wanted to hear the complainant's testimony.

Testimony Read to Jury

A court reporter who had gone to bed was aroused and the testimony obtained. With the permission of both state's and defense attorneys the testimony was read. Officers, admittedly afraid of mob violence took White to Houston for safekeeping after the crowd had cleared out of the court room. Defense Attorneys Roland and Rogers of Houston stated that a new trial will be asked and if it is not granted, they would appeal the case to the court of criminal appeals.

Atmosphere Created by Victim

Mrs. Cochran, simply dressed, twisted a handkerchief and allowed shudders to wrack her body and her husband and two sons appeared to be equally grieved She sat within 20 paces of White, 27-year-old Negro worker on one of the Cochran farms, and broke down once, and cried aloud, "Yes, he did it, and I don't see why I have to sit here and face him! Oh, the indecency of it! I don't see how a white man can protect him!"

Denies Confession

White denied having voluntarily made the confession that was taken in Beaumont. Defense Attorneys sought a mistrial, contending that the confession had been beaten out of White by Texas Rangers but Judge Browder over ruled their motion. White says he was handcuffed to a tree and beaten. He also denied everything in the confession but was tripped up when cross examined. Members of White's family, his mother, half brother and half sister, were not crossed examined and contend that White could not have gone to the Cochran home, committed the act and returned in the short length of time he was absent from the house. White, they say, went to the watermelon patch.

Colored Spectators Laughed

Defense attorneys were disgusted with the conduct of the colored spectators who poked fun at every opportunity and were branded as "white folks n——r's". The judge smiled faintly when Alma Thomas, young colored girl testifying for the state, said "I don't know what day of the week it was, but I remembers it was on Tuesday night" and when other spectators laughed, he rapped loudly for order. White was heavily guarded as he was being transported from Livingston to Houston. About ten car-loads of officers were in the motorcade.

Texas Youths Guarded From Mob Violence By U.S. Men

MARSHALL, Texas— (A N P)—Protected from possible mob violence by the bayoneted of the steel helmeted Texas National guard, Henderson and Roscoe Young, two colored youths of 18 and 19, heard District Judge W. H. Strength sentence them to death in separate trials Tuesday and Thursday after an all white jury deliberated eight minutes on the younger youth on Thursday for the alleged robbery-assault on a white Longview, Texas, couple, August 22.

Still protected by the crack Texas rangers the frightened youths were sped to unannounced jails for safekeeping after the nasty trials. Earlier in the case defense attorneys filed a motion to have Henderson Young tried in juvenile court because he was under 17 but the judge ruled his age as 18. Both boys were residents of Gregg county.

Lynchings- 1937
Prevented

Virginia
6

5773

Sheriff Denies Princess Anne County Attack Suspect Moved To City Jail Because Of Ill Feeling

To Face Trial In County Circuit Court On February After Motion For Change Of Venue Is Overruled

Lewis Napoleon Riddick, 19-year-old Princess Anne County youth will stand trial in the Circuit Court of that county on Monday, February 8 on a charge of attempted criminal assault upon a white married woman on the premise that he can obtain a "fair and impartial" trial in the county.

His motion for a change of venue was overruled last week by Judge B. D. White on the claim of Commonwealth's Attorney Paul W. Ackiss of Princess Anne County, assisted by Floyd E. Kellam, and backed up by the testimony of Sheriff Guy Salmons and County Chief of Police George W. Halstead, that there now exists in the county no feeling against the accused youth.

In announcing his decision to overrule the motion for a change of venue, Judge White said there was "overwhelming evidence" that no feeling now exists in the county against the accused. Certainly no one could be more in favor of a fair and impartial trial than I," he said, "but I fail to see that the petitioner has sustained a motion for a change of venue. The motion is therefore overruled."

The court then set February 8 as the date of the trial on agreement of counsel, after postponing dates for all other trials set for that date.

At the hearing, held Thursday at Princess Anne Courthouse, it was revealed for the first time that Riddick was not brought to Norfolk on December 20, the day following the commission of the alleged crime, because of fear of mob violence, but simply to be fingerprinted and photographed.

CALLED AS COURT'S WITNESS

This was testified to by Sheriff Guy Salmons and Chief of Police Halstead who placed Riddick under arrest following complaints made by Mrs. Evelyn White of the Pungo section of the county that she was attacked in her farm home on the night of December 19, last.

The two officers were called as court's witness after Q. C. Davis, defense counsel, had presented a petition signed by Riddick in which he expressed the belief that he could not obtain a fair trial in Princess Anne County because of the nature of the offense with which he is charged and the racial prejudice and intense feeling against him which exists in the county.

Sheriff Salmons testified that he carried Riddick to the Norfolk city jail only to be photographed and fingerprinted, but later "decided to let him stay there."

He expressed the belief that no feeling exists in the county against the accused youth, and denied that he saw or spoke to six automobile loads of white men who were reported to have gone to the Princess Anne jail and demanded Riddick. He told the court that a trusty told him about the incident afterwards.

MOB DEMONSTRATION DENIED

On cross examination by Attorney Davis he denied that there was any mob demonstration at the time of Riddick's arrest early Sunday morning, December 20, or that a man named only as "Lee" struck him with his fist. According to his testimony, a crowd of people who were on their way to church, did gather at the scene but no attempts to harm the prisoner were made.

"If they had wanted to take the prisoner they could easily have done so," Officer Halstead said in corroborating Mr. Salmons' testimony. "I mean there were enough of them to have done so," he added. The case is never talked about in the county now, the witness stated.

In opposing the motion for a change of venue Commonwealth's Attorney Ackiss introduced thirteen affidavits from prominent white citizens purporting to be residents of the neighborhood where the alleged crime was committed, in which they said that no feeling exists against Riddick and expressing the belief that he could obtain a fair trial in Princess Anne.

These affidavits were signed by the superintendent of Princess Anne County schools, the county game warden, a minister, and several business men.

The commonwealth's attorney contended that these were absolutely disinterested parties and that the three persons who signed affidavits introduced by counsel for the defense in which they expressed the belief that it would be impossible for the accused to obtain a fair trial, were not.

INNOCENCE CLAIMED

Protestations of his innocence despite a confession alleged to have been obtained by Sergeant J. C. Benton of the Norfolk Police Department after a forty-minute grilling, were contained in Riddick's petition to the court.

Mr. Davis based his argument on section 4915 of the Virginia Code under which provision is made for courts to grant a change of venue "for good cause." It was pointed out that under the code, a motion for a change of venue may be made in the absence of the accused, and on the basis of a petition signed by him setting forth reasons for which the motion is made.

Newspaper accounts of feeling existing against Riddick at the time of his arrest, and his subsequent removal to the Norfolk city jail "for safe keeping," were cited by defense counsel as basis for a change of venue.

The impossibility of obtaining a fair trial because of the existence of racial prejudice and because white people, particularly in the Pungo section, are aroused over the alleged crime, was emphasized in the petition.

ACCOMAC CASE CITED

Three affidavits from Princess Anne county citizens setting forth the claim that considerable feeling exists in the county on account of the case, were introduced by defense counsel. It was also stated that Riddick's incarceration had prevented him from properly preparing his motion for a change of venue, or his defense to the charge.

Mr. Davis cited a case in Accomac County several years ago in which the defendant was charged with felonious shooting with intent to kill and in which a new trial was ordered by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals on the grounds the defendant should have been granted a change of venue.

In this case feeling was so high in the county that the defendant's printing shop was burned and he himself forced to flee for his life. He later surrendered into custody for protection, was finally tried and convicted after state militia had been sent to the scene.

"I don't know any offense with which a colored man can be charged which will create more prejudice and feeling than the one with which this boy is charged; the most heinous and diabolical offense known under our civilized law" Mr. Davis declared in his argument.

SHERIFF COMMENDED

"The fact that the sheriff of this county saw fit to move the prisoner to the Norfolk jail because he believed it beyond his power to protect him properly, to my mind, is in itself sufficient cause to grant this petition for a change of venue.

"The sheriff of this county," he continued, "should be commended for his foresight and courage; the defendant's life was no doubt saved by this action. It was only the good judgment, only the foresight, only the faithful performance of his duty as sheriff of this county that makes it possible for this boy to be in the Norfolk jail today."

Later in his rebuttal argument in referring to Riddick's alleged confession of the crime Mr. Davis described the accused youth as "a 19-year-old Negro boy who has never known anything but work on a Princess Anne County farm, with all the bulldogs of the Norfolk police force growling and gnashing their teeth at him—."

He said that Sergeant Benton who was credited with having obtained the alleged confession after 40 minutes of questioning, " has a reputation for breaking down prisoners."

The attorney pointed out that no grand jury has been summoned to probe the presence of six car loads of white men at the Princess Anne jail "in the dead of night and under cover of darkness," demanding the prisoner.

"Certainly no harm can come to the interests of the Commonwealth of Virginia by granting this motion. Let it be said that this defendant,, no matter what his station in life may be, has been granted all the rights guaranteed to him by the Constitution of the United States," he pleaded.

REPUTED SLAYER SECRETLY JAILED

Feeling Reported High in Robbery Killing.

ROANOKE, Va., Aug. 21 —(AP) Everett Quesenbury, arrested Sunday in Beckley, W. Va., charged with slaying C. H. Jessup, Stokes county, North Carolina, farmer in Patrick county, Virginia, was brought to the Roanoke jail today for safekeeping.

Frank P. Burton, Patrick county commonwealth's attorney, said at Rocky Mount this afternoon a special grand jury will meet at Stuart September 7 to consider Quesenbury's case. The prosecutor said in event Quesenbury is indicted he will seek a speedy trial and ask for the death penalty.

Jessup was slain last Saturday at Claudeville in what Burton described as a robbery.

Burton said intense feeling existed against the accused man in Patrick county and he advised the sheriff to bring Quesenbury to the Roanoke city jail.

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

Alabama.

5777
5777

Police Seeking Armed Negro

Birmingham Party Held Up; Attempted Attack Thwarted

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., March 13.—(AP)—Police sought tonight an armed negro who they said attempted to attack a young Woodlawn matron last night after robbing her husband of $21 at a point near the Birmingham Airport.

Patrolman W. R. Duncan, of nearby Tarrant City, said Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Vincent told him the negro fled after firing a pistol shot at Vincent when he came to his wife's assistance.

The officer said Vincent told him he stopped the car to roll a cigaret on a return drive from Tarrant City wit hhis wife, their year-old child, Mrs. G. D. Nix and her 5-month-old baby.

"Vincent said he heard steps behind the car," Duncan related, "and the negro appeared on the driver's side and shined a flashlight in his face. He held a pitsol on them and ordered them from the car."

The negro took the keys from the machine and forced Vincent and the two women, who carried their babies, to walk about 100 feet into the woods, the officer said he was told.

Duncan said Vincent reported he offered money and the automobile to the negro if he would not harm the women. The negro took the money and then directed Mrs. Vincent to precede him farther into the woods, police were told.

"She said he tried to throw her to the ground," Duncan recounted, "and struck her on the hand with the flashlight when she struggled with him. She screamed and when Vincent came to her aid, the negro fired one shot and fled."

Mrs. Nix told him the bullet spattered gravel over the two infants who had been placed on the ground near a tree, the officer said.

Vincent reported he walked to a nearby house and called police.

Officers continued a search today for the negro, described as about 19 years old, five feet six inches tall and weighing about 136 pounds, and wearing a dark suit and cap.

OFFICERS HUNT NEGRO WHO [illegible]

DECATUR, Ala., April 13.—(AP)—Authorities were holding a negro today on charges of attempted attack, after receiving complaints from three women in the nearby Summerville district.

The negro was arrested after bloodhounds were put on the trail of a man reported to have been routed from two homes after annoying women. One woman said a negro intruder choked her.

Negro Held for Assault

DECATUR, Ala., April 13.—(AP)—Authorities were holding a negro today on charges of attempted attack, after receiving complaints from three women in the nearby Summerville district. The negro was arrested after bloodhounds were put on the trail of a man reported to have been routed from two homes.

Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser
May 17, 1937

Negro Suspect In Girl's Attack Taken To Kilby

Edgar Dawson Protests Innocence But Alibi Is Discredited

Edgar Dawson, negro charged with criminally assaulting an 18-year-old white girl in Oakwood Cemetery about 2 a.m. yesterday, last night had been removed from the County Jail here to Kilby Prison for safe-keeping.

As when first arrested by State Highway Patrolman A. J. Lingo, Dawson maintained his innocence throughout the day and added that he believed he could establish an alibi. Officers said last night, however, that they had made a preliminary investigation on the information given them by Dawson and that the alibi, intended to show he was not near the scene of the crime, had failed to check in several important details.

The officers said they would continue their search today for the weapon which the negro allegedly used to force the girl and her companion, Buford Heaton, 209 South Court Street, from the corner of Ripley and Jefferson Streets, into the cemetery.

Near Murder Scene

The assault, occurring not far from the spot where Miss Dora Bullard and L. K. Nichols were found stabbed to death Jan. 17, caused some speculation yesterday as to whether Dawson might have been involved in that crime also. Police and County authorities, for the most part, were not inclined to connect the cases.

Dawson was arrested shortly before 2 a.m. yesterday by Patrolman A. J. Lingo, of the State Highway Patrol, who had joined Capt. W. H. Chesser and Officers Easterling and Hamilton, of the Police Department, in the search. Patrolman Lingo said he found Dawson "snooping about" a candy shop next door to the negro's home at 806 Jefferson Street.

At that time Dawson said he was employed by the candy shop, but W. Baggett, its proprietor, said this was not true. The negro was said not to have done more than two days' work at the shop in the last five years.

According to the girl victim and Mr. Heaton they had been to a baseball game at Cramton Bowl with another couple, who left a few minutes ahead of them, and were walking home when they were accosted by an armed negro at Jefferson and Ripley Streets.

The negro pointed his gun at them, the girl said, and ordered them to turn their faces from him and march in the direction of Oakwood Cemetery, about three blocks away.

"He made us walk along in front of him," she said, "but I got a look at his face in the street light. He told us to keep going or he would kill us both. When we got to the cemetery fence we told him we couldn't go any further. He replied that we had better climb over the fence unless we wanted to die so Buford (Mr. Heaton) helped me over the rails.

Climbed Fence

"The negro told Buford to get over too and threatened him with the pistol. Buford climbed over and was followed by the negro who then made us walk a long way into the cemetery. He stopped us beside a large tree and ordered me to search Buford, which I did. I was made to walk backwards toward the negro so that I couldn't see his face. I gave the negro the change I found in Buford's pockets. There was only a little money and this seemed to anger him. He told me to go back and get the rest. I told him there was no more.

"He next ordered Buford to sprawl in the grass, face downward, and told him that, if he dared to move, he'd put a bullet in his head. Then, still standing behind me, he put a handkerchief in my hand and told me to blindfold myself. I wanted to scream and run, but I knew that if I did he'd kill both us both. Once Buford turned his head and made a slight movement. The negro pointed his gun at him and said he'd shoot if he tried that again.

Girl Blindfolded

"I tied the handkerchief over my eyes, like he said, but he wasn't satisfied. He adjusted it tighter and then he assaulted me."

The girl said that, a minute or so later, she managed to grab the negro's arm.

"I almost got the gun," she told a reporter, "but he was too strong for me. Anyway, the negro was upset and he jumped back and leveled his gun at us. I believe he would have killed us, too, if we hadn't darted behind the tree."

The negro then fled in the direction of Madison Avenue and the girl with Heaton at her side, ran in the same direction. She screamed to attract attention. Her cries were heard by E. R. Sharp and N. C. Lingo who were walking home on Madison Avenue. They untied the blindfold, that still clung to the girl's neck, and summoned the police. Mr. Lingo also went to the home of his brother, A. J. Lingo, the highway patrolman, at 11 Vonora Avenue, and the latter arrested Dawson less than an hour later.

At 1:55 a.m. the negro was taken to the county jail where the girl identified him as her assailant. Heaton said the negro was about the same size of her assailant but that, not having seen his face clearly, he could not identify him.

Deputy Sheriff Mosely took the negro's shoes and returned to the scene of the crime. He said the shoes fitted perfectly in the imprints found along the roadway.

Deputy Mosely and Patrolman Lingo said that Dawson seemed to have been drinking, but that he appeared to be steady.

As the girl and her mother were walking home early yesterday morning a negro seized the former, evidently with the purpose of assaulting her, and then fled when the latter screamed for aid. It was thought that the negro had not seen the mother, who was walking several yards behind her daughter.

Police said that Wright was reported to have been "making eyes" at women within the vicinity in recent weeks. The negro was said to have made no statement following his arrest.

Negro Suspect Held In Attempted Attack

ANNISTON, ALA., Nov. 3.—(AP)—Sheriff W. P. Cotton said today a posse had cornered over to him a negro captured after a 16-year-old white girl reported a negro had attempted to attack her.

Cotton said the captured man's legs had been peppered with shotgun pellets.

NEGRO IS SENTENCED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Robert Rudolph, 24-year-old Negro of 616 11th-st, n, was fined $250 and sentenced to nine months hard labor by Judge H. B. Abernethy in County Court of Misdemeanors today in connection with a charge of assault and battery on a white woman.

Mrs. M. F. Evans Jr. of 108 20th-st, n, testified that Rudolph, a bus boy in a downtown restaurant, caught her hand and spoke disrespectfully to her. Mrs. Evans was employed as a waitress in the restaurant.

Negro Is Identified In Assault Attempt

A charge of attempted criminal assault yesterday was placed against Wilson Sharp, West Montgomery negro, after he had been identified at the county jail by a 14-year-old girl, and her mother, as the man who seized the former about 1 a.m. [illegible] Birmingham Highway, just [illegible] Mobile Road. Sharp was arrested at 3:30 a.m. by Officers J. L. Stough and D. J. Tally, Jr., members of a searching party dispatched to the scene along [illegible] from Kilby Prison.

Identifies Three Youths, But All Have 'Iron-Clad' Alibis

Alabama Woman Is Unable to Make Up Her Mind After Telling Story, So Youngsters Are Released.

CENTREVILLE, Ala., Oct. 21—Three youths escaped a possible lynching or other violence here last week when each of them was identified by a white woman as "the man" who attempted to attack her.

The victim of the alleged attempt, who lives on the Tuscaloosa and Montgomery highway approximately half-way between Centreville and the County Training School for Negroes, reported to police last Monday that "a Negro, with curley hair, wearing a blue sweater, or jacket of some kind, and wore her dress pretty off as she stood in the front door of her home. The woman said she was knocked down, and that as she screamed her would-be attacker fled.

Police joined by a group of white citizens immediately started a man-hunt which was said to look for "a Negro with curly hair."

Can't Make Up Her Mind

The first Negro youth picked up answering the description was brought before the woman who immediately "identified him."

"That looks like the one . . . and I think it is," she is said to have told police.

It was proved later, however, that the "identified" youth had been at work in the store of a local merchant at the time the attack was alleged to have taken place.

In quick succession, two other youths were brought before the victim." These she also "identified" as the person who struck her.

As in the case of the first boy, the latter two were found to have had air-tight alibis and were released after questioning.

Arkansas.

5776

Lynchings - 1937

Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

Principals In Probe Of Assault On Memphis Girl

YOUNG NEGROES HELD IN ATTACK

Memphis Girl, 18, Taken From Companion and Assaulted

MARION, Ark., Dec. 2 (AP)—Sheriff Howard Curlin announced the arrest today of two young Negroes who, he said, confessed they attacked an 18-year-old Memphis girl, after dragging her from her companion's automobile last night.

The Negroes were booked as Theo Thomas and Frank [illegible]. The sheriff said they would be charged with rape.

The girl was taken to a Memphis hospital early today suffering from bruises and shock. She said she had been attacked and beaten by two drunken Negroes, one of whom had a gun and threatened to kill her.

Sheriff Curlin said F. E. Brading, 21, of Jonesboro, Ark., and the girl were in a car parked on the highway when the Negroes held them up and seized her.

Brading escaped and summoned aid. A posse of about 50 men found the girl several hours later.

Directing the investigation which followed the criminal assault on a Memphis girl by two negroes in Crittenden County, Arkansas, Christmas Night, was Sheriff Howard Curlin (upper left photo) who makes a telephone call from the Marion jail as State Ranger Odell Maxey checks his notes.

Two negroes admitted the attack, Sheriff Curlin said. The girl was in a parked car with F. E. Brading (left in upper right picture), Jonesboro youth, who is shown with Tom Morgan (right). Young Morgan said the negroes offered to help him fix a flat tire shortly before they approached Mr. Brading and his companion.

Jailer W. O. Curlin (left), brother of the sheriff, is leaving the Marion jail with Deputies Ray Curtis (center) and C. L. Goad after the negroes had allegedly confessed the crime. Deputy Goad found the girl near the highway and he and Deputy Curtis took her to a Memphis hospital.

Lynchings - 1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.
6 6

California

5778

"Black Ape Man" Found To Be White Boy, 15

LOS ANGELES—(By Harry Levette for ANP)—Night after night for over a month police radio cars have [illegible] the southside, Negro section, scurrying here and there in search of an "ape man" whom some hysterical white woman he djust reported as having leaped upon a tree, knocking her down and robbing her. He was always described as a Negro, and always as nude or clad only in a pair of shorts. The attacks had always occurred in the vicinity of Slauson and 85th street in the Avalon district, and the dailies had carried many front page stories about the mysterious "Black Tarzan."

But last Sunday night, 77th street station police solved the mystery and the nationality of the "Ape Man" by arresting Albert Anxionatt, a large fifteen year old white boy, of 365 W. 93rd street, who confessed that he was the wanted terror of the trees and shrubbery. He was taken into custody for molesting several small girls in a theatre on South Vermont Avenue, and avter severe questioning by the police admitted to all the crimes committed by the nude purse-snatcher. He also confessed to taking part in nude orgies with other boys and girls.

Because of his age he was taken in charge by the crime prevention Bureau which will bring him to trial in the near future.

Florida

5779

Lynchings - 1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

Pensacola, Fla. News
May 24, 1937

Bloodhound Trails Negro In Attempted Attack 25 Miles

After a search which began shortly after 10 o'clock last night at the heels of Convict Camp 43's famed bloodhound, "Queen," and covered 25 miles by daybreak, Deputies T. A. Coleman and W. R. Olsen today were confident of the early arrest of an unidentified negro wanted for a series of attempted attacks on white women.

The negro, who has allegedly grabbed at women walking along lonely streets by themselves at night several times during the last few weeks, last night appeared in the bedroom of an East Jordan street house and attempted to choke a woman occupant. The woman, who was in the house alone at the time, told officers the negro seized her as she walked into the darkened room.

Pushing his hands from her throat she screamed so lustily he became frightened and fled just as two neighbors arrived, Deputy Olsen said.

Aided by "Queen", bloodhound to whom officers give the credit for a large number of captures, Coleman and Olsen, Convict Captain B. H. West, Ernest McVoy and the negro trusty who trained the dog, trailed the negro from the Jordan street address past Cottage Hill. At a point between Pensacola and Cottage Hill Queen lost the trail and officers expressed the belief the negro had got a ride on a passing vehicle.

The negro is described as being small, about 135 pounds in weight, between 25 and 30 years of age and dressed in dark trousers and a light shirt.

Lynchings - 1937
Rape — Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

Georgia

5780

ATLANTA POLICE HUNT YOUNG NEGRO ATTACKER

Fugitive Assaults One White Girl, Accosts Two Others

ATLANTA, Ga., June 3.—(UP)—Police and county deputies tonight deployed around the outskirts of Atlanta hunting a young negro, armed with a pistol, who criminally attacked a 10-year-old white girl and attempted to attack two other white women.

The negro, apparently about 20 years old, attacked the girl yesterday, police said.

Today he forced a white girl, 14 years old, into a garage and attempted to attack her. He was surprised by Fred Phillips, who heard the girl's cries. Phillips grappled with the negro, but he escaped.

Two hours later the negro met an 18-year-old white girl walking on a path in a vacant section of the city. He covered her with a pistol, but fled when she told him she "saw some white men watching us."

Assault Attempt Charged to Negro

Court Orders Rouse Held for Trial; Negress Released

7-30-37

Charged with attempted criminal assault of a nine-year-old white girl, Claude Rouse, 16, Negro, was held under $500 bond yesterday at a commitment hearing before Judge R. Douglas Feagin in municipal court.

The Negro allegedly put his hand on the girl in front of a Fifth street store last July 12. He is represented by T. A. Jacobs Jr., Norman E. English, assistant solicitor of superior court, represents the state.

Judge Feagin at another hearing dismissed the case against Lottie Brooks, Negress charged with assault with intent to murder Louis Smith, Negro.

Smith was stabbed in the neck in a fight with the woman on the Georgia Industrial Home road July 10. The woman pleaded self-defense. She was represented by Hallie B. Bell, attorney, while Solicitor Charles H. Garrett represented the state.

Attacker Hunt Still Goes On

Two Negroes Routed By Georgia Farm Women May Be Quarry

MOUNT VERNON, GA., Sept. 1.—(AP)—The hunt for a negro accused of attacking a white woman, with a toll of one dead and two wounded veered to the farm of Earl McArthur tonight, after two negroes were routed by his wife.

Mrs. McArthur said the two demanded the keys to the McArthur automobile.

Sheriff T. G. Peterson said the negroes fled into the woods after she went into the house, ostensibly to get the keys to the car, and returned with a gun. The officer said the men "may be" wanted in connection with the attack on a white woman Saturday.

A posse of 25 men, aided by track dogs, took up the new lead.

County Warden E. D. Burns headed the searching party.

Will Kirby, negro, was killed, and Mayor John W. Underwood of Mount Vernon and Ralph Grinstead, a posseman, were wounded by flying bullets at Kirby's home yesterday.

The youthful mayor attempted to intervene between an aroused posse and Kirby, who was suspected of harboring one of the fugitives sought in the rape case.

Underwood and Grinstead were struck by gunfire which officers said interrupted the mayor's efforts to "calm things down."

A State warrant in the rape case named the suspect as Buddy Sharpe.

Underwood was shot in the arm and back. Grinstead, suffered a fracture of [illegible] from a bullet.

County Attorney [illegible] Underwood, father of the 25-year-old mayor, did not say if prosecution would be attempted.

Prosecutor Underwood said men had been roaming the country "in an ugly mood" since the attack case was reported.

"We'd been afraid of a lynching ever since," he said.

The mayor was under treatment in Dublin, Ga., hospital.

ATTACK REPORTED BY EAST POINT GIRL

Five Squad Cars of Fulton Police Seek Negro.

An 18-year-old East Point girl told Fulton county police that she was attacked by a negro last night near her home. She said she was threatened with death if she resisted.

East Point police and five squad cars of Fulton county police last night were searching for the negro, who was reported to have fled across the yards of the Central of Georgia railroad.

The girl told police she was returning home and had turned into a lane leading to her home when a negro jumped at her from behind bushes.

Illinois.

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

5781

Frameup's Evil Seed

The news of the day out of Chicago "Capt. Raymond Crane said he had positive information that the slayer of Anna Kutcha, a nurse, was a white man, not a Negro, as first believed."

It is about time that the American people learn that the Negro is the victim of a reputation pinned on him. A woman in Topeka accounted for the death of her companion on a trip into the country, by a most circumstantial statement of "a Negro's murderous attack." A cab driver in Kansas City brings in a dying man, fatally "wounded by a Negro."

As it is prejudice brings its own penalty. Fooled by their own bias into trying to convict a Negro, especially where dastardly offense is committed, officials make no effort to follow where the real clues lead, with the result that more and more real criminals escape the law. As ever oppression breeds within itself the seeds of its own destruction.

Roncoverte, W. Va., News
August 26, 1937

perused news sheets in vain for news of his capture and confession. For the eleventh time we have been disappointed, and we do not recall that any likely suspects have been arrested and questioned for any of the crimes.

The last woman to be murdered and ravished was a nurse in a Chicago hospital which at the time was being guarded by police who had information that a suspicious Negro was seen hanging around the institution. The undaunted "brick slayer," however, committed his horrible crime and made his escape in the same manner and quite as easily as he had nine times previously. A few nights later, in another Chicago hospital, he would have repeated his act but was frustrated by screams of his victim and succeeded only in butchering her up a bit, again making a successful exit.

Coincident with these horrors of last week, Congress considered for a brief time the Anti-Lynching law. The irony of it all! Perhaps if the citizenry of our second largest metropolis arouses itself, eventually enough pressure may be brought to bear upon her police force to have the "brick slayer" brought up to face charges of income tax evasion—although we don't know how they would nab the maniac unless he should walk into the police station some day and give himself up.

said, he might easily be mistaken for a colored man."

That her assailant could not have been a Negro was revealed after McCall was arrested. He repeated his words to Miss Austin during the attack which were, "You know me. You've seen me in the hotel." However, the woman "forgot" them when she started police searching for a colored prowler and remembered this statement only after McCall told it to officers.

WHERE ELSE BUT CHICAGO?

Within the past few days news syndicates have reported mechanically the fourth rape and murder and the eleventh attack upon women in two years by a Negro known as the "brick slayer," who consistently identifies himself by entering buildings via fire escapes and windows carrying a brick in his hand as a weapon. Yes, it happened in Chicago, for in what other supposedly civilized city in the world would a maniac so well identified perpetrate ghastly, blood-curdling crimes and remain at large so long?

Not since the days of Al Capone and "Big Bill" Thompson has a criminal been allowed to shock the civilized world by ruthless and brazen crimes against society, and to repeat the same time and again with an arrogance that compels the conclusion that police are not even hot enough on his trail to make him go in hiding.

The first time the "brick slayer" was given nation-wide publicity, and each succeeding time thereafter, we have

'Burly Black Rapist' Found To Be White Man

CHICAGO—(ANP) — A "burly black man" who recently attacked several white women in a loop hotel has much to the embarrassment of the white press been found to be a respectable white business man by day and a rapist by night.

Thomas McCall, 39, an engraver, was arrested Wednesday and confessed he assaulted Virginia Austin 25, artist and sculptor, in her room at the Washington hotel August 15. He was jailed after Miss Natalie Ortuso, 16 year old dancer, described him as the prowler who tried to get into her room a week ago Saturday night. He is also being quizzed in connection with the rape of Alda [illegible] an actress attacked on Sept. 25, 1936. All of these occurred in the Washington hotel where McCall had lived intermittently for five years. Negroes were blamed in the Austin and Deery cases.

Efforts are also being made to link the white man with 11 other major sex attacks and murders in hotels and hospitals. In practically all of them, police have sought Negroes as the culprits. Daily papers here have played up each assault and hundreds of Negroes have been picked up "on suspicion" as the white press fought for the arrest and conviction of the "black morons" responsible.

Miss Austin, who was first hit with a brick while she lay sleeping and then assaulted after she awakened, said she thought her assailant was a colored man. The Chicago TRIBUNE pointed out that "McCall is dark complexioned, dark haired, has black eyes and sharp features. In the half light, police

Swarthy White Man Confesses

Journal and Guide 10-2-37 Norfolk, Va.

Latest "Negro Did It" Crime

Daily Newspapers and Police Find Selves In Embarrassing Position; Seek To Explain City-Wide Manhunt

CHICAGO, Ill., (ANP)—A "burly black man" who recently attacked several white women in a loop hotel has, much to the embarrassment of the white press, been found to be a respectable white businessman by day and a rapist by night.

Thomas McCall, 39, an engraver, was arrested last week and confessed he assaulted Virginia Austin, 25, artist and sculptor, in her room at the Washington hotel, August 15. He was jailed after Miss Natalie Ortuso, 16 year old dancer, described him as the prowler who tried to get into her room a week ago Saturday night.

QUESTIONED ABOUT OTHERS

He is also being quizzed in connection with the rape of Alda Deery, an actress attacked on September 26, 1936. All of these occurred in the Washington hotel where McCall had lived intermittently for five years. Negroes were blamed in the Austin and Deery cases. The victims are white.

Efforts are also being made to link the white man with 11 other major sex attacks and murders in hotels and hospitals. In practically all of them, police have sought Negroes as the culprits. Daily papers here have played up each assault and hundreds of Negroes have been picked up "on suspicion" as the white press fought for the arrest and conviction of the "black morons" responsible.

HIT WITH BRICK

Miss Austin, who was first hit with a brick while she lay sleeping and then assaulted after she awakened, said she thought her assailant was a colored man. The Chicago Tribune pointed out that McCall is dark complexioned, dark haired, has black eyes and sharp features. In the half light, police said, he might easily be mistaken for a colored man."

That her asasilant could not have been a Negro was revealed after McCall was arrested. He repeated his words to Miss Austin during the attack which were: "You know me. You've seen me in the hotel." However, the woman "forgot" them when she started police searching for a colored prowler and remembered this statement only after McCall told it to officers.

Indiana

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

5782

Holds Colored Did Not Serve On Grand Jury

To file an appeal on the grounds that his motion to quash the indictment was overruled, and second, that although the prosecuting witness, Mrs. Charles Milliard, white, appeared, no evidence was offered, as demanded by law, proving she is a woman and therefore possible of rape, Attorney W. S. Henry sought acquittal of his client, Thomas Johnson, 35, 2734 Columbia avenue, found guilty in criminal court of assault while armed after an hour-four-minute jury deliberation last Saturday. That there were no colored persons on the grand jury returning the indictment will be one basis of appeal. Johnson faces a sentence of five to twenty-one years on the first charge, and a determinate sentance of ten to twenty on the second. They will not be served concurrently, Judge Baker said, which means that the convicted man will have to serve one before beginning to serve the other.

Mrs. Milliard said that when she was raped that Johnson said, "Come over here and lay down." The detectives tried to get Johnson to repeat that sentence, but he refused.

Alleged confessing as the slayer of Earl Herr, Logansport fireman, April 27, who was shot in the neck by an unknown assailant, but not charged with that offense, John Johnson was said to have raped a Miss [illegible] who was with Herr at the time of the shooting. One man, previously arrested and positively identified by Miss Crusem as Herr's slayer, was released and returned to Brasil, Indiana.

On the tenth of last October, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Milliard said they were walking across the Thirtieth street bridge at Fall Creek, after having left the Zaring theater, when they were approached by a small light-complexioned man. She said he made them go down under the bridge and at the point of a gun, forced her husband to lie flat on his back while he assaulted her. That man, she said, had two pairs of pants

When she started to scream, her husband said not to, Mrs. Milliard said. Her husband confessed that when the man had finished assaulting Mrs. Milliard, he (the husband) said, "Buddy give me a cigarette." The man then went on top of the bridge and told Mrs. Milliard to wait there with her husband for ten minutes. Then said, "wait for fifteen minutes." She said that he said, "I will throw your um-er-rella down." The attack occurred from about ten-ten until ten-fifty, she alleges. Johnson said that between ten-ten and ten-fifty he was at Twenty-fifth street and Martindale avenue, that from eight o'clock until nine-fifteen he was working on his truck at home; that he was in the house from then until about ten-thirty and then he went to Twenty-fifth and Martindale avenue, where he was with some friends. These friends denied they saw him.

Mrs. Milliard testified that the man who attacked her took $1.50 from her. When caught by police, Johnson said that he had $2.70 which he had earned by hauling junk with his truck. He was arrested at his home on October 13, by Detectives Holt and Jones.

When taken to the home of the Milliards, Mrs. Milliard said that he was the man. Johnson refused to pronounce the word "umbrella." Holt and Jones said that they asked him this before they ever said anything about a rape case at all.

Kansas.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.
6

5783

ATTACK VICTIM UNABLE TO IDENTIFY ASSAILANTS

Capital-Journal
Topeka, Kan.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Miss Marie Fink, who was attacked by three negroes after they killed her escort, Verne Hedrick, on a country road near here Friday night, told police today she doubted if she could identify any of the [illegible].

The negroes killed Hedrick when he resisted their efforts to rob him and then dragged Miss Fink from their parked car and into a field where all of them mistreated her. It was at night and Miss Fink said she did not get an opportunity to note the appearances of any of them.

PUSH HUNT FOR NEGROES

Commercial Appeal
Memphis, Tenn.

Three Believed To Have Made Second Attempt At Attack

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Complaints of a white woman and girl that they were accosted by negroes doubled efforts of police today to solve the slaying of Verne T. Hedrick by three negroes who criminally assaulted his companion, Miss Marie Fink, 20, on a country road Friday night.

Miss Margaret Jennings reported she was accosted by a young negro yesterday as she was walking on the street. Parents of the girl, whose name police withheld, told officers a negro tried to get her to enter his car.

Eutaw, Ala., Democrat
August 18, 1937

Three negroes killed Verne Hedrick in his car parked at the roadside in Topeka, Kan., recently [illegible] his girl companion into the adjacent field, attacked her. The negroes have not been arrested as yet. A few days before this occurrence The Topeka Capital had written a nasty, unfair editorial about Alabama and the treatment of the Scottsboro "boys". The most recent outrage will bring the question closer home to The Capital.—Alexander City Outlook.

Kentucky

Lynchings-1937

Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

5784

GIRL, ALONE IN HOME, IS VICTIM OF ATTACK

HENDERSON, Ky., Aug. [illegible]—(AP)—A "big negro" man was sought here tonight in connection with a criminal attack upon a 12-year-old white girl.

Police Chief Fitzgerald said the victim was confined in the home of her grandmother during the latter's absence.

Alleged Attacker Reported Arrested

AIKEN, S. C., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Police Chief J. E. George, working in collaboration with an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced tonight the arrest of a negro whom he said was wanted by Kentucky authorities for attacking a white woman and armed robbery.

Chief George said the arrest climaxed a search for the negro which started last August. The FBI, he said, had been working on the case since Sept. 1.

He named the negro as Harold Van Venison, alias Will Horace, and said the negro was a member of a widely known Covington, Ky., negro quartet which formerly gave broadcasts at Cincinnati and Covington.

Chief George said he was advised by George K. Langley, chief of the Kenyon (Covington) County police, that Kentucky authorities will arrive in Aiken tomorrow and would come prepared to lay extradition papers before Gov. Olin D. Johnston, of South Carolina.

Chief George said the negro came to Aiken late in September and had been working in local cotton fields. Last night, he said, three officers were detailed to watch the home of the negro's cousin. After an all-night vigil, the officers made the arrest.

Chief George quoted the negro as saying he was from Covington, but the negro denied the crime, he said, saying that he had loaned his automobile to another negro on the night of the crime.

A substantial reward had been posted for the negro's arrest, George said.

Lynchings-1937

Louisiana.

5785

Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

NEGROES ARRESTED IN ATTACK ON GIRL

ALEXANDRIA, La., March 24.—(AP)—Two negro suspects were arrested today in connection with a criminal attack reported by a 16-year-old girl employe of a restaurant here.

The attack occurred last night as she was returning home from work. A negro, she said, jumped from the bushes, attacked and beat her and left her unconscious.

Massachusetts.

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

5786

BRINGING DIXIE TO CAMBRIDGE

NOTHING could be more revolting than the case of the three colored youths who were arrested in Cambridge last Sunday morning and charged with attacking a white woman. Equally disgusting was the manner in which the "cultured" Boston dailies played up the story. Blaring headlines on the first or second pages screamed to the public that NEGROES had ATTACKED a WHITE WOMAN.

The third nauseating aspect of the sordid affair is that the police made a circus out of it in order to put pressure on the Cambridge Mayor who had refused to give their department extra officers.

In the Court it transpired that the more the Judge probed the case, the more the Fernando woman's character fell to pieces and the greater liar she appeared to be. The whole thing boiled down to this: Two apparently loose women, (one white, one colored) were on the usual hunt for men and after talking with the three youths, the white one retired to a playground followed by the trio while her colored girl friend kept watch. A white friend of the former decided to see what was going on and forced his way past the colored girl. On seeing him the white woman, plainly to save her face, started screaming for help and naturally had to bolster it up by having the youths traced to their homes and arrested. Such a story has been written in Alabama, Georgia or Florida times without number, except that in those places the Negroes would not be alive to be placed on trial. It would be the rope and faggot in quick time.

We warn all thinking colored residents of Massachusetts that if they sit supinely by and allow the police and the daily press to indulge in political checkers and yellow journalism at the expense of Negroes, we shall soon have a red hot lynching right here in our midst. It is noticeable that the police did not bring the colored girl into the case for the obvious reason that her testimony would have pricked their bubble much earlier. We also notice that when the case was dismissed the dailies buried the exoneration in small type on the rear pages.

We do not endorse the loose morals of these apparently depraved boys but on general principles we must vigorously protest against the methods adopted by police and press and demand that there shall be no repetition of such unfair and un-American tactics.

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

Mississippi.

5787

EGRO SHOT BY OFFICERS

rapped After Writing Note to Young Tupelo Woman

TUPELO, Miss., Jan. 12. — Irvin [illegible], 22-year-old negro service station attendant, who was shot last night by Cliff Parminter, Bill Monaghan as he sought to fill what was termed a self-proposed date with a young woman here, was believed to be in a dying condition at Tupelo Hospital late today.

Meanwhile, locale officers report that the handwriting on a note the young woman found in her car late yesterday, which note led directly to the shooting of Hadley, corresponded with the negro's handwriting at the service station where he had been employed.

Chief of Police J. E. Carr, together with members of his force and several citizens, formed an ambush in the neighborhood designated in the note and instructed the woman to drive to them after allowing the negro to enter her car.

With the trap set and with Patrolman Monaghan hid in the closed rumble seat of her machine, the woman drove to North Green Street and allowed the negro to enter her car.

Suddenly becoming extremely excited, she signaled for help, causing the negro to leap to the street. Patrolman Monaghan emerged from his hiding in time to fire upon the fleeing black. One bullet struck the negro in the back, puncturing a lung and came out his chest.

Negro Molests Girl

YAZOO CITY, Miss., April 8.—A. D. Archer, 32-year-old negro, was placed in undisclosed jail today by Yazoo County officers as a precautionary measure, after being charged with making improper advances toward a girl in the Bentonia community. He is alleged to have grabbed the girl by the shoulders as she was waiting for the school bus, but as he did so the bus arrived and he released her.

When H. T. Hinson, constable of Beat 1, with the aid of Jim Warnock, attempted to arrest Archer Monday morning, the negro grabbed for Mr. Hinson's gun and was wounded in the leg by Mr. Warnock.

POLICE FEAR VIOLENCE IF NEGRO IS CAPTURED

Commercial Appeal 8-3-37

Brookhaven Takes Precautions as Hunt Pushed

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Police Chief Ed Smith tonight said special precautions were being taken to protect a negro suspect in the event of his arrest in connection with the alleged kidnaping of Rosalie Serio, 15-year-old school girl who has been missing from her home since last Wednesday night.

The suspect, T. C. Smith, 25, a negro formerly employed by the girl's father, was being hunted by officers over a wide area.

Miss Serio disappeared mysteriously, supposedly carrying with her three dresses and two pairs of shoes. Chief Smith said she left about the same time Smith departed from Brookhaven after being discharged about two weeks ago by Miss Serio's father, Sam Serio, from his store.

The parents of the missing girl pleaded with officers to locate their daughter and offered a $500 reward for her safe return.

Federal agents joined local officers in their efforts to solve the disappearance of Miss Serio.

Girl And Suspect Hunted In Chicago

Advertiser 8-5-37

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Brookhaven officers said today they had enlisted the aid of Chicago police, as well as Department of Justice Agents in a search for T. C. Smith, 25-year-old negro, who is charged with kidnaping Rosalie Serio, 15.

The Brookhaven high school girl has been missing since last Wednesday night, and efforts have been made to connect her disappearance with the sudden departure from Brookhaven of the Smith negro, who was formerly employed by Sam Seiro, father of the missing girl.

Sheriff J. Walter Smith said he felt "almost certain" the negro went to Chicago.

"He had worked there several years ago, and knew his way around in Chicago fairly well," the officers said.

Nothing had come of the hunt today, the sheriff added, and no information concerning the girl's whereabouts had been reported.

"She just vanished, and that's all we know about it," Smith said.

The sheriff reiterated that it was "only a theory" that the girl left with the negro. She apparently took three of her dresses and two pairs of shoes with her when she left, indicating, officers said, that she might have left home voluntarily.

The grief-stricken parents have offered a $500 reward for her return.

Negro Suspect To Be Protected

Advertiser 8-3-37

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., Aug. 2—(AP)—Police Chief Ed Smith tonight said special precautions were being taken to protect a negro suspect in the event of his arrest in connection with the alleged kidnaping of Rosalie Serio, 15-year-old white school girl who has been missing from her home since last Wednesday night.

The suspect, T. C. Smith, 25, a negro formerly employed by the girl's father, was being hunted by officers over a wide area.

Miss Serio disappeared mysteriously, supposedly carrying with her three dresses and two pairs of shoes.

Chief Smith said she left about the same time the Smith negro departed from Brookhaven after being discharged about two weeks ago by Miss Serio's father, Sam Serio, from his store.

The parents of the missing girl pleaded with officers to locate their daughter and offered a $500 reward for her safe return.

Federal agents joined local officers in their efforts to solve the disappearance of Miss Serio.

Negro Sought In Kidnaping

Mississippi Girl Missing; F. B. I. Help Asked

Advertiser 8-3-37

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Lincoln County officers sought T. C. Smith, 25-year-old negro, today, with a warrant charging him with kidnaping Rosalie Serio, 15, daughter of a Brookhaven grocer.

Chief of Police Ed Smith, who announced the warrant had been filed in a justice of the peace court, said Federal Bureau of Investigation agents at New Orleans had been asked to aid in the search.

Chief Smith declared the negro, a discharged employe of the Serio girl's father, disappeared about the same time she left home last Wednesday night.

"The negro left in an automobile he claimed was his own," said the officer, "but we have investigated and believe now the car was stolen."

Three of Rosalie's dresses were found to be missing, also, he said. Chief Smith asserted no one in the Serio family had signed the kidnaping affidavit, but they were aware it had been filed.

Note.

Adventurous Girl Returned To Home

Rosalie Serio Is Back In Mississippi Town

Associated Press

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., Aug. 11.—(AP)—So far as the records are concerned, the disappearance and return of Rosalie Serio, 15-year-old Brookhaven high school girl, is just another case of "a young girl wanting to see something of the world."

That is the way Sheriff J. Walter Smith said he saw it, after returning from California today with the runaway girl, her father, and two of the girl's uncles.

"Rosalie said she just wanted to leave for awhile," the sheriff said, "and she said she ran away from home alone."

"She told us that she hitch-hiked her way to Jackson the night she disappeared, and bought a ticket there for San Luis Bobispo, Calif., where she was found. The girl told us she became homesick when she got to California and had run out of money. She was ready to come home."

Asked what would be done about a kidnaping charge filed against T. C. Smith, 25-year-old negro who disappeared the same night the girl left home, Sheriff Smith said "that will be held up for the time being."

Run-Away Girl Returns Home After Trip To California

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., Aug. 11.—The Sam Serios were happy today. Their "baby," Rosalie, 15, had returned to the family fold, a little pale and wan, but none the worse for her run-away experience of the past two weeks.

The young daughter of Sam Serio, local fruit merchant, denied she had been kidnaped or had run away with the negro, T. C. Smith, a former employe, who had been suspected of abducting the girl. Surrounded by several of her brothers and sisters, she told friends of her experiences.

"I just took my clothes and slipped out of the house and caught a ride with a man and his wife," she said. "They took me to Jackson, where I caught a Southern Pacific train to California. I went in a day coach all the way." She said she took about $65, which she had been saving.

"I didn't stop until I got to San Jose, Cal., where I spent one night. I hitch-hiked again from there to Itascadero, where a constable, Dale Poole, picked me up. I had $5 left then."

The little Italian girl giggled as she told of her experience with the officer. "He asked me my name and where I was from. I told him that I lived in San Jose and he said I might get away with that in some places but he knew I was from the South. I told him then who I was and that I had run away from home. He hadn't heard of my being missing."

The officer took the girl to San Luis Obispo, from where her parents were notified of her whereabouts. She was released to them Sunday morning.

"I didn't know anything about T. C., she told the officers. "He wasn't with me. I don't know where he is now."

Serio today said that the finding of the girl canceled the reward offered for the negro.

Sheriff Smith said that the time the girl said it took her to complete her trip checked with railroad time tables. He expressed the opinion the negro could hardly be suspected now of abducting the girl or of accompanying her on the trip.

SCHOOLGIRL, 15, IS FEARED VICTIM OF NEGRO KIDNAPER

G-Men Are Asked To Join Hunt For Daughter Of Mississippi Grocery Store Operator Who Has Been Missing For Two Days

Post 7-31-37.

FATHER'S FORMER EMPLOYE GONE

Birmingham, Ala.

First Belief That She Might Have Left Home To Visit Relatives Is Discounted After Check; Feeling Is High In Town

7-31-37

By United Press.

BROOKHAVEN, Miss., July 31.—Department of Justice agents were asked to join Mississippi and Louisiana officers today in a widespread search for Rosalie Serio, pretty 15-year-old schoolgirl who disappeared Wednesday night.

Fears that the girl had been abducted, possibly by a Negro, increased as the hours passed with no word from her.

Detectives in New Orleans continued a search for a 30-year-old Brookhaven Negro who formerly worked in the Serio Grocery Store here. The Negro disappeared at approximately the same time the girl's absence was noted. He had been seen lurking near the Serio home earlier in the evening.

G-Men Stand By

Operatives in the New Orleans Bureau of the U. S. Department of Justice were standing by, pending instructions from Washington. Lincoln County Sheriff J. Walter Smith and Chief of Police W. E. Smith urged Government investigators to enter the case, in the belief that it was an abduction.

Possibility that the girl left voluntarily—either alone or accompanied—was seen in the perplexing fact that three of her dresses also were missing.

The distracted parents said, however, that their daughter's normal behavior would not bear out such assumption. She had never left home before of her own accord and she always had lived a quiet life. They were at a loss to account for the absence of her clothes.

Leads Unavailing

At first it was believed the girl might have gone to Louisiana to visit relatives, but a careful check of all relatives and acquaintances revealed no trace of her.

The girl's father, Sam Serio, had not slept since his daughter's disappearance. He accompanied the sheriff and chief of police on all their leads, traveling with them over much of Lower Mississippi and Louisiana. The mother was near collapse.

Ransom, as a motive for abducting the girl, was not considered likely by either the parents or local authorities. The Serios are not wealthy.

Rosalie was described as being unusually attractive. She had long, dark tresses and dark eyes.

Feeling ran high in Brookhaven, a town of 6000 inhabitants in Southern Mississippi, when the rumor got around that a Negro might have kidnaped the girl.

Lynchings-1937
Rape:- Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

New York

5788

NEGRO BEATS GIRL, STUFFS HER IN DUCT

6-17-37

Youngster Charges She Was Lured With Promise of Photos

NEW YORK, June 17.—(AP)—A negro porter was accused by District Attorney Samuel J. Foley today of luring a 10-year-old girl to the basement of a Bronx theater yesterday and beating her unconscious when she resisted his advances.

6-18-37

The girl was found stuffed in a ventilating duct under the theater stage this morning, nearly 20 hours after the asserted attack.

She was taken, semi-conscious, to Lincoln hospital, where physicians said she was suffering from a skull fracture and multiple contusions. She was expected to recover.

Police took William Ray, 28, and another porter employed at the theater, to the hospital. Foley said the girl identified Ray as her assailant, and Detective Martin Fitzpatrick then quoted him as admitting that he beat her with a brick when she repelled him.

The girl, motherless daughter of a railroad flagman, "skipped" school yesterday morning and went to the theater. She said Ray enticed her into the basement with promises of autographed pictures of movie stars.

Child Attacked; Negro Arrested

Telegraph

Girl, 10, Beaten and Left in Theater Basement

6-17-37

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—A Negro porter was accused by District Attorney Samuel J. Foley today of luring a 10-year-old girl to the basement of a Bronx theater yesterday and beating her unconscious when she resisted his advances.

The girl, Mary Maglione, was found stuffed in a ventilating duct under the theater stage this morning, nearly 20 hours after the alleged attack.

She was taken, semi-conscious, to Lincoln hospital, where physicians said she was suffering from a skull fracture and multiple contusions. She was expected to recover.

Police took William Ray, 28, and another porter employed at the theater, to the hospital. Foley said the girl identified Ray as her assailant, and Detective Martin Fitzpatrick then quoted him as admitting that he beat her with a brick when she repelled him.

The girl, motherless daughter of a railroad flagman, "skipped" school yesterday morning and went to the theater. She said Ray enticed her into the basement with promises of autographed pictures of movie stars.

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.
6 6

North Carolina.

5789

Mooresville, N. C. Enterprise
August 12, 1937

Mark Another for Tar Heel Justice

A dispatch to The Journal from Mooresville tells of the success of Iredell officers in removing a Negro prisoner suspected of committing criminal assault upon a white woman, to a place beyond reach of mob violence.

It is very encouraging to remark the increasing success which North Carolina officers are meeting in this endeavor. More significant, however, is the fact that they are coming more and more to the making of bona fide attempts to preserve the lives of their prisoners in this manner.

The success they meet proves very clearly that "it can be done." This state has its share of hot-headed and unthinking "defenders of morals," who are ready to invoke the decision of Judge Lynch in affairs of this sort. But in recent years we have had very few lynchings.

This has been due in great measure to the courage and discretion of sheriffs and police officers. And odd as it may appear, the decrease in the number of lynchings apparently has been followed by a decrease in the number of those attacks which too often cause the upswing of the mob.

As time goes on and the agencies of the law demonstrate their ability to handle all violations of the criminal code promptly and with due regard to the highest ends of justice, no doubt but that Judge Lynch will slowly but surely fade from the Southern scene. But while the educational process designed to replace mob psychology with a rational adherence to the letter and spirit of the law is gradually dissolving the mob philosophy, peace officers will stand out as the most potent enemies of Judge Lynch. They are the fore-runners who must prepare the way for a new deal in Southern sociology.

Winston-Salem, N. C. Journal
August 4, 1937

IREDELL COMMENDED

Newspapers throughout North Carolina have said some very nice things about the Iredell county officers and Judge Rousseau in the arrest, trial and conviction of Walter Caldwell, negro rapist. The culprit was captured within an hour after the commission of the deed; he was secluded from any would-be mob violence and brought to trial on Tuesday afternoon, the third day following the rape, and before midnight of the day of his conviction he was landed on death row in Raleigh to await execution by lethal gas on September 10th, 1937. One paper, it was learned, the Raleigh News and Observer, charged the Iredell authorities with "railroading the negro." If the News and Observer cannot stand swift justice on a person who admits his dastardly deed, then the editor of that paper would continue the practice of long-drawn out proceedings perhaps just to give the lawyers like Liebowitz, the New York lawyer, a chance to make heroes rather than criminals out of such men as Caldwell. "Preacher" Caldwell was not "railroaded through the court," but was given a fair and impartial trial, if such a thing can be done after a confession to the horrible crime.

Lynchings-1937
Rape,-Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

North Carolina.

5790

Negro-Did-It Case Flops In Twin City; Police Lack Clue After 30 Day Manhunt

Winston-Salem Authorities Believe Attacker To Be Disguised White Man; Three White and Two Negro Assaults Credited To Him

(Special to Journal and Guide)

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.—Another Negro-did-it crime bids fair to fizzle out. After being baffled with a series of five criminal assaults over a period of a month, local police officers have at last decided to give some consideration to the possibility that the attacker might be a white man, rather than a "light colored Negro" as has been reported.

The testimony of a 23-year old white victim that the attacker might have been a Negro "but that he did not smell like a Negro" was only one of the unusual descriptions of the man police believe to be a sex-crazed criminal.

TWO COLORED, THREE WHITE

After close questioning of all of the victims of the assaults, two white girls, one colored girl, one white woman, and one colored woman, police were in doubt as to the racial identity of the man they sought.

Further evidence to support their theory that the attacker may have been white with a facial color disguise, is the fact that a police dragnet all over the Negro section of the twin city, accompanied by the operation of the usual system of police stool pigeons in the Negro section, has failed in a month to reveal a single worthwhile clue.

Other reasons for the new line of attack in this sensational manhunt are the unusual characteristics of the attacker. He is said to have used exceptionally good English, with an accent not ordinarily associated with Negro speech; he is moderately well dressed; and he has facial characteristics, generally identified as Nordic.

DESCRIPTIONS SAME

In all five cases of assault reported since December 4, when the first occurred, the descriptions of the villain, offered by the women attacked, have been parallel.

After listening to all of the stories, local authorities have concluded that the attacker usually picks out some woman accompanied by one or more men; that he uses a gun to force the victim, along with her male escort, to some prearranged spot; that he forces the male companion, at the point of a pistol, to turn his back while he commits the assault; that he is very familiar with the borderline Negro and white residential sections of this city; and that with the exception of one attack, all have been committed on or near colored school here.

It is said that the attacker is given to boasting, and that on two occasions he has warned victims against reporting the crimes to police boasting that he had already committed a murder.

Police have arrested scores of "suspects" in the case but have been unable to hold them for lack of evidence. In desperation the officers have outlined a new strategy. They will seek to locate a white attacker who uses color on his face to disguise his identity.

Authorities have been unceasing in their efforts to locate the criminal and have assigned several of the best detectives on the force to the case. Despite this huge dragnet, however, nothing materially significant has shown up in the last 30 days. Officers are hoping for a "break" in the case in the near future.

The first assault occurred on the yard of a Negro school on Dec 4. A 15-year old white girl was the victim. Two weeks later a Negro girl was attacked a few hundred yards from the same school. On Sunday night, Dec. 20, a Negro woman, acompanied by a male companion, was similarly attacked within a stone's throw of the school. The fourth victim of the man was a 17-year old white girl and the fifth victim was a 23-year old white woman.

There were 21 criminal assaults reported here during the past year. Twelve of these were solved by arrests, according to files in the local police headquarters.

MAN IS HUNTED IN ASSAULT CASES

Winston-Salem Is Combed by Special Police Details

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Jan. 3. (AP)—Special police details combed Winston-Salem tonight in search of a man to whom authorities attributed a series of five point-blank criminal assaults.

The crimes, all in the Negro neighborhood and all following similar routine, began a month ago when a 14-year-old white girl reported a negro forced her and a boy friend from their parked car and assaulted her while holding her companion at bay with a pistol.

Each time since then the victims, two white and two negro, have been girls accompanied by escorts who were handled in similar manner, and since that time police have begun to lean to the theory that a disguised white man, and not a negro, was responsible.

Two weeks after the first report, a negro girl reported she was attacked a few hundred yards from the school grounds where the first crime occurred. The next Sunday night, December 20, a negro woman made an identical report. The story was the same in the case of a 17-year-old white girl on December 22. The fifth assault was reported a week ago tonight, but occurred at some distance from the scenes of the others, although the 23-year-old girl's companion again was held off with a pistol, his back turned.

Strange Judicial Reasoning

A white woman in North Carolina last week admitted that she was not certain that a man awaiting execution on a charge of attacking her was the right man, after all.

Upon his confession, the committing judge commuted the death sentence to one of life imprisonment.

Strange reasoning, indeed, whereby the learned jurist can doom a man to life behind prison bars, a man, who by his accuser's testimony should be declared an innocent and a free man.

South Carolina.

Lynchings-1937

Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

5791

York, S. C. Enquirer
January 12, 1937

— Isaac Scott, a negro 30 years old, attempted to assault a school teacher in Florence county and was taken from two deputy sheriffs after his arrest, by an angry mob. The sheriff and the father of the teacher pleaded with the crowd not to lynch the negro, and finally the mob turned him back to the officers, who put him in the county jail. The negro said he was drunk and did not know what he was doing, nor where he was, when he crawled into the bed of the young teacher.

NEGRO ARRESTED IN ASSAULT CASE

Federal Officers Help Nab Member of Widely Known Quartet in South Carolina

AIKEN, S. C., Oct. 10 (AP)—Police Chief J. E. George, working in collaboration with an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced tonight the arrest of a Negro whom he said was wanted by Kentucky authorities for "rape of a white woman and armed robbery."

10-11-37

Chief George said the arrest climaxed a search for the Negro which started last August. The FBI, he said, had been working on the case since Sept. 1.

He named the Negro as Harold Van Venison, alias Will Horace, and said the Negro was a member of a widely-known Covington, Ky., Negro quartet which formerly gave broadcasts at Cincinnati and Covington.

Chief George said he was advised by George E. Langley, chief of the Kenyon (Covington) county police, that Kentucky authorities will arrive in Akin late tomorrow ann would come prepared to lay requisition papers before Gov. Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina.

Chief George said the Negro came to Aiken late in September and had been working in local cotton fields. Last night, he said, three officers were detailed to watch the home of the Negro's cousin. After an all-night vigil, the officers made the arrest and lodged the Negro in the Aiken jail.

George quoted the Negro as saying he was from Covington, but the Negro denied the crime, he said, saying that he had loaned his automobile to another Negro on the night of the crime.

A substantial reward had been posted for the Negro's arrest, George said.

Tennessee.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

5792

HAT LEADS TO ARREST OF NEGRO FOR ATTACK

Arthur Mosby, 25, Admits Assault On White Woman

12-7-37

Memphis Press

TALKS FREELY OF CRIME

Forced Victim Into Cotton Field Despite Her Struggles —Taken In Custody Four Hours Later

Following the clue of a hat dropped by the attacker, police early yesterday morning obtained a confession to the criminal assault on Mrs. Fred L. Hood, 40, of 1038 Rose, four hours after the crime was committed on Trevant near South Parkway.

In custody was Arthur Mosby, negro, 25, of 1282 Grand, who told officers and newspaper men he was guilty and wanted to make full confession. Arraigned in City Court yesterday he pleaded guilty to criminal assault charges and was bound over to the state.

Forced Into Field

Mrs. Hood was attacked about 10:30 o'clock Friday night while walking near her husband's store with her son, Fred L. Hood, Jr., 10. She was forced into a cotton field despite struggles during which she bit the attacker's finger.

Lieut. Miller and Sergts. Clark and Kennedy found a brown felt hat at the scene. They took it to a negro in the neighborhood, who said he recognized it as belonging to Mosby. They arrested Mosby at his home, where they said he freely admitted the crime. One of his fingers was bleeding, apparently from a bite, when he was arrested.

Identified By Victim

Later he was taken to the Hood home, where Mrs. Hood was positive in her identification. Mosby said he once served six months for shoplifting. He is an employe of the Memphis Power & Light Co.

Capt. Frank Glisson said an investigation is being made of the possibility of Mosby's connection with previous similar crimes, but that so far none is apparent.

Police Investigate Another Attack

Police yesterday were investigating the reported attack on Miss Edna Gray, 23, of 1264 White, who Friday night told officials she and her escort, Charles Black, 26, of 852 Thomas, were held up by two white men, one of whom assaulted her.

In a detailed statement to Sergts. McGee and Getz yesterday, Mr. Black said the men appeared beside his car as the couple were leaving a theater on Jackson, forced them at pistol point to drive to a secluded place north of the Vollintine golf course, robbed him and attacked his companion.

He said the original report that he and the young woman were on the golf course when held up was erroneous. Miss Gray yesterday was under a physician's care.

Lynchings-1937
Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

Virginia

5793

Girl's Tale of Attack By Negro Proven Lie

DANVILLE, Va., Feb. 24 (ANP).—Another instance of perverted truth, in other words, a plain, unadulterated lie, was revealed last week by police when what appeared to be one of the gravest crimes in recent Danville history was found to be absolutely false.

Last Friday night police rushed to a cafe on North Main street where it was said a young white woman, Josephine Martin, had reported she had been attacked at the old fair grounds by a Negro during the absence of her escort, who had gone to get aid in towing out his car, which was mired in the mud.

After prolonged questioning by Police Lieutenants Haraway and Mayberry, an entirely new set of facts was revealed, the girl finally admitting her first story was untrue. The case was dropped when it was found that she had not been the victim of an attack.

The girl's fabricated story recalled a similar case in Alton, Va., last year, in which a white woman declared a Negro had entered her home, thrown a sack over her head, and attacked her. Police immediately spread out a dragnet, bringing in every Negro who happened to be near the woman's home, but later, doubting her story, questioned the woman, asking her if the attacker threw a sack over her head, just how did she know it was a Negro. "Because he smelled like one," was her startling reply. Physicians examined her, said she had not been molested, and police dropped the case.

Instances such as the two just related, where designing white women can jeopardize the lives of innocent colored citizens, constitute the best argument for an effective Federal anti-lynch law, Negro leaders were quick to point out.

POOLE CONVICTED IN SECOND TRIAL FOR PHONING VA. WHITE WOMAN

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

ALEXANDRIA — Richard W. Poole, youthful Alexandrian, who appealed from a decision of the police court for alleged disorderly conduct, was found guilty of that charge for the second time by a jury and given a heavier fine of $150 and 30 days in the city jail. The new trial was Wednesday.

Poole, who is 22 years old and gave his address as the 300 block of North Patrick Street, was fined $100 and $3 costs by Judge Reese Duncan in police court on a disorderly conduct charge several weeks ago, after private trial. He had been arrested by police on a complaint of Mrs. Margaret Dreifus, white, who said the youth telephoned her at her home and requested her to meet him on a street corner.

Young Poole was arrested June 5 at the corner of Commerce and Payne Streets by two policemen on suspicion of having made the call to the Dreifus woman.

Bond Raised

Immediately after the jury returned its verdict, Poole's bond was increased from $500 to $1,000 by Judge William P. Woolls, who presided.

The prosecution of the case was conducted by City Attorney Carl L. Budwesky, assisted by Attorney T. Brooke Howard. The defense was represented by Attorney Alfred H. Collins.

Attorney Collins, after the verdict was reached, moved to set aside the verdict as contrary to the law and evidence, which was overruled. He indicated that he would seek a writ of error in the state court of appeals. Poole afterwards gave $1,000 bail bond. He had been out on $500 bond since his appeal was noted.

Jury All White

The ordinance under which Poole was convicted is known as City Ordinance No. 70, and under its provisions the maximum that can be imposed for what is designated as "disorderly conduct" is $500 and 30 days in jail.

The jury was composed of M. B. Shiflett, foreman; Harry Fedder, L. F. Bargamin, St. Clair D. Shelton, B. Weil, George Nalls and R. E. Sweeney, all white.

About seventy-five persons were in court, among whom were about twenty colored.

The white woman and Poole denied knowing each other at the trial. It is generally known, however, that the woman is the daughter of the late Dr. Duncan, who conducted a drug store in a colored neighborhood near Poole's home.

Alabama.

Lynchings- 1937
Rape by Whites.

5794

ALA. CITIZENS OPEN FIGHT ON POLICE HUSHUP

White Merchant Caught Parked With Child

6-5-37

MOBILE, Ala., June 4—An unprecedented interest in the question of protecting Race womanhood from further debauchery by white men is being manifested by citizens here as a result of the action of several Race youths, on charge that on last Tuesday night they trapped Charles King, white, manager of the Pike and Dragon theatres, and other businesses in the heart of the local black belt, in a compromising position with Edna Farley, a Race girl 15 years of age, in an automobile obscured in the darkness of a remote alley. The youths state that they sought the arrest of King by white police officers on the beat, who refused to do so without a warrant.

Two days later circulars were found in many sections of the city advising Race patrons to stay away from all places operated by King, as a protest against the white man's alleged misconduct. Interest was intensified when the young men who requested his arrest were themselves arrested without warrants. Police officers are suspected of giving aid to King in an attempt to coerce and intimidate citizens into silence about the affair.

King employed counsel to prosecute the youths, and warrants charging libel were later issued against Jimmy Anderson and Edgerton D. Brown, two of the four youths held, in an effort to connect them with the distribution of the circulars.

Because of the principle involved the local NAACP, backed by the ministers and citizens in all walks of life, entered the case and are defending the young men. "We are determined to carry the case to the highest court of the land, if necessary, to seek justice for the Race," one prominent minister asserted.

A campaign will be inaugurated by a group of citizens to have all Race members realize they must refuse to support white people not respecting Race womanhood. There is a growing resentment against the hypocrisy of great numbers of whites throughout the South who by day preach "racial purity" and the inferiority of blacks, and are vehemently opposed to the intermingling of the blacks and whites, but who show there true colors by carrying on clandestine and illicit affairs with Race women under the protection of the shadows of night. With approximately one-fourth of the Race population being almost white, and three-fourths or more having an infusion of white blood, one wonders whom does the southern white man seek to fool with his asinine rantings on the race question.

Girl Identifies Man In Robbery-Assault

Advertiser
7-31-37
Montgomery

Dothan Couple Victims Of Night Prowlers

DOTHAN, ALA., July 31—(AP)—Chief Deputy D. G. Watford said tonight one of two men held without bond on highway robbery charges had been identified by an unnamed girl as attacking her last night while she and a companion were parked on the outskirts of Dothan.

Their arraignment has been set for July 17.

The men, Lewis Forrester, 19, and Roy Medley, 27, were arrested at their homes on descriptions furnished by Carleton Harrison, operator of a funeral home, who said Medley forced his girl companion into a wooded section while Forrester held him at bay with a gun.

Deputy Watford said a physician's report showed the young girl had been attacked.

Harrison told police officials the two men accosted him as he was parked in his automobile about 10:30 last night, demanding his money and valuables.

As the girl left the car with Medley, Harrison said he grappled with Forrester and escaped.

The young woman told police Medley brought her to the edge of town after attacking her. She telephoned authorities.

TWO GEORGIA GIRLS LURED BY ATTACKER

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 6.—(UP)—Police tonight searched for a nattily dressed man who won the confidence of three small girls and then carried them to a thicket where he criminally assaulted the youngest.

The victim of the criminal attack was five years old. The other girls were aged 11 and 8, both of Rome, Ga.

The man offered to take them riding, the girls said.

ASSAULT BAIL GRANTED

W. W. Hill was at liberty on $1500 bail today in connection with a charge of criminally assaulting a 14-year-old girl. Bond was fixed by Judge H. B. Abernethy, in County Court of Misdemeanors yesterday. Hill was arrested several days ago by city detectives.

200 ANGRY CITIZENS THREATEN LYNCHING

Courier

Ire of Birmingham Mob Aroused by Story of Woman Who Said Three Whites Attacked Her

11-16-37

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 14—Four white men are in the local jail [illegible] Alvin Hill is in the hospital, following a near-riot which occurred here Monday.

A mob of 500 angry colored citizens, who were told by a sobbing young woman that she had been raped by three white men near the Bradford mines, was dispersed by deputies and State highway patrolmen. The storekeeper, one of the men allegedly accused, is said to have shot Hill in the chest after Hill and five others had blocked his car in which it is said he was trying to escape.

The storekeeper is among those arrested.

Hold B'ham White Man In Attack; Two Freed

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(SNS)—Judge H. B. Abernathy dismissed charges of assault against 2 white men, Roy and Lloyd Isbell of Bradford, last Thursday growing out of charges that the two brothers, in company with a third brother, molested a colored woman October 9, in the little mining town. The brothers had been at liberty under $500 bail.

At the same time the judge ordered the case of Boyd Isbell, the third brother, placed before the Grand Jury for investigation. Boyd was released under $500 bail.

The court continued the case of Clarence Higginbotham, white, 26, whose arrest resulted from ill feeling in the mining community following the incident. Higginbotham is accused of shooting Alvin Hill, young miner of that section who attempted to aid the white man in getting his car out of a ditch on the Sunday following the assault. Hill is in a Birmingham hospital slowly recovering.

Feeling ran high following a report that three white youths, at the point of pistols, had assaulted a colored girl. It brought several cars of deputies from Birmingham and sheriffs from several near-by towns. A mob of nearly 200 men sought the white youths and dispersed only when informed that justice would be done in the case and that the white youths had been placed in jail.

According to reliable reports of the assault, the girl was riding in a car with three young men who stopped to purchase some whiskey at a white store. While one of their number was making a purchase two white men came up and ordered the remaining youths from the car at the point of pistols and then carried the pretty brown-skinned girl into the woods and assaulted her.

Feeling ran high again in the small mining community following release of the two youths last Thursday.

YOUTH MAY TESTIFY IN HIS OWN DEFENSE

Girls Under 12 Accuse Him Of Molesting Them

Birmingham
12-15-37

Gordon Montgomery, 21-year-old Birmingham youth, was expected to take the witness stand in Judge Robert J. Wheeler's court today to deny the accusations of three small girls that he took them into the woods last September and molested them.

Montgomery, son of a hotel owner, is charged in three indictments with carnal knowledge of a girl under 12. The ages of the girls—ranging from five to eight—makes the charge a capital offense, attaches in the solicitor's office said.

Attempting to establish an alibi for Montgomery, defense counsel brought Dan Breeden to the stand. The witness testified he saw Montgomery at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 20th-st and Third-av, s, between noon and 1 p. m. on the day that the incident is alleged to have occurred.

The three little girls each took the witness stand late yesterday and identified Montgomery as "the man in the brown suit" who, they said, took them from East Lake Park in his car to a wooded section on Red Mountain and molested them.

Testimony of one of the girls was interrupted when a sharp exchange of words between Judge Wheeler and Morel Montgomery, defense attorney, resulted in the latter being fined $50 for contempt of court.

The tilt arose when Mr. Montgomery, standing by the witness chair cross-examining one of the child's witnesses, was ordered by Judge Wheeler to take his seat at counsel table.

"I'm running this trial—go have a seat," the judge ordered.

Accused By Girls

GORDON MONTGOMERY

"I know you're running this, but I don't like the way you're doing it," Mr. Montgomery replied as he walked to his seat.

Further exchange of words ensued, then the attorney added:

"I don't know whether your honor is prejudiced in this matter or not. It certainly seems as if you are, the way your honor is trying to conduct this trial."

"Mr. Montgomery, I fine you $50 for contempt of court," Judge Wheeler shot back.

The defense attorney said today he would offer not only the defendant's denial of the charges but also testimony of other witnesses intended to show that the accused youth was not at East Lake Park on the day in question.

"We contend it's a case of mistaken identity," he declared.

Alabama.

Lynchings-1937
Rape by Whites.

5795

Birmingham, Ala. Post
October 11, 1937

THREE HELD IN ATTACK REPORT

Negro Wounded As Result Of Alleged Threat To Lynch White Men

Tension which followed threats by a mob of Negroes to lynch three white men for an alleged attempt to criminally assault a Negro woman is believed to have led to the shooting of a Negro near Bradford Mines in the northern part of the county late yesterday.

Alvin Hill "in self-defense."

Higginbotham was quoted as saying that three white men came to his place Saturday night and forced a Negro woman into the woods nearby at the point of a pistol while one of the woman's four male companions was inside his place.

Forced Into Ditch

The Negro woman charged the white men attempted to assault her, and a group of Negroes formed, threatening to lynch the white men if they were not arrested.

While tension from the incident still pervaded the countryside, Higginbotham charged that four Negroes in an auto forced his car from the highway into a ditch yesterday afternoon and that Hill, one of the Negroes, "reached for his hip pocket like he was going to shoot."

Hill charged that Higginbotham shot him twice with a 45 caliber pistol when he and his four companions offered to help him get his car out of the ditch. Hill was in a serious condition in Norwood Hospital today.

Three Arrested

Lloyd Isbell, 26, Roy Isbell, 25, and Boyd Isbell, 22, brothers, of Blount County, were the men arrested on charges of assault with intent to ravish and lodged in County Jail in connection with the alleged attempted assault on the woman.

When Higginbotham surrendered, five hours after the shooting, he said that when the Negroes ran his car into the ditch, he was afraid they were going to shoot him. He was charged with assault with intent to murder.

Approximately 150 Negroes assembled near the place where the attempted assault was said to have occurred, according to F. L. Brittain, special police officer of the Alabama By-Prodducts Corp., operators of the mines.

Race Clash Flares At Bradford Mines

Four White Men Jailed; Negro Wounded

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Four white men were held in jail tonight and a negro lay wounded in a hospital, the results of a near riot and charges three white men assaulted a negro woman near Bradford Mines early today.

Three of the men were charged with attempted assault and the other with assault with intent to murder in the wounding of the negro, Alvin Hill, who was shot in the chest with a pistol. The man arrested in the shooting is a Bradford storekeeper and the others live in the mining camp.

Deputy Sheriff C. B. Jones said today a number of deputies and State highway patrolmen went to Bradford when an angry mob of negroes gathered after the woman said she was attacked. He said a physician who examined the woman said she had not been attacked.

Chief Deputy Sheriff C. E. McCoombs said he was told by witnesses that the storekeeper shot the negro after Hill and five other negroes blocked his car and Hill advanced on the white man with a pistol.

McCoombs said he was told the six negroes had chased the man and threatened him. Deputies said the storekeeper and several negroes were in an altercation in the white man's store after the crowd of negroes gathered early today.

There were about 200 negroes in the mob, but most of them had dispersed when the deputies arrived at the mining camp. The storekeeper surrendered to officers tonight. The others were arrested today.

Officers who went to Bradford when Hill was shot late today said there were no other evidences of trouble.

Lynchings-1937
6
Rape by Whites.

Florida.

5796

Fla. Jails White Man for Attack on Negro Woman

BRISTOL, Fla. (CNA — A young white man was arrested here this week, charged with criminally assaulting a Negro woman.

Deputy Sheriff H. H. Harroll said the man gave his name as Sy Galvin of Jersey City, N. J., who is employed at a CCC camp near Bristol was arrested in Jacksonville and brought to Bristol on a warrant issued on information furnished by the woman who was assaulted. Her name was not made public.

He is now being held in the Liberty County jail. A preliminary hearing is being arranged to decide whether he shall be held for the October grand jury or freed. No bond has been set.

The Negro citizens of Bristol and the nearby countryside are intensely interested in the case.

Deputy Sheriff Harrel said he had never known of a similar case against a white man in this section of the country.

Lynchings-1937
Rape by Whites.

General.

5797

News Stories Disclose South's "High Culture"

SEEK SIX WHITE YOUTHS FOR ATTACK ON FARM GIRL

CHEHAW, S. C., Aug. 5—(Special)—County authorities are still searching for six white youths who late Tuesday afternoon took a 15-year-old farm girl to ride in an automobile, assaulted her and left her beside a road near her home. The victim of the mass attack is still under treatment by physicians.

According to the account of what occurred, that was given by the girl to officers, the youths, none of whom she knew, offered her a ride in their car, and the attacks occurred after they had driven about 20 miles into the country. They then ordered her to get out of the automobile and drove off leaving her there, where she was soon found and brought home by a passing motorist, accompanied by her parents who searched for her.

ARRESTED WITH CRIMINAL ATTACK ON SISTER-IN-LAW

GREENUP, Ky., Aug. 5—(Special)—Charged with criminally attacking his 14-year-old sister-in-law, Grace Blanton, 20, white [illegible] is being held without bond to await action of the grand jury which will convene in September.

After he had been ordered held by County Judge J. K. Sheppard, and was being taken to jail by a deputy sheriff, Blanton squirmed out of the officer's grasp and, running at top speed to the Little Sandy River, with the deputy firing at him, plunged into the stream, swam across and disappeared in the woods bordering the stream.

He was later found hiding in the top of a large tree and lynched in the crowd.

WHITE FATHER CONVICTED OF ENSLAVING DAUGHTERS

MIAMI, Fla., Aug 5—(Special)—Convicted of incest for immoral relations with his own daughters, aged 13 and 16, respectively, and also of holding them in virtual white slavery, forcing them to submit to improper relations with other men for which he collected a small fee, Cuthbert Cogdill, 53, white barber, has been sentenced to 50 years in the penitentiary. Codgill pleaded guilty to all charges.

Disregarding the father's plea for mercy, Judge Ben C. Willard of the Criminal Court, declared in passing sentence that in his judgment the longest Cogdill remains in prison the better off both he and society will be.

Why Don't Lynch Mobs "Throw Some Parties" To Protect Children?

Bond Set At $5,000

COOKEVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 14—(Special)—Following a habeas corpus hearing held here Tuesday, Judge O. K. Holladay set bond for Hal Head, 39, a white man charged with criminal assault, at $5,000.

Head is alleged to have criminally attacked an 11-year-old white girl in the Lickfork community of Jackson county, and in default of bond will be held in jail pending grand jury action.

Even The Little Children

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 14—(Special)—Floyd

Two Men Attack Girl

LENOIR, N. C., Oct. 14—(Special)—In a warrant sworn out here by Lula Belle Smith, 16, charges that they attempted to criminally assault her have been brought against James Beach and Franzlie Bush, both members of colored white families.

19, white Chesterfield county youth is being held in the Henrico county jail on a charge of attempting to criminally assault and beating into unconsciousness, a three-year-old white girl after dragging her into a wooded swamp. According to authorities, Smith confessed to beating the child being unable to explain why he had done so, but denied attempting to attack her.

The opinion was expressed by investigators, that from the nature of the victim's injuries, she had apparently been picked up by the feet and her head and body beaten against a tree. Her attending physician reported the child had sustained an injury to her spine, a broken cheekbone and collarbone, and that her face and body bore many cuts and bruises, but that she had not been criminally assulted.

The warrant charges that the two youths picked up the young girl in an automobile while she was on her way home from school, promising to take her to her residence, but instead drove far out in the country on a lonely road where while one of them held her, the other attempted to commit the attack. Escaping from them she made her way home afoot, reported what had occurred to her parents, and the swearing out of the warrant followed. Bush and Beach have disappeared.

Lynchings-1937
Rape by Whites.

Georgia.

5798

TWO YOUNG GIRLS ATTACKED BY MAN

Telegraph

Seven-Year-Old White Child and Negro, 9, Are Assaulted in Waycross

2-18-37

WAYCROSS, Ga., Feb. 17 (AP)—A 7-year-old white girl was reported in serious condition tonight at a hospital here from an assault by an unidentified white man.

Sheriff Henry J. Sweat said the attack was the seccnd reported to his office within an hour. He said a 9-year-old Negro girl was attacked in another part of town and that both apparently were victims of the same man.

Sweat and Chief of Police Arthur Yawn said they were following clues which indicated an early arrest.

The officers said the girls told them they were lured into a small truck by a driver who promised to take them home.

WHITE TENANT FARMER HELD AS ATTACKER

Atlanta Journal

4-3-37

DUBLIN, Ga., July 1—(Special)—Silvey Motes, white tenant farmer, is being held in the Johnson County jail on a charge of criminally assaulting a 12-year-old white girl. Motes was committed to jail following a hearing before Justice R. R. Martin, in Wrightsville, and will be prosecuted by Solicitor General J. Roy Rowland. The accused who lives with his brother near Adrian, will be defended by the law firm of Claxton and Claxton.

Besides the charge of criminally assaulting the child, it was further alleged in the testimony submitted, that the victim, who spent two months in a hospital following the attack, contracted a venereal disease from her assailant as a further result of it. Though the alleged assault took place some time ago, charges have just been brought against Motes, who was bound over without bail to await action by the grand jury.

TWO MEN ARE ACCUSED OF CRIMINAL ASSAULT

Charged with assault and battery and a criminal atack on a 15-year-old East Point girl, a Fort McPherson soldier and a civilian were in [illegible] yesterday.

Constitution

Warrants for the arrest of R. [illegible] Blinn, of Fort McPherson, and Thurman Strickland, of 13[illegible] Campbellton road, were issued yesterday morning by Justice of the Peace Dan Thompson, of East Point. The men are being held under $5,000 bond each.

The girl went riding with the two men Saturday night, according to Judge Thompson, and was not returned to her home until Monday morning, following the alleged attack at a tourist camp on Jackson lake in Butts county.

Preliminary trials for the men will be given any time they request it, the judge said. If the suspects are held for the grand jury, the cases will be referred to the Butts county circuit.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Rape by Whites.

Illinois.

5799

WHITE MAN ADMITS
ASSAULT CHARGED BY COPS TO 'NEGRO'

Communist News Agency
9-27-37 ------

CHICAGO, Sept.--(CNA)- One of a number of assaults on white women, attributed by Chicago police to "an unidentified Negro" was solved this week with the police announcement that Thomas McCall, white business man, had confessed he was the brick-carrying invader who attacked Virginia Austin, 25-year-old artist and scuptor of New York City, Aug. 15, in her room at a hotel here.

New York, N.Y.

Seven white Chicago women have been beaten with bricks in hotels and hospitals in the last year and a half. In each case, the police, failing to solve the crimes, deliberately threw suspicion on the Negro people. The attack on Miss Austin was the second such in the same hotel. On Sept. 25, 1936, Alda Deery, 25, an actress, was beaten there.

McCall has lived at the hotel for five years. A business man, he was never under police suspicion until last Saturday after Natalie Ortuso, 16, reported seeing a man on the fire escape outside her window. Her description of the prowler led to McCalls arrest, identification and confession.

Lynchings—1937
6
Rape by Whites.

New York

5800

BROOKLYN MOB BEATS BROTHER OF ATTACKER"

Mirror
Tabloid
News

Girl, Nine, Testifies Against Employee in Neighborhood

12-11-37

Hell broke loose in Brooklyn last week when a nineteen-year-old white youth allegedly criminally attacked a five-year-old girl. Residents of the community, wrapped in a white heat over the atrocity, took the law into their own hands and beat the accused man's brother within an inch of his life.

Anna Elizabeth Sampson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sampson, 365 Cumberland avenue, Brooklyn, was allegedly lured into a dark closet of a stationery store located at 730 Fulton street, last Monday by Peter Kanellakis, with a promise of a stick of candy.

Nothing more vile ever came into little Anna's life. Her family, consisting of her mother and father, two brothers and a sister, are on relief and there is no chance for luxury in the dark, musty room where they all must eat and sleep.

Mother Tells Story.

And so she followed Peter Kanellakis to the closet. What happened in the closet is best told by the child's mother, in whose eyes still lurks fear engendered by Anna's narrow escape with her life, and a great, encompassing anger:

"My sister-in-law sent Anna to the store to get some cigarettes," she told the Amsterdam News reporter Monday. "Although she stayed longer than she should, I did not go to look for her because I believed that at any moment she would return.

"When she finally came, she was crying. I asked her what the trouble was and she told me, 'The candy store man gave me some candy and carried me in the closet and——.'

"I carried Anna back to the candy store," Mrs. Sampson continued, "and she identified the man. I asked him what he did to my child. He answered, 'I didn't do anything to her.' But when I again asked Anna, she repeated the same story she had already told me. When I took her back home, I called the police."

By the time the police and an ambulance from the Jewish Hospital, Classon avenue and St. Mark's place, arrived on the scene, news of the dastardly crime had spread like wildfire throughout the neighborhood, which is predominantly Negro, and an angry, seething mob of approximately 500 persons gathered before the rooming house where the Sampsons live.

Threaten Assailant.

The physician who first examined little Anna declared that rape had been attempted. When the crowd collected before the house heard his diagnosis, the cry went up:

"It's rape! Let's get that dirty —— and give him what he deserves."

12-11-37

The police escorted the child and her parents to the store and asked Anna to identify the man who attacked her. Unhesitatingly, she pointed out Peter Kannelakis, whose father owns the store, and also showed the officers the closet where the alleged crime was committed.

It was then, only according to Mrs. Sampson, that the youth said:

"I did it."

The indignation of the mob, trying to push its way into the small store, rose to a fever pitch and police had their hands full attempting to keep them back with drawn guns.

More police quickly appeared, forming a cordon around Kannelakis to protect him from the angry crowd.

Released in $1,000 Bail.

"Let us to him," they cried. "We'll tear him to pieces."

Detective Dyer Shield placed the accused man under arrest and rushed him to the Eighty-eighth Precinct, Sixth avenue and Bergen street, Brooklyn. He was arraigned the following morning on a criminal assault charge in Magistrates Court, Forty-third street and Fourth avenue, at which time he was released under $1,000 bail for a hearing in the same court on Thursday, December 9.

The Children's Aid Society, Boerum place and Schemerhorn street, becoming interested in the case, sent a woman physician to examine little Anna last Tuesday. Her verdict was that the child was suffering from "internal bruises."

Overnight the wrath of the neighborhood was almost out of control. All over the streets could be heard, "He doesn't deserve to live. He should be killed."

Although the police, fearing violence, had closed the stationery store the preceding evening, it was opened the following day by Gus Kannelakis, brother of the accused youth. He looks startlingly like Peter and it was soon spread through the neighborhood that Peter was in the store.

Attack Brother.

Incensed by the report that Anna's asailant had been released on bail, a mob of men and women caught the brother as he was returning to the store after eating in a Greek restaurant across the street and beat him unmercifully. When he was finally rescued from his attackers, he was rushed to Cumberland Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. He was still in a critical condition at press time.

Although the Amsterdam News learned from reliable sources that officials were "unable" to pin the crime on Peter alone, George Boston, 32, of 417 Carlton avenue, was placed under arrest by Detective Cohen of the Eighty-eighth Precinct, and charged with felonious assault.

Officials, Papers Quiet.

Miss Ethel Wright, who also lives at the same address, told the police that she and two other witnesses "could prove George's innocence."

At the Eighty-eighth Precinct, officials were singularly quiet about the case and there seems to be an attempt to squelch the story, since none of the Brooklyn daily papers carried an account of the alleged rape, although it is their policy to play up seduction cases involving Negroes.

The Sampsons, who are on relief, live under crowded conditions. The parents and the four children, who are, besides Anna, Jacqueline, 3; George, Jr., 7, and Reginald, 10; live in one crowded room, where all six sleep in two beds. The family uses a community kitchen with other tenants of the house.

COLORED GIRL IS VICTIM IN CASE

Pittsburgh Courier
12-11-37

Brooklyn Police Department To Protect White Youth With Heavy Guard When Case Is Tried — Neighbors Angry.

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
Staff Correspondent

BROOKLYN, Dec. 9— The Police Department is taking no chances of having a riot on its hands and will use a heavy guard when Peter Kanellakas, a 19 year old white youth, is arraigned Thursday morning in the ninth district Magistrate Court, charged with raping a four year old colored girl.

Police had to resort to drawn guns on November 29 in rescuing Kanellakas from a candy store at 730 Fulton street, where he was cornered by a mixed mob shortly after the alleged attack. Two days later another mob waylaid a brother of the accussed, George Kanellakas, and beat him up severely, fracturing his skull. A colored defendant, George Boston, of 417 Carlton avenue, was arrested in this case.

According to Mrs. Jeannette Sampson, of 365 Cumberland street, her daughter went to the candy store to buy some candy and was lured to the rear of the establishment by the accused whose father owns the place. A grandmother of the child, Mrs. Sarah Sampson was returning from relief bureau in company with the child's father, George Sampson, when the little victim ran to them crying. She complained of a stomach ache and revealed the assault upon further questioning.

The child was taken back to the store where she immediately identified Peter Kanellakas. Word spread quickly around the neighborhood, and by the time police arrived a huge mob had surrounded the store in which Kanellakas had barricaded himself. Some were trying to force the door. As Kanellakas was brought out several persons tried to reach him and police were forced to draw their guns.

Examination by doctors revealed that the child was ruptured internaly. The Welfare Society is pressing the case. Inasmuch as the white dailies have played up all similar cases in which a Negro was accused, there has been much surprise at the fact that no mention has been made of the present case. On Monday an irate Brooklynite, Peter Jackson, sent the following telegram to the Daily News and Evening Journal:

"Peter Kanellakas, 19, white, will be tried for rape in Ninth District Magistrate Court on Thursday. His victim was a four year old colored girl. Colored residents of Brooklyn and Harlem very much incensed. You are expected to play up this case as you do all similar cases involving Negroes."

Lynchings - 1937
6
Rape by Whites.

Texas.

5801

A Victim Of White Lust, Mind And Health Broken

Broken in body, health and mind, an emaciated, trembling, limping shadow of her former self, she stands a living monument to the unbridled and condoned lust of the white youth in Texas. Miss Nannie Lee Harrison was a comely, dark brown skinned girl with large soulful eyes, slender and a little better than medium height, returning from a visit to her mother at Navasota to her school at Richards, the night five white CCC boys passed the car she and two boys were in, stopped, rushed up, got out of their car and dragged her to the side of the road and ravaged her for two and a half hours; while they took turns keeping the boys off.

The daily papers of the state were as quiet as the tomb about this brutal abuse of the rights and person of an innocent, helpless Negro girl, who committed no offense except being defenseless on the public highway. There was a trial at which the white doctor is said to have testified that the girl had been abused as alleged. The boys told a consistent story of intimidation and abuse. The girl's condition clinched the case against the boys. Despite the activity of the White Men's Union, which had resurrected itself to see that no White man suffers for ravaging a "black gal," [illegible] when some of them were cut for punishment. But nary a word did our good daily press carry across its front page in scare heads about the burly brutes, who brutally attacked this young girl. So far as this case was concerned the daily papers were still speechless.

When Miss Harrison was brought back from Richards the next day the white women of the community were furious and began to excoriate the very devil. But the White Man's union took over and escorted the "good women" out of town.

Believe it or not, with evidence piled high against them and with the boys virtually admitting every sordid detail, they were let off at the district trial with suspended five-year sentences. After the hung jury at the first trial the case had been moved to Leon County. But reporters from the dailies couldn't read the record over there either so that this heinous crime was left a dark secret in Texas's house of crime.

Now turn back the pages of history a few years and see what happened when a Negro was convicted of raping a white woman in a college town twenty-eight miles from the scene of Miss Harrison's terrible experience. With workman-like efficiency the Negro was burned in the nice big electric chair at Huntsville. Then the dailies were tempestuously vociferous with "Black brute" et cetera.

But when these pale faced fiends were on trial for raping a dark skinned girl with the plain stamp of Africa upon her, not even the prosecutor said anything about the depravity of white men, who loved so well the lips of a black girl. One wonders whether there is any real fight against social equality. Here were white men voluntarily seeking the lips of a black girl and a whole community and the daily papers conspiring to back it up by a white-wash.

Miss Harrison is a talented musician and an accomplished mathematician. She is a graduate of Mary Allen Seminary and had taken special courses at Prairie View. She is courageously trying to forget the hell she experienced with there in the woods at the hands of these CCC boys. Physically she is better and can move about. Mentally and spiritually she is probably scarred for life. Oh, yes, the federal government, which might have punished the boys as members of the CCC, made haste and discharged them two days after the incident! Miss Harrison ought enjoy singing "America, my America."

GIRL ACCUSES TWO YOUTHS OF ATTACK

Says They Took Her Away From Two Escorts

By United Press.

MARSHALL, Tex., Sept. 8.—Police reported today they were holding two 17-year-old youths until a special grand jury session reports charges that they kidnaped and criminally assaulted a Shreveport, La., girl.

9-8-37

The boys, who gave their names as Jack Jett of Atlanta, Tex., and Frank Hill of Shreveport, reportedly forced the girl, whose name was withheld, from her own car in which she was riding with two other Shreveport youths, Harold Slovall and Kenneth Eustis.

According to police, the girl said she was driven into Texas and assaulted several times. Officers said an unknown oil man rescued her and reported that she was in a state of undress.

The boys, who fled, were captured shortly after by Texas officers.

Lynchings-1937
Rape by Whites.

Virginia

5802

White Boy, 19, Confesses That He Raped Va. Child

RICHMOND, Va.—[illegible] Smith, 19, white, accused a colored man of the criminal assault of 3-year-old Jean Farmer, whose badly bruised and [illegible] body was found on a [illegible] bank in the deep woods [illegible] Chesterfield County, Sept. 30. After [illegible] questioning by police, Smith, who had pictures of nude women tatooed on his [illegible], confessed that he attacked the child while she played in the woods with her playmate of her [illegible].

Smith first told police that he saw a colored man in the woods in close proximity to where the girl was found and that the colored man committed the crime. The little child, a blonde, [illegible] Virginia, was found with her skull fractured in two or three places, her body bore several other marks of violence. The attack marked the tenth sex crime here, involving children within the last few weeks.

Physicians say that if little Jean recovers, she will probably [illegible] as both of her eye[illegible]

Lynchings- 1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

General Reports, by Records and Research Department.

5812

Cordele, Ga. Dispatch
October 18, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
October 21, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 Negro.

Danville, Va., Bee
October 15, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Daily Times
October 19, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 Negro.

Oneonta, Ala., Democrat
October 21, 1937

There were 137,155 white school children being transported in buses to and from school in 413 cities in 1936. Of this number 97,- are in the elementary grades and 40,256 are in the high school grades. The number of Negroes transported was 2,500.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
October 18, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 Negro.

Greenville, N. C.—Reflector
October 16, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

Mobile, Ala., Register
October 15, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

Tallahassee, Fla. Democrat
October 5, 1937

EIGHTH THIS YEAR

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP)—Lynching of a negro near Milton, Fla. was the eighth such occurrence in the south during 1937, records of Tuskegee Institute revealed.

Institute records listed two previous lynchings in Florida, two in Mississippi, and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

BIRMINGHAM ALA. AGE-HERALD
OCT. 5, 1937 021

LYNCHING IS EIGHTH

Death Of Negro In Florida Runs Up Southern Total

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 4—(AP)—Lynching of a Negro near Milton, Fla., Sunday night was the eighth such occurrence in the South during 1937, records of Tuskegee Institute revealed Monday.

Institute records listed two previous lynchings in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

Dyersburg, Tenn. Gazette
October 20, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

McComb, Miss. Enterprise
October 21, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

Anniston, Ala. Star
November 18, 1937

LYNCH LAW IS DISAPPEARING FROM AMERICA

Tuskegee Institute Records Show Rapid Decrease In Mob Deaths

By THOMAS A. DOZIER
United Press Staff Correspondent

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Nov. 18—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing in America, records at Tuskegee Institute today showed.

While Congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted Negro college here revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil War.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure of 20 slain.

Figures kept by the Department of Research and Records at the Negro college since 1882 showed that lynchings have steadily declined during the past 55 years.

The statistics also showed that 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—were lynched during this period.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of Negroes reached their height in the Reconstruction period which followed the Civil War. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs who sought to take justice in their own hands.

Of these, 160 were Negroes and 51 were whites.

A total of 42 states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, in the heart of the Deep South, which reported 563 deaths.

Georgia reported 515; Texas, 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343, and Arkansas, 286.

In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey, 1, and Delaware, 1. Several Western states, where lynching for horse-stealing was prevalent, reported many more.

"Records show that in 55 years, only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death for the charge of rape," Work said.

"There were 1,190 persons—97 whites and 1,093 Negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,482 killings for other crimes, thus refuting the assertion that a majority of lynchings are for rape."

Johnson City, Tenn., Press
October 22, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

OFFICERS WINNING FIGHT TO WIPE OUT CRIME OF LYNCHING

Birmingham, Ala.

Congress Battles Over Issue, But Mob Deaths Have Almost Disappeared From America In Last 31 Years —Only Seven So Far In 1937

While Congress battled over an anti-lynching bill today records of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama Negro college, disclosed lynching almost has reached the vanishing point in the United States.

Mobs hung but eight persons in 1936 and seven so far in 1937 compared with 13,000 who were murdered and 36,000 killed by automobiles over the nation.

Since 1882, the first year records were kept, a total of 4672 persons—1289 white persons and 3383 Negroes—have been lynched in the United States.

Peak of Terrorism

Night-riding mobs reached the peak of their terrorism during the period just after the Civil War, killing 776 persons, 475 white persons and 301 Negroes, up until 1886. From then until 1896, 548 white persons, and 1035 Negroes were hanged and shot or burned. From 1897 to 1906 548 white persons and 1035 Negroes were lynched. In the 31 years since then, only 1283 persons were lynched.

As the number of lynchings dropped, the ratio of persons prevented from being lynched rose steadily until 1922.

In 1914, peace officers prevented 24 mob-deaths. In 1921, they stopped 108, in 1922, 114, and in 1923 saved 56. Since then the number of prevented lynchings has dropped almost as fast as the lynchings, totaling 79 in 1936. Since 1914, 1298 lynchings have been prevented.

Contention Refuted

Records show," said Monroe N. Work, director of research at Tuskegee Institute, "that in the 55 years from 1882 to 1937, only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death by mobs for the charge of criminal attack.

"There were 1190 persons, 97 white persons and 1093 Negroes, put to death on that charge, compared with 3482 killed for other crimes, thus refuting the charge the majority of lynchings are for the crime of criminal attack.

"An investigation into causes of lynchings show that over 10 per cent of the Negroes lynched during the period were for such minor offenses as being a witness, writing insulting notes, improper conduct, insisting on eating in a restaurant when refused service, strike breaking, boasting, vagrancy, insisting on voting, and discussing a lynching."

Cause for Lynchings

During the 55-year period, 1921 persons were lynched for committing homicides, 198 for felonious assault, 908 for criminal assault, 282 for attempted criminal assault, 227 for robbery, 81 for insulting white persons, and 1055 for all other causes.

Records of the institute show that methods of lynchings have changed much with the passing years. In the '90's, many victims were burned alive, but few such instances have occurred in the last 15 years.

Last year's most bizarre death occurred in Marianna, Fla., when townspeople were aroused over the assault and slaying of a 15-year-old girl, whose body was buried in a pigsty.

Lynching Advertised

After the Negro's arrest and confession, a lynching was advertised in the local newspaper for two days. Officers fled with the Negro to Pensacola and from there to Brewton, Ala. The mob, trailing the sheriff in automobiles, stormed the Brewton Jail and took the Negro back to Marianna.

There he was shot and stabbed and hanged from a tree on the spot where the crime occurred, then taken into Marianna, where his body was stretched from a tree on the Courthouse lawn.

In 1935, 20 persons were lynched eight less than in 1937, and 93 instances where law officers were successful in preventing lynchings.

Nine in the North

Nine of the total were in Northern and Western states and 44 in Southern communities. Of the total only six were charged with assault or attempted assault.

Only one lynching has occurred in Alabama during either the first or second administration of Governor Graves. When that occurred, the governor ordered impeachment proceedings brought against the sheriff of Henry County for neglect of duty—believed to be the first time in history a Southern governor has taken such action.

The majority of mob deaths occurred in eight states of the Deep South, with Alabama standing fifth, having 343, of which 296 were Negroes and 47 whites.

Six States Have None

Mississippi had the highest total, 563, with 522 Negroes and 41 whites. Georgia was next with 515, 478 Negroes and 37 whites. Texas was third with 488, 345 Negroes and 143 white; while Florida had 272, of which 248 were Negroes, Arkansas 285 with 226 Negroes; Louisiana, 389 with 333 Negroes, and Tennessee, 247, with 200 Negroes and 47 white.

A total of 42 states report lynchings during the period, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticutt reported none.

New York had two, Arizona 29, all white persons, Delaware one, Oregon 21, California 43, Colorado, Idaho 20, Illinois 31, Indiana 47, Iowa 19, Kansas 54, Kentucky 205, Louisiana 389, Maryland 29, Michigan eight, Minnesota nine. Missouri 121, Montana 84, Nebraska 57, Nevada six, New Jersey one, New Mexico 36, North Carolina 98, North Dakota 16, Ohio 26, Oklahoma 123, Pennsylvania eight, South Carolina eight, South Dakota 27, Utah eight, Virginia 99, Washington 26, West Virginia 49, Wisconsin six, Wyoming 85.

Lynchings—1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. — June

5803

TOLEDO OHIO MORNING TIMES
WEDNESDAY JULY 7 1937

Lynchings Should Stop

F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute sends out semi-annually statistics of lynchings.

His report, for the first six months of this year, shows there were four lynchings, two less than in the same period last year.

President Patterson's interest in the control of lynchings is self-evident. All four this year were colored men. And Tuskegee is the finest school in the world for the education of the colored race.

Most lynchings occur in the south where the colored man is not always allowed his constitutional rights, which include trial by jury.

There should be no lynchings in a country as civilized as this. We have courts to satisfy justice. And they usually do the same things as the mobs do, but they do not take a man's life until it has been proved beyond doubt that he is guilty of the crime.

There will be lynchings so long as men (and women, for women have been present at some of the most spectacular lynchings) do not control their emotions.

Those who would hang a colored man for a crime of which they are not sure he is guilty should remember that the white men are responsible for the colored man being here. They brought him; he did not come alone, nor did he ask to come.

The courts in the north do their work when racial feeling runs high. And they can do their work in the south as well.

ALBERTVILLE, ALA., BANNER
JULY 8, 1937 J12

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST HALF OF 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., July 3.—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number (6) for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1;

Gulfport, Miss. Herald
July 7, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., July y6.—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Picayune, Miss. Item
July 8, 1937

Lynching Record

Records complied at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research show that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

ONEIDA, TENN., NEWS
JULY 9, 1937 J15

LYNCHING RECORD IN FIRST HALF OF YEAR

Tuskegee Reports Four Lynchings During Past 6 Months

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months in 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, three; rape, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Georgia one; Mississippi, 2.

TUSKEGEE ALA. NEWS
JULY 8, 1937 J15

Lynching Record For The First Six Months Of 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

F. D. PATTERSON.
President.

ROCHESTER N Y DEMO CHRON
THURSDAY JULY 15 1937

Tuskegee President Notes Lynch Facts

Editor Democrat and Chronicle:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

F. D. PATTERSON.
Tuskegee Institute,
Alabama.

[redacted]

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

Editor Bristol Press:-

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President.

COVINGTON TENN. LEADER (wk)
JULY 8, 1937 J15

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, three; rape, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two.

Blakeley, Ga., News
July 15, 1937

STATISTICS GIVEN ON LYNCHINGS FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1937

Statistics compiled by F. D. Patterson, President of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., show that the lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937 totaled four, the same number as for the first six months of both 1935 and 1936, and two less than for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Rosedale, Miss. Democrat
July 8, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST 6 MONTHS IN 1937

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. Patterson, Pres.

Lynchings In First Half of 1937

Tuskegee july 22(C)F. D. Patterson has reported there were four lynchings during the first [illegible] all being colored. Offenses charged were ; murder [illegible] rape; states where lynchings occured were Mississippi ,2: Alabama, [illegible]

San Marcos [illegible], TEX., RECORD
JULY 9, 1837 J20

Four Lynchings Record For Six Months of 1937

According to the records kept by the Tuskegee Institute, negro university of Alabama, there were four lynchings in the United States the first six months of 1937, exactly the same number as was recorded last year. This was two less than the same period in 1934.

All the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were murder, 3; rape, 1.

COLUMBIANA ALA. REPORTER
JULY 15, 1937 J21

Lynching Record For First Six Months 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936. and 2 less than the number 6 for for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi 2

WICHITA FALLS, TEX., TIMES
JULY 7, 1937 J16

THIS YEAR'S LYNCHINGS

There were only four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937, according to records compiled by Tuskegee Institute. One each in Alabama and Georgia, two in Mississippi, make up the total. The number is about as small as has ever been recorded in a like period, small enough to give weight to the view that public sentiment in the South is making a federal anti-lynching law unnecessary. There is no reason to believe, however, that congress will give heed to the figures. Passage of an anti-lynching law has become a certainty, no matter how good a record may be made. The South has delayed too long in dealing with mob-murders, and it may as well reconcile itself to seeing a federal law passed.

MINERAL WELLS, TEX., [illegible]
JULY 8, 1937 J20

Four Lynchings Reported

The Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, a school for Negro young men and women, each six-months reports through its research department the number of lynchings in the United States. The report for the first six-months of 1937 reached the Index today and lists four lynchings for the six-month period, all Negroes, three for murder and one for rape. There was one each in Alabama and Georgia and two in Mississippi. F. D. Patterson, colored, is president of the Institute.

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - June

5804

FOUR ARE LYNCHED IN FIRST SIX MONTHS

TUSKEGEE, July 5.—(Special)—Four persons were lynched in the United States in the first six months of 1937, according to a report released by the Department of Research and Records of Tuskegee Institute.

The report stated all the victims were Negroes. Of the number, three were charged with murder and one with rape, the report said. All the lynchings occurred in the South, Alabama and Georgia reporting one victim and Mississippi two, according to the report.

LYNCHING REPORT ISSUED

Tuskegee Department Lists Four Victims During 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5.—(AP)—The department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during the first six months of both 1935 and 1936 the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the south. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

Tuskegee Reports 4 Lynchings For First Six Months

The records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and research show that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Mississippi, 2 Alabama And Georgia, 1 Each

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — According to records compiled at Tuskegee by its department of Records and Research, there were four lynchings in the United States during the first six months in 1937.

The state of Mississippi leads with two lynchings, which reminds the public of the Duck Hill blow torch lynchings of Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjacks" McDaniels on April 12. Alabama is recorded as having one and Georgia, one. This is the same number that were lynched during the first six months of 1935 and 1936. All of the victims were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1; None of the accused were given a trial in the courts.

Miss. Leading Lynch League

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — Four lynchings of colored persons have occurred within the first six months this year, according to records compiled by the college department of research and records, just made public by President F. D. Patterson.

The States in which the mob murders occurred and the number are: Mississippi, 2; Alabama, 1, and Georgia, 1.

The offenses charged were murder, 3, and rape, 1.

4 Lynchings In U. S. First Half Of 1937

TUSKEGEE, ALA., July 4.—(AP)—The department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during first six months of both 1935 and 1936, the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the South. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

Four Lynched In Half Year

Mississippi Kills Two, Alabama and Georgia, One

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE. — Four lynchings occurred during the first six months of 1937, according to records compiled in the department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute.

This is the same number for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

Mississippi leads the lynch toll, with two persons lynched since January. Alabama and Georgia had one each.

The charges against three of the lynch victims were murder. The charge against the fourth was attack. All were Negroes.

Asheboro, N. C Tribune
July 8, 1937

Four Negroes Lynched

Tuskegee Institute reports there were four lynchings in the United States the first half of 1937, exactly the same number as for the corresponding period last year. All were negroes. Three of the mob victims were charged with murder and one with rape. States in which the lynchings occurred were: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; and Mississippi, 2.

Henderson, N. C. Dispatch
July 5, 1937

FOUR LYNCHINGS FIRST HALF 1937

Three Were for Murder and One for Rape, All Negroes, and in Three States

There were four lynchings in the United States during the first half of 1937, according to records compiled by Tuskegee Institute in Alabama and announced in a circular that has been received here. For many years this internationally famous Negro institution has been compiling records on mob violence and making announcement of the statistics each January 1 and July 1.

The four lynchings the past six months were the same in number as for the first half of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the six in the like period in 1934.

All of those lynched were Negroes three of them charged with murder and one with rape. Two of the lynchings occurred in Mississippi and one each in Alabama and Georgia.

Greensboro, N. C., News
July 6, 1937

4 LYNCHED IN 6 MONTHS

Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi Are Guilty States.

Three states were guilty of four lynchings during the first six months of the year according to records kept at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, and announced in a letter to the Daily News by F. D. Patterson, president of the institute.

This number is the same as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, the records show, and two less than for the same period in 1934, when there were six lynchings.

All the persons lynched during the past six months were negroes, three of the victims being charged with murder and one with criminal assault. Alabama and Georgia provided one lynching each and Mississippi two.

DECATUR ALA. DAILY
JULY 5. 1937

FOUR NEGROES ARE LYNCHED IN U. S.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5—(AP)—Four negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and records of Tuskegee institute, negro college.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the institute reported. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
July 13, 1937

LYNCHINGS IN 1937

From the Cochran Journal:

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number for 1934.

All of the persons lynched in 1937 were Negroes, and the offenses were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state were: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

MONTGOMERY, ALA. ADVERT'S'R
JULY 5, 1937

4 Lynchings In U. S. First Half Of 1937

TUSKEGEE, ALA., July 4.—(AP)—The department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during first six months of both 1935 and 1936, the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the South. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

DEL RIO TEX. NEWS
JULY 5, 1937

Four Lynchings Reported During First Half of 1937

During the first six months of this year, four lynchings occurred in the United States, a report from the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama reveals.

All the persons lynched were Negroes and the offenses charged were murder, in three cases, and rape in one.

The states in which the lynchings took place were Alabama, 1, Georgia, 1, and Mississippi, 2.

This is the same number for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number for the first six months of 1934, the report shows.

Columbia, S. C. State
July 13, 1937

The Lynching Record.

We prefer to believe that the South, in one particular, has become definitely more responsive to the influences of civilization. We prefer to believe that public opinion is so crystallizing against mob murders that such opinion is having its influence upon those elements which generally provide the constituents of mobs, as well as upon the agents of governments charged with enforcement of the primary laws of "constituted government." We would rather so believe than to think that the menace of a federal anti-lynching law has acted in restraint of mob activities.

Whatever the reason, the restraint of the lynching element continues to be marked. A report of the lynching record of the whole country for the first six months of this year, as compiled by the department of records and research at the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama, shows that there were four lynchings in the country, up to July 1. This is the same number as for the first half of each of the two preceding years, and two less than the first six months of 1934.

All the lynchings were in the South; Georgia and Alabama contributing one each and Mississippi two. Negroes were the victims. The crimes alleged were: Murder 3; rape 1.

Lincolnton, N. C. Times
July 5, 1937

4 Lynchings During First Six Months of 1937 in U. S. Filed

There were four lynchings in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research. All the persons lynched were negroes and the offenses charged were, murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which the lynching occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

EVERGREEN ALA. COURANT
JULY 8, 1937

FOUR LYNCHINGS RECORDED FIRST HALF OF 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Russellville, Ala., Times
July 8, 1937

Lynching Record Last Six Months

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON
President.

Knoxville, Tenn., Journal
July 5, 1937

FOUR NEGRO LYNCHINGS

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 4 (AP)—The Department of Research and Records of Tuskegee institute, Negro college, today reported there were four Negro lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937. The same number were lynched during the first six months of both 1935 and 1936, the college said.

Ellberton, Ga., Star
July 6, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST MONTHS 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937, there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6, for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Commerce, Ga., News
July 8, 1937

Lynching Record For The First Six Months 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Cherryville, N. C., Eagle
July 8, 1937

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of thepersons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were murder, 3: rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1: Mississippi, 2.

Salisbury, N. C. Post

Four Lynchings in Six Months

Three states were guilty of four lynchings during the first six months of the year according to records kept at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, and announced to a letter to The Salisbury Post by F. D. Patterson, president of the institute.

This number is the same as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, the records show, and two less than for the same period in 1934, when there were six lynchings.

All the persons lynched during the past six months were negroes, three of the victims being charged with murder and one with criminal assault. Alabama and Georgia provided one lynching each and Mississippi two.

Savannah, Ga., Press
July 5, 1937

FOUR ARE LYNCHED IN FIRST SIX MONTHS

All Victims Were Negroes; One Was Killed in Georgia.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5.—Figures compiled as Tuskegee Institute by the department of research show that during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the same period in 1935 and 1936 and two less than in 1935.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; attack, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1 and Mississippi, 2.

Williston, S. C. Way
July 9, 1937

Four Lynchings In U. S. This Year

In the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings in the United States. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1: Mississippi, 2.

Aiken, S. C., Standard & Review
July 7, 1937

Four Lynchings In U. S. This Year

In the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings in the United States. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1: Mississippi, 2.

New Orleans, La., Times-Picayune
July 5, 1937

TUSKEGEE REPORTS 4 LYNCHINGS IN '37

(By The Associated Press)

Tuskegee, Ala., July 4.—The department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during the first six months of both 1935 and 1936, the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the South. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

murder 3; rape 1.
The states in which lynching occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama 1, Georgia 1, Mississippi 2.

Greensboro N. C. Patriot
July 12. 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR

FIRST SIX MONTHS IS 4

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were:

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. — June

5805

LYNCHINGS IN 1937

From the Cochran Journal:

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute by the Department of Records and Research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number for 1934.

All of the persons lynched in 1937 were Negroes, and the offenses were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state were: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Concord, N. C. Tribune
July 9, 1937

WE STAND STILL

The Charlotte News.

Four people were lynched in the United States during the first half of 1937, according to the report of Tuskegee Institute. All of them were lynched in the South, and all of them were black men. Mississippi, as usual, topped the list, with a count of two, one each going to the other most usual participants in such honors, Georgia and Alabama.

According to that, the campaign to eliminate this thing from Southern life has got nowhere in the last two years, since exactly the same number was lynched in the first half of 1936, and the first half of 1935. We have come, indeed, a tremendous long way since the great year of 1893, when more than 200 blacks were hanged, shot, or fried by Southern mobs. But let us not be too complacent about that, for those were greatly troubled days, the days of the battle to bring the Negro under control, and no one can be sure that, given less calm times than these, the thing might not repeat itself all over again.

And let us understand this also; we must not stop with things as they are. This infernal practice is going to be put down. We have our choice: we can wipe it out for ourselves within the frame of the states' rights we defend so warmly, or it will be wiped out for us by the power of the Federal government.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
July 8, 1937

But What Of 1938?

FOUR negroes were lynched in the United States during the first half of 1937, Tuskegee Institute informs us. Compared with several gory years of the past, the 1937 record is excellent, and we pray that the last half will bring even fewer of these atrocities.

Now before Congress, however, is a federal anti-lynching bill and if this measure becomes a law—as many observers are free to predict that it will—we may look for trouble and, we fear, a series of mob outrages the like of which we have not seen in 20 years.

In the first place, the South knows that the anti-lynching bill is sectional, pure and simple, and that it is a rank invasion of states' rights—and the South resents it. The record for 1937 shows how lynchings have waned, but the bitterness born of a federal anti-lynching bill will stir mob violence and racial hatred to a new pitch.

Federal fines assessed against counties in which lynchings occur form the basis of the proposed law, and we wonder how the authors of the bill expect a mob—distinguished by the fact that it holds no respect for constituted authority—to bother about taking a few hundred dollars from the public treasury. As pointed out many times in the past, the people who make up mobs as a rule are not heavy taxpayers, and they have little to lose.

It also goes without saying that there are hundreds of law officers in the South, fearful of the legislation which will punish them by fines and imprisonment if a mob snatches a rapist or murderer from them, who will not be so diligent in their duty as they might be. It would be nothing more than human nature for a sheriff, for instance, not to arrest a criminal if he knew that a mob would, in all probability, snatch the criminal from his hands within a few moments and leave him in the embarrassing predicament of facing a federal jury and a federal prison.

It will be a sad day for the South when and if the Eastern politicians succeed in passing the anti-lynching bill, and we are free to predict that, if the bill does pass this year, the Tuskegee report for the first half of 1938 will be the gloomiest to be issued in many a moon.

4 Lynchings In 6 Mos. Says Prexy Of Tuskegee Inst.

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—According to Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, the institution's Department of Records and Research revealed that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings.

This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, which is two less than the number for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were murder, 3; rape, 1. The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Cordele, Ga. Dispatch
July 18, 1937

Whatever the reason, the restraint of the lynching element continues to be marked. A report of the lynching record of the whole country for the first six months of this year, as compiled by the department of records and research at the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama, shows that there were four lynchings in the country, up to July 1. This is the same number as for the first half of each of the two preceding years, and two less than the first six months of 1934—The Columbia Record.

DENVER COLO. RECORD-STOCKMAN
JULY 6, 1937 J16

FOUR LYNCHED IN 1937

Four lynchings were recorded in this country during the first six months of 1937, according to figures announced Monday by the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. Mississippi led with two, while Alabama and Georgia each recorded one. All four victims were Negroes.

Duluth, Minn., Herald
TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1937

The Lynching Record

President F. T. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, has issued the institute's report on lynchings for the first half of this year. There were four of these mob murders, the same number as in the first six months of 1936 and of 1935. In the first half of 1934 there were six lynchings. All of the victims were Negroes. One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi.

Apparently all the discussion brough forth by the various lynching bills debated in congress since January has neither increased nor decreased the number of lynchings. As long as the lynchings continue, so will the agitation for an anti-lynching law with teeth in it.

MANHATTAN, KAS., CHRONICLE
JULY 8, 1937 J17

The Lynching Record.

There was no improvement in the country's lynching record for the first half of the present year, according to the records compiled by Tuskegee Institute. Four victims met death at the hands of mobs in the last six months. This is the same as the number for the first half of last year and for the first half of 1935. It is two under the record for the first half of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. Three were accused of murder and one of rape. Mississippi led with two of the lynchings and Alabama and Georgia had one each.

There is little to justify encouragement in the record. There has been no improvement, as the figures show. The only ray of sunshine in the gloomy lynching situation is that, with the turmoil that has been in evidence over the country, there was no greater tendency toward the formation of mobs. Decency and the law just held their own.—Pittsburg Sun.

KANSAS CITY
SAN ANTONIO TEX. NEWS
JULY 6, 1937 J15

Four Lynchings Record For Six Months of 1937

According to the records kept by the Tuskegee Institute, negro university of Alabama, there were four lynchings in the United States the first six months of 1937, exactly the same number as was recorded last year. This was two less than the same period in 1934.

All the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

QUINCY ILL. Record (whly)
THURS JULY 8 1937 WEEKLY

ager of the local branch of th Chicago Motor club, and Ray Va Wyk, formerly of Quincy and no of Mt. Sterling.

Mrs. Johannah Recksieck, wh had lived her ll her life and ha been in ill h th for three years died Tuesday morning, July 6, h her home, 715 South Seventeent street. She was born in Quincy h 1859 and was married to Henr Recksieck in 1880. They cele brated their golden wedding an niversary in 1930. Surviving ar the husband, three sons, a daugh ter, seven grandchildren, on great-grandchild and severa nephews and nieces.

William Hokamp, Sr., who fo a number of years was a trun maker, employed by the old Gen City Trunk company, died in th home of his niece, Miss Fred Stoermer, 432 North Twelfth street Sunday afternoon July

SAN ANGELO, TEX., STANDARD
JULY 6, 1937 J16

LYNCHING RECORD

There were four lynchings for the first six months of this year, according to the records compiled by the Tuskegee Institute. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934. All lynched were negroes, and the offenses charged were murder one, rape three.

Alabama rated one, Georgia one and Mississippi two.

Jess Sweetwater, Athens, Texas, sheriff, took off his gun and told a mob that he would get rough if need be to protect a negro suspect in a revolting crime. The mob muttered and dispersed. The lynching record might be considerably less if there were more officials who were as devoted to upholding the honor of the law and who had the backbone that this Texan seems to have.

PITTSBURG, KAS., SUN
JULY 6, 1937 J15

The Lynching Record

There was no improvement in the country's lynching record for the first half of the present year, according to the records compiled by Tuskegee Institute. Four victims met death at the hands of mobs in the last six months. This is the same as the number for the first half of last year and for the first half of 1935. It is two under the record for the first half of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. Three were accused of murder and one of rape. Mississippi led with two of the lynchings and Alabama and Georgia had one each.

There is little to justify encouragement in the record. There has been no improvement, as the figures show. The only ray of sunshine in the gloomy lynching situation is that, with the turmoil that has been in evidence over the country, there was no greater tendency toward the formation of mobs. Decency and the law just held their own.

[redacted]
JUL 3 1937

Letters

LYNCHINGS IN 1937

To the Editor of The Times-Star:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find, according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number, six, for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder three, rape one. The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama one, Georgia one, Mississippi two.

F. D. PATTERSON, President.
Tuskegee Institute, Ala.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - June.

5806

RUSSELLVILLE (ARK) COURIER-DEM
JULY 8, 1937 J13

MUCH-ADO ABOUT LYNCHING.

Recently we commented upon the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, which has passed the House and been favorably reported by the Senate Judiciary committee, and compared the so-called lynching crime in the South to the labor rioting crime in the North.

Since our previous editorial, lynching statistics for the first half of 1937 have been released by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute. The actual figures prove that all the furore and agitation and the pending anti-lynching bill are "much-ado about nothing" as compared to many other evils that might demand the attention of agitators and reformers and the national congress. Four Negroes were lynched during the first six months of 1937, according to the Tuskegee Institute report. Three of these were charged with murder, and one with rape. The same number were lynched in the first half of 1936, and six in the first half of 1935.

We do not attempt to justify or condone lynching, but we do contend that the crime of lynching in the South does not justify the extreme penalties prescribed in the Wagner-Van Nuys bill, which would make peace officers in a county in which a lynching might occur guilty of a felony, and the county itself liable for civil damages.

The Tuskegee Institute report shows that fourteen Negroes have been lynched in the first six months of the years 1935, 1936, and 1937—a total of 18 months. All the Negroes had committed heinous crimes against white persons—either rape or murder. No doubt all of them would have been sentenced to death or life imprisonment if they had been given legal trials.

Contrast this with the twelve persons killed in the North in less than two weeks in unlawful labor rioting—just as unlawful as a race riot or "lynching bee." And the labor rioting victims had committed no crime. They were guilty only of insisting upon their lawful right to work and earn a living for themselves and their families.

Sectional prejudices should not enter into law enforcement nor national legislation. But the Senators and Congressmen who see a great evil in an occasional lynching of a Negro who had committed a heinous crime should consider seriously whether the lynching crime or the labor-rioting crime is the greater evil.

Many peace officers would be wearing prison stripes and county governments would be bankrupted if the penalties prescribed in the anti-lynching bill were applied to labor riots or even to race riots that occur north of the Mason and Dixon Line.

LYNCHING RECORD !

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON, Pres.

MONROE LA. WORLD
JULY 6, 1937

4 NEGROES LYNCHED WITHIN 6 MONTHS

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5.—(AP)—Four negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and records of Tuskegee institute, negro college.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the institute reported. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

ALEXANDRIA VA. TOWN TALK
JULY 10, 1937 J14

4 Negroes Lynched in Past 6 Months

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5.—(By A. P.)—Four negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

BRIDGEPORT, ALA., NEWS
JULY 8, 1937 J14

Lynching Figures For Half-Year Released

Tuskegee, Ala. July 5, 1937—F. D. Patterson, President of Tuskegee Institute, has just released figures concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research there were four Lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number, six for the first half of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3 rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1 Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

ALEXANDER CITY, ALA., OUTLOOK
JULY 8, 1937 J13

Lynching Record For First Six Months 1937

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON, President

CENTREVILLE, ALA., ADVERTISER
JULY 7, 1937 J13

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST HALF OF 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., July 3.—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number (6) for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

CYNTHIANA, KY., DEMOCRAT
JULY 8, 1937 J14

LYNCHING RECORD FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

JUL 10 1937

FOUR LYNCHINGS THIS YEAR

(Bristol Herald-Courier)

Records compiled at Tuskegee Institute show that in the first six months of this year there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched during the last six months were Negroes. Three of the victims of mob lawlessness were charged with murder and one with rape. One of the lynchings occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi.

Tuskegee Institute does not report the number of attempted lynchings that have been thwarted thus far this year, as it usually does. We recall one such instance when a Texas Sheriff told a mob which invaded his jail that it could not have his prisoner, and that he didn't mean maybe.

Probably that happened too late to be included in the Institute's report, and perhaps there have been no other attempted lynchings for the period the report covers. If not, the record of the number of lynchings and attempted lynchings for the last six months is unusually good.

As the record stands, there have been only four lynchings and only one attempted lynching. But that is four lynchings and one attempted lynching too many. And while it is heartening to know that only five lynchings mobs have been formed in six months, there is no assurance that the record for the next six months will be equally good.

The number of lynchings varies from year to year. It may be fewer this year than last, and larger next year than this. One has been encouraged at times to believe the mob spirit was dying out, only to see it flare up again. But there is every reason to believe that, with an anti-lynching law on the Federal statues to reinforce the efforts of those who have been combatting the lynching evil for many years, there seldom would be a mob murder to disgrace the South or a Southern State.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA., NEWS
JULY 8, 1937 J13

But What Of 1938?

FOUR negroes were lynched in the United States during the first half of 1937, Tuskegee Institute informs us. Compared with several gory years of the past, the 1937 record is excellent, and we pray that the last half will bring even fewer of these atrocities.

Now before Congress, however, is a federal anti-lynching bill and if this measure becomes a law—as many observers are free to predict that it will—we may look for trouble and, we fear, a series of mob outrages the like of which we have not seen in 20 years.

In the first place, the South knows that the anti-lynching bill is sectional, pure and simple, and that it is a rank invasion of states' rights—and the South resents it. The record for 1937 shows how lynchings have waned, but the bitterness born of a federal anti-lynching bill will stir mob violence and racial hatred to a new pitch.

Federal fines assessed against counties in which lynchings occur form the basis of the proposed law, and we wonder how the authors of the bill expect a mob—distinguished by the fact that it holds no respect for constituted authority—to bother about taking a few hundred dollars from the public treasury. As pointed out many times in the past, the people who make up mobs as a rule are not heavy taxpayers, and they have little to lose.

It also goes without saying that there are hundreds of law officers in the South, fearful of the legislation which will punish them by fines and imprisonment if a mob snatches a rapist or murderer from them, who will not be so diligent in their duty as they might be. It would be nothing more than human nature for a sheriff, for instance, not to arrest a criminal if he knew that a mob would, in all probability, snatch the criminal from his hands within a few moments and leave him in the embarrassing predicament of facing a federal jury and a federal prison.

It will be a sad day for the South when and if the Eastern politicians succeed in passing the anti-lynching bill, and we are free to predict that, if the bill does pass this year, the Tuskegee report for the first half of 1938 will be the gloomiest to be issued in many a moon.

TALLADEGA, ALA., HOME
JULY 8, 1937 J13

MOBS—NORTH, SOUTH

The Tuskegee institute issues a report upon lynchings during the past six months, showing that there were only four during the half-year, one each in Georgia and Alabama and two in Mississippi. This is two less than for the previous six months, says the Rome, Ga., News-Tribune, and continues:

The decrease is most gratifying and it is unfortunate that a similar decrease in lynching in portions of the country outside of the South, is not revealed. Instead of lynch law decreasing elsewhere, however, it has increased at an almost unprecedented rate, especially in the industrial regions of the North and Central West.

It may clarify understanding upon this subject to give the official definition of "lynch," this definition being "to inflict punishment upon or kill without the forms of law, as by mob or any unauthorized persons."

Thus while there have been but four lynchings recorded in the South during the past six months there have been literally hundreds in such places as Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Johnstown, Warren and other industrial centers. Yet in the face of this transparent fact, the pending anti-lynch bill in congress specifically exempts the lynchers of the North from its provisions and includes only those of the South.

Mob law is deplorable regardless of where it breaks out but it is even more deplorable when one form of mob law is condoned or regarded lightly while another form is dealt with in vigorous and proper manner. The South is alert to the perils of mob violence and it is high time that the North became equally alert, for mob violence in that quarter is even worse than in the South because it constitutes a sinster attack upon government itself.

Gadsden KANSAS
[redacted], ALA., RECORD
JULY 8, 1937 J13

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

In the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. Patterson,
Pres. Tuskegee Inst.

LOUISVILLE, KY., COURIER-JR.
JULY 6, 1937 J13

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1937.

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal.

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find, according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder, three; rape, one.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two.

F. D. Patterson
President, Tuskegee Institute.

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan.—June

5807

Cullman, Ala., Democrat
July 8, 1937

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1937

The following information concerning lynching for the first six months of this year is sent you. According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six monthes of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynching occurred and the number of each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi,2.

Minneapolis, Minn., Journal
TUESDAY, JULY 6, 1937

1937 Lynchings

To the Editor of The Journal:

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute there were four lynchings during the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than for the first six months of 1934.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two. —F. O. Patterson,
President, Tuskegee Institute.
Tuskegee, Ala.

Fayetteville, Tenn., News
July 8, 1937

4 Lynchings During 1936 Report Shows

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Hendersonville, N. C., Times-News
July 5, 1937

SIX LYNCHINGS FOR YEAR TO DATE ARE ALL IN DEEP SOUTH

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5.—F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute today announced that according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, there are four lynchings in the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; George 1; Mississippi, 2.

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times
July 5, 1937

Lynchings Show A Decline Now

According to figures released by Tuskegee Institute, negro college, there were four lynchings in the United States during the first six months of this year. This compares with six for a similar period in 1934. There were four in the first six months of 1936 and 1935.

Mississippi had two lynchings and Georgia and Alabama one each.

Offenses charged were: murder 3 and rape, 1.

BIRMINGHAM ALA. POST
JULY 5, 1937

FOUR ARE LYNCHED IN FIRST SIX MONTHS

TUSKEGEE, July 5.—(Special.)—Four persons were lynched in the United States in the first six months of 1937, according to a report released by the Department of Research and Records of Tuskegee Institute.

The report stated all the victims were Negroes. Of the number, three were charged with murder and one with rape, the report said. All the lynchings occurred in the South Alabama and Georgia reporting one victim and Mississippi two, according to the report.

Macon, Ga., News
July 5, 1937

Four Lynchings In Six Months

Deaths Are in Three Southern States, Report Shows

Four lynchings took place during the first six months of this year, according to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute, F. D. Patterson, president, informed The Evening News today.

These lynchings were in three southern states, two being in Mississippi, one in Georgia and one in Alabama.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes, the report shows .Three of the alleged crimes were murder and one for criminal assault .

This equaled the record for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number for 1934.

MEMPHIS, TENN., COM'L-APPEAL
JULY 5, 1937

LYNCHING REPORT ISSUED

Tuskegee Department Lists Four Victims During 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 4.—(AP)—The department of research and records of Tuskeegee Institute, negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during the first six months of both 1935 and 1936 the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the south. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

Lumberton, N. C. Robesonian
July 7, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee institute in the department of records and research, in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Fairhope, Ala., Courier
July 8, 1937

Lynching Record for First 6 Months in 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of Record and Research there were 4 lynchings for the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1936 and 1935, and two less than the number for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder, 3; Rape, 1.

The State in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Winterhaven, Fla., Chief
July 7, 1937

States Furnished 4 Lynchings First Half of Year, Report Shows

Three states of the South were the scene of four lynchings during the first six months of 1937, according to the announcement sent the Daily Chief today by Dr. F. D Patterson, president of the Tuskegee, Ala., Institute, founded by Booker T. Washington in 1881. Dr Patterson's report follows the long line of those sent out annually by Washington and later by Major Richard Moton, Patterson's predecessor in the presidential chair.

Alabama and Georgia furnished one lynching each and Mississippi two during the first half of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934. All the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

Reidsville, N. C. Review
July 5, 1937

Lynching Record For First Six Months

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder 3, rape 1.

The states in which lynching occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama 1, Georgia 1, Mississippi 2.

Reidsville Review
JUL 7 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee institute in the department of records and research, in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Americus, Ga., Recorder
July 6, 1937

LYNCHINGS IN 6 MONTHS

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., July 6.—he number of lynchings for the rst six months of 1937 was the ame as for the similar periods n 1936 and 1935.

There were four lynchings, according to records compiled at uskegee Institute. All the persons lynched were negroes. The ffenses were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

Albany-Decatur, Ala. Daily
July 9, 1937

Lynching Figures

Statistics are not at hand but every newspaper reader knows that gangster murders and labor racketeer slayings are very common occurrences in all of the thickly-populated eastern industrial areas.

In the South during the past six months there were only four lynchings and yet, the United States senate soon is going to make a very serious effort to pass a bill which would impose heavy penalties upon innocent people of counties in which lynchings occur in the South and at the same time exempt from the penalties the residents of those areas in which gang slayings and labor racketeer murders are frequent.

The whole set-up is so obviously unjust that it leads to the suspicion that backers of the federal anti-lynching bill have in mind, once that bill is adopted, making a drive for federal legislation calculated to set aside many of the wise statutes which promote amity among the races in the South.

In view of the evidence, certainly no one can successfully contend that the anti-lynching bill is not an effort to impose a humiliating and dangerous piece of legislation upon the South—and the South alone!

Should its advocates be successful, do you think for a minute they will be satisfied with that success? Frankly we do not. The same gang of vote-greedy politicians and half-baked Southern "liberals," who would risk anything but their hide for the adulation of eastern and northern radicals, will be busy with new schemes to endanger the peaceful relationship of the races in Dixie.

Southerners wake up before it is too late!

Commenting on the anti-lynching bill the Gadsden Times says:

"The Tuskegee Institute issues a report upon lynchings during the past six months, showing that there were only four during the half-year, one each in Georgia and Alabama and two in Mississippi. This is two less than for the previous six months.

"This decrease is most gratifying and it is unfortunate that a similar decrease in lynching in portions of the country outside of the South is not revealed. Instead of lynch law decreasing elsewhere, however, it has increased at an almost unprecedented rate, especially in the industrial regions of the north and central west.

It may clarify understanding upon this subject to give the official definition of "lynch," this definition being "to inflict punishment upon or kill without the forms of law, as by mob or any unauthorized persons."

"Thus while there have been but four lynchings recorded in the South during the past six months there have been literally hundreds in such places as Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Johnstown, Warren and other industrial centers. Yet in the face of this transparent fact, the pending anti-lynch bill in Congress specifically exempts the lynchers of the north from its provisions and includes only those of the South.

"Mob law is deplorable regardless of where it breaks out but it is even more deplorable when one form of mob law is condoned or regarded lightly while another form is dealt with in vigorous and proper manner. The South is alert to the peril of mob violence and it is high time that the North became equally alert for mob violence in that quarter is even worse than in the South because it constitutes a sinister attack upon the government itself."

Ayden, N. C., Dispatch
July 8, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1937

According to the records completed at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

Greenville, S. C. Piedmont
July 6, 1937

Lynchings

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE records show a total of four lynchings in the country in the first six months of this year, all in the South but none in South Carolina, which is the same number as for the first six months of 1936 and 1935 and two less than the number for the first six months of 1934.

With occasional exceptions progress is being made steadily in the war upon lynching, which is as it should be.

Law enforcement officers and courts are here to see that justice is done and it is pretty safe to bet that it will be done whenever any considerable number of good citizens do their own share in cooperating.

Oneida, Tenn. News
July 9, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD IN FIRST HALF OF YEAR

Tuskegee Reports Four Lynchings During Past 6 Months

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months in 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, three; rape, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Georgia one; Mississippi, 2.

Tuskegee, Ala., News
July 8, 1937

Lynching Record For The First Six Months Of 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

F. D. PATTERSON.

Greenwood, S. C. Index-Journal
July 5, 1937

Four Lynchings Since January

To the Index-Journal

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find acording to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississipi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President.

Marks, Miss. Democrat
July 8, 1937

LYNCHING RECORD

According to the lynching record for the first six months of 1937, released this week by the Tuskegee Institute, there were four lynchings, all the victims being colored. This was the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and was two less than the number 6 for 1934.

The offenses charged were murder, 3; rape 1.

The record for states is Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississinni 2.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
July 9, 1937

The 1937 Lynching Record

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—I send you the following concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year: I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute, in the department of records and research that in the first six months of 1937, there were four lynchings This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; George, 1; Mississippi, 2.

F. D. PATTERSON,
President Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute.
Tuskegee, Ala.

Cochran, Ga., Journal
July 8, 1937

LYNCHINGS IN 1937

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number for 1934.

All of the persons lynched in 1937 were Negroes, and the offenses were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state were: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Marianna, Fla., Times Courier
July 6, 1937

FOUR LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee, Ala., July 5—Four Negros were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and recorders of Tuskegee Institute, Negro college.

One lynching occured in Alabama, one in eorgia and two in Mississippi, the institute reported. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the Negros were charged with murder and one with rape, according to the institute records.

BIRMINGHAM ALA. NEWS
JULY 5, 1937

Six Negroes Lynched In First Half Of '37

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5—(AP)—Four negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Misaissippi, the institute reported. The same number were victims of

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. — June

5808

TUSCALOOSA, ALA., NEWS
JULY 5, 1937 J9

FOUR NEGROES LYNCHED

Same As During First Half Of 1935 and 1936

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(AP)—Four Negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi. The same number were victims of lynchings during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the Negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

Grenada, Miss. Sentinel
July 8, 1937

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape ,1.

The States in which lynching occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

MOBILE ALA. PRESS
JULY 5, 1937

4 Negroes Lynched In Southern States

TUSKEGEE, July 5.—(AP)—Four negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi the institute reported. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

SHEFFIELD, ALA., TRI-CITIES DAILY
JULY 7, 1937 J12

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR THE FIRST SIX MONTHS 1937

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON, Pres.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Daily Times
July 5, 1937

4 LYNCHINGS IN 1937, TUSKEGEE BOARD SAYS

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 4 (AP).—The department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, Negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were Negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during the first six months of both 1935 and 1936, the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the South. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

MOBILE, ALA., REGISTER
JULY 5, 1937 J1

4 Lynchings Reported By Tuskegee Institute

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 4.—(AP) The department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, negro college, today reported there were four lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1937.

All the lynch victims were negroes, Tuskegee reported. The same number were lynched during the first six months of both 1935 and 1936, the college said.

Three of this year's victims were charged with murder and one with rape. The lynchings occurred in the South. There was one in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the college reported.

DOTHAN, ALA., EAGLE
JULY 5, 1937 J1

FOUR LYNCHINGS

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) —Four Negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the the department of research and records of Tuskegee Institute, Negro college.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the institute reported. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the Negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

Red Springs, N. C., Citizen-New
July 9, 1937

LYNCHINGS ARE DECREASING

In the first six months of this year, there were only four lynchings in the United States, according to information compiled by Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All the persons lynched were Negroes, three being charged with murder and one with rape. Lynchings by states are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

[redacted]

JUL 6 1937

1937 Lynching Record

Editor of "The Brooklyn Citizen":

Sir—I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, three; rape, one.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President, Tuskegee Institute

Tifton, Ga., Gazette
July 6, 1937

4 LYNCHINGS IN SIX MONTHS

Tuskegee Institutee, Ala., July 6.—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

La Fayette, La., Advertiser
July 5, 1937

Four Lynchings Are Reported During Year

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 5 (AP)—Four negroes were lynched in the United States during the first six months of 1937, according to a report of the Department of Research and Records of Tukegee Institute, negro college.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia and two in Mississippi, the institute reported. The same number were victims of lynching parties during the first six months of 1935 and 1936.

Three of the negroes were charged with murder and one with rape, according to institute records.

The Lynching Record For The First Six Months 1937

By F. D. PATTERSON
Pres. Tuskegee Inst.

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research there were four lynchings in the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each State are as follows: Ala. 1; Georgia 1; Mississippi 2.

FOUR LYNCHED FIRST HALF '37

TUSKEGEE REPORTS ON LYNCHING RECORD

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and research there were four lynchings in the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Colored. The offenses charged were murder, 3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia 1; Mississippi, 2.

Union City, Tenn. Commercial
July 6, 1937

According to information furnished by the Tuskegee Institute, negro school Tuskegee, Ala,. the number of lynchings in the United States for the first six months of this year were four. This is the same number that occured in the same period for 1935 and 1936. Alabama and Georgia each had one lynching and Mississippi had two. All of the persons lynched were negroes and three were charged with murder and one with rape.

According to statistics released Monday there were 213 persons killed in accidents of various natures over the country the past week-end. Eight persons were drowned in the Tri-States and hundreds were injured in automobile accidents. This report does not include Monday which was officially celebrated as the Fourth of July.

Albert Dyer, age 37, WPA street crossing watchman in Inglewood, Calif., has confessed to the murder of three young Inglewood girls June 28th. The three girls, ages 7, 8 and 9, were lured from play in a park and assaulted and then strangled to death.

Lumpkin, Ga., Stewart-Webster Jnl.
July 8, 1937

Four Lynchings In Six Months

TUSKEEGEE RECORDS SHOW GEORGIA HAD ONLY ONE

The lynching record for the first six months of 1937 as compiled in the Department of Records and Research at Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama, shows that there were four people meeting death in this manner from January 1 to June 30.

This number is the same as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

The Institute reports that all the persons lynched were Negroes. The offences charged were: murder, 1; rape, 1.

The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama 1; Georgia, 1; and Mississippi, 2.

Talladega, Ala., Daily Home
July 8, 1937

MOBS—NORTH, SOUTH

The Tuskegee institute issues a report upon lynching during the past six months showing that there were only four during the half-year, one each in Georgia and Alabama and two in Mississippi. This is two less than for the previous six months, says the Rome, Ga., News-Tribune and continues:

The decrease is most gratifying and it is unfortunate that a smilar decrease in lynching in portions of the country outside of the South, is not revealed. Instead of lynch law decreasing elsewhere, however, it has increased at an almost unprecedented rate, especially in the industrial regions of the North and Central West.

It may clarify understanding upon this subject to give the official definitiion of "lynch," this definition being "to inflict punishment upon or kill without the forms of law, as by mob or any unauthorized persons."

Thus while there have been but four lynchings recorded in the South during the past six months there have been literally hundreds in such places as Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Johnstown, Warren and other industrial centers. Yet in the face of this transparent fact, the pending anti-lynch bill in congress specifically exempts the lynchers of the North from its provisions and includes only those of the South.

Mob law is deplorable regardless of where it breaks out but it is even more deplorable when one form of mob law is condoned or regarded lightly while another form is dealt with in vigorous and proper manner. The South is alert to the perils of mob violence and it is high time that the North became equally alert, for mob violence in that quarter is even worse than in the South because it constitutes a sinster attack upon government itself.

Statesville, N. C. Daily
July 5, 1937

Four Lynchings In Six Months Period

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research for the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings in the United States. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder,3; rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Savannah, Ga., Press
July 13, 1937

THE COLUMBIA RECORD, discussing the improvement in the lynching situation throughout the country, says:

Whatever the reason, the restraint of the lynching element continues to be marked. A report of the lynching record of the whole country for the first six months of this year, as compiled by the department of records and research at the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama, shows that there were four lynchings in the country, up to July 1. This is the same number as for the first half of each of the two preceding years, and two less than the first six months of 1934.

JACKSON, MISS., NEWS
JULY 6, 1937

Tuskegee Institute report saying [illegible] persons were lynched in the USA during the first six months of this year adds this: "All the victims were negroes. True. But why call them victims? How about the persons they murdered or ravished? They were the real victims. Think a little about that, you softies.

Four Negroes Lynched First Six Months of Year

Statesville, N. C. Daily Times
July 6, 1937

EQUAL TO FIGURES OF '35 AND '36

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape 1. The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2. The release was issued by F. D. Patterson, president.

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
July 5, 1937

Lynchings Decrease

It is encouraging to observe the tendency toward mob violence and lynchings is decreasing in the South and that there have been no more than a minimum of such cases during the last two years.

Compilations show there were four lynchings in the South during the first six months of this year, the same as the number recorded for the corresponding period of 1936 and two less than the total of six reported for the first six months of 1934.

Negroes were the victims in all cases, three suspected murderers and one accused criminal attacker being slain at the hands of mobs.

Of the lynchings, one occurred in Georgia, one in Alabama and two in Mississippi. No other states reported such mob actions, and in the states, where they were reported, exhaustive steps were taken to bring the guilty parties to justice.

The south has made rapid strides in its fight to eliminate mob violence and the action is commendable. We will welcome the day, however, when it is no longer practiced and the courts alone are left to handle all cases regardless of the nature of the crime committed.

Justice is served only when the accused is given fair and impartial trial before jury.

[illegible]
July 6, 1937

Lynching Record

ACCORDING to statistics kept at Tuskegee Institute, there were four lynchings the first six months of 1937, the identical number that marred the record for the same period of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number in 1934.

All the victims of mob violence in 1937 were Negroes and all the outbreaks occurred in three Southern states—Alabama and Georgia with one each and Mississippi with two. Three of the Negroes were charged with murder and one with rape.

The lynching record is of course deplorable. In this civilized period there should be no lynchings. Comparatively speaking, however, fine progress has been made, and continued agitation against this, one of the worst forms of outlawry, is destined to eventually eliminate this expression of barbarism.

When punishment of those guilty of offenses against society becomes more certain the incentive for lynchings will decrease.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - June

5809

Suffolk, Va., News-Herald
July 7, 1937

AT LEAST THE RECORD IS NO REDDER

A statement released this week by the Tuskegee Normal Institute informs us that during the first half of 1937 there had been four lynchings. During the same period last year the same number of human beings had been launched into eternity by similar methods. In 1934 six men had died at the hands of mobs during the first six months of the year.

Let us note carefully these humiliating facts. Not a single person died at the hands of private avengers north of the Mason-Dixon line or west of the Mississippi. All of the victims were Negroes. Our neighbors to the south have been boasting that in the main mob law was only invoked against black fiends who attacked white women. But only one of the four done to death by the mob this year had been charged with this crime. The other three were suspected—none convicted—of murder.

The darkest spot in the country remains as usual in that block of states where human life is held cheapest—Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi. Strange to say Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma escaped this stigma a whole six months. This at least is encouraging for it shows that public sentiment is gradually narrowing the scope of the rule of Judge Lynch, leading to the hope that the good people of those erring states, and there are thousands of them, will yet wipe out the stain.

The lynching episode in Mississippi where two black men were brutally tortured before their tormentors mercifully ended their agony, however, still stands unmatched for fiendishness in the annals of mob murders. If the bill now pending in the senate becomes a law, as it is feared it will, the people of the country will have Mississippians to thank for it.

Perhaps those kindly people will rush their victims over into another state, or at least into another county, so they may escape the penalty the proposed law will inflict upon the decent citizenry of Mississippi. Bootlegged lynchings bid fair to become as popular as moonshine liquor once the mad lynchers learn the [illegible]

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
July 6, 1937

Four Lynchings This Year.

Records compiled at Tuskegee Institute show that in the first six months of this year there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched during the last six months were Negroes. Three of the victims of mob lawlessness were charged with murder and one with rape. One of the lynchings occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia, and two in Mississippi.

Tuskegee Institute does not report the number of attempted lynchings that have been thwarted thus far this year, as it usually does. We recall one such instance when a Texas Sheriff told a mob which invaded his jail that it could not have his prisoner, and that he didn't mean maybe.

Probably that happened too late to be included in the Institute's report, and perhaps there have been no other attempted lynchings for the period the report covers. If not, the record of the number of lynchings and attempted lynchings for the last six months is unusually good.

As the record stands, there have been only four lynchings and only one attempted lynching. But that is four lynchings and one attempted lynching too many. And while it is heartening to know that only five lynching mobs have been formed in six months, there is no assurance that the record for the next six months will be equally good.

The number of lynchings varies from year to year. It may be fewer this year than last, and larger next year than this. One has been encouraged at times to believe the mob spirit was dying out, only to see it flare up again. But there is every reason to believe that, with an anti-lynching law on the Federal statutes to reinforce the efforts of those who have been combatting the lynching evil for many years, there seldom would be a mob murder to disgrace the South or a Southern State. Congress should pass the pending anti-lynching bill.

Winston-Salem, N. C. Journal
July 7, 1937

An Encouraging Record

North Carolina is again on the honor roll. No lynching occurred in this state during the first six months of 1937. Judge Lynch claimed four victims in the country during the period, but he confined his activities to three states—Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi.

There were three lynchings in Mississippi, one in Alabama and one in Georgia. All were Negroes. Three of the victims were charged with murder and one with rape.

This is an encouraging record in two respects. It reveals that mob law was not resorted to in 45 states and that the number of lynchings was no greater during the first six months of this year than it was in the first six months of 1935 and 1936, while it was two less than in the first half of 1934.

We are indebted for this authentic information on lynchings to President T. V. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute. He and his predecessors have been keeping the country accurately informed on this subject for a number of years.

Marion, N. C., News
July 8, 1937

From Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute comes the "Lynching Record for the First Six Months of 1937" disclosing four such crimes, all in the south, or the same number as for the first half of 1935 and 1936, but two less than the six reported the first six months of 1934. All of the victims were negroes; three were accused of murder and the fourth of criminal assault. None was reported from North Carolina, two being in Mississippi and one in Alabama and one in Georgia.

Spartanburg, S. C. Journal
July 7, 1937

Record for Half a Year

Records disclose that for the first six months of 1937 another infamous record was written in the states—four lynchings occurred—each in the South. Following are the states and the number of lynchings: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2. In each instance the victim was a negro and the offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

There can be no justification in law and order for one lynching. Violence, mob rule and assassination by groups or gangs or clans indict a civilization of a nation or a section. With each recurrance the forces of law and constituted authority suffer outrageous attack that cannot be defended. May the time come when the nation will attain and maintain a clean slate on this score.

GADSDEN ALA. TIMES
JULY 7, 1937

MOBS IN NORTH AND SOUTH

THE Tuskegee Institute issues a report upon lynchings during the past six months, showing that there were only four during the half-year, one each in Georgia and Alabama and two in Mississippi. This is two less than for the previous six months.

This decrease is most gratifying and it is unfortunate that a similar decrease in lynching in portions of the country outside of the South is not revealed. Instead of lynch law decreasing elsewhere, however, it has increased at an almost unprecedented rate, especially in the industrial regions of the North and central West.

It may clarify understanding upon this subject to give the official definition of "lynch," this definition being "to inflict punishment upon or kill without the forms of law, as by mob or any unauthorized persons."

Thus while there have been but four lynchings recorded in the South during the past six months there have been literally hundreds in such places as Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Johnstown, Warren and other industrial centers. Yet in the face of this transparent fact, the pending anti-lynch bill in Congress specifically exempts the lynchers of the North from its provisions and includes only those of the South.

Mob law is deplorable regardless of where it breaks out but it is even more deplorable when one form of mob law is condoned or regarded lightly while another form is dealt with in vigorous and proper manner. The South is alert to the perils of mob violence and it is high time that the North became equally alert, for mob violence in that quarter is even worse than in the South because it constitutes a sinister attack upon the government itself.

[redacted]
JUL 7 1937

MOBS IN NORTH AND SOUTH

THE Tuskegee Institute issues a report upon lynchings during the past six months, showing that there were only four during the half-year, one each in Georgia and Alabama and two in Mississippi. This is two less than for the previous six months.

This decrease is most gratifying and it is unfortunate that a similar decrease in lynching in portions of the country outside of the South, is not revealed. Instead of lynch law decreasing elsewhere, however, it has increased at an almost unprecedented rate, especially in the industrial regions of the north and central west.

It may clarify understanding upon this subject to give the official definition of "lynch", this definition being "to inflict punishment upon or kill without the forms of law, as by mob or any unauthorized persons."

Thus while there have been but four lynchings recorded in the South during the past six months there have been literally hundreds in such places as Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Johnstown, Warren and other industrial centers. Yet in the face of this transparent fact, the pending anti-lynch bill in congress specifically exempts the lynchers of the North from its provisions and includes only those of the South.

Mob law is deplorable regardless of where it breaks out but it is even more deplorable when one form of mob law is condoned or regarded lightly while another form is dealt with in vigorous and proper manner. The South is alert to the perils of mob violence and it is high time that the North became equally alert, for mob violence in that quarter is even worse than in the South because it constitutes a sinister attack upon government itself.

[redacted]
JUL 7 1937

AT LEAST THE RECORD IS NO REDDER

A statement released this week by the Tuskegee Normal Institute informs us that during the first half of 1937 there had been four lynchings. During the same period last year the same number of human beings had been launched into eternity by similar methods. In 1934 six men had died at the hands of mobs during the first six months of the year.

Let us note carefully these humiliating facts. Not a single person died at the hands of private avengers north of the Mason-Dixon line or west of the Mississippi. All of the victims were Negroes. Our neighbors to the south have been boasting that in the main mob law was only invoked against black fiends who attacked white women. But only one of the four done to death by the mob this year had been charged with this crime. The other three were suspected—none convicted—of murder.

The darkest spot in the country remains as usual in that block of states where human life is held cheapest—Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi. Strange to say Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma escaped this stigma a whole six months. This at least is encouraging for it shows that public sentiment is gradually narrowing the scope of the rule of Judge Lynch, leading to the hope that the good people of those erring states, and there are thousands of them, will yet wipe out the stain.

The lynching episode in Mississippi where two black men were brutally tortured before their tormentors mercifully ended their agony, however, still stands unmatched for fiendishness in the annals of mob murders. If the bill now pending in the senate becomes a law, as it is feared it will, the people of the country will have Mississippians to thank for it.

Perhaps those kindly people will rush their victims over into another state, or at least into another county, so they may escape the penalty the proposed law will inflict upon the decent citizenry of Mississippi. Bootlegged lynchings bid fair to become as popular as moonshne liquor once the mad lynchers learn the ropes.

BLOOMINGTON ILL PANTAGRAPH
WEDNESDAY JULY 7 1937

Lynchings Up to the Average

The Tuskegee Institute, famous institution founded in Alabama by Booker T. Washington, friend of Theodore Roosevelt, makes it a painstaking duty to keep records of lynchings in the United States. The custom was begun in the days when lynching of Negroes was so common as to be revolting to the sense of American "civilization."

The report just issued by the Institute for the lynchings in the first half of the current year indicates that four such occurrences were put on record. This is a much smaller number than occurred 15 and 20 years ago, but the same number as for the first six months of the years 1935 and 1936. They were two less than the total of six in the first half of the year 1934.

All victims of the recorded lynchings this year were Negroes. Three were charged with murder and one with rape.

Mississippi had the "honor" of having two of the lynchings, Georgia and Alabama one each.

The lynching record is of double concern in view of the defeat of the Gavagan bill in congress, which was meant to prevent lynchings. It was introduced by a Negro member of congress from New York, and would have county officers responsible for any case in which a mob obtained possession of an accused person and caused a lynching after the accused was once in custody of law officers. Southern members of congress were stoutly opposed to the bill, and it was charged that it was a sop thrown to northern Negroes by the Democratic majority in congress.

Jackson, Miss., News
July 5, 1937

THE LYNCHING RECORD

Tuskegee Institute, which keeps a record of lynchings, reports that during the first six months of the current year four lynchings occurred.

This is the same number as for the first six months of 1936 and also for the first six months of 1935—conclusive proof that lynching is not on the increase.

All of the persons lynched were negroes, three charged with murder and one charged with rape.

Mississippi had two lynchings—that affair near Duck Hill. Georgia and Alabama had one each.

Tell that to members of Congress who are so loudly braying for enactment of a Federal anti-lynching law—a law that would cause an increase instead of a decrease of lynchings.

Also put a sentence in your nightly prayers asking God to give some wisdom to members of Congress who are advocating the passage of that vicious measure.

Lynchings-1937
& Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan.- June

5810

ADA, OKLA., NEWS
JULY 8, 1937 J14

According to the record kept by Tuskogee Institute, there were four lynchings during the first half of the year. The same number occurred during the corresponding period of 1936 and also 1935. This is a much better showing than in previous years, indicating that the public is more inclined than formerly to let the law take its course.

LOUISVILLE, KY., TIMES
JULY 8, 1937 J14

Rape Minor Lynching Cause

Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute performs valuable public service by publishing lynching statistics. Seventy-five per cent of mob murders for the first six months in the year 1937, Tuskegee finds, were cases in which rape was not alleged; cases in which no sex offense was alleged.

All victims this year, thus far, have been Negroes.

All lynchings occurred in Gulf States. There were three for alleged murder, one for alleged rape.

Lynching is often a rural frolic or emotional spree rather than anything else.

SOUTHWEST DIVISION
KANSAS CITY
Clayton

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., RECORD
JULY 8, 1937 J14

Four Lynchings In 6 Months, Report

—0—

The records which are compiled at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., in the Department of Records and Research show that there were four lynchings during the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number six for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

ROANOKE, ALA., LEADER
JULY 7, 1937 J13

LYNCHING RECORD IS GIVEN FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1937

Tuskegee Institute, July 5.—According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, there were four lynchings in the first six months of 1937. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than for the same in 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes, and the offences charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

One lynching occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia, and two in Mississippi.

KANSAS CITY Tribune
CULLMAN, ALA., [illegible]
JULY 8, 1937 J13

LYNCHING RECORD FOR FIRST SIX MONTH OF 1937

During the first six months of 1937 there were 4 lynchings. This is the same number as in thefirst six months of 1935 when 6 persons were lynched during the first six months of that year, reports the Department of Records and Research at Tuskegee Institute.

All persons lynced were negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder, 3; rape 1.

The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number were: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

ST.LOUIS, MO. POST-DISPATCH
JULY 9, 1837 J12

4 LYNCHINGS TO DATE IN 1937

Corresponding Periods in 1935 and 1936 Tied, Tuskegee Institute Says.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., July 9.—There were four lynchings in the first six months of 1937, according to the records of the Tuskegee Institute. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder, 3; criminal assault, 1. The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

HARTFORD, CONN. [illegible]
JUL 6 [illegible]

FOUR LYNCHINGS RECORD FOR YEAR

Four persons, all Negroes, were lynched during the first six months of this year, according to the Department of Records and Research at Tuckegee Institute in Alabama.

This number is the same as for the corresponding periods in 1935 and 1936, but is two less than the number six during the first half of 1934.

The lynchings occurred in three southern states; Two in Mississippi, one each in Alabama and Georgia.

Three of the persons lynched were charged with murder and one with rape.

ADA, OKLA., NEWS
JULY 5, 1937 J13

According to the record kept by Tuskegee Institute there were four lynchings during the first half of the year. The same number occurred during the corresponding period of 1936 and also 1935. This is a much better showing than in previous years, indicating that the public is more inclined than formerly to let the law take its course.

—::—

This year is half gone and before much longer we shall be looking forward to and speculating on what 1938 may have in store for the world. The past six months have been busy and exciting ones but the public hopes things will settle down before the end of the year. A period of relaxation and prosperity is the country's greatest need just now.

Bowdon, Ga., Bulletin
July 15, 1937

Lynching Record First Six Months Totals Six Cases

Number Lynchings First Half This Year Same As For Corresponding Periods In 1936, 1935

In the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings in the United States, according to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of Records and Research.

This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number for the first six months of 1934. All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1. The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Leland, Miss. Enterprise
July 16, 1937

Statistics Show Four Lynchings in U. S. During Past Year

During the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings in the United States, according to information given out from Tuskegee Institute's department of records and research. This is the same number as for the first six months of last year, the report shows, and two less than the number for the same period in 1934.

The reports continue:

"All persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were murder, 3; rape, 1. The states in which the lynchings occured and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama 1; Georgia 1; Mississippi 2."

Madison, Ga., Madisonian
July 16, 1937

Lynchings This Year Same As In 1935-36

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: Murder 3; rape, 1. The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Newberry, S. C. Observer
July 9, 1937

HOLDING OUR OWN.

The South is holding her own in the matter of lynchings with the records showing that there were four lynchings during the first six months of 1937 as compared with the same number in 1936 and 1935. In 1934 there were six lynchings for the same period of time. Those states in which lynchings occurred were Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1, and Mississippi, 2.

The South has learned that the proper place for justice to be meted out is in the courts. The time should come when there should be no lynchings. As the figures show, we are on our way.

La Follette, Tenn., Press
July 20, 1937

LYNCHINGS THIS YEAR

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research that in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Very truly yours,
T. D. Patterson, President
Tuskegee N. & I. Institute,
Tuskegee, Alabama.

Jan. — June.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

5811

Americus, Ga., Tri-County News
July 22, 1937

LYNCHINGS THIS YEAR SAME AS PAST 2 YEARS

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research, during the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months of 1934.

All of the persons lynched were negroes: The offenses charged were: murder, 3; rape, 1. The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

GREENVILLE TEX. BANNER
JULY 21, 1937 A2

About the Constitution

According to the latest report of the Tuskegee Institute, Texas has thus far this year been free from mob violence as it takes the form of lynchings. There have been few in the first half of the year and they have been in other states.

Now two more must be added to the list of anarchisms, since Florida has seen fit to contribute that many negro deaths without benefit to their Constitutional right of a jury trial.

Right now a lot of us are mouthing a lot of words about the sanctity of the Constitution, holding up our hands in holy horror that one line be altered for the intent of serving more people fairly. Many of the same group will read of the direct abrogation of the Constitution in this case, those which have passed and those will come, yawn and think, "Oh, well, they were probably guilty, anyway."

St. Matthews, S. C., Times
July 22, 1937

Lynching Record First Six Months 1937

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research in the first six months of 1937 there were four lynchings. This is the same number as for the first six month of 1935 and 1936, and 2 less than the number 6 for the first six months in 1934. All of the persons lynched were negroes. The offenses charged were: murder, 2; rape 1. The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

Eatonton, Ga., Messenger
July 29, 1937

Statistics Show Lynchings Same As Last Year

Accordingg to statistic gathered by the Tuskeegee Institue, four people were lynched in the country during the first six months of 1936 and 1935, but two less than 1934.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were murder, 3; rape 1. The states in which the lynchings occurred were Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; and Mississippi 2.

Blountstown, Fla., Record
July 23, 1937

Lynching Record For First Six Months Of 1937 Same As 1935-36

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute, in the first six months of 1937 here were four lynchings in the United States. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936, and two less than the number for the same period of 1934.

All persons lynched were negroes, the offenses charged being murder three and rape one.

States in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each state were Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2.

DEL RIO, TEX. HERALD
JULY 19, 1937 J30

LYNCHING RECORD

There were four lynchings for the first six months of this year, according to the records compiled by the Tuskegee Institute. This is the same number as for the first six months of 1935 and 1936 and two less than the number for the first six months of 1934. All lynched were Negroes, and the offenses charged were murder one, rape three.

Alabama rated one, Georgia one and Mississippi two.

Jess Sweetwater, Athens, Texas, sheriff, took off his gun and told a mob that he would get rough if need be to protect a Negro suspect in a revolting crime. The mob muttered and dispersed. The lynching record might be considerably less if there were more officials who were as devoted to upholding the honor of the law and who had the backbone that this Texan seems to have.—San Angelo Standard.

Louisville, Miss. Journal
July 23, 1937

The Tuskegeee Institute of Alabama, gives out the number of lynchings in the south as 4, the same as last year. Alabama one, Georgia one, and Mississippi two. The negroes are maybe getting better. The number of rapists control the number of lynchings except in Alabama. Alabama is due to have five more, if there were any real men in that State, and a New York lawyer would do well to escape in some southern States.

LYNCHINGS TOTAL SEVEN

Tuskegee Institute Reports for First Nine Months of Year

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Sept. 13.—(INS)—Lynchings for the first nine months of this year reached a total of seven, Monroe N. Work, director of the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute, said today.

Florida and Mississippi each had two lynchings while Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee had one each.

JUL 20 1937

SIX LYNCHINGS THIS YEAR

Tuskegee, Ala., July 20.—(AP)—Lynching of two negroes at Tallahassee, Fla., today brought to six the number killed by mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records said.

The Tuskegee records showed eight lives were taken by mobs in southern states during 1936.

Butler, Ga., Herald
September 16, 1937

LYNCHINGS FOR YEAR REACH TOTAL OF 7

Tuskegee, Ala., Sept. 13.—Lynchings for the first nine months of the year reached a total of seven, M. N. Work, director of the Department of Records of Tuskegee Institute, said Monday.

Florida and Mississippi each had two lynchings, while Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee had one each, Work said.

it was said. Florida's record was made when two negroes were taken from jail at Tallahassee and shot after they had been arrested for the stabbing of a policeman who had attempted to arrest them for breaking into a restaurant.

According to Tuskegee records eight persons were lynched in 1936 as compared with 20 during 1935.

SEP 13 1937

Lynchings for Year Reach Total of 7

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Sept. 13.—Lynchings for the first nine months of this year reached a total of seven, Monroe N. Work, director of the Department of Records of Tuskegee Institute, said today.

Florida and Mississippi each had two lynchings, while Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee had one each, Work said.

Rome, Ga News-Tribune
September 13, 1937

Nine Months Lynching Total Reaches Seven

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Sept. 13.—(INS)—Lynchings for the first nine months of this year reached a total of seven, Monroe N. Work, director of the department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute said today.

Florida and Mississippi each had two lynchings while Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee had one each, Work said. Florida's record was made when two negroes were taken from jail at Tallahassee and shot after they had been arrested for the stabbing of a policeman who had attempted to arrest them for breaking into a restaurant.

Tupelo, Miss. News
October 4, 1937

SEVENTH LYNCHING

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 4 (AP)—Lynching of a negro near Milton, Fla., last night was the eighth such occurrence in the South during 1937, records of Tuskee Institute revealed today.

Institute records listed two previous lynchings in Florida, two in Mississippi, and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

Lynchings-1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press

The Names of Newspapers are from Clippings as per Samples.
6

Jan. - Dec.

5813

Hendersonville, N. C., Times-News
December 28, 1937

8 LYNCHINGS DURING YEAR

Number Same as Last Year But 51 Lynchings Are Avoided in South

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 28.—According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee institute there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935, and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repeal the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3, Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Alberton, Ga., Star
December 31, 1937

Fewer Lynchings

During Past Year

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime agafnst nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President

Boaz, Alabama—Mountain Sun
December 31, 1937

Laurinburg, N. C. Exchange
December 30, 1937

York, S. C., Yorkville Enquirer
December 31, 1937

Wadesboro, N. C., Intelligencer
December 30, 1937

Alexander City, Ala., Outlook
December 30, 1937

Sandersville, Ga., Progress
December 30, 1937

Walhalla, S. C. Courier
January 6, 1938

Covington, Tenn. Leader
December 30, 1937

Albertville, Ala., Banner
December 28, 1937

Thomaston, Ga., Times
December 31, 1937

Ashland, Ala. Progress
December 30, 1937

Cullman, Ala., Tribune
December 30, 1937

Marion, Ala., Standard
December 30, 1937

Abbeville, Ala., Herald
December 30, 1937

Carrollton, Ga., Times
December 30, 1937

Blakeley, Ga. News
December 30, 1937

Millen, Ga., News
December 30, 1937

Ozark, Ala., Star
December 30, 1937

Opp, Ala., News
December 30, 1937

Ocilla, Ga., Star
December 30, 1937

Starkville, Miss. News
December 31, 1937

Canton, Miss. Herald
December 31, 1937

Lake City, S. C., News
December 30, 1937

Ayden, N. C., Dispatch
December 30, 1937

Loudon, Tenn., Herald
January 6, 1938

Kingstree, S. C., Record
December 30, 1937

Seneca, S. C., Journal
December 30, 1937

Clanton, Ala., Banner
December 30, 1937

Rosedale, Miss. Democrat
December 30, 1937

Clinton, N. C., Independent
December 30, 1937

[redacted]
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER
NEW YORK N Y TIMES
SATURDAY JANUARY 1
RUTLAND VT HERALD
MONDAY JANUARY 3

Memphis, Tenn., Press-Scimitar
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

[redacted]
DEC 30 1937

YOUNGSTOWN OHIO VINDICATOR
SUNDAY JANUARY 2 1938

MOBERLY, MO., MONITOR-INDEX
DEC. 27, 1937 J4

PARKERSBURG W VA NEWS
SUNDAY JANUARY 2 1938

VICKSBURG, MISS. POST
DEC. 28, 1937 J3

[redacted]
TALLAHASSEE FLA DEMOCRAT
TUESDAY DECEMBER
STAMFORD CONN ADVOCATE
TUESDAY DECEMBER
WASHINGTON D C POST
TUESDAY DECEMBER
SUMTER S C ITEM
MONDAY DECEMBER

Roanoke, Ala., Leader
January 5, 1938

Carthage, N. C., News
January 6, 1938

ASHLAND, KY., INDEPENDENT
DEC. 27, 1937 J10

SCOTTSBLUFF, NEB. STAR-HER.
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

MURFREESBORO, TENN. NEWS
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

ALEXANDER CITY Ala. OUTLOOK
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

CRYSTAL CITY TEX. SENTINEL
DEC. 31, 1937 J8

EVERGREEN, ALA, COURANT
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

KNOXVILLE, TENN., NEWS-SENT.
DEC. 29, 1937 J7

TUSKEGEE ALA. NEWS
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

BOWLING GREEN, KY., TIMES-JR.
DEC. 27, 1937 J10

SELMA, ALA. TIMES-JOURNAL
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. TIMES
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

OMAHA, NEB. JOURNAL STOCKMAN
DEC. 29, 1937 J6

BROWNWOOD, TEX., BULLETIN
DEC. 29, 1937 J7

YORK NEBR. NEWS-TIMES
DEC. 29, 1937 J7

NEBRASKA CITY, NEB. NEWS
DEC. 30, 1937 J7

FAYETTEVILLE, TENN, NEWS
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

WEWOKA OKLA. TIMES-DEMOCRAT
DEC. 28, 1937 J10

COMMERCE, TEX., JOURNAL
DEC. 30, 1937 J10

NEWPORT, ARK., INDEPENDENT
DEC. 29, 1937 J5

[redacted]
DEC 31 1937

[redacted]
JAN 6 1938

[redacted]
DEC 30 1937

[redacted]
DEC 29 1937

[redacted]
DEC 30 1937

[redacted]
DEC 30 1937

NEWPORT, ARK., INDEPENDENT
DEC. 31, 1937 J8

[redacted]
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

TROY, ALA. MESSENGER
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

CLAYTON, ALA. RECORD
DEC. 31, 1937 J8

SHAWNEE, OKLA., NEWS
DEC. 28, 1937 J10

BIRMINGHAM ALA. POST
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

NAVASOTA, TEX., EXAMINER
DEC. 27, 1937 J7

BIRMINGHAM ALA. NEWS
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

COTHAN, ALA., EAGLE
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

COOKEVILLE TENN. HERALD (wk)
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

ANNISTON, ALA. STAR
DEC. 28, 1937 J6

McCOOK (NEB.) GAZETTE
DEC. 29, 1937 J1

WICHITA FALLS, TEX. TIMES
DEC. 27, 1937 J8

DENISON, TEX. HERALD
DEC. 27, 1937 J6

DYERSBURG, TENN., GAZETTE
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

HUNTSVILLE, ALA. TIMES
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

MONROE LA. WORLD
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

CLARKSVILLE, TENN., LEAF-CHRON
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

ABBEVILLE, ALA. HERALD
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

McMINNVILLE, TENN., STANDARD
DEC. 31, 1937 J8

CUSHING (OKLA) CITIZEN
DEC. 28, 1937 J10

CROSSVILLE, TENN. CHRON.
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

COVINGTON TENN. LEADER (wk)
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

DEL RIO, TEX., HERALD
DEC. 31, 1937 J8

SHAWNEE OKLA. STAR
DEC. 27, 1937 J10

MONROE LA. NEWS-STAR
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

NASHVILLE TENN. BANNER
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

OPELIKA, ALA., NEWS
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

EUFAULA ALA. TRIBUNE
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

OSCEOLA, ARK. TIMES
DEC. 31, 1937 J5

MONTGOMERY, ALA. JOURNAL
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

LA FOLLETTE, TENN. PRESS
DEC. 31, 1937 J8

ALEXANDRIA, LA. TOWN TALK
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

ATHENS TENN. POST-ATHENIAN
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

TUSCALOOSA, ALA., NEWS
DEC. 27, 1937 J5

ALICE (TEX.) NEWS
DEC. 30, 1937 J8

NORMAN, OKLA., TRANSCRIPT
DEC. 28, 1937 J11

LEXINGTON, KY., HERALD
DEC. 29, 1937 J11

WAHOO (NEB.) WASP
JAN. 6, 1938 J12

MIAMI, OK. NEWS-RECORD
DEC. 31, 1937 J12

VOAKUM, TEX., HERALD wk
DEC. 30, 1937 J11

CLAUDE, TEX., NEWS
DEC. 31, 1937 J12

Loudon

DICKSON, TENN., HERALD
JAN. 6, 1938 J13

HUGO, OK. NEWS
DEC. 28, 1937

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. WORLD
JAN. 4, 1938 J11

ROANOKE, ALA., LEADER
JAN. 5, 1938 J11

LITTLE ROCK ARK. METHODIST
JAN. 6, 1938 J11

OWENSBORO, KY., MESSENGER
DEC. 28, 1937 J5

OKMULGEE OKLA. TIMES
JAN. 1, 1938

CARLISLE, KY., MERCURY,
DEC. 30, 1937 J11

MOBILE, ALA. TIMES
JAN. 6, 1938 J13

BURKBURNETT, TEX., STAR
DEC. 30, 1937 J11

FREMONT, NEB. TRIBUNE
JAN. 4, 1938 J12

LOWELL MASS COURIER CITIZEN
MONDAY JANUARY 3 1938

BROOKLYN N Y EAGLE
SUNDAY JANUARY 2 1938

MONTPELIER VT ARGUS
SATURDAY JANUARY 8 1938

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press

Jan.-Dec.

5814

SHREVEPORT LA. TIMES
JAN. 10, 1938

THE LYNCH TOTAL

Only eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937 and in Louisiana not a single lynching occurred. Also, only five of the 48 states are on the lynching list. It would seem that good progress is being made toward the elimination of lynchings, and that a federal law on the subject might do much more harm than good.

St. Matthews, S. C., Times
January 6, 1938

Information Concerning Lynchings

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1935. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States.

Tallasse, Ala., Tribune
January 14, 1938

1937 REPORT OF LYNCHINGS

There were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

New Iberia, La. Iberian
December 30. 1937

8 LYNCHINGS IN FIVE STATES

F. D. Patterson, president of the Tuskegee Institute, reports the following findings on lynchings up to December 27, 1937:

"I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augumented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

"The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

Douglas, Ga., Progress
January 13, 1938

SOUTH SCENE OF ALL 1937 LYNCHINGS

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee. 1.

Pennington Gap, Va., News
December 30. 1937

8 Persons Lynched In 1937

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repeal the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occured and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Missippi, 2; Tennessee 1.

WEBSTER CITY IOWA Freeman Journal
FRIDAY JANUARY 14 1938

Many people think that lynching in the south is due mainly to attacks on women by negroes. But that is not true. According to the research department of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, founded by Booker T. Washington, there were 20 lynchings in 1935. Of that number 3 were charged with rape and 3 with attempted rape. 7 were accused of murder. Other causes were: Altercation with white man 1, activity in share-cropping organizing 1, attacking a person 1, taking prisoner from officer of law 1, killed by mob in search of another person 1, slapping a woman 1, communistic activity 1. It appears from this list of causes that men are sometimes lynched in the south for very trivial offenses. The Institute reports that only 8 persons were lynched last year and only 8 in 1936.

AUSTIN, TEX. AMERICAN
JAN. 8, 1938 J18

Lynch-Free Year for Texas

Lynchings in the United States this year have numbered eight, the same as in 1936. This was 12 fewer than in 1935 and seven less than in 1934.

All eight victims were taken from officers, three directly from jails. All were negroes.

But with the record of eight lynchings, Tuskegee institute has reported that in 56 instances officers have prevented lynchings by saving five white men and 72 negroes from mobs.

Texas has the fine record of going through the year without a single instance of lynch barbarity. Florida furnished three of the crimes; Mississippi, two, and Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia, one each.

Fifty-one of the 56 lynchings thwarted by officers were in Southern states, five in Northern states. This is a fair record which tends to disprove the contention of advocates of the federal anti-lynch law that it is needed to end this barbarous practice. The South is slowly but surely doing away with lynching, thanks to courageous officers and the operation of public opinion.

COSHOCTON OHIO TRIBUNE
WEDNESDAY JANUARY 19 1938

Time to Revise?

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

TUSKEGEE'S annual report of lynchings for the last year includes a total of eight, of which two were committed in Mississippi and three in Florida.

This raises a question. According to all statistical summaries, Mississippi is the worst state, economically, politically, culturally, hygienically and every other way. But in 1937, Mississippi had only two lynchings, against Florida's three. Moreover, it was in Florida that Ku Kluxism broke out again last year. It was in Florida that a labor organizer was beaten to death, perhaps by policemen, altho nobody has gone to jail for it. Cafes are wrecked by natives who dislike the patrons' morals.

It is in evidence that Florida hates everybody, including even tourists who go to the state to spend their vacation, and labor organizers.

This reminds us that the figures showing Mississippi as the worst state were collected some years ago. Perhaps it is time to revise the statistical tables.

BEEVILLE (TEX.) PICAYUNE
JAN. 13, 1938 J21

Eight Lynchings Occur During 1937

Eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937, the same number as in 1936, according to a report from Tuskegee Institute. This number is 12 less than in 1935 and seven less than in 1934. The number of lynchings in the various states this year was as follows: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee 1 each.

Three of the persons lynched were taken from jails and the other five were taken from officers outside jails. There were 56 instances in which peace officers prevented lynchings, a total of 77 persons, five whites and 72 negroes, being involved.

BOWLING GREEN, KY., TIMES-JR
JAN. 10, 1938 J19

8 LYNCHINGS IN 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 10 (INS)—With eight lynchings during 1937, the number remained the same as last year, the annual report of the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and Research said. However, in comparison with figures of 1935 and 1934 there was a decided decrease. Twenty persons were lynched in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

WATERBURY CONN REPUBLICAN
SUNDAY FEBRUARY 13 1938

ANNUAL statistics are published by the Tuskegee Institute in the matter of lynchings in the United States. The number for the past year was eight, the same as 1936. This, however, compares well with the 20 for 1935 and 15 for 1934 and the drop may perhaps be attributed to counter sentiment stirred by the anti-lynching bill which has been before Congress during recent sessions.

The states in which the lynchings occurred in 1937, and the number for each were: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one, and all of the victims were Negroes, emphasizing facts we all know, namely that lynching is a Southern manifestation, almost exclusively, and the motive for it lies bedded in racial hatred.

A particularly dismal aspect of the 1937 lynching picture is the blow torch ordeal to which two of the victims were submitted. An encouraging feature is the fact that there were 56 instances of the authorities, by alert and determined action, saving victims from lawless mobs.

If the congressional agitation against lynching is indeed to be thanked for a less abject record through the South in the past two years, perhaps we are witnessing a consciousness in that section of the deep revulsion with which mob action there is viewed in sister states. Maybe it would be too much to hope that such an influence will finally solve the problem and banish the lynching spirit but it would be a most welcome outcome. A federal law against lynching would be an extension of the federal authority unnecessary if states would do their duty and perhaps an encroachment on the rights of the states that the supreme court would not allow.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - Dec.

5815

MADISONVILLE, KY., MESSENGER
JAN. 6, 1938 J12

FLORIDA WORST STATE

Tuskegee's annual report of lynchings for the last year includes a total of eight, of which two were committed in Mississippi and three in Florida.

This raises a question. According to all statistical summaries, Mississippi is the worst state, economically, politically, culturally, hygienically and every other way.

But in 1937 Mississippi had only two lynchings, against Florida's three. Moreover, it was in Florida that Ku Kluxism broke out again last year. It was in Florida that a labor organizer was beaten to death, perhaps by policemen, although nobody has gone to jail for it. It is in Florida that cafes patronized by visitors are wrecked by natives who dislike the visitors' morals.

It is in evidence that Mississippi hates Negroes; but it is in evidence that Florida hates everybody, including even tourists who go to the State to spend their vacation, and with more venom against labor organizers than even Henry Ford exhibits.

This reminds us that the figures showing Mississippi as the worst State were collected some years ago. Perhaps it is time to revise the statistical tables to see if they still tell the same story.

TYLER, TEX. COURIER-TIMES
DEC. 28. 1937 J11

Law Enforcement

You will recall that the chief purpose of the misnamed anti-lynching bill is to compel law enforcement officers to protect prisoners threatened with mob violence.

Well, yesterday, with the year in its final week, Tuskegee Institute, outstanding negro school, put out its final figures on 1937 lynchings. The total was eight, the same as last year.

Texans, checking the list of five states in which mob violence occurred, were glad to note that no lynching marred our orderly processes of the law during the twelvemonth.

But to us one of the most significant parts of the Tuskegee report was a statement that, in 56 instances, officers of the law had prevented lynchings during the year.

Yet a bunch of cheap politicians are going right ahead in January and try to place an unnecessary and unconstitutional law on the statute books.

ABILENE, TEX. EV. REP.-NEWS
DEC. 29, 1937 J12

Lynching Declines.

R. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, writes that lynchings in the United States in 1937 were the same as in 1936, eight; twelve fewer than in 1935 and seven fewer than in 1934. All of the victims were taken from the hands of the law, three directly from jails.

Over against these blots on the law's record may be placed 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings, saving the lives of five white men and 72 negroes. All of the lynching victims were negroes. Florida had the worst record, with three; Tennessee one, Alabama one, Georgia one and Mississippi two. Texans will note with pride that the Lone Star State was lynch-free in 1937—a tribute to the good sense of Texans in general and the vigilance of her officers in particular.

Fifty-one of the 56 lynchings thwarted by officers were in Southern states, five in Northern states. This is a fair record which tends to disprove the contention of advocates of the federal antilynch law that it is needed to end this barbarous practice. The South is slowly but surely doing away with lynching, thanks to courageous officers and the operation of public opinion. Given a few more years and the disgraceful practice will be stamped out altogether.

People have come to realize that the chief sufferer at any lynching party is the majesty of the law. More and more it is being allowed to take its course.

COSHOCTON OHIO TRIBUNE
WEDNESDAY JANUARY 5 1938

Officers and Lynchings

THE annual compilation of statistics on lynchings in the United States by the president of Tuskegee Institute provides an excellent argument for the enactment of the federal antilynching bill now pending in the senate. All eight of the victims in 1937 were taken from the hands of the law—three removed by mobs from jails and five taken from officers of the law outside of jails. On the other hand, in 56 instances—51 of them in the southern states—vigilant and dutiful officers of the law prevented lynchings. These officers either removed their prisoners to places of safety or strengthened the guard or used authority and force to turn back mobs bent on taking the law into their own hands. Had the officers of the law in the eight lynching cases exercised the same care and provided the same protection as those in the 56 cases, the United States would now be looking back on a year free of lynchings. And that is precisely what the Wagner-Van Nuys bill seeks to do—to require that same diligence in duty or the payment of a heavy penalty for the failure to afford adequate protection.

FREMONT OHIO MESSENGER
TUESDAY JANUARY 4, 1938

LYNCHING ON DECLINE

A gratifying commentary on the progress of civilization in the United States is found in the few lynchings that occur in a year, as compared with the period preceding 1900 when the lynchings for a single year quite consistently ran above one hundred and in 1892 reached the black record of 231.

Figures gathered by F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, show a total of eight lynchings in 1937—exactly the same as in 1936.

Except for an occasional reversion, the past 37 years have been marked by a consistent decline in the number of lynchings. It is interesting to note that all eight of the 1937 lynchings were in southern states, the record being Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

From this showing it would appear that even those states in which lynching was resorted to with considerable frequency in earlier years have established law and order to the extent of abolishing this manifestation of barbarity.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. TIMES
JAN. 5, 1938 J11

THE LY. NG RECORD.

The lynching record in 1937 falls somewhat short of being an ideal defense against the argument that what the Nation needs to stamp out that form of mob violence is a Federal antilynching law. According to the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were, up to December 24, eight lynchings this year, the same number as in 1936. The fact that in 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, and the additional fact that the number of lynchings this year is twelve less than in 1935 are cited by opponents of the anti-lynching bill as evidence of increasing enlightenment in the sections where lynchings occur most frequently.

The South is, of course, the greater offender. The eight lynchings in 1937 occurred in Southern States—one in Tennessee; one in Georgia; one in Alabama; two in Mississippi, and three in Florida—and of the fifty-six instances in which lynchings were prevented, fifty-one occurred in the South and five in the North. The number of instances in which prompt police action frustrated lynch mobs is the only gratifying factor in the Tuskegee Institute's report. Those who contend the reduction in lynchings since 1935 reveals the South is dealing effectively with the problem have yet to explain the fact that in 1935, there were five more lynchings than in 1934.

Apologists for the South have also to explain why it was that every lynching in 1937 was committed despite the fact that the victims were in the hands of the law. According to the Tuskegee report, three of the victims were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Those lynchings could easily have been prevented if officers charged with protecting the lives of the victims had upheld their sworn duty.

The records show that 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, were saved from death at the hands of mobs. In fifty-one of the instances, the prisoners were either removed from jails near which the population was aroused, or the number of ...ases at the jails was increased. In five instances, armed forces were used to repel the would-be lynchers. Considering the number of persons lynched, the number of lynchings prevented gives rise to the hope that progress is being made. But the South still has good reason for little more than hope. For the fact remains that not in a single case of lynching in 1937 has there been a conviction. The mobs have been fewer, but their members have gone unpunished.

A Federal antilynching law would create a situation in which the Federal authority would inevitably come into conflict with the police power of the State. If the pending antilynching bill were enacted and upheld by the Supreme Court, it would still be far from the ideal way to deal with a perplexing social problem. Yet that method is apparently about to be adopted, and solely because the South has refused to deal realistically with a relic of barbarism; because the South still refuses to punish those who ride with mobs.

SOUTH ATTLEBORO MASS CHRON
SATURDAY JANUARY 8 1938

Church And Lynching

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, reported eight lynchings of Negroes in 1937 and that in 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings. The long-time trend of lynchings is downward, and President Patterson said it was due in part to a new spirit among Southern churches and churchmen.

A prominent Catholic praised a Hindu this week, when the Papal Legate at the Madras, India, Eucharist Congress said in a public address: "Outside the Church no one perhaps echoes more eloquently the Church's appeal to Christian ethics than Mohandas K. Gandhi, who in his immense endeavor for India's economic uplift never loses sight of the supremacy of spiritual values."

Lawrenceville, Ga., News-Herald
January 13 1938

Information Concerning Lynchings for 1937

Following is interesting information concerning lynchings for the year 1937: It is found, according to records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

ROCK ISLAND ILL ARGUS
THURSDAY JANUARY 13 1938

Fewer Lynchings.

It is the plea of Senator Borah and a group of senators from southern states, who are filibustering against the anti-lynching bill, that the south has made great progress in eliminating lynching.

According to the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial institute of Alabama, eight persons were lynched in 1937, and this is to be compared with 20 for 1935 and 15 in 1934. The 1936 figure was eight.

In 1937 there were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, 51 of these in southern states. Altogether, 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Considering only the south, officers saved 72 persons and allowed eight to be lynched. All of the eight persons were taken from officers outside of jails, and the eight cases occurred in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

It should be borne in mind that about 12,000 persons were murdered in gangster warfare, chiefly in the north, last year; that 38,000 were killed by automobiles, and nearly 1,000 met death by mob violence of one kind or another, largely around mining and large industrial centers.

The facts are that the number of lynchings has decreased from several hundred a few years ago to eight in 1937, and an average of but 14 annually in a 10-year period. As originally drawn the anti-lynching bill would work against northern communities that permitted gangster, racketeer and mob violences to go unpunished.

While we think that eight lynchings are eight too many, we think it is obvious that the south has made commendable progress in putting its own house in order. We have always been opposed to lynching in north or south, but it does not follow that this anti-lynching bill represents the best attempt to put an end to a barbaric practice. And we have a suspicion that more than a few who support the measure planned the bill to be political bait in crowded northern negro districts—a lure for the negro vote.

If the administration should succeed in passing this bill it would face the possibility of a split in the Democratic party and losing a large part of the "solid south." The bill involves too much federal coercion and invasion of states' rights. In view of the reduction in the number of lynchings that has marked the last half-century we think that southern law-enforcement officials are being supported more and more by public opinion and that a good prospect exists for the virtual elimination of lynchings in the south. Under such circumstances we cannot see the necessity for the bill.

For that matter lynchings just as cruel and baseless have taken place in the north and some of these have come under our personal observation. Many of the murders by gangsters in the north are every whit as reprehensible as any southern lynching bee.

We doubt if any law can put an absolute stop to all lynchings. Some times, under dire provocation, a community takes the execution of justice into its own hands. We do not for a moment defend such a practice, but we recognize the fact that human passions at fever heat are occasionally liable to ignore all considerations of law or humanity.

We take comfort in the undoubted fact that the number of lynchings is decreasing at a most encouraging rate.

Hendersonville, N. C., Times-News
January 11 1938

NO COMFORT FOR THE SOUTH

No comfort to the South is contanied in the possibility that the so-called wages and hours measure will be finally enacted or in the probability that the cotton acreage restriction policy will continue to be followed. It may be too drastic to say that the South is coming more and more to be treated as the stepchild of the nation, but there are signs that this is exactly the case. For example, the anti-lynching bill, which, as this is written, is scheduled to come up once more in the senate, is aimed directly at the South. There is not the slightest need for a measure of this kind, as is shown clearly enough by the latest report of the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research, which reveals that only eight lynchings occurred during all of 1937. This, to be sure, is just eight too many, but it reveals much progress toward stamping out completely the evil of lynching. The number of lynchings during each decade has been reduced steadily for the last fifty years, which is in itself a good reason for believing that the South eventually will be able to eliminate lynching entirely. Another interesting fact contained in the Tuskegee Institute report is that officers of the law prevented lynchings in the South in fifty-one instances. Isn't that a good sign that southern law enforcement officials, backed by public opinion are doing their best to reduce lynching to the vanishing point? And yet it is more than possible that the so-called anti-lynching law, with all the attempted federal coercion and invasion of states' rights which it embodies, will be approved by the United States senate. It already has been approved by the house of representatives. Clearly, the South is going to have to protest, and to protest vigorously and loudly, unless it is willing to see more and more of its rights taken away and submerged in the powers of a vast centralized bureaucracy. What is the South going to do about it? Unless an answer is given soon, and action taken, it is going to be too late to answer and too late for action.—Texas Weekly.

HOUSTON, TEX., PRESS.
JAN. 8, 1938 J18

CHURCH AND LYNCHING

DR. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, reported eight lynchings of Negroes in 1937 and that in 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings.

The long-time trend of lynchings is downward, and President Patterson said it was due in part to a new spirit among Southern churches and churchmen.

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan- - Dec.

5816

Salisbury, N C Post
December 27, 1937

Eight Lynchings During the Year

Eight lynchings occurred during 1937, according to information from President F. D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute, of Alabama, which keeps annual records. This is the same number as for 1936, states President Patterson; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935, and seven less than the number 15 for 1934.

Continuing his report, he says:

"All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

"The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

Ft. Pierce, Fla., News & Tribune
December 27, 1937

1937 Lynch Toll Is Eight Persons

Florida Leads 5 Southern States in Lynchings During Year

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and Research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states:

Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Of the 1937 lynching three were removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as rape 1; crime against nature and robbery 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

Macon, Ga., Telegraph
December 28, 1937

SOUTH IS BLAMED FOR MOB DEATHS

President of Tuskegee Releases Statistics on Lynchings; Five States Named

Five southeastern states accounted for all 1937's eight lynchings, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, said yesterday.

In a letter to local newspapers, Patterson said all the country's mob killings were confined to Florida, with three; Mississippi, with two, and Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia with one each.

The president of the Negro institution of Alabama said main alleged causes for the lynchings were murder, which accounted for four; wounding officers of the law, two; rape, and crime against nature and robbery, one each.

In the cases of two men slain by mobs, they were tortured before being killed, the Negro educator said. Both men, killed in Mississippi, were burned by blow torches. One then was shot; the other burned to death.

In spite of the number of successful lynchings, at least 56 were foiled. Five were in northern states; 51 in the South. In 51 cases, lynchings were avoided by shifting of prisoners to other jails or increasing of peace officers' forces. In the remaining five instances, mobs were turned aside by armed force.

All eight lynching victims were Negroes, President Patterson said.

Macon, Ga., News
December 27, 1937

OLD JUDGE LYNCH SETS BAD RECORD

Eight Lives Taken by Mob Violence During Year, All Being in South

Old Judge Lynch took the lives of eight Negroes during 1937, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, said in a leter to The Evening News today.

All lynchings took place in Southeastern states, the Negro educator said. One was in Georgia.

In 56 instances, however, mob killings were averted. Attempted lynchings occurred five times in Northern states and 51 additional times in the South.

The number of persons killed by lynching during 1937 was the same as that of 1936. It showed a decrease of 12 under the number for 1935 and seven less than those of 1934.

Other Attempts Foiled

In 51 cases when lynchings were avoided, Patterson continued, the attempts were foiled by removal of prisoners from one jail to another or by increasing armed forces at the jails. In the remaining five cases, would-be lynchers were repelled by armed force. Saved were 7 persons, including five white men and two Negresses.

At least two of the eight victims were tortured before they were killed. In Mississippi, two Negroes were burned by blow torches. One then was shot to death and the other burned.

Murder, the Tuskegee president said, was the outstanding cause of mob violence. Four persons died as a result of charges of murder; one for rape; one for alleged crime against nature and robbery, and two for wounding officers of the law.

States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state were: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one, and Georgia, one.

Eufaula, Ala. Tribune
December 27, 1937

Eight Negroes Lynched This Year

Records kept by Tuskegee Institute reveal eight lynchings during the present year. All the victims were negroes. One of the lynchings was in Alabama, three in Florida, one in Georgia, two in Mississippi and one in Tennessee.

The number was the same for 1936.

Concord, N C Tribune
December 28, 1937

ESCAPED AGAIN.

Unless the mob spirit breaks through within the next couple of days, North Carolina in 1937 again will escape without a single lynching against her record.

Eight persons were lynched during the year according to President F. D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute, and the lynchings were confined to five Southern States.

North Carolina hasn't solved the last mob attack within her borders, primarily because those in authority didn't care whether they solved it, so it seems we are fortunate in that the mob spirit didn't manifest itself during the year. In some instances our officers have been courageous enough to fight the mob; in others they turned over their prisoners with the old excuse of being "overpower by masked men."

Lynchings can be stopped throughout the land when a majority of the people want them stopped. And they can't be stopped by federal legislation. The desire must come from within not from without.

Tifton, Ga., Gazette
December 28, 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS IN 1937

Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Dec. 28—According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute eight persons were lynched in 1937. This is the same number, eight, as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20, for 1935; and seven less than the number, 15, for 1934. All the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings; five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented, or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi 2; Tennessee, 1.

LYNCH EIGHT IS 1937 RECORD

The Tuskegee Institute
December 23, 1937.

Dear Sir:

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings; five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Colored, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Colored. The offenses charged were rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Columbus, Miss., Commercl Disp
December 28, 1937

56 LYNCHINGS PREVENTED

Statistics compiled and issued by Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, show that in 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings in 1937. Five were prevented in Northern States and 51 in Southern States.

These figures should be the answer to the unanswerable proposal for an anti-lynching law now pending in Congress.

The South did more to prevent lynchings than all of the north put together.

In the North they simply let the racketeers, murderers, and gangsters slay their victims.

Under the proposed anti-lynching law, however, gangsters, racketeers and strikers would be exempt from its provisions.

SOUTH IS BLAMED FOR MOB DEATHS

President of Tuskegee Releases Statistics on Lynchings; Five States Named

Five southeastern states accounted for all 1937's eight lynchings, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, said yesterday.

In a letter to local newspapers, Patterson said all the country's mob killings were confined to Florida with three; Mississippi, with two, and Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia with one each.

The president of the Negro institution of Alabama said many alleged causes for the lynchings were murder, which accounted for four; wounding officers of the law, two; rape, and crime against nature and robbery, one each.

In the cases of two men slain by mobs, they were tortured before being killed, the Negro educator said. Both men, killed in Mississippi, were burned by blow torches. One then was shot; the other burned to death.

In spite of the number of successful lynchings, at least 56 were foiled. Five were in northern states; 51 in the South. In 51 cases, lynchings were avoided by shifting of prisoners to other jails or increasing of peace officers' forces. In the remaining five instances, mobs were turned aside by armed force.

All eight lynching victims were Negroes, President Patterson said.

compiled by the department of records and research of Tuskegee and released this week by Dr Frederick D. Patterson, president. The figure is 12 less than the number 20 lynched in 1935 and seven fewer than 1934's total of 15.

All of the eight victims were Negroes and all were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside the jails. The most brutal of them all was the double lynching at Duck Hill, Miss., when the victims were first tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other burned to death.

Despite the statements of many Southern politicians who defend lynching as a protection for white womanhood in Dixie, only one of the eight was accused of rape. Of the remaining seven, one was charged with a crime against nature and robbery, four with murder, and two with wounding officers of the law.

Florida led the parade of the states in which lynchings occurred.

Eight Lynchings Are Recorded as Old Year Closes

TUSKEGEE, Dec. 30—Eight persons, the same total as for 1936, were lynched in America this year, according to records

No Arrests In 8 Lynchings Of 1937

NEW YORK—(SNS) — There were eight lynchings during 1937 in the United States and not a single arrest of any suspected lynchers, the N.A.A.C.P. reported here today.

The most brutal lynching of the year was the double killing of Roosevelt Townes and "Boot Jack" McDaniels by a mob at Duck Hill, Miss., April 13. The two men were tied to trees, stripped and tortured with blow torches before being killed.

The most tragic lynching of the year was that of Wesley Johnson at Abbeville, Alabama February 1. Attorney General A. A. Carmichael of Alabama stated to the Alabama supreme court on June 5 that investigation had established that Johnson was completely innocent, that the sheriff knew he was innocent when he arrested him but took him into custody in order to satisfy local public opinion. Even with this knowledge, the sheriff did nothing to prevent Johnson's being lynched.

Florida led the year with three lynchings, followed by Mississippi two, and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee one each.

Lynching Is Tardily Obsolescent

From Newport News Daily Press

One of the principal arguments used by the Southern members of Congress who have fought the anti-lynching legislation is that lynching is on the decrease. The evil, they say, will cure itself in the long run and so no federal interference is necessary. That thought is borne out to some extent by the figures for this year though even one lynching is inexcusable many and the argument will not hold good until a vast improvement is shown even over this year's record.

The summary, compiled by President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute, reads thus:

"I find according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number (eight) as for 1936, 12 less than the number 20 for 1935 and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States, and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

This record shows that lynching obsolesence is all too tardy and that the forces of education are but slowly leavening the lump of those who would resort to the law of the jungle. If there is some reassurance in the fact that officers of the law successfully resisted mobs in 56 instances, there is also grim warning in the fact that there were 56 mobs bent on taking the law into their own hands during the year. We must cure the lynching evil not only by the efficiency of our protection of prisoners but by the elimination of the mob itself through education. It is not enough to say that lynching is on the wane. Its complete elimination is the only acceptable condition.

BIG SPRING (TEX.) HERALD
JAN. 3, 1938 J15

Lynching In 1937

Those who believe that anti-lynching sentiment in the South has developed to a point where it makes a federal law unnecessary can find support for that belief in the lynching figures for 1937. The statistics as compiled by Tuskegee Institute show eight lynchings in the year. That is the same figure as for 1936, which, if we recall correctly, waas the lowest attained. It compares with 20 lynchings in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Despite the improvement shown, 1937 saw the demaand for a federal anti-lynching law become more persistent than ever. The lynching in Floridaa, when the use of a blow-torch gave the affair a particularly horrible aspect, seemed for a while to defeat those who held that a federal law was inadvisable. The anti-lynching bill now pending seems doomed, but that is more because of features regarded as unworkable than because of opposition to the principle it involves.

The Tuskegee report shows that there were 56 other manifestations of the mob spirit, in which officers either outwitted or overawed would-be lynchers. One heartening feature of the situation in regard to lynching is the general attitude of peace officers in the South. The great majority of such officers realize their responsibility in such matters. That was not true a decade or so ago.

The 50-year record of mob violence shows a curious parallel between the price of cotton and the development of the mob spirit. Almost without exception, lynchings have been more numerous in years of low-priced cotton, less numerous in the years when the South's chief crop brought a good price.

The year just closed was an exception to that rule. The price of cotton has been below the cost of production, yet the unsatisfactory market has not been attended by many manifestations of the mob spirit.

The 1937 report has its encouraging aspects, but it does not change the situation in regard to lynching. That is to say, the South must either convince the nation that it can eradicate the mob evil, or submit to a federal law.—(Wichita Times.)

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, sent Press.

Jan. -Dec.

5817

EUREKA, CAL., TIMES
DECEMBER 31, 1937

LYNCHING REDUCED

America's disgraceful record of lynchin[g] gradually being reduced by the force [of] public opinion and better administration [of] law. The Tuskegee Institute of Alabama, founded by Booker T. Washington, keeps [a] detailed record and reports eight lynchings i[n] 1937, which is the same as for 1936 an[d] much better than the 20 reported in 193[5] and 45 in 1934.

That is still bad enough, but it is encour[a]ging to read in the Tuskegee report that [in] there were 56 instances in which officers of [the] law prevented lynchings. In some of these [cases] more than one person was in peril, and [the] report states that 77 were saved from [a] death at the hands of mobs.

The large majority of officers, then, are doing their duty. It is fair to supose that the officers did their best to prevent lynchings in some of the eight that did occur. The record does not support the contentions of those who want to put the federal government into a field that is reserved by the constitution to the states, on the grounds that local officers are not doing their duty.

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO REVIEW
MONDAY JANUARY 3 1938

The 77 Other Cases

TUSKEGEE Institute's annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is customarily used as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched; 7 less than for 1936. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings—51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselves.

Tampa, Fla. Tribune
January 11, 1938

Worst State

The Baltimore Sun, doubtless under the influence of that vindictive "friend" of the South, H. L. Mencken, picks Florida as the worst state in the Union for 1937, because Florida had one more lynching than Mississippi, hitherto holding that distinction. Here's the Sun's comment:

Tuskegee's annual report of lynchings for the last year includes a total of eight, of which two were committed in Mississippi and three in Florida.

This raises a question. According to all statistical summaries, Mississippi is the worst state, economically, politically, curturally, hygienically and every other way.

But in 1937 Mississippi had only two lynchings, against Florida's three. Moreover, it was in Florida that Ku Kluxism broke out again last year. It was in Florida that a labor organizer was beaten to death, perhaps by policemen, although nobody has gone to jail for it. It was in Florida that cafes patronized by visitors are wrecked by natives who dislike the visitors' morals.

It is in evidence that Mississippi hates negroes; but it is in evidence that Florida hates everybody, including even tourists who go to the state to spend their vacation, and with more venom against labor organizers than even Jersey City exhibits.

This reminds us that the figures showing Mississippi as the worst state were collected some years ago. Perhaps it is time to revise the statistical tables to see if they still tell the same story.

Last year was the one year in all history that Florida led the country in the number of lynchings. That was unfortunate, but exceptional. The state's past comparatively good record in that respect is ignored in the Sun's present characterization. The statement of the Sun's editorial that "Florida hates everybody, including even tourists who go to the state to spend their vacations", is, of course, utterly false; and is refuted, if in no other way, by the large increase each season in the number of tourists who come to Florida and by the testimony they give by their coming and their stay here that Florida is hospitable to them, that Florida gives them the best climate, recreation and entertainment, and that, certainly, Florida doesn't hate them.

Florida pleads regretfully guilty to certain specific charges that have been brought against it, although, even in those aggravated cases, Floridians as a people and Florida as a state are not to be held accountable for the misdeeds of a few undesirable citizens or "floaters", but all Florida resents the charge that this is the worst state in the Union, because it happened to have as many as three lynchings last year.

KANSAS CITY KANS. KANSAN
DEC. 28, 1937 J6

A Year's Lynching Record

There was no reduction in the number of lynchings occurring in the United States during 1937, but the number was held to that of last year, according to the figures annually compiled by Tuskegee Institute.

The number was eight in both years, as compared with twenty in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

It is significant to note that there were fifty-six instances in which officers prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and fifty-one in southern states. A total of seventy-seven persons, including five white men and seventy-two Negroes, were saved from mobs in these instances. This would seem to indicate a welcomed stiffening of opposition on the part of officers to lynching mobs and shows that such action is effective in forestalling mob action.

In view of the pronounced opposition of southern congressmen to proposed federal anti-lynching legislation, it is particularly significant to note that every one of the eight lynchings occurred in a southern state. They occurred as follows: Alabama, 1; Georgia, 3 Mississippi, 2, and Tennessee, 1.

This country will not have a clear record in this revolting manner until there are no lynchings at all. Part of the progress can be attained thru legislation. Proposed federal legislation would serve chiefly to strengthen state and local law enforcement efforts, which in turn is another major part of the desired progress. Certainty of the law taking its proper course in the case of every crime will go far to remove the incentive for mob action. But the greatest need of all is for a more enlightened spirit among all people to the end that all will regard mob demonstrations as blots on social processes and on individual consciences.

KANSAS CITY, MO., STAR
DEC. 29, 1937 D30

As Gentlemen Debate.

While the antilynching bill remains high up on the senate calendar and is scheduled for another round of debate soon after Congress meets again next week, it is interesting to note another report of progress in the campaign against mob violence in America. It suggests what has been going on in the last twenty years as talk proceeded intermittently at Washington over some form of federal control.

To date, the number of lynchings this year has been eight, according to the record kept by Tuskegee Institute. If the year ends with the number unchanged it will equal the best showing made in more than half a century, or since annual tabulations were begun. The previous low of eight was recorded in 1932, with the total for 1936 standing at thirteen and that for 1935 at twenty-eight. Thus the irregular decline has come since the record high of 231 in 1892. Thus may the advance of law enforcement, public opinion and civilization continue, irrespective of the adoption of a federal policy on lynching.

NILES OHIO TIMES
THURSDAY JANUARY 6 1938

Lynching Records

DATA on lynching compiled by Tuskegee Institute may be relied upon, there would seem to be some reason to hope that, before the matter controversy over the issue is end[ed] in Congress, the advocates of a Federa[l] law on the subject will not have a great dea[l] of basis to urge such an enactment.

Tuskegee Institute reports that there were but eight lynchings of Negroes last year, the lowest with the exception of 1932, when there were also eight, since the records have been kept. In 1892 there were 231. From 1910 to 1928 the number varied from a high of 74 to a low of 33. The highest number recently was 30 in 1926. The total for 1933 was 18, and, as has been noted, the record for 19[37] was cut almost in half.

Such disgraceful outbreaks have varied so much from year to year that it is unsafe to predict that they may not again show increase. But the decline of lynchings over a long period of time gives ground for belief that we shall not witness in the future any thing approaching the amount of mob violence that prevailed ten or twenty years ago. This evidence of betterment because of a more vigorous public opinion in the matter, aided by more aggressive enforcement of the law in the localities, shows that the States are not wholly helpless before this menace. Their efforts ought not to cease until the score is perfect.

AKRON OHIO BEACON JOURNAL
FRIDAY DECEMBER 31 1937

1937's Lynch Record

Members of congress who held up the recent special session for days by filibustering against the anti-lynching bill ought to be made to read Tuskegee Institute's annual report on mob murders. It is an interesting document.

The 1937 death toll was eight. All victims were Negroes. Besides hanging, vigilantes resorted to blow torches, shooting and burning. The eight crimes were committed in five different states.

On the "brighter" side, if it can be called that, 77 persons were saved from mob fury by the action of peace authorities. In five instances a show of force was necessary to avert violence.

Eight deaths isn't as ghastly a record as in many previous years. But it is still enough to evidence the need for the legislation now pending. An anti-lynch law may not stop mob violence, but at least it will be a deterrent.

Mob leaders will think twice before they murder if they know that it isn't only friendly local officials with whom they must cope, but the federal government as well.

CANTON OHIO REPOSITORY
FRIDAY DECEMBER 31 1937

the 77 Other Cases

TUSKEGEE Institute's annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is customarily used as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched, 7 less than for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings —51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselves.

OMAHA NEBR. WORLD-HERALD
JAN. 1, 1938 J8

Dishonor Roll, 1937

Florida heads the year's dishonor roll with three lynchings according to the annual compilation made by Tuskegee institute. Mississippi follows with two and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee with one each, a total of eight. This is no worse than the record of 1936 and much better than that of 1935 and 1934.

The good news relating to this subject is contained in the announcement that in 56 instances the lynching of 77 persons was prevented. In five of these cases mobs were repelled by armed force.

As usual the south is by many degrees the most conspicuous in this dark record. And black men by many times outnumber whites as objects of lynching mob fury. But the north hasn't wholly clean hands. Five of the attempted lynchings occurred in the north and five of the victims saved from mob vengeance were whites.

One of the most healthy signs of modern times is the steady growth of an anti-lynching sentiment on the south. Although a majority of southern congressmen still oppose the proposal for federal interference with this kind of outlawry other tests indicate that it is at least an even question as to which way public opinion is inclined. Some influential southern newspapers openly advocate the measure and it has prominent organized support.

ANNISTON, ALA. STAR
JAN. 8, 1938 J14

Lynching Records

While the filibuster continues in the Senate to kill the anti-lynching bill, it is interesting to note the following comment on lynching records, as printed by The Baltimore Sun:

"If data on lynching compiled by Tuskegee Institute may be relied upon, there would seem to be some reason to hope that, before the bitter controversy over the issue is ended in Congress, the advocates of a federal law on the subject will not have a great deal of basis to urge such an enactment.

"Tuskegee Institute reports that there were but eight lynchings of Negroes last year, the lowest with the exception of 1932, when there were also eight, since the records have been kept. In 1892 there were 231. From 1910 to 1923 the number varied from a high of 74 to a low of 33. The highest number recently was 30 in 1926. The total for 1936 was 13 and, as has been noted, the record for 1937 was cut almost in half.

"Such disgraceful outbreaks have varied so much from year to year that it is unsafe to predict that they may not again show increase. But the decline of lynchings over a long period of time gives ground for belief that we shall not witness in the future anything approaching the amount of mob violence that prevailed 10 or 20 years ago. This evidence of betterment because of a more vigorous public opinion in the matter, aided by more aggressive enforcement of the law in the localities, shows that the states are not wholly helpless before this menace. Their efforts ought not to cease until the score is perfect."

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., EXPRESS
JAN. 6, 1938 J14

TEXAS AGAIN ABSENT FROM THE LYNCHING RECORD

The lynch-murder infamy, which only a few years ago disgraced numerous Southern States, including Texas —that too frequently ranked at or near the head of the annual record— is apparently on the decline again.

During 1937 — the record kept by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute indicates—eight persons were put to death by mobs. All the victims were Negroes and the atrocities occurred in five Southern States.

Florida heads the list, charged with three mob crimes. Mississippi, with a lynching that claimed two victims, is in second place. Texas is absent from the roll.

The shocking circumstances attending the Mississippi outbreak—in which two Negroes on trial for having killed a white man were seized from officers and burned to death with a blow-torch —probably influenced Congress to pass the Gavagan Bill, making lynching an offense against the Federal Government. That measure still is pending in the Senate, where filibusters have delayed action on it and may defeat it in the end. Still, the House's action had a good moral effect and may partially account for the relatively low lynching total.

However—as the Tuskegee report shows—the greater share of the credit belongs to fearless peace officers— mostly sheriffs and deputies — who foiled 56 mobs bent upon lynching. Swift removal of the prisoners to safety, quick-witted ruses to deceive the mob and (in five instances) armed resistance saved 77 persons—including five white men—from lynch-murder.

Until the slower processes of education shall create the enlightened sentiment needed to wipe out the blot forever, such official courage and resourcefulness must remain the people's bulwark against the mob-menace. For that reason the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, in Atlanta, does well to reward those traits with gold medals.

COUNCIL BLUFFS IA NONPT
SUNDAY JANUARY 9 1938

Anti-Lynching Law Unnecessary

Our abhorrence of lynching is so great that we can find no words too harsh to characterize the despicable and cowardly acts of mobs. Nevertheless, we do not believe that the anti-lynching bill now being debated in the senate is necessary or desirable.

We base our opinion on a letter recently received from Tuskegee Institute, the great Negro school of the south, founded by Booker T. Washington. According to this letter, lynching is rapidly being wiped out. Only eight men were lynched during 1936 and the same number in 1937. There were fifteen lynchings in 1934 and twenty in 1935.

It is true that all of the 1937 lynchings occurred in the south and all of the victims were Negroes. Three lynchings occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. We do not condone these outrages.

But during the same year, there were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. All but five of these were in the southern states.

We submit that the states are making significant progress in dealing with this situation. There would seem to be little occasion for the federal government to intervene in view of the progress that has been made. We are convinced that the southern people are making an honest and sincere effort to wipe out this disgrace.

In view of the progress made and the undesirability of federal intervention in matters the states are competent to handle, we feel that congress ought to drop the matter for the time being at least. Moreover, we believe that the bill now pending is unconstitutional as Senator Borah so ably maintains.

BRISTOW, OKLA., RECORD
JAN. 6, 1938 J15

Lynchings

EIGHT PERSONS were lynched in 1937 in five Southern states, according to the annual report of Tuskegee institute.

The number of lynch victims was the same as for 1936, but was 12 less than for 1935 and seven less than for 1934, the report shows.

All of the victims were Negroes and were under arrest. Three were taken from jails and five from officers.

Officers prevented lynchings in 56 instances.

The states in which the Negroes were lynched were Alabama, Florida, 3, Georgia, Mississippi, 2, and Tennessee.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - Dec.

5818

Opelousas, La. Gazette

DEC 28 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS IN 1937

Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Dec. 28.—According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute, eight persons were lynched in 1937. This is the same number, eight, as for 1936; 12 less than the number, 20, for 1935; and seven less than the number, 15, for 1934. All the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings; five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented, or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states:

Florida three; Mississippi two; Tennessee one; Alabama one; Georgia one.

In 56 instances, the institute deported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Of the 1937 lynchings three were removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as rape one; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer two.

TAMPA FLA TRIBUNE
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

8 Negroes Reported Lynched During 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(A.P.) Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 lynch

CHARLOTTE N C OBSERVER
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

LYNCHING TOLL HELD TO EIGHT

Institute Reports Same Number Killed By Mobs in 1937 as in 1936.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

Deaths by States this year:

Florida three; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one; Alabama, one; Georgia, one.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these instances occurred in northern States and 51 in the South.

The institute, America's largest negro college, issued its report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offenses charged against the victims were listed as rape, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding of officer, two.

OCALA FLA STAR
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

Florida Leads Nation In Lynchings In 1937 Is Tuskegee's Report

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states: Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Of the 1937 lynchings three were removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Offenses charged against the victims were listed as rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Durham, N. C. Sun
December 27, 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS OCCUR OVER 1937

Tuskegee Institute Reports Florida Leads With 3; Mississippi Next With 2

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officer of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: Rape 1, crime against nature and robbery 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

TRENTON N J TIMES
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

LYNCHINGS OF YEAR

To the Editor of the Times:

Sir—I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and another was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern States and 51 in southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would by lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi 2; Tennessee, 1.

F. D. PATTERSON
President

Tuskegee, Alabama.

Miami. Fla. Herald
December 28, 1937

THE South maintained its lynch record during 1937, according to the Tuskegee Institute. Eight negroes died by lynching, the same as in 1936. This is neither progress nor retreat. Florida led the disgraceful procession with three. It is more pleasant to note that officers prevented executions in 56 instances. The law can prevail

Thomasville, Ga. Times-Enterprise
December 27, 1937

EIGHT NEGROES DIED BY LYNCHING DURING THE YEAR OF 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
December 27, 1937

Eight Are Lynched During Year, 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Savannah, Ga. Times
December 28, 1937

Southeast Lists Eight Lynchings For Year 1937

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Dec. 28—Eight lynchings occurred in five Southern States during 1937, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, announced today.

Three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

Eight lynchings were recorded in 1936, 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Clinton, S. C. Chronicle
December 30, 1937

Eight Lynchings Recorded In Year

Same Number Reported This Year As Last.

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and reasearch reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida, 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer, 2.

Birmingham, Ala. News
December 28, 1937

Decrease Shown In Lynching Toll Over Dixie In 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching at the hands of Southern mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of records and research has reported.

The 1936 death toll was identical.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and 72 Negroes. Five of these instances occurred in Northern states and 51 in the South.

The institute, America's largest Negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Two were tortured with a blow torch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

The death toll by states: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee ,1; Alabama, 1; Georgia 1.

Americus Ga. Recorder
December 28, 1937

EIGHT LYNCHED IN PAST YEAR

TUSKEEGEE, Ala., Dec. 28 —(UP)—Lynch mobs killed eight persons, all Negroes, in the United States during 1937, the Tuskeegee Institute department of research and rec rders reported.

The toll by states:

Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; and Georgia, 1.

The same number met lynch deaths in 1936, records howed.

GAINESVILLE FLA SUN
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

Florida Tops Nation In Number Of Lynchings

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskeegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight. The 1937 death toll by states:

Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

LAGRANGE GA NEWS
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

Eight Persons Were Lynched During 1937

TUSKEEGA, Ala., Dec. 28.—(UP)—Lynch mobs killed eight persons, all negroes, in the United States during 1937, the Tuskeega Institute department of research reported today.

The toll by states:

Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

The same number met lynch deaths in 1936, records showed.

Shreveport, La., Times
January 10, 1938

THE LYNCH TOTAL

Only eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937 and in Louisiana not a single lynching occurred. Also, only five of the 48 states are on the lynching list. It would seem that good progress is being made toward the elimination of lynchings, and that a federal law on the subject might do much more harm than good.

8 Lynched In U.S. During 1937: Records Show All Colored

All Victims In The South; Law Officers Prevented 56 Lynchings During The Year

Florida led the nation in 1937 with three lynchings for the year, closely followed by Mississippi with two while Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia had one each.

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute Institute, there were 8 persons lynched in the United States in 1937. This is the same number, 8, for 1936, 12 less than the number 20 for 1935, and less than the total number, 15, in 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were taken from jails, and five were taken from the hands of officers of the law outside of prisons. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

77 PERSONS SAVED FROM MOBS

There was 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of these instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white and 72 colored, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs in the United States during 1937.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were colored. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding an officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

LYNCHERS GOT EIGHT LAST YR., TUSKEGEE REPORTS

TUSKEGEE, Jan. 6—(ANP)—Eight persons, the same total as for 1936, were lynched in America this year, according to records compiled by he deparmen of records and research at Tuskegee and released this week by Dr. Frderick D. Patterson, president. The figure is 12 less than the number 20 lynched in 1935 and seven fewer than 1934's ttoal of 15.

All of the eight victims were Negroes and all were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside the jails. The most brutal of them all was the double lynching at Duck Hill, Miss., when the victims were first tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other burned to deah.

Despite the statements of many Southern politicians who defend lynching as a protection for white womanhood in Dixie, only one of the eight was accused of rape. Of the remaining seven, one was charged with a crime against nature and robbery, four with murder, and two with wounding officers of the law.

Florida led the parade of the States in which lynchings occurred with a toll of three lives taken in this fashion. Mississippi contributed two and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee had one each.

Officers prevented mob outrages in 56 instances, the records show, with five of these in Northern States and the remaining 51 in the South. In 51 of these cases, prisoners were removed for safekeeping, the guards augmented or other precautions taken. Armed force was used to repel mobs in the other five instances. Through this action, the lives of 77 persons representing five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were spared from mob violence.

BIRMINGHAM ALA. AGE-HERALD
JAN. 8, 1938 J14

Lynching Records

If data on lynching compiled by Tuskegee Institute may be relied upon, there would seem to be some reason to hope that, before the bitter controversy over the issue is ended in Congress, the advocates of a federal law on the subject will not have a great deal of basis to urge such an enactment.

Tuskegee Institute reports that there were but eight lynchings of Negroes last year, the lowest with the exception of 1932, when there were also eight, since the records have been kept. In 1892 there were 231. From 1910 to 1923 the number varied from a high of 74 to a low of 33. The highest number recently was 30 in 1926. The total for 1936 was 13 and, as has been noted, the record for 1937 was cut almost in half.

Such disgraceful outbreaks have varied so much from year to year that it is unsafe to predict that they may not again show increase. But the decline of lynchings over a long period of time gives ground for belief that we shall not witness in the future anything approaching the amount of mob violence that prevailed 10 or 20 years ago. This evidence of betterment because of a more vigorous public opinion in the matter aided by more aggressive enforcement of the law in the localities, shows that the states are not wholly helpless before this menace. Their efforts ought not to cease until the score is perfect.—The Baltimore Sun.

Augusta Ga Herald
December 27, 1937

8 PERSONS LYNCHED IN U. S. IN 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.— (AP) — Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Lynchings-1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press

Jan. – Dec.

5819

LANETT, ALA. NEWS
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

Eight Lynched In 1937, Tuskegee Institute Says

A check made on lynchings throughout the United States by the Tuskegee Institute at Tuskegee and released this week shows that 8 persons were lynched in the United States during the present year.

This is the same number reported in 1936; 12 less than the number reported for the year 1935 and 7 less than the 1934 figure. There were 56 instances wherein officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states.

The report shows that all victims were in the hands of the law at the time of the lynchings. The eight persons lynched were all negroes. The offenses charged were rape, robbery, murder and wounding an officer. The states in which lynchings occurred were Alabama one, Florida three, Georgia one, Mississippi two and Tennessee one.

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of the Tuskagee Institute.

"Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; and Tennessee, one.

"There were 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken.

"In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: Attack, one; crime againts nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer, two."

WINFIELD KANS. COURIER
DEC. 27, 1937 J1

JUDGE LYNCH

While congress prepares for a finish battle over the anti-lynching law, reports compiled by Tuskegee institute show no gain in the number of persons done to death by mobs in the United States in the calendar year just closing. Eight were lynched this year against the same number in 1936.

However, there was a marked decline over the 20 lynched in 1935 and the 15 in 1934. All the persons lynched this year were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five seized from officers outside jails. All those lynched were Negroes.

The Tuskegee report says that two of the eight victims were tortured with blow torches before one was shot to death and the other burned. The offenses charged were various, only one answering with his life for the charge of rape. One was for a crime against nature, one for robbery, four for murder and two for wounding officers of the law.

The bright side of the report is that 56 times officers prevented possible lynchings. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were saved from possible mob violence. In 51 instances prisoners were removed from jails or guards augmented. In five other instances armed force was used to repel would be lynchers.

No lynchings occurred in northern states. The mob actions number three in Florida, two in Mississippi, and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

CINCINNATI OHIO ENQUIRER
THURSDAY DECEMBER 30 1937

Lynch Statistics.

The Tuskegee Institute of Alabama's report on lynchings which occurred during 1937 shows the dimensions of the lynching problem to be quite different from those inferred in the demand for Federal antilynching legislation. The institute reports eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched during 1937. Three were lynched in Florida, two in Mississippi, and one in each of the states of Alabama, Georgia, and Tennessee.

Eight lynchings are just eight too many, but at the same time not a large enough number to prove the claim that state law in the South is impotent to deal with the crime of lynching. Eight lynchings occurred also during 1936, the record of the last two years showing a substantial improvement over 1935, when there were 20, and 1934, when there were 15.

It is, of course, difficult to consider impassively so vicious a crime. Each lynching is likely to be impressively hideous. But when actualities are considered — such factors as provocation, racial stress, air pockets in civilized influence, and other circumstances which enter into mob action—the occurrence of eight lynchings, scattered among five states of the South, is not an indicator that the South either condones or is powerless to curb the crime of lynching, but rather indicates that the reverse is true. Alongside national records of other heinous crimes, including those in which two or more persons participate, the year's total of lynchings is microscopic.

All eight of the persons lynched during 1937 were taken from the custody of officers; three were taken from jail. On the other hand, there were 56 instances in which peace officers prevented lynchings, rescuing from mobs a total of 77 persons, all but five Negroes, according to the Tuskegee Institute's report. Looking behind these statistics, at the instances where peace officers had to deal with overwhelming numbers of lynchers, in localities where only a thin veneer of civilization covers primitive instincts, it is again evident that state law and officers have grappled against lynch instincts with altogether remarkable success. The report of 77 persons saved from mobs, as compared with eight wrested from custody, hardly supports the contention that Federal intervention is necessary because the peace officers of the South wink at lynching.

SYLACAUGA, ALA., ADVANCE
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

EIGHT PERSONS LYNCHED IN '37

Nation's Total Is Same As Last Year, Well Under 1934 And 1935

Birmingham, Ala.—Eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937, the same number as in 1936, it was reported today by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskagee Institute.

The eight lynchings of 1937 show a reduction of 12 from the 1935 total, and are seven less than the number lynched in 1934.

"All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were taken from the jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails," the report stated. The report was signed by

COVINGTON, KY., POST
DEC. 29, 1937 J10

EIGHT ARE KILLED BY MOBS IN 1937

Officials Prevented 56 Possible Lynchings, Records Show

By the United Press.

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Dec. 29.—Lynch mobs killed eight persons, all Negroes, in the United States during 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Research and Records reported today. The toll by states: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1, and Georgia, 1. The same number met lynch deaths in 1936, institute records showed.

Law enforcement officials prevented 56 possible lynchings which would have involved five white men and 72 Negroes, the institute reported.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
January 8, 1938

Lynching Records

If data on lynching compiled by Tuskegee Institute may be relied upon, there would seem to be some reason to hope that, before the bitter controversy over the issue is ended in Congress, the advocates of a federal law on the subject will not have a great deal of basis to urge such an enactment.

Tuskegee Institute reports that there were but eight lynchings of Negroes last year, the lowest with the exception of 1932, when there were also eight, since the records have been kept. In 1892 there were 231. From 1910 to 1923 the number varied from a high of 74 to a low of 33. The highest number recently was 30 in 1926. The total for 1936 was 13 and, as has been noted, the record for 1937 was cut almost in half.

Such disgraceful outbreaks have varied so much from year to year that it is unsafe to predict that they may not again show increase. But the decline of lynchings over a long period of time gives ground for belief that we shall not witness in the future anything approaching the amount of mob violence that prevailed 10 or 20 years ago. This evidence of betterment because of a more vigorous public opinion in the matter, aided by more aggressive enforcement of the law in the localities, shows that the states are not wholly helpless before this menace. Their efforts ought not to cease until the score is perfect.—The Baltimore Sun.

BALTIMORE MD MORNING SUN
SATURDAY JANUARY 1 1938

LYNCHING RECORDS

If data on lynching compiled by Tuskegee Institute may be relied upon, there would seem to be some reason to hope that, before the bitter controversy over the issue is ended in Congress, the advocates of a Federal law on the subject will not have a great deal of basis to urge such an enactment.

Tuskegee Institute reports that there were but eight lynchings of Negroes last year, the lowest with the exception of 1932, when there were also eight, since the records have been kept. In 1892 there were 231. From 1910 to 1923 the number varied from a high of 74 to a low of 33. The highest number recently was 30 in 1926. The total for 1936 was 13, and, as has been noted, the record for 1937 was cut almost in half.

Such disgraceful outbreaks have varied so much from year to year that it is unsafe to predict that they may not again show increase. But the decline of lynchings over a long period of time gives ground for belief that we shall not witness in the future anything approaching the amount of mob violence that prevailed ten or twenty years ago. This evidence of betterment because of a more vigorous public opinion in the matter, aided by more aggressive enforcement of the law in the localities, shows that the States are not wholly helpless before this menace. Their efforts ought not to cease until the score is perfect.

ROME N Y SENTINEL
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

Eight Lynchings in 1937

According to the count kept by the department of records and research at Tuskegee Institute, the famous school of Negroes in Alabama, there have been eight lynchings in 1937—all in the South with Negroes the victims in all cases. There were three in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia—the grand total of eight being precisely the same as in 1936. On the face of the figures there has been no gain in the past year in the effort to suppress these unlawful executions; but the other side of the picture is provided by the institute's statisticians in that in fifty-six instances officers of the law are credited with preventing lynchings, five of these cases being in the North.

The fact that there has been no decrease in lynchings in the past twelve months will hardly lessen the pressure for enactment of the federal anti-lynching measure which was reputed to enjoy a preferred position when the recent special session of Congress opened, but which failed of passage. Southern legislators have urged that the South be permitted to work out this problem; Northern members of House and Senate have used the bill to browbeat the South as to other pending legislation. The measure is probably unconstitutional; if not, there can be hardly a doubt as to its unworkableness.

It is, of course, easy enough to rate every demonstration against a prisoner as an attempted lynching, so that officers may claim the distinction of having beaten off a mob. We might well wish to have the particulars attending each of the fifty-six cases in which officers of the law "prevented lynchings" as reported from Tuskegee. Yet there is circumstantial evidence that whereas here and there officers having prisoners in custody prove most remiss in permitting their charges to be taken from them without the firing of a shot, nevertheless elsewhere there is every now and then reported drastic action either to prevent such killings or to punish those officials who have supinely yielded their captives.

Batesville, Miss., Panolian
January 6, 1938

EIGHT LYNCHED IN U.S. DURING THE PAST YEAR

According to statistics compiled by Tuskegee Institute, eight persons have been lynched in the United States this year. Three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee. All were Negroes. The Institute pointed out that officers prevented lynchings in 55 instances, with 51 of these being Southern States. This should serve as a pretty effective answer to those Yankee demagogues who are raving and ranting and tearing their hair for the passage of the anti-lynching bill. The South certainly possesses a cleaner bill of health in regard to lynchings than does the North with its gang murders, sex-crazed killers, hired assassins and thugs, cognizance of which is not made by anyone presently concerned with the enactment of anti-lynching legislation. The South has made wonderful progress toward abolishing lynchings within recent years and unfettered by Federal assistance will continue along the present progressive line.

NEWARK N J STAR EAGLE
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

South Lynching Record

The South maintained its lynch record during 1937, according to the Tuskegee Institute. Eight negroes died by lynching, the same as in 1936. This is neither progress nor retreat. Florida led the disgraceful procession with three. It is more pleasant to note that officers prevented executions in fifty-six instances. The law can prevail. When it so wishes. That's encouraging!

TOLEDO OHIO MORNING TIMES
FRIDAY DECEMBER 31 1937

A Lynching Plea

The United States' shameful score of lynching, compiled annually at the Tuskegee Institute, colored co-educational college in Macon county, Ala., adds up to eight for 1937.

F. D. Patterson, president of the school, points out the number for 1936 also was eight; for 1935, it was 20; and for 1934, it was 15.

All eight persons lynched this year were colored, the report asserts. They were charged with the following offenses: Statutory offense, 1; robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officers of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings happened were: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; and Tennessee, 1. All of the victims were in the hands of officers of the law when they were taken. Two were tortured before being killed.

There were, during 1937, 56 instances of persons escaping lynching; 5 in northern states, and 51 in southern states. In each case, the imperilled persons were protected either by moving them to places of greater safety or by augmenting their guards.

DAYTON OHIO DAILY NEWS
THURSDAY DECEMBER 30 1937

The Lynching Record

The department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama makes its annual report of lynching statistics. Eight persons were killed by mobs this year, all Negroes, and all of them in the south. The number is the same as in 1936, 12 less than in 1935, seven less than in 1934.

From these figures alone it might be concluded that lynching is dying out of itself and that federal legislation to eradicate this crime is unnecessary, as southern congressmen, successfully blocking enaction of such a measure thus far, have contended. The error of that view is evident in the far greater number of threatened lynchings which officers of the law prevented.

There were 56 such instances, five in the north, the balance in the south. In the vast majority of these cases it was necessary to remove prisoners, strengthen their guard or take other like precautions. On five occasions armed force was necessary to turn back a mob. By one method or another courageous officials thus saved 77 persons from lynching.

But the eight murdered by mobs were likewise in the hands of the law; several were taken from jails, five from officers outside. The success of the officers who held their prisoners spite of the threats of mobs heightens the shame of those who failed. In the circumstances the common declaration of mobs that they must mete out the justice which the law neglects is also given the lie. Two of the victims were tortured with blow torches before being put to death—another indication of the savagery, far removed from any spirit of justice, which actuates a mob.

Eight lynchings and 56 others prevented show the problem, southern congressmen to the contrary notwithstanding, still pressing.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. FREEPR.
JAN. 7, 1938 J17

Records Reveal Eight Negroes Lynched in '37

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (INS).—The Tuskegee Institute's department of research reported recently that eight persons, all Negroes were lynched at the hands of mobs during 1937. The department said the 1936 lynch total was also eight.

Three lynchings occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi, one in Tennessee, one in Georgia and one in Alabama.

During 1934 and 1935 20 lynchings occurred, the department said.

TALLADEGA, ALA., HOME
JAN. 10, 1938 J17

8 LYNCHINGS IN 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala. —(INS)— With eight lynchings during 1937, the number remained the same as last year, the annual report of the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and Research said. However, in comparision with figures of 1935 and 1934 there was a decided decrease. Twenty persons were lynched in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

NEW YORK N Y EVE POST
WEDNESDAY JANUARY 12 1938

HOW EVILS OF LYNCHING CAN BE FOUGHT

To the Editor of New York Post:

Sir—We note with great interest the letter of F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, printed in The Post's Letters to the Editor on December 29, 1937.

The latter comes at a very significant and opportune time. The Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, now in the Senate, aims to end once and for all the evil of lynching.

By its terms the Federal Government will be permitted to take over the investigation of lynchings when the State law-enforcing body has demonstrated its inability or lack of desire to take appropriate action. As has been proved by the great reduction in the number of kidnapings since the enactment of Federal legislation, such Federal legislation is by its mere enactment a great deterrent factor in the commission of crime.

This evolity has been and is en-aged in a petition campaign and to date has secured many thousands of signatures in support of the bill. All public-spirited and civic-minded citizens owe themselves and America the duty of telegraphing or writing to their Senator to vote in favor of the Wagner-Van Nuys bill when it is presented for a vote, either this week or next, according to the program of the Senate.

Such action and co-operation with this society will arouse sufficient attention to the demands of the public and will result in the enactment of this most desirable legislation.

AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR RACE TOLERANCE.

Columbia, S. C. State
January 16, 1938

A Diminishing Crime.

Figures on lynchings in 1937 give encouragement to the large number of Southerners who feel that the suppression of this brutal crime is one thing that the states are handling successfully. There are reported by Tuskegee institute only eight lynchings during the year just ended.

Lynching, which at one time menaced the forces of civilization in the South, is above all a crime of passion uncontrolled. At its dreadful height back in the early nineties when there were hundreds of lynchings every year, it took courage to oppose the act and the feeling behind it. Yet a portion of the press representing high ideals of public service and leadership, and a small proportion of the population representing the better element, joined in the fight against mob violence, and have never ceased to battle against it.

Public sentiment in the South today is against lynching. We dare to believe that not even the rankest demagogue would now raise his voice publicly in South Carolina in favor of it.

This does not mean that victory is complete. Here is seemingly one of those never-ending conflicts. Eight lynchings in a year are exactly eight too many. So long as the law is raped by the mob in even one case, enlightened forces of the South must continue on guard against this foe of civilization itself.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press

Jan. - Dec.

5820

RECORDS AND RESEARCH SHOW EIGHT PERSONS MET DEATH BY MOB VIOLENCE DURING 1937

TUSKEGEE.—The Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute shows that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states, and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding an officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Concord, N C Tribune
December 28, 1937

Eight Lynchings During The Year

Total for 1937 Same as for 1936, Tuskegee Institute Shows—None Occurred in North Carolina.

Eight lynchings occurred during 1937, according to information from President F. D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute, of Alabama, which keeps annual records. This is the same number as for 1936, states President Patterson; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935, and seven less than the number 15 for 1934.

Continuing his report, he says:

"All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

"The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each states are as follows: Alabama, 1,; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

Spartanburg, S C., Herald
December 28, 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS RECORDED IN YEAR

Tuskegee Institute Finds Same Number This Year As Reported Last

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP).—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Atlanta, Ga. Georgian
December 27, 1937

Eight Lynchings Listed In Southeast for 1937

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight lynchings occurred in five Southern states during 1937, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, announced Monday.

Three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

Eight lynchings were recorded in 1936, 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times
December 27, 1937

Lynching Record Is Made Public

According to information sent to the newspapers of the nation by authorities at Tuskegee Institute, of Alabama, there were 8 persons lynched during the year 1937.

This is the same number as were lynched in 1936, 12 less than the 20 lynched in 1935 and seven less than the 15 lynched in 1934.

All of those lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and 5 from officers outside jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch. One was shot to death and another was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occured and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Greenwood, Miss. Commonwealth
December 27, 1937

LYNCHINGS NUMBERED EIGHT DURING YEAR

Officers of Law Prevented Lynchings In Fifty Six Instances, Report Shows

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) —Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the Institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty one in the south.

The Institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report wihtout comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law" three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Two were tortured with a blowtorch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Charleston, S C. Evening Post
December 27, 1937

Eight Lynched in U. S. During 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27. (AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offenses charged againts the victims were listed as: Rape 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

Sumter, S. C., Daily Item
December 27, 1937

Lynchings In 1937

Record For Year Compiled by Tuskegee Institute

Tuskegee, Dec. 27.—According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings; five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards strengthened or other precautions taken. In 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A to-wounding officer of the law, 2.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Institute Reports '37 Lynch Record

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Dec. 27—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes died by lynching at the hands of Southern mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of Records and Research reported today. The 1936 death toll was identical.

In 56 instances, the Institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the South.

The institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside the jails. Two were tortured with a blow torch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: rape, 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1, murder 4; wounding of officer 2.

The death toll by states: Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia, 1.

the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken.

"In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Attack, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer, two."

TUSKEGEE CORRECTS LYNCHING TOTAL

WASHINGTON.—De— Senators from every state received this week a letter from Monroe N. Work of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, correcting the erroneous report which had been sent out over his name, without his knowledge, that there had been only 8 lynchings in 1937. Mr. Work told the senators that Tuskegee records showed 8 lynchings. The [illegible] which someone credited to Mr. Work was used by senators as an argument against enactment of a federal anti-lynching law.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., News
December 27. 1937

EIGHT PERSONS LYNCHED IN '37

Nation's Total Is Same As Last Year, Well Under 1934 And 1935

Eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937, the same number as in 1936, it was reported today by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute.

The eight lynchings of 1937 show a reduction of 12 from the 1935 total and are seven less than the number recorded in 1934.

"All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were taken from jails and five from officers o the law outside of jails," the report stated. The report was signed by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president o Tuskegee Institute.

"Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two, and Tennessee, one.

"There were 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of

EIGHT LYNCHINGS OCCUR IN SOUTH

In 56 Instances, Officers Of Law Prevented Violence At Hands Of Mobs

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of southern mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of Records and Research reported today. The 1936 death toll was identical.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Two were tortured with a blow torch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

The death toll by states: Florida, 3; Mississppi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama. 1: Georgia. 1.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Daily Times
December 28, 1937

LYNCHINGS OF 1937 TOTALED 8 NEGROES

Victims of Mobs Equal Last Year—Tri-States Blamed With 1 Each.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP).—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

In fifty-six instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and seventy-two Negroes. Five such instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The eight 1936 and 1937 lynchings compared with twenty in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside jails. Two were tortured with a blowtorch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser
December 28, 1937

Institute Reports '37 Lynch Record

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Dec. 27—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes died by lynching at the hands of Southern mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of Records and Research reported today. The 1936 death toll was identical.

In 56 instances, the Institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Two were tortured with a blow torch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: rape, 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder 4; wounding of officer 2.

The death toll by states: Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1: Georgia, 1.

Hattiesburg, Miss. American
December 27. 1937

EIGHT VICTIMS OF LYNCHINGS

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the South.

The institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Two were tortured with a blowtorch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Albany-Decatur, Ala. Daily
December 27, 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of southern mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of Records and Research reported today. The 1936 death toll was identical.

CHICAGO ILL TIMES
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

LYNCHINGS

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 fewer than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 fewer than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs. Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes.

F. D. PATTERSON,
President, Tuskegee Institute.

CHICAGO ILL HERALD & EXAM
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Eight Lynchings Reported in 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 total also was eight. Deaths by states this year: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

Athens, Tenn., Post Athenian
December 27. 1937

RECORDS SHOW 8 WERE LYNCHED IN SOUTH DURING '37

Records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute show that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3, Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Jan. — Dec.

5821

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press

Eight Persons Are Lynched During Year 1937

Managing Editor,
Scott Newspaper Syndicate

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find, according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and another was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; and wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; and Tennessee 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. Patterson
President.

Lynching Record For 1937 Same As 1936

Tuskegee Institute, Ala.
December 27, 1937

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number for 1935, and seven less than the number for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow-torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the other five instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occured and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President.

Figures on Lynching

According to figures released this week by Tuskegee Institute, eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched in 1937. This was the same number murdered by rope, fagot or bullets in 1936. According to the Southern "statesmen" who sit in Congress this shows improvement—especially since four or five times eight were lynched a few years back. Meanwhile Senator Dixie Graves from the great State of Alabama is the nation's leading apologist for the theory that the South is taking of lynching in its own peculiar way.

And this is correct, for seemingly everything the South does is peculiar, to say the least. Fact is, lynchings decreased although there was none in 1937 over 1936, in proportion to the amount of publicity given to the lynching problem. Whenever anti-lynching bills have been introduced in Congress, the heinous crime diminishes. Whenever there is a lull in the amount of publicity given to lynching, the number of mob murders increases. In truth, the South's peculiar way of taking care of the lynching problem is to lie low as long as the white heat of publicity is on it and then to go out and commit bigger crimes against humanity when publicity stops. This has always been the case and probably will remain so.

Therefore, when the Gavagan-Wagner-Van Nuys Anti-Lynching bill comes up in Congress this or next week, it behooves every sensible Senator to vote for it. The bill is now number one on the Senate's calendar, since it has disposed of the farming measure. We believe the Senate could do nothing that would make up for its twelve-month period of "do nothingness" but to pass the anti-lynching bill.

GIVE EIGHT AS LYNCH FIGURE

Tuskegee, Ala., December 30.—Barring any "holiday" lynchings that may occur during the current week, the official lynch disgrace figure for 1937 is 8, a statement over the signature of F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, states.

The figure, according to the statement, is the same as that for 1936, and 12 less than the number for 1935. All of the persons lynched, it says, were taken from the custody of alleged officials of the law. Three were removed from jails; five from officers outside of jails.

Two of the eight victims were tortured to death with blow torches before their bodies were finally consumed by flames. All of the victims were Negroes. The offenses against them were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding an officer, 2. The states in which the lynchings occurred were Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Officers prevented an additional 56 lynchings, 51 of them in Southern states and 5 in the North. A total of 77 were saved from mobs in all instances; of this number 5 were white. Two women were among the near-victims.

The Tuskegee figures are recognized as official for those cases technically categorized as lynchings; it does not include the large number of instances, however, where conditions such as the size of the mobs or the manner in which the victims were murdered do not place the lynchings in the technical category.

8 LYNCHINGS DURING 1937; 56 PREVENTED

Tuskegee Records Show Same Total as for 1936

TUSKEGEE. —(ANP)— Eight persons, the same total as for 1936, were lynched in America this year, according to records compiled by the department of records and research at Tuskegee and released this week by Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president. The figure is 12 less than the number 20 lynched in 1935 and seven fewer than 1934's total of 15.

All of the eight victims were Negroes and all were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside the jails. The most brutal of them all was the double lynching at Duck Hill, Miss., when the victims were first tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other burned to death.

Despite the statements of many Southern politicians who defend lynchings as protection for white womanhood in Dixie, only one of the eight was accused of rape. Of the remaining seven, one was charged with a crime against nature and robbery, four with murder, and two with wounding officers of the law.

Florida Leads

Florida led the parade of the states in which lynchings occurred with a toll of three lives taken in this fashion. Mississippi contributed two and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee had one each.

Officers prevented mob outrages in 56 instances, the records show, with five of these in Northern states and the remaining 51 in the South. In 51 of these cases, prisoners were removed for safekeeping, the guards augmented or other precautions taken. Armed force was used to repel mobs in the other five instances. Through this action, the lives of 77 persons representing 5 white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were spared from mob violence.

LYNCHINGS FOR 1937

The records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute show that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 10 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Flordia 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON. President

Same Record as '36

LAW PREVENTED FIFTY-SIX FROM BEING MURDERED

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, Dec. 31—According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number, eight, as for 1936; twelve less than the number, twenty, for 1935, and seven less than the number, fifteen, for 1934.

All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and fifty-one in southern states. In fifty-one instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of seventy-seven persons, five white men and seventy-two Negroes, two women and seventy men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1. This official report was released by F. D. Patterson, president.

REPORT SHOWS 8 LYNCHINGS FOR OLD YEAR

But What About All The Other Killings In The Southland?

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 31—(Special)—Florida took the lead in lynchings during the year 1937, a report from the department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute showed this week.

While the actual number on record shows a total of eight, at least three times that many met death at the hands of mobs composed of the "very best white citizens."

The total number of lynchings for the year, according to the Institute is eight. This number is the same as that for 1936; 12 less than the number of 20 in 1935, and seven less than the number of 15 in 1934.

Scores of Others Lynched

These figures do not in any way represent the total number of lynchings which have occured in outlying towns below the Mason and Dixon line where whites take the law in their own hands, slay them and dispose of the bodies as they see fit.

Mississippi stands out for the most gruesome lynching of all time. Two men were tortured with blow torches and their bodies riddled with bullets.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. On the other hand, all of lynch victims were in the hands of the officers when turned over to the killers.

Bill May Halt Lynchings

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number of each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

With the anti-lynch bill still up for passage, it is the hope of Race members that this evil will be stamped out.

By F. D. PATTERSON,
President of Tuskegee Institute

I SEND you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find, according to the records compiled in the Department on Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935 and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

8 Lynchings Recorded In 1937 According To Tuskegee Inst. Report

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, on Monday gave out a report of the Institute's Department of Records and Research on the number of lynchings during 1937. In releasing the figures, Dr. Patterson said.

"I send you the following information concerning lynching for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number, 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch. Then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the wouldbe lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of the mobs.

"Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number of each state are as follows:: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee 1."

Florida Leads Lynch League

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—Eight persons, all colored, were lynched in 1937, the same as for 1936, according to records compiled by the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research and released on Thursday by President F. D. Patterson.

The States and number of offenses follow: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee, 1 each. Officers saved seventy-five persons, five white men also two colored women from death at the hands of mobs.

The offenses charged to those murdered were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, murder, 4, and wounder officer of the law, 2.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch
December 28, 1937

The Tragedies of Lynching

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number (eight) as for 1936, 12 less than the number 20 for 1935 and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi 2; Tennessee, 1,

F. D. PATTERSON,
President,
Tuskegee Institute.

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
December 28, 1937

EIGHT NEGROES LOST LIVES IN LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offence charged against the victims were listed as: rape 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Tampa, Fla. Tribune
December 28, 1937

8 Negroes Reported Lynched During 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(A.P.) Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states: Florida three; Mississippi two; Tennessee one; Alabama one; Georgia one.

In 56 instances, the institute deported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Of the 1937 lynchings three were removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as rape one; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, two.

Jan. - Dec.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

5822

ATLANTA GA GEORGIAN
SUNDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

Eight Lynchings Listed In Southeast for 1937

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight lynchings occurred in five Southern states during 1937, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, announced Monday.

Three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

Eight lynchings were recorded in 1936, 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

SPARTANBURG S C HERALD
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Lynchings in 1937

There were eight lynchings in the United States in 1937, according to the report of the department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute. Last year also had eight lynchings to its discredit. Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia are the states in which the lynchings of 1937 took place, Florida leading with three, and Mississippi second with two. South Carolina has a clean slate this year.

The report says that officers of the law prevented 56 lynchings this year, five of the cases occurring in northern states and 51 in the South. Comparison of 1937 and 1936 with the two previous years shows that in 1934 and 1935 lynchings were 15 and 20 respectively.

If the congressmen who seem determined to enact a federal anti-lynching bill would carefully analyze the statistics of recent years they would see that the South has made great progress in its effort to prevent lynching. It has done much better than other parts of the country in the prevention of kidnaping, racketeering and gang murders, despite the penalties provided to punish and prevent such crimes.

Sentiment in the South is overwhelming against lynching, and all agencies are endeavoring to stop the crime by impressing upon the people the fact that lynchings are not a cure for the offenses at which they aim and that the taking of law enforcement out of the hands of the courts is injurious to society. The South will cure itself of this disease if permitted to do so without interference and meddling by other sections of the country.

GREENWOOD S C INDEX JOUR
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

Eight Lynchings In '37, President Of Tuskegee Institute Reports

President F. D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute has issued the following press release:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death an dthe other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President.

GREENVILLE S C NEWS
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

EVIDENCE IS USELESSNESS

America's lynching record for 1937, according to the Tuskegee Institute, is no worse—and no better—than for 1936; but the number of eight persons lynched in both these years is considerably smaller than in either 1935 or 1934.

Of special interest in this report, however, is the showing that there were 56 instances during the year in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, five in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of these cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken; in five instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers.

Here appears incontrovertible evidence of the sincere and aggressive determination of officers of the law, in the South and elsewhere, to protect their prisoners from any threats of mob violence and to prevent lynchings.

It is further evidence, to our mind, of the uselessness and complete undesirability of the pending federal "anti-lynching" law, one of whose chief provisions is that of prosecution in federal courts of officers from whose custody prisoners are seized and lynched. Does this record not indicate very clearly that there is no sound excuse for the adoption of such a federal policy?

ANDERSON S C MAIL
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

EIGHT LYNCHED IN YEAR JUST ENDING

Tuskegee Institute Reports All Victims Negroes—Decrease Shown.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: rape 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officers, 2.

SPARTANBURG S C JOUR & SPARTAN
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

EIGHT LYNCHED DURING YEAR; NONE IN S. C.

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP).—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

NEW YORK N Y HERALD TRIBUNE
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

1937 Lynching Toll Is 8, All Taken From Officers

Police Saved 77 Persons From Mobs, Five in North

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched during 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama reported yesday. This compared with eight in 1936, twenty in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

"All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law," the report stated. "Three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails.

"There were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in the Northern states and fifty-one in Southern states. A total of seventy-seven persons, five white men and seventy-two Negroes, two women and seventy men, thus were saved from death at the hands of mobs. The states in which lynchings occurred were: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two, and Tennessee one."

RALEIGH N C TIMES
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

Eight Persons Lynched In 1937

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and Research reported.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: Rape 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

RALEIGH N C NEWS & OBSERVER
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

EIGHT NEGROES LOST LIVES IN LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offence charged against the victims were listed as: rape 1, crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

8 Persons, All Negroes, Were Lynched This Year

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27, (AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll was also eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

In 56 indictments, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

56 Lynchings Were Prevented in 1937

Eight Were Carried Out in Five Southern States, Tuskegee Reports

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP)—Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these instances occurred in Northern states ad 51 in the South.

NEW YORK N Y SUCH & AMERICAN
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

8 Negroes Lynched In U. S. During 1937

Tuskegee Institute, the Alabama hall of learning for colored youth of both sexes, has made public statistics listing eight lynchings for 1937 and 56 instances in which officers prevented mob action. Those lynched were all colored.

Mob Victims In 1937

Of the eight persons, all Negroes, reported by the Tuskegee Institute to have been lynched in 1937, it is noteworthy that two of them were accused of wounding officers, while four were charged with murder. That is, out of eight mob victims six were accused of offenses that could have been, and doubtless would have been, dealt with according to law, thus leaving no excuse for the mobs that acted as courts and executioners, too.

The same number of lynchings took place in 1936, as compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934. It would be interesting to learn what factors caused the sudden drop from 20 to eight within a year and what influence, if any, could be ascribed to the increase in prosperity, with a consequent lessening in racial competition and hence of racial antagonism.

It is a welcome fact that during 1937 North Carolina's record was clear of lynchings. Florida had the most with three, and Mississippi followed with two. All the recorded lynchings took place in the Southeastern States. Why were there none in the Southwest? Why were there more lynchings in Florida, which has a smaller Negro population and a larger population of immigrant non-Southerners than Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas or Virginia?

Correct answers to these questions, if associated with a factual study of causes and effects, might do more to wipe out mob outbreaks that any number of Federal anti-lynch statutes. Certainly they would make possible action based upon facts and not merely upon emotions. Lynching as a crime against civilization deserves such realistic consideration and action shaped upon it.

NORFOLK VIRGINIAN-PILOT
THURSDAY DECEMBER 30 1937

THE LYNCHING SPIRIT

Each year the Tuskegee Institute keeps a record of the lynchings and in its report for 1937, which was recently made, it is shown that there were eight persons lynched in this country, all of whom were Negroes.

This record shows a marked decline from a few years ago, although the number this year is the same as that of 1936. The sentiment that has been aroused against such mob rule has had the effect of changing the situation, although it has not put a stop to such savagery. While there was the time when Georgia stood at the head of the list of states where lynchings had occurred, there has been but one such crime in that state this year. Public sentiment has risen to its responsibility in endeavoring to wipe out such a practice and it has shed an influence which has produced a greater respect for the law. Also the authorities have come nearer meeting the requirements of their office.

What the reaction within the southern states has been to the disgrace heaped upon them by the lawless mobs is indicated to a degree by the figures which show that while there were only eight lynchings there were 56 other cases where lynchings had been threatened and credit is given to the officers of the law for preventing them. That reflects not only that the authorities have been measuring up to their responsibilities but that they have been getting public backing and prodding in that action.

It has been freely claimed that lynchings would disappear if there were a more determined effort to uphold the law, and that mob rule was due in most instances to the failure of the citizenry to insist upon proper and prompt administration of the law.

Opinions have differed as to whether the lynching problem should be left to the states or brought under federal jurisdiction. Only the laxity of certain states in dealing with it, a laxity which in some instances came close to encouragement, has lent support to the effort for a federal law, under which counties and the authorities where lynchings occur would be subject to penalties. Opponents of such a law maintain that it is not a matter in which the government should interfere, that the states can and will deal with the problem, and it is likely that the report of only eight lynchings during the year will be advanced as evidence that the crime is gradually being wiped out.

There isn't any question but what the states can, if they will, put an end to lynchings, but the unfortunate part is that there are so many instances where the will seems to be lacking. However, in the 64 instances where the lynching spirit was displayed prevention by the authorities was successful in all but eight. That the threat of federal legislation has had its good effect is entirely possible.

LEAVENWORTH, KS. TIMES
DEC. 29, 1937 13

The Tuskegee Institute Report.

Tuskegee Institute, of Tuskegee Alabama, the state supported Industrial school for Negroes, has just made public the findings concerning lynchings which have occurred in the United States during the past year. In doing so the school has rendered a distinct service at this time when the Anti-Lynching bill is so soon again to occupy the attention of the United States Senate. Tuskegee has done more practical good for the Negroes of this country than can be estimated; and has probably done more than any agency in the nation to lessen the seriousness of the race problem. The report which it is making public is fair, impartial and strictly factual. Following is what it has to say as quoted directly from a letter received by this department from the school's president, Dr. F. D. Patterson:

I sent you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which offices of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guard augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

The above would indicate that state laws are proving effective in the protection of prisoners from mob violence wherever the authorities have the courage and backbone to stand out against threats of bodily harm to themselves in the discharge of their sworn duty. It gives ammunition to those who oppose the anti-lynch bill on the ground that such a law would not be as much of a guarantee of the safety of a prisoner as are existing state laws and that it would tend to break down state authority and give the federal government the right to come into a community, not to save lives but after lynching had occurred, to punish members of mobs and responsible officials, and act as a local police force.

Yielding up state rights to the federal government on this or in any other point is dangerous business. Once the government at Washington gets its foot across the threshold of a state it is very apt to push its way clear inside the boundries and usurp other rights not intended that it should have.

The abomination of lynchings can best be outlawed in America not by passing the controversial bill but through the strengthening of existing state laws, the arousing of public opinion, and by the sure punishment both of officers who violate their oaths to protect their prisoners at all costs, and of known

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, sent Press.

Jan. - Dec.

5823

Greenwood, S. C. Index Journal
December 27, 1937

Eight Lynchings In '37, President Of Tuskegee Institute Reports

President F. D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute has issued the following press release:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death an dthe other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. PATTERSON,
President.

Spartanburg, S. C., Herald
December 28, 1937

Lynchings in 1937

There were eight lynchings in the United States in 1937, according to the report of the department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute. Last year also had eight lynchings to its discredit. Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia are the states in which the lynchings of 1937 took place, Florida leading with three, and Mississippi second with two. South Carolina has a clean slate this year.

The report says that officers of the law prevented 56 lynchings this year, five of the cases occurring in northern states and 51 in the south. Comparison of 1937 and 1936 with the two previous years shows that in 1934 and 1935 lynchings were 15 and 20 respectively.

If the congressmen who seem determined to enact a federal anti-lynching bill would carefully analyze the statistics of recent years they would see that the South has made great progress in its effort to prevent lynching. It has done much better than other parts of the country in the prevention of kidnaping, racketeering and gang murders, despite the penalties provided to punish and prevent such crimes.

Sentiment in the South is overwhelming against lynching, and all agencies are endeavoring to stop the crime by impressing upon the people the fact that lynchings are not a cure for the offenses at which they aim and that the taking of law enforcement out of the hands of the courts is injurious to society. The South will cure itself of this disease if permitted to do so without interference and meddling by other sections of the country.

LYNCHINGS IN 1937

This year, as last, there were eight lynchings in the United States, all of which took place in Southern states. Fifty-six attempted lynchings were prevented by officers of the law in 1937, while in 1936 69 attempts were frustrated. In other words, while there were the same number of lynchings in 1937 as in 1936 there were fewer attempted lynchings this year than last. Thus some improvement in the last 12 months can be noted.

Eight is the smallest number of lynchings ever reported in one year in this country. In 1932 also there were eight lynchings, while in the years before that the number sometimes ran 20, 30, 40, and even as high in 1892 as 231. The figures show incontestably that improvement is being made, though improvement is not being made so rapidly as is possible.

In Alabama there were no lynchings in 1935 or in 1936, but this year there did occur one horrible mob murder to mar the State's record.

Figures for the last few years throw interesting light upon the progress that is gradually being made to stamp out this crime against law and order. In 1920 there were 60 lynchings in this country; there were 62 in 1921; 57 in 1922; 33 in 1923; 16 in 1924; 17 in 1925; 30 in 1926; 16 in 1927; 11 in 1928; 10 in 1929; 21 in 1930; 13 in 1931; 8 in 1932; 28 in 1933; 15 in 1934; 20 in 1935; 8 in 1936, and 8 in 1937.

The decline has, to be sure, not been so sturdy as it should have been, but it has nevertheless been shown that the people of this country, and especially of this section, are determined to stamp out lynching completely. How fine it would be if we could go through 1938 without a single mob murder!

Wilmington, N. C. News
December 28, 1937

The Lynching Report

That lynching is not on the increase in the south is shown by the annual report of the research department of Tuskegee Institute.

There were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Asheville, N. C. Citizen
December 29, 1937

LEAVE IT TO THE SOUTH

When Congress convenes after the holidays, it will find itself faced, among other problems, with the perennial anti-lynching bill.

This measure will be aggressively pushed by its adherents and just as vigorously resisted by its opponents.

The adherents, taken by and large, hail from the Northern states where the Negro vote has become a decisive factor in determining the outcome of elections and where agitation for a Federal anti-lynching bill has assumed a sharp political aspect.

The opponents, generally speaking, come from the South where clear and objective thinking is not always possible when any issue with racial associations is raised.

In all the stormy debate that will follow inevitably harsh things will be said and arguments, more political than patriotic, will be employed.

The pity is that the true issue can not be lifted out of that highly artificial atmosphere and viewed in its true light.

For the issue among tolerant and thoughtful people is quite simple. It boils down to this: Is lynching sufficiently prevalent to justify the exercise by the Federal government of police power of doubtful efficacy and of questionable constitutional propriety? Has the South failed so lamentably in coping with the problem that the Federal government must intervene?

Tuskegee Institute has just released figures that shed much light on the problem. These figures disclose that during the present year which closes Thursday eight persons have been lynched.

Eight lynchings are bad. One lynching is a monstrous thing which no friend of justice or of democracy can defend or condone. But what other crime, Federal or state, is so infrequently perpetrated?

These figures take on their true significance, however, when it is recalled that in 1897, 158 persons were lynched in a United States that had much less population than today.

The conclusion is inescapable: the South has made steady and gratifying headway in curing the lynch law evil. In the cold language of statistics, it has reduced the crime to a bare five per cent of its frequency forty years ago. Of what other crime can this be said? Certainly not of gangster murders or of kidnapings.

Lynchings have been decreased because the enlightened and aroused conscience of the South addressed itself resolutely and intelligently to the problem. The statistics gathered by Tuskegee Institute list 51 instances in which lynchings were prevented during 1937 by the alertness, courage and high conception of duty of Southern officers. Are the 8 failures to be remembered while the 51 successes are forgotten?

A Congress looking for new worlds of regulation to invade would do well to study these figures in all sobriety and fairness. Such a study will, we believe, satisfy reasonable lawmakers that they should leave the problem with the South where it belongs and not endanger what has been won by introducing a new governmental factor into the situation.

If the South had refused or failed to appreciate the problem, there would be reason for such a law. But the South is struggling with the evil and deserves encouragement rather than the rebuke which the enactment of a federal statue might conceivably be regarded as implying.

Tuskegee Institute Makes Report On Lynchings

The following is a letter received from President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama in regard to the lynching situation of 1937 in America.

Dear sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the law's hands; 3 were taken from jails; and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states, and fifty-one in the southern states. In 51 of the instances the unfortunate prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were thus saved from death at the hands Negroes, The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each of the states are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; and Tennesse, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D PATTERSON, President

Lynching Record For 1937

Tuskegee Institute, Ala.,
Dec. 23, 1937

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937 I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi 2; Tennessee, 1.

F. D Patterson, President.

NORFOLK VA PILOT
SUNDAY JANUARY 9 193[illegible]

Last Year's Lynching Record

Tuskegee Institute's Department of Records and Research reports eight lynchings in 1937 and thereby writes the year down as equal to the best in this respect the country has ever known. In only one other year, 1932, has the number dropped as low as eight. In only one other instance, 1936, was it as low as nine, and for that matter there has been only one year in which the figure stopped at ten.

It is necessary to go a step further. The last two years—1936 with nine lynchings and 1937 with eight—constitute the best two-year record of all time. On the previous occasion when the number dropped to eight, which was in 1932, the preceding year had witnessed 13 lynchings and the succeeding year was to shoot up to the high total of 28. For 24 months, therefore, the South has had, on any comparative basis, an excellent record.

But at that point one has to shut down on the satisfaction. Eight lynchings are exactly eight more than a nation pretending to civilization can look upon with complacency. Moreover, although the past two years have been better, relatively speaking, there is little assurance that the coming year will maintain this improvement. The South had only 21 lynchings in the 24-month period of 1928 and 1929, yet the very next year of 1930 the number shot up to 21 for the single 12 months. The South had only eight lynchings in 1932, yet had 28 in 1933. How can anyone guess what will happen in 1938?

Furthermore, the eight lynchings of 1937 are in other respects peculiarly inexcusable. In only one of them, for instance, was rape charged against the victim. Four of them resulted from murder. Two of them resulted from wounding an officer of the law. It is quite plain, as it has been for many years, that the old theory of protecting Southern womanhood is fetish. Lynchings follow killings or fights and attempted killings more than any other crime. In many instances, it would seem probable, the regular processes of the law would not find cold-blooded, deliberate and premeditated murder at the heart of the alleged offense. More probably it would be second-degree murder or some lesser crime. Sometimes it would find no crime at all.

Finally, the 1937 record is especially vicious in one damning circumstance. Every man who was lynched during the year was taken by a mob from an officer or officers of the law. In no single instance, therefore, was there any real likelihood that the accused would escape the judgment of the law; and in every instance the officer or officers of the law failed to provide that protection which our whole system of law presupposes.

A man under arrest is a man whom the State has taken in charge, to deal with as the law shall determine but to care for and guard until the law has made its decision. Eight times during the year that protection failed—and men were shot and tortured with blow torches and burned to death. That is the failure that has driven many intelligent men and women the country over to the conclusion that something else not now present is needed to overcome the failure of officers to perform their manifest duty.

Jan. – Dec.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

5824

MANSFIELD OHIO NEWS JOUR
FRIDAY DECEMBER 31 1937

Lynching Is On the Decline.

A GRATIFYING commentary on the progress of civilization in the United States is found in the few lynchings that occur in a year, as compared with the period preceding 1900 when the lynchings for a single year quite consistently ran above one hundred and in 1892 reached the black record of 231.

Figures gathered by F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, show a total of 8 lynchings in 1937—exactly the same as in 1936.

Except for an occasional reversion, the past 37 years have been marked by a consistent decline in the number of lynchings. It is interesting to note that all eight of the 1937 lynchings were in southern states, the record being Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

From this showing it would appear that even those states in which lynching was resorted to with considerable frequency in earlier years have established law and order to the extent of abolishing this manifestation of barbarity.

JACKSON, MISS. CLARION
JAN. 3, 1938 17

Figures Give Complete Answer to Lynching Critics

A complete answer to agitation for federal anti-lynching legislation is to be found in the annual report of Tuskegee Institute's research and records department on lynchings in the United States.

Tuskegee is the famous college for negroes in Alabama and is known throughout the country as the greatest institute in this country devoted exclusively to education of the negro.

F. D. Patterson, president of the college and head of the records and research department, has just compiled and published his annual report on lynchings. The report covers the year 1937.

Dr. Patterson's report reveals a very definite trend toward the complete abolition of the lynching evil in the South, even without direct legislation upon the subject either by the states or by the federal government. It constitutes an irrefutable argument against the vicious anti-lynching legislation which is still pending in the congress.

Dr. Patterson's figures show that eight lynchings occurred in the United States during the past year. They were divided among five southern states, as follows: Florida 3; Georgia 1; Alabama 1; Tennessee 1, and Mississippi 2.

The number of persons lynched in 1937 is the same as the number which died at the hands of mobs in 1936. It is twelve less than the number lynched in 1935 and seven less than the lynchings which occurred in 1934.

All of the persons lynched in 1937 were taken from the custody of officers. Three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails.

Thus, according to Dr. Patterson's figures, it appears that lynching is on the decline in the South, notwithstanding the protestations of northern agitators who are seeking to fasten a vicious anti-lynching law upon the southern states.

But there is more to Dr. Patterson's illuminating report than the mere statistics of lynchings which occurred last year.

For example, he tells us that a total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, were saved from mob violence by officers of the law. Two of the 72 negroes were women.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings," says Dr. Patterson's report. "Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed, guards were augmented or other precautions were taken. In the five other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers."

It can hardly be said with confidence that Dr. Patterson has "doctored" his figures; he could have no purpose in so doing and we are bound to accept them as authentic and accurate.

And Dr. Patterson's figures show, conclusively, that there is no need for a federal anti-lynching law, even if such a law could be enforced to the extent necessary to make it an effective curb on lynchings.

The vigilance of officers of the law during the past year has contributed more to the eradication of the "lynching evil" than all the laws congress may enact during the next century.

But whenever the federal government lays upon those officers a civil liability, such as is proposed in the pending Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, that vigilance will be relaxed and we may then expect an increase, rather than a decline, in the number of lynchings each year.

The South will solve this problem in the proper way, if let alone.

Sanford, N. C., Herald
December 31, 1937

WHAT ABOUT LYNCHING?

NORTH Carolina has been fortunate this year in that it has been free of lynchings, shown since reconstruction to be one of the most inhumane and degrading practices ever thrust upon the south. There were eight lynchings throughout this year, the same number as in 1936. The total for each of the past two years is decidedly less than that of 1935, when 20 persons were lynched by mobs, and in 1934 when 15 met similar fates.

During this year, in a state usually regarded as more northern than southern, three persons were lynched. Florida, a conglomerate state composed principally of residents moved in from other states outside the boundaries of the Mason and Dixon line, found its citizenry hot-headed and morbid in taking the lives of three men. Two were lynched in Mississippi. Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee claimed one each.

According to a report from Tuskegee Institute, all of the eight persons lynched during the year were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers outside jails. Even though peace officers failed to prevent eight lynchings, they did dispel them in 56 instances. Five were in northern states, but 51 in the south, meaning that the lives of 77 persons were saved. Five of them were white men.

Of the eight persons lynched, according to the report, four were charged with murder; one with rape; one with crime against nature and robbery; and two with wounding an officer of the law.

The facts as presented by the report, remind that in the south there are still many hot-heads who think lynching as a solution to all right. Time and experience must develop in us all a mutual understanding devoid of impetuous and inhumane action.

LYNCHINGS PRESENT NO EMERGENCY

NOTHING could more clearly demonstrate that the lynching evil does not present an emergency than the report of the Tuskegee Institute upon outbreaks of this nature during the year 1937.

This report shows that there were only eight lynchings in the entire country during the year now closing while there were fifty-six instances in which law enforcement officials prevented lynchings. The report says that 77 persons, 5 white and 72 negroes, were thus saved from mob violence.

The number of lynchings last year were the same as for this year, but the number is 7 less than for 1935 and 15 less than for 1934.

Thus the record of the past three years shows a heavy decrease in crimes of this nature while exhibiting a very definite determination on the part of officials to prevent such outlawry.

Under the circumstances, it is ridiculous for the issue to be pushed to the fore in Congress while so many issues of a vital and pressing nature are pending. Moreover, it is crystal clear than precedence would not be given the subject for one moment were it not for the fact that some Northern congressmen are up for reelection this year and wish to cater to the negro vote in their districts. Thus personal politics is placed ahead of national prosperity and the general well-being.

Southern representatives should continue their opposition to this game of politics with its threat of bringing back to the South another era of carpetbagism, with federal forces mixing in affairs that are purely local. They should demand that the Congress consider legislation to revive business and not legislation designed to revive the events of the reconstruction period.

ENID, OKLA., NEWS
DEC. 26, 1937 J8

THE 1937 LYNCHING RECORD

The 1937 record of lynchings, as just released by Tuskegee Institute, shows that the number of persons thus unlawfully robbed of life was eight during the last twelve months, all of them negroes, and all from southern states. One was in Alabama; three in Florida; one in Georgia; two in Mississippi; and one in Tennessee.

Rape, crimes against nature, murder, wounding law officers and robbery were the charges against the victims. In 56 instances, law officers prevented lynchings; and it must be said that in 51 of these cases, they were southern law officers, and in the other five, armed force was used by the authorities in attempting to repel the onslaughts of those who sought to take the law into their own hands.

As a matter of fact, due to the activities of officers of the law, 77 persons were saved from mob violence during the year, five of these being white men, two being negro women, and 70 negro men.

Lynch law is no law at all; and although some, and probably most of those sought by the mobs were guilty or partly so, yet the effort to kill them without benefit of either arrest, trial or conviction was wholly outside the law, and wholly against the calm, ordered system of justice required in this country by the constitution and the laws.

There are crimes the very nature of which tend to incite people to mob violence; yet too often the accused is an innocent party; and no group of men bent only on vengeance is capable in the stilly hours of the night of acting as judge upon some hapless individual who may only answer a vague description of the supposed culprit.

Eight lynch deaths in a year is not a bad record, as compared with the records of former years; yet eight is exactly eight too many. The crimes of which all the victims, and near-victims, were accused were such that severe penalty, if not the extreme penalty, would have been assessed anyway had the victims been brought to trial and properly prosecuted.

BRISTOL TENN. HERALD-COURIER
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

Eight Mob Murders.

Unless there are other lynchings today or tomorrow, this year will close with only eight such crimes having been committed. This is the same number of lynchings as for 1936, but twelve less than for 1935, when twenty persons were put to death by mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched this year, all were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside of jails. All of the victims were Negroes, but only one was accused of rape, the crime which the mob originally presumed to punish.

There were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and fifty-one in Southern States. In fifty-one of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guard augmented or other precautions taken. In the other five instances armed force was used to repel the mobs.

In the fifty-six instances in which mobs were frustrated the lives of seventy-seven persons were saved. Of the seventy-seven, five were white men and seventy-two were Negroes, and two were women. Had these attempted lynchings been successful, eighty-five persons would have met death at the hands of mobs this year. While there has been a decline in the number of lynchings, at least temporarily, there seems to have been little or no abatement of the mob spirit.

Of the eight lynchings this year, three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi, one in Tennessee, one in Alabama and one in Georgia. And in no instance has any member of any one of the eight mobs been brought into court for his crime. Not a single mobster has even been apprehended, so far as the law is concerned. But one suspects that many of the lynchers could have been found had the responsible authorities been anxious to find them.

The eight mob murders that have occurred this year could have been prevented just as the fifty-six attempted outrages of the kind were prevented. If adequate measures were taken to prevent lynchings there would be few if any such crimes and no demand for a Federal anti-lynching law. Or if an honest effort were made to apprehend and punish mobsters, when these precautionary measures failed to prevent lynchings, there would be no demand for a Federal anti-lynching law. As it is, there is a widespread demand for such a law, and in all probability it will be placed on the Federal statutes within the next month.

GADSDEN ALA. TIMES
DEC. 30, 1937 J6

LYNCHINGS PRESENT NO EMERGENCY

NOTHING could more clearly demonstrate that the lynching evil does not present an emergency than the report of the Tuskegee Institute upon outbreaks of this nature during the year 1937.

This report shows that there were only eight lynchings in the entire country during the year now closing while there were 56 instances in which law enforcement officials prevented lynchings. The report says that 77 persons, five white and 72 negroes, were thus saved from mob violence.

The number of lynchings last year were the same as for this year, but the number is seven less than for 1935 and 15 less than for 1934.

Thus the record of the past three years shows a heavy decrease in crimes of this nature while exhibiting a very definite determination on the part of officals to prevent such outlawery.

Under the circumstances, it is ridiculous for the issue to be pushed to the fore in Congress while so many issues of a vital and pressing nature are pending. Moreover, it is crystal clear that precedence would not be given the subject for one moment were it not for the fact that some Northern congressmen are up for reelection this year and wish to cater to the negro vote in their districts. Thus personal politics is placed ahead of national prosperity and the general well-being.

Southern representatives should continue their opposition to this game of politics with its threat of bringing back to the South another era of carpetbagism with federal forces mixing in affairs that are purely local. They should demand that the Congress consider legislation to revive business and not legislation designed to revive the events of the reconstruction period.

Lynchings-1937
Reports on, Sent Press

Jan. -Dec.

5825

EL DORADO KS TIMES
DEC. 28, 1937 14

PREVENTING LYNCHINGS

Eight negroes—no whites—were lynched in the United States in 1937. The record is compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, which shows that all of these instances in which the mob superseded the law occurred in Southern States—Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Eight persons were lynched in 1936, 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934. Thus, the record is growing brighter. But the best part of the picture was that in 56 instances—five in Northern states and 51 in Southern—officers of the law prevented lynchings. In 51 of these cases the prisoners were removed, the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In five instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. Thus, a total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes—two women and 70 men—were saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The lust to lynch is as strong as ever apparently—but wherever officers have the courage and the initiative to stand up to mobs it is thwarted. And that is an improvement in the public service that deserves warm commendation.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE
JANUARY 3, 1938

Lynching Record

THE LYNCHING RECORD for 1937, as compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, is still unpleasant, but it has some bright accompaniments. The number, 8, was the same as in 1936, but 12 less than the 20 of 1935 and 7 less than the 15 of 1934. All the victims were Negroes—one in Alabama, three in Florida, one in Georgia, two in Mississippi and one in Tennessee. All were taken by mobs from the hands of the law.

On the other side there were 56 instances involving 77 persons in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, in most cases by prudent precautions, but in five cases by the use of armed force to repel the mobs. Of these instances 51 were in Southern States and 5 in Northern. This seems significant that in Southern States during the year officers of the law on 51 occasions prevented threatened lynchings as against 8 lynchings carried out in spite of them.

There is no doubt that lynching is gradually dying out. Even in those States that have been the worst offenders sentiment against it is growing and must eventually reach a pitch which will compel State governments to take action.

The unfortunate part of the Federal anti-lynching bill is that it is a sham, for political consumption, and would not do what it is advertised to do. Besides, the people of the South have objections to it rather firmly grounded in considerations of Federal interference in State affairs that should appeal likewise to Northerners, if they would stop to think it over.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK, DEMOCRAT
DEC. 30, 1937 16

LYNCHINGS IN 1937.

The special session of Congress adjourned without adopting the anti-lynching bill—thanks to the filibustering of Southern Senators. It adjourned before the Tuskegee Institute of public records and research made its report.

Here are the records as submitted by the institute:

In 1937 there were eight lynchings. The 1936 total was the same. In 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and 72 negroes. The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935, and 15 in 1934.

While the Tuskegee figures are not needed to add to the evidence that the anti-lynching bill was one of the most vicious aimed at the South since Reconstruction days, we do call attention to the fact that the statement that in 56 instances lynchings were prevented by officers of the law.

The "excuse" for the law is that officers fail to protect men accused of crimes and because of that dereliction of duty, the county in which it happened should be fined.

Could any more convincing evidence be produced? The Tuskegee report should be sufficient to end the argument in Congress when the anti-lynching bill bobs up again.

Winston-Salem, N. C. Journal
December 30, 1937

We Hold Our Own

Is Judge Lynch losing ground in the South? The statistics for 1937, compiled by Tuskegee Institute, afford little material for argument on either side. It lists eight lynchings in this area for the year and this number is exactly the same as that for 1936.

But there is reason for satisfaction in the knowledge that we held our own during a year noted for intense social excitement. In the South the mob spirit asserted itself on a number of occasions which did not produce a lynching bee, thanks to the vigilance of officers who had proper respect for their oaths. This is one of the most encouraging signs of the times, bespeaking as it does a growing sense of moral responsibility in law enforcement circles.

It will require many years of social education to drive the mob spirit out of the South. In the meantime officers of the law are charged with the grave responsibility of preventing every lynching they possibly can prevent. And this means a very high percentage, for a courageous sheriff or police chief with a staff of capable and well-armed deputies can place the fear of the hereafter in the heart of a hundred hoodlums.

Another weapon against the hoodlum is the criminal action at law. As yet legal investigations of lynching atrocities have been on the whole but nominal, half-hearted and unproductive affairs. Determined intent to bring the lyncher to justice has been lacking. Whether the failure of law enforcement officials to make thorough probes of these cases is due to politics or to sympathy with the mob, the result is the same. The failure herein is deplorable, since a few convictions of lynch-law mobsters would be more effective than a thousand impeachments against Judge Lynch.

Anniston, Ala. Star
January 8, 1938

Lynching Records

While the filibuster continues in the Senate to kill the anti-lynching bill, it is interesting to note the following comment on lynching records, as printed by The Baltimore Sun:

"If data on lynching compiled by Tuskegee Institute may be relied upon, there would seem to be some reason to hope that, before the bitter controversy over the issue is ended in Congress, the advocates of a federal law on the subject will not have a great deal of basis to urge such an enactment.

"Tuskegee Institute reports that there were but eight lynchings of Negroes last year, the lowest with the exception of 1932, when there were also eight, since the records have been kept. In 1892 there were 231. From 1910 to 1923 the number varied from a high of 74 to a low of 33. The highest number recently was 30 in 1926. The total for 1936 was 13 and, as has been noted, the record for 1937 was cut almost in half.

"Such disgraceful outbreaks have varied so much from year to year that it is unsafe to predict that they may not again show increase. But the decline of lynchings over a long period of time gives ground for belief that we shall not witness in the future anything approaching the amount of mob violence that prevailed 10 or 20 years ago. This evidence of betterment because of a more vigorous public opinion in the matter, aided by more aggressive enforcement of the law in the localities, shows that the states are not wholly helpless before this menace. Their efforts ought not to cease until the score is perfect."

ST PETERSBURG FLA TIMES
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

EIGHT WERE LYNCHED IN U. S. DURING YEAR

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states: Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

Smithfield, N. C. Herald

DEC 31 1937

LYNCHINGS ARE ON THE DECREASE

Eleven years go the average number of lynchings in the United States was twenty-five, the majority of the victims being Negroes. The record for the past year, 1937, was eight, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute. All the persons lynched were Negroes, the offenses charged being rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2. All the lynched were in the hands of the law, three having been taken from jails, five from officers of the law outside of jails. The lynchings occurred in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

The progress made during the last decade is an indication of what continuous effort can do in moulding sentiment against mob violence. Pride has been instilled in officers to protect offenders of the law until they can be given a fair trial. This is shown by the fact that in 1937 in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings thus saving the lives of 72 Negroes and five whites. Fifty-one of these 56 cases were in southern states where prejudice against the Negro is supposed to be greatest.

IRONTON OHIO EVE TRIBUNE
MONDAY JANUARY 3 1938

THE 77 OTHER CASES

Tuskegee Institute's annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is customarily used as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched 7 less than for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings—51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselevs.

* * * * *

President Roosevelt's advisers are hoping the Christmas holiday will put Congress in a more "giving" mood toward his legislative request.

WILKES-BARRE PA RECORD
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Mob Violence In 1937

EIGHT lynchings in 1937, the number to date, gives the year a record for mob violence on a par with that of 1936, when the number of lynchings was also eight. If that doesn't represent a change for the better, at least it shows that the gain made last year is being held. In 1935 there were 20 lynchings, and the year before there were 15. These figures are according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute.

Most encouraging of all is the fact that thwarted lynchings are far more numerous than those that occur. In 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings in 1937, and a total of 77 persons were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Against that bright circumstance is the dark fact that all persons lynched were in the hands of the law; that three of the eight were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside the jails.

It is thus evident that even without the federal law so urgently demanded from certain quarters mob violence has been vastly discouraged and reduced to a relatively low minimum in the United States. When one reads that two of the victims this year were tortured with a blow torch, one wonders whether the cruel and wanton spirit which leads to lynchings can ever be conquered by statutes, however drastic or comprehensive. This observation detracts nothing from the fact that fidelity to the cause of preventing lynchings is thoroughly worth while, not only because of the moral issue involved, but because the continued effort has been productive of better and better results as the years have gone on.

HOUSTON, TEX. POST
DEC. 29, 1937 17

Lynching Declines

MOB violence in the United States is on the decline. The lynching scourge, which has disgraced America and particularly the South for generations, may be eliminated in the next few years through courageous law enforcement and education.

These conclusions may be drawn from the latest report of the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research which reveals that only eight lynchings, all involving negroes, occurred during 1937. The 1936 toll also was eight.

There were 20 lynchings in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

There will be little satisfaction among Americans who believe in law and order and oppose mob violence until lynching has been stamped out entirely. But as enlightened leaders working to create better understanding between races continue their good will efforts, they have every reason to be proud of progress made during the past two years.

Not so long ago, the annual lynching toll was around 50. Officers in many instances, particularly in the South, made no effort to protect negro prisoners from mobs. They literally turned their backs and handed over the prisoners for whose safety they were responsible.

The Tuskegee report indicates most gratifying progress in that respect. In 56 instances, the Institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in Northern States and 51 in the South.

Officers who prevented mob violence during the year have earned a place on the honor roll of American law enforcement. To them must go much of the credit for the low number of lynchings during the year. If officers generally continue that policy, the lynching scourge will be stamped out in a few more years.

All lynchings in 1937 occurred in Southern States. Three are charged against Florida; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one; Alabama, one, and Georgia, one.

No lynchings occurred in Texas, for which all the people are very grateful. Let us hope this State will continue to occupy a place on that roll of honor.

BUFFALO N Y NEWS
THURSDAY DECEMBER 30 1937

LYNCHING EVIL

In its annual report on lynching, the Tuskegee institute presents statistics that may guide the Senate in its discussion of mob violence when it takes up the anti-lynching measure on Jan. 6. According to the institute, the United States permitted eight lynchings to take place in 1937, the same number as that for the preceding year.

It is significant that all of these aggressions against law and order occurred in the South. An additional interesting item is the fact that all of the victims were Negroes. Three were lynched in Florida, two in Mississippi, one each in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. The institute reports that officers of the law prevented acts of mob violence in 56 instances this year.

Probably the passage of the Wagner anti-lynching bill by the House has stimulated Southern sheriffs to protect prisoners from mobs. For the measure provides for prosecution of officials who fail to do their full duty when mobs move to take the law into their own hands. Perhaps the agitation at Washington for anti-lynching legislation also has aroused public opinion in southern states against mob action. Even so, there still would be strong argument for passage of the Wagner bill.

SALEM OHIO NEWS
TUESDAY JANUARY 4 1938

THE 77 OTHER CASES

Tuskegee Institute's annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is customarily used as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched; 7 less than for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings—51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselves.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on Sent Press.

Jan. - Dec.

5826

Suffolk, Va., News-Herald
December 29, 1937

MOB SPIRIT NATIONWIDE

According to records compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, eight persons were murdered by lynching mobs this year. As to be expected, all of them occurred in southern states, those farthest south of the Mason-Dixon line No less strange every person done to death was a black man.

Furthermore, the records show that each victim was in the hands of law officers when taken out for the slaughter. Only three were in jails; the other five were snatched from men sworn to protect them. Details of their slaying are still fresh in the minds of the people.

Statistics show there were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Of these five were in northern states and the other fifty-one in the south. In fifty-one instances the prisoners were removed, the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In five others, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. Only one of the eight who died at the hands of the mob was charged with the unmentionable crime against a white woman.

The record is unspeakably bad. For it we have neither excuse nor apology. But the fact that so many were protected by the law from summary execution is encouraging. In 1934 the toll stood at fifteen; in 1935 twenty. No better proof is lacking than these figures that the lynching crime is on the wane. The conscience of the south has been stirred to its depths. Public sentiment is putting an end to this gory parade of violence.

This week in Newark, N. J., a white man killed a young girl in a manner which has few parallels in its diabolical cruelty and viciousness. Yesterday the wanton slayer was arraigned in court. There were shouts of "kill him" from among the spectators. A relative of the dead woman struck him a blow in open court. Had that been in any community less guarded by officers of the law, does anyone doubt what would have happened to him?

We merely mention this instance to show that the mob spirit is nationwide and rampant. Outraged citizens, inflamed by a particularly ferocious crime, lose control of their angry passions and must be restrained.

Federal laws nor federal might can do this. Public sentiment only can wipe out the stain of the mob. It will compel local authorities to do as the fifty-one in the south and the five in the north did. The crime of lynching will be abated when public sentiment, through respect for law, determines it must cease, anti-lynching law or no anti-lynching law notwithstanding.

Columbia, S. C. Record
January 3, 1938

Toward the Goal.

Only eight negroes, Tuskegee Institute reports were lynched last year—none in South Carolina.

And eight lynchings in a year, even if they are eight too many, established a record equaling that of 1932, the lowest since lynching records have been kept.

There is, of course, no guarantee that this year will not see an increase in the number of lynchings. In 1936 there were 13; in 1926 there were 30.

But there is evidence of a steady decline in the lynching frequency. In 1892 there were 231 recorded lynchings. Lynching has, therefore, declined 97 per cent in 45 years. The weight of public opinion in the Sotuh is against it. A little more courage and foresight on the part of enforcement officers, a little more education, no trafficing at all by government with even lesser manifestations of the mob spirit—the Ku Klux Klan's attack on a Florida night club is an example—and it can for all practical purposes be abolished.

Smithfield, N. C. Herald
December 31, 1937

LYNCHINGS ARE ON THE DECREASE

Eleven years go the average number of lynchings in the United States was twenty-five, the majority of the victims being Negroes. The record for the past year, 1937, was eight, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute. All the persons lynched were Negroes, the offenses charged being rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2. All the lynched were in the hands of the law, three having been taken from jails, five from officers of the law outside of jails. The lynchings occurred in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The progress made during the last decade is an indication of what continuous effort can do in moulding sentiment against mob violence. Pride has been instilled in officers to protect offenders of the law until they can be given a fair trial. This is shown by the fact that in 1937 in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings thus saving the lives of 72 Negroes and five whites. Fifty-one of these 56 cases were in southern states where prejudice against the Negro is supposed to be greatest.

Moultrie, Ga., Weekly Observer
December 31, 1937

EIGHT PERSONS LYNCHED IN '37

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Titusville, Fla., Star Advocate
January 4, 1938

Florida Leads Five States In Lynching

Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, according to a recent report. Florida led the group of five states in which lynchings occured during the period. This state had 3, and Mississippi had two. Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama each had one.

Pavo, Ga., News
December 30, 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS LISTED IN SOUTHEAST FOR 1937

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—A total of eight lynchings occurred in Southern states during 1937, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, announced Monday.

Three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

Eight lynchings were recorded in 1936, 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

SPRINGFIELD OHIO NEWS
THURSDAY DECEMBER 30 1937

THE LYNCHING RECORD

The department of records and research of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama makes its annual report of lynching statistics. Eight persons were killed by mobs this year, all Negroes and all of them in the south. The number is the same as in 1936, 12 less than in 1935, seven less than in 1934.

From these figures alone it might be concluded that lynching is dying out of itself and that federal legislation to eradicate this crime is unnecessary, as southern congressmen, successfully blocking enaction of such a measure thus far, have contended. The error of that view is evident in the far greater number of threatened lynchings which officers of the law prevented.

There were 56 such instances, five in the north, the balance in the south. In the vast majority of these cases it was necessary to remove prisoners, strengthen their guard or take other like precautions. On five occasions armed force was necessary to turn back a mob. By one method or another courageous officials thus saved 77 persons from lynching.

But the eight murdered by mobs were likewise in the hands of the law; several were taken from jails, five from officers outside. The success of the officers who held their prisoners spite of the threats of mobs heightens the shame of these who failed. In the circumstances the common declaration of mobs that they must mete out the justice which the law neglects is also given the lie. Two of the victims were tortured with blow torches before being put to death—another indication of the savagery, far removed from any spirit of justice, which actuates a mob.

Eight lynchings and 56 others prevented show the problem, southern congressmen to the contrary notwithstanding, still pressing

JANESVILLE WIS GAZETTE
THURSDAY DECEMBER 30 1937

Lynchings Are Fewer

In its annual report, the Tuskegee Institute which over a period of years has made a report on the number of lynchings in the United States, says there were eight persons lynched in 1937 or the same number as in 1936, 12 less than in 1935 and seven less than the number in 1924. All were negroes, and all the lynchings were in the south—Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee. It is peculiar that Florida had the largest number, three, and that Florida has the largest northern-born population of any of these states. The record is important because it shows that officers of the law prevented 56 lynchings, involving 72 people, five of which were in northern states and 51 in southern states. It is quite doubtful whether an anti-lynching law passed by the congress of the United States would have been able to reduce the number of lynchings to the extent now done by the pressure of public opinion.

BANGOR ME NEWS
SATURDAY JANUARY 1 1938

Lynchings in 1937

The annual report of Tuskegee Institute on lynchings puts the number in 1937 at eight, the same number as in 1936. In 1937 all those lynched were Negroes. Three of this year's lynchings occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. To be read with these figures are others which the Alabama school obtained, which show that in fifty-six instances in 1937 officers of the law prevented a lynching; on fifty-one occasions this successful intervention of the law occurred in Southern States.

On January 6 the Senate will once again take up the anti-lynching bill already passed by the House of Representatives. Some of the critics of the bill have pointed out that it provides no machinery for preventing lynchings, but it does provide heavy penalties to be applied to counties and county officers after a lynching has occurred. The Tuskegee statistics are certain to be cited frequently in the course of Senate debate. They represent the freshest information available about the extent of the evil of lynching.

STEUBENVILLE OHIO HER STAR
MONDAY JANUARY 3 1938

The 77 Other Cases

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE'S annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is customarily used as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched; 7 less than for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings—51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselves.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., NEWS-SENT
DEC. 30, 1937 J7

Time To Reconsider!

LET'S look at the 1937 lynching figures, released yesterday.

Florida	3
Mississippi	2
Tennessee	1
Alabama	1
Georgia	1

Many Southern Congressmen are still fighting Federal anti-lynching legislation. We don't believe that they are truly representing the sentiment of the people from their home states. We believe that the anti-lynching legislation would be passed in most of these five Southern states where lynchings occurred this year. We have little doubt that it would be passed in Tennessee.

Lynching is not condoned by the majority of the citizens in communities where they occur. An Institute of Public Opinion poll during the past year, published by The News-Sentinel, showed that sentiment over the country was overwhelmingly for anti-lynching legislation. The South, considered alone, voted for the proposed measure.

We think it is time our Congressmen reconsidered their stand on this question. Lynching must stop even if it takes Federal legislation to do it.

COLUMBUS OHIO STATE JOURNAL
MONDAY JANUARY 3 1938

Gratifying Record

LYNCHING statistics for 1937, as supplied by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, are highly gratifying. They show that only eight persons were dispatched by mobs, which is the same number as in 1936, a notable decrease from other days. They also disclose that in only five of the 48 states were mobs successful in their object.

But the more pleasing disclosure is that there were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. This means that a total of 77 persons were saved from unlawful deaths.

It is not of record whether or not the eight who met summary death could have been saved by prompt and effective official action. But those officials who stepped in and prevented vengeance by mobs are to be congratulated, and their action shows that people everywhere are tired of all mobs and are willing to rely on the course of law to take care of trial and punishment.

MARION (O.) STAR
MONDAY JANUARY 3 1938

The 77 Other Cases

TUSKEGEE Institute's annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is customarily used as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all Negroes, were lynched, 7 less than for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings—51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselves.

PORTSMOUTH OHIO TIMES
TUESDAY JANUARY 4 1938

THE 77 OTHER CASES

Tuskegee Institute's annual report on lynchings in the United States, which is used customarily as a basis for discussing this problem, shows the following figures for 1937:

Eight persons, all colored were lynched; seven fewer than for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails, and the other five were taken from officers of the law. However, in 56 instances, officers of the law prevented lynchings—51 times by taking extra precautions, the other five times by using armed force to repel lynchers. A total of 77 persons were saved from mobs in this way.

When congressmen begin to talk about lynching again, as they are scheduled to do, the fact that 77 persons were saved from mob violence without federal intervention is bound to be offered as evidence that the states aren't entirely incapable of handling this matter themselves.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN
4 JAN 1938

LYNCHINGS IN THE UNITED STATES

Eight Victims Last Year

To the Editor of the Manchester Guardian

SIR,—According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; twelve less than the number for 1935; and seven less than the number for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from gaols and five from officers of the law outside gaols. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offences charged were rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2. The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.—Yours, &c.,

F. D. PATTERSON, President
Tuskegee Institute.
Alabama, U.S.A.,
December 23.

COLUMBUS MISS. DISPATCH
DEC. 28, 1937 J3

56 LYNCHINGS PREVENTED

Statistics compiled and issued by Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, show that in 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings in 1937.

Five were prevented in Northern States and 51 in Southern States.

These figures should be the answer to the damnable proposal for an anti-lynching law now pending in Congress.

The South did more to prevent lynchings than all of the north put together.

In the North they simply let the racketeers, murderers, and gangsters slay their victims.

Under the proposed anti-lynching law, however, gangsters, racketeers and strikers would be exempt from its provisions.

Jan. – Dec.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

5827

5827

Sanford, Fla. Herald
December 29, 1937

Lynching In 1937

Though some congressmen are considerably agitated of late over lynching conditions in the South and are striving with might and main to enact legislation which would severely penalize the taxpayers in any community in which a lynching occurs, a report just received from the president of Tuskegee Institute shows that the South is rapidly eliminating the lynching evil without any help from the federal government whatever.

During the year just coming to a close, there have been eight lynchings in the United States, all of them in the South. This compares with hundreds lynched annually twenty-five or thirty years ago. It also compares with 20 lynchings in 1935, and 15 in 1934.. Of the eight persons lynched this year, all were negroes. One was charged with rape; one with a crime against nature and robbery; four with murder; two with wounding an officer of the law.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings," the Tuskegee report says. "Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs."

Be it said to the shame of Florida that three out of these eight lynchings occurred in this state. One occurred in Alabama, one in Georgia, two in Mississippi, and one in Tennessee. Thus Florida has the worst lynching record of any state in the union for this year. It has not always been so. In fact throughout the years Florida has ranked high among southern states which have sought to eliminate this evil.

No doubt the effort will continue and as time goes on lynching in the South will become a matter of history.

Gadsden, Ala., Times
December 30, 1937

LYNCHINGS PRESENT NO EMERGENCY

NOTHING could more clearly demonstrate that the lynching evil does not present an emergency than the report of the Tuskegee Institute upon outbreaks of this nature during the year 1937.

This report shows that there were only eight lynchings in the entire country during the year now closing while there were 56 instances in which law enforcement officials prevented lynchings. The report says that 77 persons, five white and 72 negroes, were thus saved from mob violence.

The number of lynchings last year were the same as for this year, but the number is seven less than for 1935 and 15 less than for 1934.

Thus the record of the past three years shows a heavy decrease in crimes of this nature while exhibiting a very definite determination on the part of officals to prevent such outlawery.

Under the circumstances, it is ridiculous for the issue to be pushed to the fore in Congress while so many issues of a vital and pressing nature are pending. Moreover, it is crystal clear that precedence would not be given the subject for one moment were it not for the fact that some Northern congressmen are up for reelection this year and wish to cater to the negro vote in their districts. Thus personal politics is placed ahead of national prosperity and the general well-being.

Southern representatives should continue their opposition to this game of politics with its threat of bringing back to the South another era of carpetbagism with federal forces mixing in affairs that are purely local. They should demand that the Congress consider legislation to revive business and not legislation designed to revive the events of the reconstruction period.

Rome Ga. News-Tribune
December 30, 1937

LYNCHINGS PRESENT NO EMERGENCY

NOTHING could more clearly demonstrate that the lynching evil does not present an emergency than the report of the Tuskegee Institute upon outbreaks of this nature during the year 1937.

This report shows that there were only eight lynchings in the entire country during the year now closing while there were fifty-six instances in which law enforcement officials prevented lynchings. The report says that 77 persons, 5 white and 72 negroes, were thus saved from mob violence.

The number of lynchings last year were the same as for this year, but the number is 7 less than for 1935 and 15 less than for 1934.

Thus the record of the past three years shows a heavy decrease in crimes of this nature while exhibiting a very definite determination on the part of officials to prevent such outlawry.

Under the circumstances, it is ridiculous for the issue to be pushed to the fore in Congress while so many issues of a vital and pressing nature are pending. Moreover, it is crystal clear than precedence would not be given the subject for one moment were it not for the fact that some Northern congressmen are up for reelection this year and wish to cater to the negro vote in their districts. Thus personal politics is placed ahead of national prosperity and the general well-being.

Southern representatives should continue their opposition to this game of politics with its threat of bringing back to the South another era of carpetbagism, with federal forces

Florida Is Leader In Mob Parade

1-31-38

Mississippi Has Two. All Of The Victims Of 1937 Slaying Were Colored Persons.

Dr. Patterson's Letter.

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.
December 23, 1937.

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other as burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occured and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Very truly yours,
F. D. Patterson,
President.

EIGHT PERSONS WERE LYNCHED DURING 1937

According To Records Of Research Department Of Tuskegee Institute

FLORIDA HEADS LIST OF LYNCHING STATES

Officers Of Law Were Instrumental In Preventing 56 Lynchings

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 23.—According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances; armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows; Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Birmingham, Ala. Post
December 28, 1937

EIGHT PERSONS LYNCHED IN '37

Nation's Total Is Same As Last Year, Well Under 1934 And 1935

Eight persons were lynched in the United States in 1937, the same number as in 1936, it was reported today by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute.

The eight lynchings of 1937 show a reduction of 12 from the 1935 total, and are seven less than the number lynched in 1934.

"All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails," the report stated. The report was signed by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute.

"Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two, and Tennessee, one.

"There were 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken.

"In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Roanoke, Va., World News
December 30, 1937

The Lynching Record

According to the records of Tuskegee Institute, eight persons were lynched in the year 1937, the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number for 1935, and 7 less than for the year 1934.

All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured, then one was shot to death and the other burned to death.

There were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 instances, the prisoners were removed, or the guards augmented, or other steps taken as precautions. In five instances, armed force was used to repel lynching parties.

A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes—two women and 70 men—were thus saved from death at the hands of angry mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched all were Negroes. The offenses charged were criminal assault, 1; robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred, and the number in each State were: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

But for one factor, the record is an encouraging one. Even in the face of acute provocation, people are acting with more restraint and showing more of respect for their courts and for law enforcement agencies. And the record of law enforcement officials in the main is excellent. They have undoubtedly acted in many instances not only to save life, but to save their States from disgrace.

The one discouraging factor is the attitude of the States in which lynchings have occurred. In each instance there has been the promise of an investigation, but the record does not show that any member of a lynching mob has been prosecuted or that the officials from whom prisoners were taken have been removed from office. Lynching has ceased in those States where lynching mobs have been prosecuted, and where officers have been removed who failed to protect their prisoners. It can be stamped out entirely if public opinion is sufficiently aroused.

BURLINGTON IA HAWKEYE GAZ
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

LYNCHINGS.

Annually at this season comes the report from the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama giving a compilation of that institution's research in the matter of lynchings in the United States. The report this year is of more than usual interest because of the fact that the Congress, when it reconvenes in January, will take up the anti-lynching bill.

Tuskegee Institute reports that eight persons were lynched in the United States during 1937. This is the same number as for 1936. It is 12 less than the 1935 record, and seven less than in 1934.

A significant sentence in the report is: "All the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside of jails." That is not a pleasing record. Yet there is a brighter side. There were 56 cases in which officers of the law did prevent lynchings, and 51 of these were in southern states. A total of 77 persons 72 of them Negroes, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

All of the eight persons lynched this year were Negroes, and the offenses charged were rape, 1; robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding an officer, 2.

It is also interesting to note that two of the victims were tortured with blow torches before being put to death.

A breakdown of the lynchings by states shows Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, one each; Mississippi, 2; Florida, 3. All of which may explain in a measure why the anti-lynching law is now so bitterly opposed by the delegates to Congress from the southern states.

MARSHALLTOWN, IA., TIMES REP
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

LYNCHINGS DECREASING.

The U. S. A. is making progress in the prevention and discouragement of lynchings. According to statistics issued Monday by the Tuskegee Institute there were only eight lynchings during the past year. This is not to say that the spirit of mob law has been entirely overcome. Rather there is indication of a growing sentiment against lynch law as expressed by statutes which would punish not only mob leaders but also officers who are negligent of duty and careless of responsibility.

That the mob spirit has not been overcome in those areas where color projudices prevail and there is no patience with the black man who transgresses the laws is evident. In 1937 there were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five such preventions were in the northern states where racial prejudices are not as extreme and where there is willingness to permit the law to take its course.

Fifty-one of the illegal executions were in southern states, and the eight men lynched during the year were Negroes. That rape is no longer the major crime which engenders the mob spirit is shown by the fact that only one of the victims was accused of that crime. Alleged guilt of murder accounted for half the lynchings. To the discredit of Florida three of the mob murders were committed in that state compared to only one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee, states in which lynch law was once common.

Whether or not a national anti-lynching law is essential as a preventive measure, the nation is making progress in the prevention of execution by mobs. The nation is entitled to self congratulation.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - Dec.

5828

Anderson, S. C., Independent Trib
January 1, 1938

DECREASE IN LYNCHINGS

Record of eight Lynchings in the South this year of course is a record of eight more lynchings than there should have been, but many will find comfort in the fact that the number of lynchings was 12 less than last year and 15 less than the year before that.

Florida led the lynching field with three Mississippi followed with two, and Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee contributed one each.

South Carolina had no lynchings.

What accounts for the ebb and flow in lynchings deserves more time and study than we are ready now to give, but one factor in the year's record is outstanding:

In 56 cases the intelligence of law enforcement officers prevented lynchings, and 51 of those cases were in the South.

The picture we get then is one of 59 potential southern lynchings and 8 actual lynchings—in approximately seven out of eight attempts the mob was thwarted by the sense and courage of the men in charge of the prisoners.

We have more than an average of suspicion that the decline in lynchings is due to an elevation in the type of men the people of the South are putting in charge of their law enforcement.

In any case the statistics for the year—and the three-year trend—should serve as good ammunition in the battle to saddle and disgrace the South with a federal anti-lynching bill, which is more of a dare to lynch than it is a preventative.

and all were in the hands of the law, three having been taken from jails and the others from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims, it is distressing to note, were tortured with a blow torch before one was shot to death and the other burned to death. That such savagery should obtain anywhere in this land since early Indian days seems incredible.

The Institute report notes fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these being in nothern states. In fifty-one instances the prisoners were removed, the guards were augmented or other precautions were taken. In the other five instances, armed force was used to repel the mobs, a total of seventy-seven being thus saved from death at the hands of mobs. This part of the record represents a hopeful phase of the whole sorry picture.

Columbus, Ga. Ledger
December 27, 1937

Lynchings Decline

Eight lynchings occurred in the south for the year now drawing to a close, according to a compilation by F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute.

This figure, the same as prevailed in 1936, is 12 less than the number of 20 for 1935 and seven less than the 15 reported lynched in 1935.

Lynchings were reported in states as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2, and Tennessee, 1.

Thus, the report indicates most conclusively that mob violence in the south is distinctly on the wane and that annually less lynchings are being reported.

The south has made rapid strides in recent years to discourage and eliminate mob violence and the report of Tuskegee Institute demonstrates most emphatically that lynchings are now rare in the south.

The report stands out as an eloquent defense of the south in its fight against the anti-lynch law, proposed for enactment by the congress, which would take jurisdiction for handling mob violence cases out of the hands of the state courts and their officials.

Lynchings in the south are in the minority by far when we attempt to compare them with cases of mob action in other sections where gangsters and hoodlums ply their nefarious trade of slaughtering their foes without fear or fancy.

CUMBERLAND MD NEWS
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

Lynchings

FIVE SOUTHERN STATES had lynchings during the year just closing, according to the annual report on this form of mob law sent out by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, and while the record yet remains unsatisfactory it is gratifying that the total of eight does not represent an increase of the crime. The total is the same as for 1936, while in 1935 twenty were lynched and in the preceding year fifteen.

All of the persons lynched were Negroes

Lafayette, Ala., Sun
December 29, 1937

Tuskegee Institute announces eight lynchings in the United States during 1937, the same number as last year. One encouraging sign is that 77 lynchings were thwarted by officers of the law. The eight lynchings occurred in five Southern States—Alabama 1, Florida 3, Georgia 1, Mississippi 2 and Tennessee 1.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
December 30, 1937

Eight Mob Murders.

Unless there are other lynchings today or tomorrow, this year will close with only eight such crimes having been committed. This is the same number of lynchings as for 1936, but twelve less than for 1935, when twenty persons were put to death by mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched this year, all were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside of jails. All of the victims were Negroes, but only one was accused of rape, the crime which the mob originally presumed to punish.

There were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and fifty-one in Southern States. In fifty-one of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guard augmented or other precautions taken. In the other five instances armed force was used to repel the mobs.

In the fifty-six instances in which mobs were frustrated the lives of seventy-seven persons were saved. Of the seventy-seven, five were white men and seventy-two were Negroes, and two were women. Had these attempted lynchings been successful, eighty-five persons would have met death at the hands of mobs this year. While there has been a decline in the number of lynchings, at least temporarily, there seems to have been little or no abatement of the mob spirit.

Of the eight lynchings this year, three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi, one in Tennessee, one in Alabama and one in Georgia. And in no instance has any member of any one of the eight mobs been brought into court for his crime. Not a single mobster has even been apprehended, so far as the law is concerned. But one suspects that many of the lynchers could have been found had the responsible authorities been anxious to find them.

The eight mob murders that have occurred this year could have been prevented just as the fifty-six attempted outrages of the kind were prevented. If adequate measures were taken to prevent lynchings there would be few if any such crimes and no demand for a Federal anti-lynching law. Or if an honest effort were made to apprehend and punish mobsters, when these

Crossville, Tenn. Chronicle
December 30, 1937

Eight Persons Lynched During the Year 1937

Accoding to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institue there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number of 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number of 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

precautionary measures failed to prevent lynchings, there would be no demand for a Federal anti-lynching law. As it is, there is a widespread demand for such a law, and in all probability it will be placed on the Federal statutes within the next month.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Newport News, Va. Press
December 29, 1937

LYNCHING IS TARDILY OBSOLESCENT

One of the principal arguments used by the Southern members of Congress who have fought the anti-lynching legislation is that lynching is on the decrease. The evil, they say, will cure itself in the long run and so no federal interference is necessary. That thought is borne out to some extent by the figures for this year, though even one lynching is too inexcusably many and the argument will not hold good until a vast improvement is shown even over this year's record.

The summary, compiled by President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute, reads thus:

"I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number (eight) as for 1936, 12 less than the number 20 for 1935 and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States, and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

This record shows that lynching obsolescence is all too tardy and that the forces of education are but slowly leavening the lump of those who would resort to the law of the jungle. If there is some reassurance in the fact that officers of the law successfully resisted mobs in 56 instances, there is also grim warning in the fact that there were 56 mobs bent on taking the law into their own hands during the year. We must cure the lynching evil not only by the efficiency of our protection of prisoners but by the elimination of the mob itself through education. It is not enough to say that lynching is on the wane. Its complete elimination is the only acceptable condition.

Cullman, Ala., Democrat
December 30, 1937

NUMBER OF LYNCHINGS REMAIN SAME AS IN 1936

F. D. Patternson, president of Tuskegee Institute released the following statistics on lynchings during the year 1937:

"I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number for 1935, and 7 less than the number for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other cases, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons of which 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding an officer of the law, two.

"The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

Norfolk, Va. Pilot
January 2, 1938

Last Year's Lynching Record

Tuskegee Institute's Department of Records and Research reports eight lynchings in 1937 and thereby writes the year down as equal to the best in this respect the country has ever known. In only one other year, 1932, has the number dropped as low as eight. In only one other instance, 1936, was it as low as nine, and for that matter there has been only one year in which the figure stopped at ten.

It is necessary to go a step further. The last two years—1936 with nine lynchings and 1937 with eight—constitute the best two-year record of all time. On the previous occasion when the number dropped to eight, which was in 1932, the preceding year had witnessed 13 lynchings and the succeeding year was to shoot up to the high total of 28. For 24 months, therefore, the South has had, on any comparative basis, an excellent record.

But at that point one has to shut down on the satisfaction. Eight lynchings are exactly eight more than a nation pretending to civilization can look upon with complacency. Moreover, although the past two years have been better, relatively speaking, there is little assurance that the coming year will maintain this improvement. The South had only 21 lynchings in the 24-month period of 1928 and 1929, yet the very next year of 1930 the number shot up to 21 for the single 12 months. The South had only eight lynchings in 1932, yet had 28 in 1933. How can anyone guess what will happen in 1938?

Furthermore, the eight lynchings of 1937 are in other respects peculiarly inexcusable. In only one of them, for instance, was rape charged against the victim. Four of them resulted from murder. Two of them resulted from wounding an officer of the law. It is quite plain, as it has been for many years, that the old theory of protecting Southern womanhood is fetish. Lynchings follow killings or fights and attempted killings more than any other crime. In many instances, it would seem probable, the regular processes of the law would not find cold-blooded, deliberate and premeditated murder at the heart of the alleged offense. More probably it would be second-degree murder or some lesser crime. Sometimes it would find no crime at all.

Finally, the 1937 record is especially vicious in one damning circumstance. Every man who was lynched during the year was taken by a mob from an officer or officers of the law. In no single instance, therefore, was there any real likelihood that the accused would escape the judgment of the law; and in every instance the officer or officers of the law failed to provide that protection which our whole system of law presupposes.

A man under arrest is a man whom the State has taken in charge, to deal with as the law shall determine but to care for and guard until the law has made its decision. Eight times during the year that protection failed—and men were shot and tortured with blow torches and burned to death. That is the failure that has driven many intelligent men and women the country over to the conclusion that something else not now present is needed to overcome the failure of officers to perform their manifest duty.

Columbus, Miss., Commerc'l Disp.
December 31, 1937

SYMPATHY FOR WHO?

This timely paragraph from Fred Sullens' column in the Jackson Daily News:

Two brutal Memphis negroes, probably crazed with liquor or some drug, went across the river into Arkansas and captured an 18-year-old girl. Then both ravished her. Negroes are in custody. And yet the Southern Association for the Protection of Colored People still wonders why lynchings occassionally happen. It has profound sympathy for the brute who is lynched but none for the poor victim.

It's an effective answer to to the proposal for an anti-lynching bill, now pending in the Congress.

Furthermore, statistics gathered by Tuskegee Institute in Alabama show that officers prevented 56 lynchings in 1937, and 51 of these were prevented in the South.

Which goes to prove that lynching is more effectively suppressed here than in any other section of the country.

In other sections of the country crimes, eminently worse than lynchings, seem to draw no criticism.

In fact, they are excluded from the vicious anti-lynching law proposal.

Lynchings—1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan.—Dec.

5829

Nashville Tenn Banner
December 28, 1937

8 Negroes Lynched In U. S. During 1937

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 28—(AP)—Lynch mobs killed eight persons, all Negroes, in the United States during 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Research and Records reported today.

The toll by states:

Florida, three; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one; Alabama, one, and Georgia, one.

The same number met lynch deaths in 1936, Institute records showed.

Law enforcement officials prevented fifty-six possible lynchings which would have involved five white men and seventy-two Negroes, the Institute reported.

All of those lynched were taken from authorities, three having been removed forcibly from jails. Two were tortured with a blowtorch before being put to death. Offenses charged against the victims included: Criminal assault, one; crime against nature, one; murder, four, and wounding an officer, two.

The 1937 figures, issued by the Institute, America's largest Negro college, without comment, compared with twenty lynched in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

Mt. Airy, N. C., News
December 30, 1937

Lynching Toll In South For Year Same As In 1936

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida three, Mississippi two, Tennessee one, Alabama one, and Georgia one.

In 56 instances, the institute said officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: criminal assault, one, crime against nature and robbery, one, murder, four, wounding of officer, two.

Eatonton, Ga., Messenger
December 30, 1937

Georgia Lynches Only One During Entire Year 1937

According to statistics gathered by the research department of the Tuskeegee Institute, there were eight persons lynched in the United States during 1937. This is the same as for 1937; 12 less than the number 20 in 1935; and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from the jails and five were taken from officers outside of the jail. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken.

The eight lynching occurred as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Elizabethton, N. C., Journal
December 30, 1937

EIGHT TOO MANY

The lynching record for 1937 was the same as that for 1936, eight persons having been lynched during each year, according to statistics compiled by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute. That was 12 less than the number lynched during 1935, the number that year being 20. All the persons lynched were Negroes and the states in which lynchings occurred during 1937, together with the number lynched are: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1; Tennessee, 1. The report also shows that 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, were saved from death at the hands of mobs.

To this we might add, there were just eight too many lynchings in 1937.

Greenville, N. C.—Reflector
December 28, 1937

Research Reveals Eight Lynched In Nation This Year

Florida Reported Three, Mississippi Two, Georgia, Alabama And Tennessee One Each

Records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute showed that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blowtorch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer of the law, two.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

Blakeley, Ga. News
December 30, 1937

Eight Lynchings In United States During Year 1937

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., there were 8 persons lynched in the United States in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions were taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Taylorsville, N. C., Times.
December 30, 1937

EIGHT NEGROES LYNCHED IN 1937; OCCURS IN 5 STATE

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in Northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1935.

Offenses charged against the victims were listed as: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Lafayette, Ala., Sun
December 29, 1937

Tuskegee Institute Reports 8 Lynchings

A check made on lynchings throughout the United States by the Tuskegee Institute at Tuskegee and released this week shows that 8 persons were lynched in the United States during the present year.

This is the same number reported in 1936; 12 less than the number reported for the year 1935 and 7 less than the 1934 figure. There were 56 instances wherein officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these being in Northern states and 51 in Southern states.

The report shows that all victims were in the hands of the law at the time of the lynchings. The 8 persons lynched were all negroes. The offenses charged were rape, robbery, murder and wounding an officer. The states in which lynchings occurred were Alabama 1, Florida 3, Georgia 1, Mississippi 2 and Tennessee 1.

Miami, Fla Herald
December 29, 1937

SOUTH'S OFFICERS STOP 51 LYNCHINGS

Eight Persons Killed By Mobs During Year

Tuskegee Institute, negro school, credited law enforcement officers in Southern states with preventing 51 lynchings this year, as the total of persons killed by mobs stood at eight for the second year. Twenty persons were lynched in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Figures disclosed yesterday by ...Institute showed Northern authorities forestalled five lynchings. A total of 77 persons, five whites and 72 negroes, were saved from mobs. Two women were among those rescued.

All of the persons lynched were negroes. Four were suspected of murder, two of wounding officers, one of criminal assault and one of robbery. Florida had three lynchings, Mississippi two, and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee, one each.

Asheville, N. C., Times
December 27, 1937

8 Persons Lynched In 1937, Tuskegee Records Indicate

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: Rape 1, crime against nature and robbery 1, murder 4, wounding of officer 2.

McMinnville, Tenn. Standard
December 31, 1937

LYNCHINGS OF 1937 TOTALED 8 NEGROES

Victims of Mobs Equal Last Year—Toll States Blamed With One Each.

Eight persons, all Negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported this week.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

In fifty-six instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and seventy-two Negroes. Five such instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The eight 1936 and 1937 lynchings compared with twenty in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside jails. Two were tortured with a blow-torch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

Spartanburg, S. C. Journal
December 29, 1937

Lynchings for 1937

Eight lynchings is the sorry record run up to 1937. In each instance the victim of the mob was a negro. The total was exactly that of the year previous, 1936. The toll by states, as compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, was: Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia, 1.

South Carolina's slate was clean. It should be kept that way during the coming year and throughout recorded time. There is no justification for lynch law or mob rule.

SUFFOLK VA NEWS HERALD
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

MOB SPIRIT NATIONWIDE

According to records compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, eight persons were murdered by lynching mobs this year. As to be expected, all of them occurred in southern states, those farthest south of the Mason-Dixon line. No less strange every person done to death was a black man.

Furthermore, the records show that each victim was in the hands of law officers when taken out for the slaughter. Only three were in jails; the other five were snatched from men sworn to protect them. Details of their slaying are still fresh in the minds of the people.

Statistics show there were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Of these five were in northern states and the other fifty-one in the south. In fifty-one instances the prisoners were removed, the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In five others, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. Only one of the eight who died at the hands of the mob was charged with the unmentionable crime against a white woman.

The record is unspeakably bad. For it we have neither excuse nor apology. But the fact that so many were protected by the law from summary execution is encouraging. In 1934 the toll stood at fifteen; in 1935 twenty. No better proof is lacking than these figures that the lynching crime is on the wane. The conscience of the south has been stirred to its depths. Public sentiment is putting an end to this gory parade of violence.

This week in Newark, N. J., a white man killed a young girl in a manner which has few parallels in its diabolical cruelty and viciousness. Yesterday the wanton slayer was arraigned in court. There were shouts of "kill him" from among the spectators. A relative of the dead woman struck him a blow in open court. Had that been in any community less guarded by officers of the law, does anyone doubt what would have happened to him?

We merely mention this instance to show that the mob spirit is nationwide and rampant. Outraged citizens, inflamed by a particularly ferocious crime, lose control of their angry passions and must be restrained.

Federal laws nor federal might can do this. Public sentiment only can wipe out the stain of the mob. It will compel local authorities to do as the fifty-one in the south and the five in the north did. The crime of lynching will be abated when public sentiment, through respect for law, determines it must cease, anti-lynching law or no anti-lynching law notwithstanding.

NEWPORT NEWS VA PRESS
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

LYNCHING IS TARDILY OBSOLESCENT

One of the principal arguments used by the Southern members of Congress who have fought the anti-lynching legislation is that lynching is on the decrease. The evil, they say, will cure itself in the long run and so no federal interference is necessary. That thought is borne out to some extent by the figures for this year, though even one lynching is too inexcusably many and the argument will not hold good until a vast improvement is shown even over this year's record.

The summary, compiled by President F. D. PATTERSON of Tuskegee Institute, reads thus:

"I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number (eight) as for 1936, 12 less than the number 20 for 1935 and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

"There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States, and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1."

This record shows that lynching obsolescence is all too tardy and that the forces of education are but slowly leavening the lump of those who would resort to the law of the jungle. If there is some reassurance in the fact that officers of the law successfully resisted mobs in 56 instances, there is also grim warning in the fact that there were 56 mobs bent on taking the law into their own hands during the year. We must cure the lynching evil not only by the efficiency of our protection of prisoners but by the elimination of the mob itself through education. It is not enough to say that lynching is on the wane. Its complete elimination is the only acceptable condition.

Minneapolis, Minn. Journal
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1938

Lynchings Decline

That eight Negroes have been lynched in five Southern States in the year just closed is not a nice thing to contemplate, but there is the encouraging fact that a low mark has been reached. The number is the same as for 1936, as reported by Tuskegee Institute, but much smaller than the totals for preceding years.

There is further cause for optimism in the report sent to THE JOURNAL by President PATTERSON of Tuskegee. He finds that officers of the law prevented lynchings in 56 cases, involving 77 persons who were menaced by mobs. All but five of these were in Southern States, and were Negroes.

There has been justified complaint in cases where officers have seemed too ready to yield prisoners up to mobs. The anti-lynching bill now before Congress attempts to reach this by punishing the counties where lynchings are permitted to occur. There still are such cases of cowardice or collusion, but it is good to know that officers as a rule make a stand and succeed in preventing mob violence.

WINSTED CONN CITIZEN
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Report Eight Lynchings in Year

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 28—Mobs lynched eight persons, all Negroes, in the United States during 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of research and records reported today. The toll by states: Florida, three; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one; Alabama, one, and Georgia, one. The total was the same as that for 1936.

Lynchings-1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

Jan. - Dec.

5830

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
December 31, 1937

Mob Victims In 1937

Of the eight persons, all Negroes, reported by the Tuskegee Institute to have been lynched in 1937, it is noteworthy that two of them were accused of wounding officers, while four were charged with murder. That is, out of eight mob victims six were accused of offenses that could have been, and doubtless would have been, dealt with according to law, thus leaving no excuse for the mobs that acted as courts and executioners, too.

.....

The same number of lynchings took place in 1936, as compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934. It would be interesting to learn what factors caused the sudden drop from 20 to eight within a year and what influence, if any, could be ascribed to the increase in prosperity, with a consequent lessening in racial competition and hence of racial antagonism.

It is a welcome fact that during 1937 North Carolina's record was clear of lynchings. Florida had the most with three, and Mississippi followed with two. All the recorded lynchings took place in the Southeastern States. Why were there none in the Southwest? Why were there more lynchings in Florida, which has a smaller Negro population and a larger population of immigrant non-Southerners than Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas or Virginia?

Correct answers to these questions, if associated with a factual study of causes and effects, might do more to wipe out mob outbreaks that any number of Federal anti-lynch statutes. Certainly they would make possible action based upon facts and not merely upon emotions. Lynching as a crime against civilization deserves such realistic consideration and action shaped upon it.

Cookeville, Tenn. Herald
December 30, 1937

EIGHT PERSONS WERE LYNCHED IN 1937

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskekee Institute, there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934, the report shows. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death, according to records.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

WORCESTER MASS TELEGRAM
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

LYNCHING RECORD

Same Number This Year as Last, Tuskegee Reports

To the Editor of the Telegram:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number, eight as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow-torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern states and 51 in Southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer of the law, two.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

F. D. PATTERSON,
President, Tuskegee Institute.
Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 23.

Orangeburg, S. C., Times & Demo.
December 28, 1937

Eight Lynchings During This Year

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were negroes. The offenses were: rap, 1; crim against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occured an dthe number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3, Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Greensboro, N. C., News
December 28, 1937

Lynching Toll In South For Year Same As In 1936

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee institute department of records and research reported today.

The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida three, Mississippi two, Tennessee one, Alabama one, and Georgia one.

In 56 instances, the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and 51 in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Offense charged against the victims were listed as: criminal assault, one, crime against nature and robbery, one, murder, four, wounding of officer, two.

Kinston, N. C., Free Press
December 31, 1937

Lynchings

EIGHT persons were lynched this year, says President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute. The institute, for the training of colored young men and women, is in Alabama. It has issued statistics on lynchings for many years.

The number was the same as for 1936. It was 12 fewer than the 20 in 1935. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law—three were taken from jails and five from officers outside jails. "Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch, then one was shot to death and the other burned to death."

There were 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings, and 51 were in Southern states. Seventy-seven persons were saved from mobs.

All of the eight lynched were Negroes. Rape was the charge against one. Four were charged with murder. Lesser crimes were chaged against the other three.

Alabama had one lynching, Florida three, Georgia one, Mississippi two, Tennessee one. So all of the mob murders were in the South. We are proud that the Carolinas show white on the 1937 lynching map.

Tuskegee's report offers no comment, President Patterson following the same course as his predecessors. But it is obvious that the reason for the year-end statistics is the promotion of sentiment against lynching, a sentiment that should be promoted.

Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser
December 29, 1937

LYNCHINGS IN 1937

This year, as last, there were eight lynchings in the United States, all of which took place in Southern States. Fifty-six attempted lynchings were prevented by officers of the law in 1937, while in 1936 69 attempts were frustrated. In other words, while there were the same number of lynchings in 1937 as in 1936 there were fewer attempted lynchings this year than last. Thus some improvement in the last 12 months can be noted.

Eight is the smallest number of lynchings ever reported in one year in this country. In 1932 also there were eight lynchings, while in the years before that the number sometimes ran 20, 30, 40, and even as high in 1892 as 231. The figures show incontestably that improvement is being

...though improvement is not being made so rapidly as is possible.

In Alabama there were no lynchings in 1935 or in 1936, but this year there did occur one horrible mob murder to mar the State's record.

Figures for the last few years throw interesting light upon the progress that is gradually being made to stamp out this crime against law and order. In 1920 there were 60 lynchings in this country; there were 62 in 1921; 57 in 1922; 33 in 1923; 16 in 1924; 17 in 1925; 30 in 1926; 16 in 1927; 11 in 1928; 10 in 1929; 21 in 1930; 13 in 1931; 8 in 1932; 28 in 1933; 15 in 1934; 20 in 1935; 8 in 1936, and 8 in 1937.

The decline has, to be sure, not been so sturdy as it should have been, but it has nevertheless been shown that the people of this country, and especially of this section, are determined to stamp out lynching completely. How fine it would be if we could go through 1938 without a single mob murder!

BROOKLYN N Y EAGLE
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Tuskegee Institute Submits Figures On Lynchings for the Current Year

Editor Brooklyn Daily Eagle:

I find, according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935, and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death, and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer of the law, two.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

F. D. PATTERSON, President.

Tuskegee Institute, Ala., Dec. 23.

Greensboro, N. C., Record
December 29, 1937

Lynchings In 1937.

Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, a report from the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, of Alabama, reveals. This is no worse and no better than the 1936 record; but the number of persons lynched, eight in each of these years, is considerably smaller than in either 1935 or 1934.

This year's report shows that there were 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings; five in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of these cases prisoners were removed, guards augmented or other precautions taken; while in five instances armed force was employed to repel would-be mob-killers. This phase of the report is strikingly significant.

Here is strong and encouraging evidence of a fortright and aggressive determination on the part of law enforcement officers, in the south and in other sections of the country, to protect their prisoners from threats and violence and to wipe out the hideous and cowardly crime of lynching.

Further, we interpret this as evidence that public sentiment, in the south and elsewhere, is overwhelmingly against mob crime; and that the people generally are growing more and more determined to see that justice is meted out by the courts rather than seeing cowardly thugs and misguided zealots take the law into their own hands.

Even those who seem so determined to enact a federal anti-lynching law must see in these facts evidence of progress in the efforts of the states to blot out lynching. All of the states have laws against lynching; a fact which would seemingly obviate the necessity for a transfer of still more authority and power from the state capitals to the central government in Washington.

It is possible, in virtually all cases, as illustrated by the record of lynchings in 1937, for the local officers to enforce the law without the assistance, or interference, as one may view it, of federal police or federal judicial authorities.

Charlottesville, Va. Progress
December 28, 1937

Eight Are Victims Of Lynching Groups

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Dec. 28—(AP)—Eight persons, all colored, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and Research has reported.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year:

Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In fifty-six instances, the Institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The institute, America's largest Negro college, issued its report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with twenty in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

Offenses charged against the victims were listed as: Rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

Reidsville N C Review
December 29, 1937

EIGHT PERSONS LYNCHED IN '37

According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number eight as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched all were negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape 1; crime against nature and robbery 1; murder 4; wounding officer of the law 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama 1, Florida 3, Georgia 1, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1.

NEW YORK N Y SUN
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Lynchings In 1937.

The annual report of Tuskegee Institute on lynchings puts the number in 1937 at eight, the same number as in 1936. In 1937 all those lynched were Negroes. Three of this year's lynchings occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. To be read with these figures are others which the Alabama school obtained, which show that in fifty-six instances in 1937 officers of the law prevented a lynching; on fifty-one occasions this successful intervention of the law occurred in Southern States.

On January 8 the Senate will once again take up the anti-lynching bill already passed by the House of Representatives. Some of the critics of the bill have pointed out that it provides no machinery for preventing lynchings, but it does provide heavy penalties to be applied to counties and county officers after a lynching has occurred. The Tuskegee statistics are certain to be cited frequently in the course of Senate debate. They represent the freshest information available about the extent of the evil of lynching.

Wilson, N. C., Wkly. Times
December 28, 1937

8 LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 toll also was eight.

Deaths by states this year: Florida 3, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

In fifty-six instances the institute said, officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these cases occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with twenty in 1935 and fifteen in 1934.

Greenville, Miss., Democrat Times
December 27, 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS IN U. S. FOR 1937 2 IN MISSISSIPPI

[By The Associated Press]

Tuskegee, Ala., Dec. 27—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and research reported today.

The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The death toll by states:

Florida, 3; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama, 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty one in the south.

The institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Two were tortured with a blowtorch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as; rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer, 2.

SAVANNAH GA TIMES
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

Southeast Lists Eight Lynchings For Year 1937

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Dec. 28—Eight lynchings occurred in five Southern States during 1937, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, announced today.

Three occurred in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.

Eight lynchings were recorded in 1936, 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934

Lynchings- 1937
Reports on, Sent Press

Jan. - Dec.

5831

Austin, Minn., Herald
THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1937

LYNCHINGS CONTINUE IN U. S.

According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number, eight as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and seven less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these were in northern states and 51 in southern states. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, two women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer of the law, two.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, 3; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

If congress passes the anti-lynching bill, its advocates feel confident the use of blow torches by mobs to torture negroes will cease. The fact that crimes by negroes continue despite the brutality of lynchings indicate that the mob rule method is faulty. Whether an anti-lynching law would be as ineffective in its purpose furnishes an interesting subject for conjecture.

CONCORD N. C. TRIBUNE
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

ESCAPED AGAIN.

Unless the mob spirit breaks through within the next couple of days, North Carolina in 1937 again will escape without a single lynching against her record.

Eight persons were lynched during the year, according to President F. D. Patterson, of Tuskegee Institute, and the lynchings were confined to five Southern States.

North Carolina hasn't solved the last mob attack within her borders, primarily because those in authority didn't care whether they solved it, so it seems we are fortunate in that the mob spirit didn't manifest itself during the year. In some instances our officers have been courageous enough to fight the mob; in others they turned over their prisoners with the old excuse of being "overpower by masked men."

Lynchings can be stopped throughout the land when a majority of the people want them stopped. And they can't be stopped by federal legislation. The desire must come from within, not from without.

Fayetteville, Tenn., News
December 30, 1937

Eight Persons Were Lynched During 1937

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number 8 as for 1936; 12 less that the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the laws outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, 5 of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4 wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

Troy, Ala., Messenger
December 28, 1937

Institute Reports Lynching Record

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 28—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching at the hands of Southern mobs in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute of Records of Research reported. The 1936 death toll was identical.

In 56 instances, the Institute reported, officers of the law prevented lynchings that would have involved five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The Institute, America's largest negro college, issued its statistical report without comment, a customary procedure, under the signature of Dr. F. D. Patterson, president.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

All of those lynched were taken from "the law," three being removed from jails and five taken from officers outside the jails. Two were tortured with a blow torch before being put to death.

Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as: rape 1, crime against nature and robbery 1 murder 4, wounding of officer 2.

The death toll by States: Florida 2, Mississippi 2, Tennessee 1, Alabama 1, Georgia 1.

CHARLESTON S. C. POST
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

LYNCHING DECREASES

The Tuskegee Institute reports that during the year 1937 eight persons were lynched in the United States, the same number as in 1936. The figure for 1935 was 20 and for 1934 it was 15, showing that there has been a steady decline. All of the eight lynched in 1937 were negroes and all in the South—none, however, it is gratifying to note, in South Carolina. Florida had three cases, Mississippi two and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee one each. Half of the number were charged with murder, two with wounding an officer and one each with rape and robbery. By comparison with the number of lynchings that took place in former years, the record for 1937 is small, indeed, and it reveals lynching as a really inconsequential crime element in the national situation by contrast with the gangster killings and sex crimes of the large cities.

Gratifying as is the showing for 1937, however, and encouraging as is the progress of the decline, even more to be applauded is the news that in 56 instances which the Institute gathered for its records officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these instances being in the North and 51 in the South. In most cases prisoners were removed or guards augmented or other precautions taken to prevent ly ching, but in some armed force was used to repel attacks by would-be lynchers. In some of the cases, no doubt, officers of the law risked their lives to protect their prisoners. A total of 77 persons, including five whites and 72 negroes, were in this manner saved from death.

The record is one which clearly demonstrates the ability and the willingness of the States to deal with their lynching problems and as clearly shows that there is absolutely no need or excuse for a federal anti-lynching law such as is now pending in Congress, which is intended for political purposes only and which would not only strike a blow at the right of States to manage their own police administration as seems best to them, but would be an entering wedge for other legislation designed to permit still greater federal interference in the internal affairs of the States. Lynching is no longer a major problem in this country. In forty-three States during 1937 there was no lynching and they included, incidentally, a majority of the States of the South. A record equally good was made in the year 1936. In the light of these facts, the opposition to the federal anti-lynching bill should be more determined than ever. It can have no meaning except as a punitive measure against the South undertaken for the gratification of its enemies.

ROCKFORD (ILL.) STAR
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

56 LYNCHINGS STOPPED

Tuskegee Institute, which annually compiles a record of lynchings in the United States, reports that the year 1937 saw eight persons lynched, all in the southern states, all negroes, two outrageously tortured before death. Florida had three lynchings, Mississippi two, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee one each. The Carolinas, Louisiana and Texas came through with clean slates. In 1936 there were likewise eight lynchings, in 1935 there were twenty and in 1934 there were fifteen. Back in 1884, there were 211 lynchings, of which 190 were white; in 1892 there were 231, of which 69 were white. In 1902, lynchings fell under the 100 mark for the first time and have waned pretty consistently since. The years 1926 and 1933 were the worst recent years, with 30 lynchings in 1926 and 28 in 1933.

On the credit side of the ledger for 1937 are 56 instances in which officers prevented lynchings. Five were in the north. Fifty-one southern peace officers, sometimes backed by troops, stood off mobs. They proved that it could be done. The state of Virginia has proved for years that it can be done. Texas is proving it.

Local law, on the spot and faced with the decision, alone can prevent lynchings. Federal law can only punish after the event. And what the nation seeks is prevention of an ugly disease growing out of undiscipline. An increasingly enlightened south will some day write off the last breakdown of discipline and the whole nation will rejoice with the south.

Charleston, S. C. Evening Post
December 29, 1937

LYNCHING DECREASES

The Tuskegee Institute reports that during the year 1937 eight persons were lynched in the United States, the same number as in 1936. The figure for 1935 was 20 and for 1934 it was 15, showing that there has been a steady decline. All of the eight lynched in 1937 were negroes and all in the South—none, however, it is gratifying to note, in South Carolina. Florida had three cases, Mississippi two and Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee one each. Half of the number were charged with murder, two with wounding an officer and one each with rape and robbery. By comparison with the number of lynchings that took place in former years, the record for 1937 is small indeed, and it reveals lynching as a really inconsequential crime element in the national situation by contrast with the gangster killings and sex crimes of the large cities.

Gratifying as is the showing for 1937, however, and encouraging as is the progress of the decline, even more to be applauded is the news that in 56 instances which the institute gathered for its records officers of the law prevented lynchings, five of these instances being in the North and 51 in the South. In most cases prisoners were removed or guards augmented or other precautions taken to prevent it, using, but in some armed force was used to repel attacks by would-be lynchers. In some of the cases, no doubt, officers of the law risked their lives to protect their prisoners. A total of 77 persons, including five whites and 72 negroes, were in this manner saved from death.

The record is one which clearly demonstrates the ability and the willingness of the States to deal with their lynching problems and as clearly shows that there is absolutely no need or excuse for a federal anti-lynching law such as is now pending in Congress, which is intended for political purposes only and which would not only strike a blow at the right of States to manage their own police administration as seems best to them, but would be an entering wedge for other legislation designed to permit still greater federal interference in the internal affairs of the States. Lynching is no longer a major problem in this country. In forty-three States during 1937 there was no lynching and they included, incidentally, a majority of the States of the South. A record equally good was made in the year 1936. In the light of these facts, the opposition to the federal anti-lynching bill should be more determined than ever. It can have no meaning except as a punitive measure against the South undertaken for the gratification of its enemies.

NEW YORK N.Y. EVE. POST
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 29 1937

Florida, Scene of Shoemaker Murder, Leads With 3 Victims

To the Editor of New York Post:

Sir—I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; twelve less than the number twenty for 1935, and seven less than the number fifteen for 1934.

All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were taken from jails, and five from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were fifty-six instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States, and fifty-one in Southern States. In fifty-one of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken.

In the five other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of seventy-seven persons, five white men and seventy-two Negroes, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the eight persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: rape, one; crime against nature and robbery, one; murder, four; wounding officer of the law, two.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, three; Georgia, one; Mississippi, two; Tennessee, one.

F. D. PATTERSON, President,
Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

HARTFORD CONN. TIMES
TUESDAY DECEMBER 28 1937

EIGHT LYNCHINGS REPORTED IN 1937

Tuskegee Institute Survey Shows All Were Negroes

Eight Negroes were lynched in the United States this year, the same number as in 1936, Tuskegee Institute reports.

The department of records and research of Tuskegee for many years has been making an annual statement of the lynching record. It finds that the number of prisoners violently and unlawfully slain in 1937 is 12 less than the 20 lynched in 1935, and seven less than the 15 lynched in 1934.

All of the persons lynched this year were Negroes, and all were in the hands of the law. Three were taken from jails and five from officers outside jails. Two of the victims were tortured with blow torches before they were killed.

In 56 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, a total of 77 persons, five white men and 72 Negroes, being saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the crimes alleged to have been committed by the persons lynched, two were sex crimes, four murders and two wounding officers of the law. There were three lynchings in Florida, two in Mississippi and one each in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

PORTLAND (ORE.) NEWS
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

1937 Lynch Toll Is Eight Persons

Florida Leads 5 Southern States in Lynchings During Year

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—(AP)—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute Department of Records and Research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states:

Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and fifty-one in the south.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Of the 1937 lynching three were removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

PENSACOLA FLA. NEWS
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

EIGHT PERSONS LYNCHED IN 1937

All Are Negroes, Institute Reports

(By The Associated Press)

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 27.—Eight persons, all negroes, died by lynching in 1937, the Tuskegee Institute department of records and research reported today. The 1936 lynch toll also was eight.

The 1937 death toll by states:

Florida 3; Mississippi 2; Tennessee 1; Alabama 1; Georgia 1.

In 56 instances, the institute reported, officers prevented lynchings that would involve five white men and 72 negroes. Five of these instances occurred in northern states and 51 in the South.

The eight 1937 and 1936 lynchings compared with 20 in 1935 and 15 in 1934.

Of the 1937 lynchings three were removed from jails and five taken from officers outside of jails. Offenses charged against the lynch victims were listed as rape 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding of officer 2.

PITTSFIELD MASS EAGLE
MONDAY DECEMBER 27 1937

Lync[illegible]ecord

To the Editor of the Eagle:—

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, of which I am president, that there were eight persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935; and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934. All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails, and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officer of the law, 2.

The states in which lynchings occured and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3, Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

F. D. PATTERSON,
Tuskegee Institute, Ala.

Lynchings - 1937
Reports on, Sent Press.

United States News.

5833

Yazoo, Miss. Sentinel
January 4, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims; Georgia, 469; Texas, 345; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241; and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-fee.

Mount Airy, N. C. Times
January 7, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in whch lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 569; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That the mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

St. Cloud, Fla., Tribune
January 6, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937.

Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Ayden, N. C., Dispatch
January 6, 1938

LYNCHINGS AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the

TUSKEGEE, TENN., GAZETTE
JAN. 5, 1938 J11

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in congress over the proposed law for federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the forefront again.

Tuskegee

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarter of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims; Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the Southern victims of mob law were negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enfocred does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

SUPERIOR, NEB., EXPRESS
JAN. 6, 1938 J12

LYNCHING AND STATE LAWS

The recent debates in congress over the proposed law for federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to project prisoners from mob violence, has brought the subject of mob murders to the forefront again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all of the lynchees in seventeen states.

No one in congress arose to defend illegal executions under lynch law. That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynchings proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminal succeeds in going scott free.

Lanett, Ala. Times
January 5, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murder to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and Sept. 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims; Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241; and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Maxton, N .C., Chief
January 14, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminal succeed in going scot-free.

St. Mary's, W. Va. Leader
January 7, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynching occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana 348; Alabama 305; Florida 248; Arkansas 241, and Tennessee 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Lynchings-1937
6
Reports on, Sent Press.

United States News

5834

Tiptonburg, Tenn. Gazette
January 5, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in congress over the proposed law for federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore-front again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarter of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims; Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the Southern victims of mob law were negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the federal government the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Laverne, Ala., Journal
January 5, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states, the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241 and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal content, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Aiken, S. C., Standard & Review
January 19, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

THE recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisian, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal content, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Elba, Ala., Clipper
January 6, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the Southern victims of mob law were negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that

Sumter, S. C., Herald
January 4, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England states and New Jersey are the only states in which no group of persons took the law into their own hands.

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims, Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241, and Tennessee, 210. Most of the Southern victims of mob law were Negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 percent of all "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal content, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

Humboldt, Tenn., Courier-Chronicle
January 13, 1938

LYNCHING AND STATE RIGHTS

The recent debates in Congress over the proposed law for Federal punishment of communities in which lynchings occur, and of officials who fail to protect prisoners from mob vengeance, has brought the subject of mob murders to the fore again.

According to the United States News, 3,679 individuals were lynched in the United States in the 55 years between 1882 and September 1, 1937. Lynchings occurred in all but seven states; the six New England States and New Jersey are the only states in which no groups of persons took the law into their own hands. (Except gangsters—and what are called lynchings in the South are frequently called riots in the North.—Ed.)

Nearly three-quarters of all lynchings occurred in the eight states of Mississippi, with 485 victims; Georgia, 469; Texas, 354; Louisiana, 348; Alabama, 305; Florida, 248; Arkansas, 241; and Tennessee, 210. Most of the Southern victims of mob law were negroes. The 700 white persons who were lynched in the North comprised 88 per cent of all of the "lynchees" in 17 states.

No one in Congress arose to defend illegal executions under "lynch law." That mobs do not take the law into their own hands where the people feel assured of exact and speedy justice at the hands of courts and the officers of the law is conceded. But the fact that the laws providing for the protection of criminals against mob violence are sometimes inadequately enforced does not warrant the overriding of the state's right of self-government by the Federal government, the opponents of the anti-lynching proposal contend, any more than does the fact that in many instances in every state criminals succeed in going scot-free.

5834

REGARDING NEWSPAPER RELEASES OF THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 18.

Seven Lynchings in 1937, Tuskegee Records Show

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or alleged offender — is fast disappearing, records at Tuskegee Institute show.

While Congress battles over anti-lynching legislation in Washington, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted Negro college, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil war.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure of 20 victims.

Figures kept by the department of research and records at the college since 1882 disclosed that lynchings have steadily declined in the past 55 years. According to the record 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—were lynched during that period.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of Negroes reached a peak in the reconstruction period. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs. Of those, 160 were Negroes and 51 were whites.

Forty-two states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi which reported 563 deaths.

Georgia reported 515; Texas 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343; and Arkansas 286. In the North New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey 1, and Delaware 1.

Records show that in 55 years only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death for sex crimes," the statistician said.

"There were 1,100 persons — 617 whites and 1,093 Negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,482 killings for other crimes."

Mr. Work said that lynchings were possibly slightly more humane today than they were 50 years ago. Then, many victims were burned alive, but few such instances have occurred recently, the favorite method being to burn the bodies of victims after shooting and hanging them.

Dr. Work Reports on Lynchings for 1937; Reveals 7

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Nov. 24.—(Special)—This week, with the Senate filibuster against the anti-lynch bill still holding the attention of the nation, Dr. Monroe N. Work, Tuskegee Institute statistician and editor of the Negro Year Book, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in this country met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil War.

Because lynchings are rare during November and December, the figure is considered complete, the 1937 total being one lower than in 1936, 12 lower than in 1935. Dr. Work said that figures kept at Tuskegee since 1882 show that lynchings have declined steadily in the past 55 years. They show that 4,672 persons—3,383 Negroes and 1289 whites—were lynched during that period.

Dr. Work also said records of his department showed that lynchings were "more humane" today than 50 years ago, explaining that then many of the victims were burned alive—this barbarous practice being replaced by burning the victims after they had been shot or hanged.

7 LYNCHED IN 1937, MONROE WORK SAYS

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Nov. 23.—Seven persons have met death by mob violence this year, fewer than in any years since the Civil War, Monroe Work, statistician at Tuskegee Institute, declared this week.

The figure is considered final, as it is unlikely that there will be more lynchings before January 1, since they are rare in November and December, Mr. Work said. This figure is one less than in 1936 and twelve lower than in 1935.

Figures kept by the Department of Research and Records at the college since 1882 disclose that 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes, have been lynched since that time. Mob violence reached its peak during the reconstruction period, when, in 1884, 211 persons were illegally murdered. Of these, 160 were Negroes.

School Statistician Announces Lynchings Of 1937 Set New Low

Records of the Tuskegee Institute show a rapid disappearance in lynch law.

Monroe N. Work, statistician of the Alabama College, revealed this week that in 1937 only seven persons met death through mob violence, the smallest number in any year since the Civil War.

This figure, which is considered complete due to the infrequency of lynchings in the months of November and December, is one lower than in 1936 and twelve lower than in 1935.

Figures kept by the Department of Research and Records at the college since 1882, disclosed that lynchings have already declined in the past fifty-five years. According to the record, 4,672 persons, 1, 289 whites and 3,388 Negroes, had been lynched during this period.

Night-riding mobs which terrorized Negroes, reached their peak in the reconstruction period. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs. Of these, 160 were Negroes and 51 were whites.

Forty-two states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, which reported 563. Georgia reported 515 Texas 488, Louisiana 389; Alabama 343, and Arkansas, 286. In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey one and Delaware 1.

In 55 years only 2.5 per cent of the total lynched were put to death because of alleged rape.

More than 10 per cent of the Negroes lynched during the 55 yaers were slain for such minor offenses as the following:

Being a witness at a trial, writing insulting notes to white persons, insisting on eating in a white restaurant when refused service, boasting in public, strike-breaking, insisting on voting and discussing a lynching.

Lynching Report Untimely

Reporting of lynching, a release from Tuskegee Institute on that subject seems to us to have been untimely. With the anti-lynching bill standing a golden chance of being passed by this session of Congress, anything said that tends to put a damper on its passage gives its enemies more fodder to try to prevent the measure becoming a law of the land.

Monroe N. Work, statistician at Tuskegee, revealed through a press release last week that in 1937 only seven persons met death by mob violence—the smallest number, he said, since the Civil War.

Mr. Work, it seems to us, should have stated in his untimely release the fact that whenever there is agitation for the passage of an anti-lynching bill the number of lynchings decreases. Although this would have tended to mitigate the possible harm of his release, it would have been much better, we think, if he hadn't released his figures now.

Giving Inside Story

Desmond Donnelly gave us his first piece last week about what is really happening in the West Indies. And the story of Butler, the inspired West Indian leader, who moved the downtrodden masses in his beautiful islands to strike against economic and other forms of slavery, gives us hope. The sort of hope that goes with a feel of certainty that black men living on little islands and in big countries have the guts and the spirit to strike for the rights of man—the right to live decently and democratically.

LYNCHINGS - 1937 REPORTS ON, SENT PRESS

REGARDING NEWSPAPER RELEASES OF THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 18.

5835

Birmingham, Ala. Post
November 19, 1937

OFFICERS WINNING FIGHT TO WIPE OUT CRIME OF LYNCHING

Congress Battles Over Issue, But Mob Deaths Have Almost Disappeared From America In Last 31 Years —Only Seven So Far In 1937

While Congress battled over an anti-lynching bill today records of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama Negro college, disclosed lynching almost has reached the vanishing point in the United States.

Mobs hung but eight persons in 1936, and seven so far in 1937, compared with 13,000 who were murdered and 36,000 killed by automobiles over the nation.

Since 1882, the first year records were kept, a total of 4672 persons—1289 white persons and 3383 Negroes—have been lynched in the United States.

Peak of Terrorism

Night-riding mobs reached the peak of their terrorism during the period just after the Civil War, killing 776 persons, 475 white persons and 301 Negroes, up until 1886. From then until 1896, 548 white persons, and 1035 Negroes were hanged and shot or burned. From 1897 to 1906, 348 white persons and 1035 Negroes were lynched. In the 31 years since then, only 1283 persons were lynched.

As the number of lynchings dropped, the ratio of persons prevented from being lynched rose steadily until 1922.

In 1914, peace officers prevented 54 mob-deaths. In 1921, they stopped 108, in 1922, 114, and in 1923 saved 56. Since then the number of prevented lynchings has dropped almost as fast as the lynchings, totaling 79 in 1936. Since 1914, 1298 lynchings have been prevented.

Contention Refuted

Records show," said Monroe N Work, director of research at Tuskegee Institute, "that in the 55 years from 1882 to 1937, only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death by mobs for the charge of criminal attack.

"There were 1190 persons, 97 white persons and 1093 Negroes, put to death on that charge, compared with 3483 killed for other crimes, thus refuting the charge the majority of lynchings are for the crime of criminal attack.

"An investigation into causes of lynchings show that over 10 per cent of the Negroes lynched during the period were for such minor offenses as being a witness, writing insulting notes, improper conduct, insisting on eating in a restaurant when refused service, strike breaking, boasting, vagrancy, insisting on voting, and discussing a lynching."

Cause for Lynchings

During the 55-year period, 1921 persons were lynched for committing homicides, 198 for felonious assault, 908 for criminal assault, 282 for attempted criminal assault, 227 for robbery, 81 for insulting white persons, and 1055 for all other causes.

Records of the institute show that methods of lynchings have changed much with the passing years. In the '90's, many victims were burned alive, but few such instances have occurred in the last 15 years.

Last year's most bizarre death occurred in Marianna, Fla., when townspeople were aroused over the assault and slaying of a 15-year-old girl, whose body was buried in a pig sty.

Lynching Advertised

After the Negro's arrest and confession, a lynching was advertised in the local newspaper for two days. Officers fled with the Negro to Pensacola and from there to Brewton, Ala. The mob, trailing the sheriff in automobiles, stormed the Brewton Jail and took the Negro back to Marianna.

There he was shot and stabbed and hanged from a tree on the spot where the crime occurred, then taken into Marianna, where his body was stretched from a tree on the Courthouse lawn.

In 1935, 20 persons were lynched, eight less than in 1933, and 53 instances where law officers were successful in preventing lynchings.

Nine in the North

Nine of the total were in Northern and Western states and 44 in Southern communities. Of the total, only six were charged with assault or attempted assault.

Only one lynching has occurred in Alabama during either the first or second administration of Governor Graves. When that occurred; the governor ordered impeachment proceedings brought against the sheriff of Henry County for neglect of duty—believed to be the first time in history a Southern governor has taken such action.

The majority of mob deaths occurred in eight states of the Deep South, with Alabama standing fifth having 343, of which 296 were Negroes and 47 whites.

Six States Have None

Mississippi had the highest total, 563, with 522 Negroes and 41 whites. Georgia was next with 515, 478 Negroes and 37 whites. Texas was third with 488, 345 Negroes and 143 white; while Florida had 272, of which 248 were Negroes, Arkansas 285 with 226 Negroes; Louisiana 389 with 333 Negroes, and Tennessee, 247, with 200 Negroes and 47 white.

A total of 42 states report lynchings during the period, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticutt reported none.

New York had two, Arizona 29 all white persons, Delaware one, Oregon 21, California 43, Colorado 68, Idaho 20, Illinois 31, Indiana 47, Iowa 19, Kansas 54, Kentucky 205, Louisiana 389, Maryland 29, Michigan eight, Minnesota nine, Missouri 121, Montana 84, Nebraska 37, Nevada six, New Jersey one, New Mexico 36, North Carolina 98, North Dakota 16, Ohio 26, Oklahoma 123, Pennsylvania eight, South Carolina eight, South Dakota 27, Utah eight, Virginia 90, Washington 26, West Virginia 49, Wisconsin six, Wyoming 35.

ANNISTON, ALA. STAR
NOV. 18, 1937

LYNCH LAW IS DISAPPEARING FROM AMERICA

Tuskegee Institute Records Show Rapid Decrease In Mob Deaths

By THOMAS A. DOZIER
United Press Staff Correspondent

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Nov. 18—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing in America, records at Tuskegee Institute today showed.

While Congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted Negro college here, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil War.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure of 20 slain.

Figures kept by the Department of Research and Records at the Negro college since 1882 showed that lynchings have steadily declined during the past 55 years.

The statistics also showed that 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—were lynched during this period.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of Negroes reached their height in the Reconstruction period which followed the Civil War. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs who sought to take justice in their own hands.

Of these, 160 were Negroes and 51 were whites.

A total of 42 states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, in the heart of the Deep South, which reported 563 deaths.

Georgia reported 515; Texas, 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343, and Arkansas, 286.

In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey, 1, and Delaware, 1. Several Western states, where lynching for horse-stealing was prevalent, reported many more.

"Records show that in 55 years, only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death for the charge of rape," Work said.

"There were 1,190 persons—97 whites and 1,093 Negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,482 killings for other crimes, thus refuting the assertion that a majority of lynchings are for rape."

BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE
SUNDAY NOVEMBER 21 1937

Lynch Law

Lynch law is fast disappearing, records at Tuskegee Institute show.

While Congress battled over national anti-lynching legislation, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's famous Negro college, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons met death by mob violence—the smallest number in any year since the Civil War.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936, and 12 lower than 1935.

Figures kept by the department of research and records at the Negro college since 1882 disclosed that lynchings have steadily declined in the past 55 years. According to the record, 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—had been lynched during that period.

Night-riding mobs which terrorized Negroes reached their peak in the reconstruction period. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs. Of those, 160 were Negroes and 51 were whites.

Forty-two States reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, which reported 563. Georgia reported 515, Texas, 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343, and Arkansas, 286. In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey 1 and Delaware 1.

In 55 years, only 25.5 percent of the total lynched were put to death because of rape.

More than 10 percent of the Negroes lynched during the 55 years were slain for such mino offenses as the following:

Being a witness at a trial, writing insulting notes to white persons, insisting on eating in a white restaurant when refused service, boasting in public, strike-breaking, insisting on voting and discussing a lync'ing.

KANSAS CITY, MO., TIMES
NOV. 27, 1937 N27

LYNCHING ON THE WANE.

Editorial Opinion of the St. Paul Dispatch.

While Congress battles over proposed national antilynching legislation it is pertinent to consider the present status of lynch law in this country. Evidently it is fast disappearing.

According to a report issued by Tuskegee Institute, Alabama's famous Negro college, only seven persons met death by mob violence this year, the smallest number in any year since the Civil war. Although several weeks still remain in 1937, the figure is considered complete by Tuskegee statisticians as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December. This year's lynch law record, therefore, is one less than in 1936 and twelve fewer than in 1935. It is noted in the antilynching bill filibuster which is now tying in the senate that the most vigorous arguments against the proposed legislation are made on the grounds not only of alleged unconstitutionality but also on the fact that since lynchings are becoming fewer every year the subject has not sufficient importance to occupy senate attention.

The decline of mob murders is probably the best argument of the filibusters. Obviously if there were no lynchings there would be no need for an antilynching bill. A few lynchless years would reduce the subject to a mere academic question. Proponents of such legislation, however, might continue to insist on it as a protection against possible mob violence but this would be tantamount to attempting to legislate against a state of civilization.

VICKSBURG, MISS. POST
DEC. 16, 1937 D21

A measure known as the anit-lynching bill is being forced through congress. The name of the bill is a misnomer. It is actually not so much an effort to halt the crime of lynching, but an effort to take from the states one of their most vital rights, their police power.

Every decent man or woman in the south would gladly welcome anything which would stamp out lynch law. The steady improvement in the lynch record of the south is irrefutable proof of this. According to the Negro Year Book, published at Tuskegee Institute, the average annual total of lynchings had shrunk to 13.6 for the decade ending with 1936, from 103.5 for the decade ending in 1896. This is a greater improvement than that for lynching of white men in the west and other parts of the country.

But this misnamed "anti-lynching" bill does not seek along intelligent, cooperative lines, to help the south stamp out this most horrible crime. It seeks, rather, to invoke the federal powers to punish local enforcement officers and the entire population, innocent and guilty alike, where a lynching occurs. It even makes it financially alluring for the family survivors of the victim for the lynching to occur.

ENID, OKLA., NEWS
DEC. 8, 1937 D22

LYNCHING ON THE WANE

While congress battles over proposed national anti-lynching legislation it is pertinent to consider the present status of lynch law in this country. Evidently it is fast disappearing.

According to a report issued by Tuskegee Institute, Alabama's famous negro college only seven persons met death by mob violence this year, the smallest number in any year since the Civil war. Although several weeks still remain in 1937, the figure is considered complete by Tuskegee statisticians as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December. This year's lynch law record, therefore, is one less than in 1936 and 12 fewer than in 1935. It is noted in the anti-lynching bill filibuster which is now tying in the senate that the most vigorous arguments against the proposed legislation are made on the grounds not only of alleged unconstitutionality but also on the fact that since lynchings are becoming fewer every year the subject has not sufficient importance to occupy senate attention.

The decline of mob murders is probably the best argument of the filibusters. Obviously if there were no lynchings there would be no need for an anti-lynching bill. A few lynchless years would reduce the subject to a mere academic question. Proponents of such legislation, however, might continue to insist on it as a protection against possible mob violence but this would be tantamount to attempting to legislate against a state of civilization.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Valdosta, Ga., Daily Times
December 28, 1937

Of 4,681 persons lynched in the United States from 1882 to 1935, inclusive, the Tuskegee Institute reports, 1,311 were white and 3,370 negro.

NASHVILLE TENN. BANNER
NOV. 27, 1937 D4

AN EASTERN VIEW

The New York Sun had this to say of the mischievous and pernicious antilynching bill:

"As the Senate went into the third day of the filibuster Tuskegee Institute reported that there were seven deaths by mob violence in 1937. The moral horror of lynch law is not measured by the number of lynchings, but assuredly even the most fervent advocates of an antilynching law can see that it is all out of proportion that the consideration of such a law should block the consideration of problems that affect the everyday lives of millions upon millions of Americans."

JACKSON, MISS. CLARION
DEC. 19, 1937 D24

A measure known as the anti-lynching bill is being forced through congress. The name of the bill is a misnomer. It is actually not so much an effort to halt the crime of lynching, but an effort to take from the states one of their most vital rights, their police power.

Every decent man or woman in the south would gladly welcome anything which would stamp out lynch law. The steady improvement in the lynch record of the south is irrefutable proof of this. According to the Negro Year Book, published at Tuskegee Institute, the average annual total of lynchings has shrunk to 13.6 for the decade ending with 1936, from 103.5 for the decade ending in 1896. This is a greater improvement than that of lynching of white men in the west and other parts of the country.

But this misnamed "anti-lynching" bill does not seek, along intelligent, co-operative lines, to help the south stamp out this most horrible crime. It seeks, rather, to invoke the federal powers to punish local enforcement officers and the entire population, innocent and guilty alike, where a lynching occurs. It even makes it financially alluring for the family survivors of the victim for the lynching to occur.

MUSKOGEE, OK. INDEPENDENT
DEC. 17, 1937 D31

TUSKEGEE CORRECTS LYNCHING TOTAL

Washington, Dec. 16—Senators from every state received this week a letter from Monroe N. Work of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., correcting the erroneous report which had been sent out over his name, without his knowledge, that there had been only 7 lynchings in 1937. Mr. Work informed the senators that Tuskegee records showed 8 lynchings. The false total which someone credited to Mr. Work was used by senators as an argument against enactment of a federal anti-lynching law.

5836

More Than Denial Needed

The story reported as coming from Tuskegee Insti- to the effect that lynchings "were becoming more hu- mane" and "were rare in November and December," is one of those serious blunders which need more explana- tion than it has received.

Coming at a time when it was used as a weapon to fight the Wagner-Costigan Antilynching Bill, it may have been in too deadly a thrust to be allowed to fade out so easily.

Dr. Monroe N. Work gave out a statement denying that any such report was sent out from that institution. "The release," he says, "sent out last week concerning lynchings which was credited to me and widely quoted in both white and colored papers was not authorized by me or by Tuskegee Institute."

Well, somebody, somewhere, must have said something which gave some newspaper the information upon which this widely published and widely used "interview" was based. And it seems to us the duty of Tuskegee authorities to track it down and nail it specifically as an un-

Lynch Defenders Faked T'kee Figures On '37 Lynch Record

Die-Hards Resort To Ruthless Tactics In Desperate Effort To Defeat Senate Bill

NEW YORK, Dec. (CNA)—To their unprincipled filibuster against the Wagner-Van Nuys-Gavagan anti-lynching bill, Southern opponents of Federal anti-lynching legislation added the faking of an interview with Monroe N. Work, director of the Records and Research Department of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., on lynching statistics for the current year, it was revealed this week.

The bill, temporarily shifted aside to permit Senate action on an Administration crop control measure, is expected to be taken up again immediately after the disposition of the farm bill, in accordance with the special order by the regular Senate session last August 12, and Southern Senators are threatening to resume their filibuster against the measure.

The faked interview with Monroe Work quoted him to the effect that lynchings were on the decrease and "were becoming more humane" and were rare in November and December." The interview was published, broadcast throughout the country by the white press and by many Negro papers, and was cited in the Senate by opponents of Federal anti-lynching legislation to back their contention that Federal intervention was "unnecessary". For example, Senator Dixie Bibb Graves, wife of the governor of Alabama, from which state the faked interview originated, utilized the concocted report to advance the claim that "lynching is rapidly decreasing" and that the Southern ruling class should be left to work out "its own problems."

In a communication to the Crusader News Agency, 415 Lenox Avenue, New York City, Mr. Work this week categorically denied that he had given out such an interview or had released lynching figures for this year or had made the statement attributed to him by white Alabama reporters that "lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December."

In reporting the use of the reputed interview as a weapon against the anti-lynching bill in the Senate, the CNA referred to the "interview" as "precipitately issued by Tuskegee Institute" several weeks earlier than customarily and during the heart of the debate on the bill. Mr. Work cleared up this point and exposed the "interview" as a fraud, deliberately engineered to bolster up the arguments of Southern opponents of the anti-lynching bill.

Fake Tuskegee Lynch Figures

OPPONENTS OF SENATE BILL USE FRAUD IN FIGHT TO DEFEAT MEASURE

NEW YORK, Dec. 4, (CNA)—To their unprincipled filibuster against the Wagner-Van Nuys-Gavagan anti-lynching bill, Southern opponents of Federal anti-lynching legislation added the faking of an interview Monroe N. Work, director of the Records and Research Department of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, on lynching statistics for the current year.

The bill, temporarily shifted aside to permit Senate action on an Administration crop control measure, is expected to be taken up again immediately after the disposition of the farm bill, in accordance with the special order by the regular Senate session last August 12, and Southern Senators are threatening to resume their filibuster against the measure.

The faked interview with Monroe Work quoted him to the effect that lynchings were on the decrease and "were becoming more humane" and "were rare in November and December." The interview was published broadcast throughout the country by opponents of Federal anti-lynching legislation to back their contention that Federal intervention was "unnecessary." For example, Senator Dixie Bibbs Graves, wife of the governor of Alabama, from which state the faked interview originated, utilized the concocted report to advance the claim that "lynching is rapidly decreasing" and that the Southern ruling class should be left to work out "its own problems."

Mr. Work categorically denied that he had given out such an interview or had released lynching figures for this year or had made the statement attributed to him by white Alabama reporters that "lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December."

Monroe Work Denies Making Statement On Year's Lynch Record

TUSKEGEE, Dec. 9—(ANP)—A denial that either he or Tuskegee Institute released a statement widely quoted in the white and Negro press last week on lynchings this year in the United States was made Saturday by Dr. Monroe N. Work, editor of the Negro Year Book and director of the Records and Research department.

"The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers," said Dr. Work. "I did not make a statement that lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December.

"Releases from Tuskegee concerning lynchings are issued without comment over the signature of the president of the Institute. This custom was originated by Dr. Booker T. Washington and continued under Dr. R. R. Moton and Dr. F. D. Patterson.

"The statement that there have been only seven lynchings this year is incorrect anyway. Records show the number to date is eight."

Dr. Monroe Work Denies Charges

TUSKEGEE.—(ANP)—A denial that either he or Tuskegee Institute released a statement widely quoted in the white and Negro press last week on lynchings this year in the United States was made Saturday by Dr. Monroe N. Work, editor of the Negro Year Book and director of the Records and Research department.

"The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers," said Dr. Work. "I did not make a statement that lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December.

"Releases from Tuskegee concerning lynchings are issued without comment over the signature of the president of the institute. This custom was originated by Dr. Booker T. Washington and continued under Dr. R. R. Moton and Dr. F. D. Patterson.

"The statement that there have been only seven lynchings this year is incorrect anyway. Records show the number to date is eight."

LYNCH STATISTICS FALSE, SAYS DR. MONROE WORK

Tuskegee, Ala., December [illegible]—Dr. Monroe N. Work, statistician extraordinary, whose headquarters are on this campus, vigorously denied any part in any recently issued statements on the number of lynchings for the year, and stated emphatically that the figures are never given over his signature. They are always, he stated, made over the signature of the president of the college.

Dr. Work had been quoted in the white and colored newspapers with the statement that there have been seven lynchings this year and that lynchings are rapidly becoming "more humane." They were also said to have been rare during November and December in the fake statement.

Dr. Work, in denying any connection with the widely quoted statement said that "the statement that there have been only seven lynchings to date this year is incorrect; there have been eight. I did not say that lynchings are becoming more humane. Our releases are always issued without comment and over the signature of the president of our institution."

The importance of the correction was evident in the fact that the Tuskegee figure on annual lynchings is usually accepted as official, although it does not include all mob murders under its technical classification of "lynchings." When these are included the annual figures are usually nearly double those given as the technical "lynchings" in Dr. Work's statistics. The Tuskegee figures have been issued for several years.

CORRECTED LYNCHING TOTAL

WASHINGTON — Senators from every state received this week a letter from Monroe N. Work of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., correcting the erroneous report which had been sent out over his name, without his knowledge, that there had been only 7 lynchings in 1934. Mr. Work informed the senators that Tuskegee records showed 8 lynchings. The false total which somehow credited to Mr. Work was used by senators as an argument against enactment of a federal anti-lynching law.

LYNCHINGS - 1937

REPORTS ON, SENT PRE SS

REGARDING NEWSPAPER R ELEASES OF THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 18.

5837

Dr. Monroe Work Denies Giving Newspapers Story That Lynchings Are Becoming Humane

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Denial that neither he nor Tuskegee Institute was responsible for a newspaper story on lynching which appeared in last week's newspapers, white and colored, was made here Saturday by Prof. Monroe N. Work, editor of the Negro Year Book.

In a statement made to all newspapers, Dr. Work said:

"This is to notify you that the release sent out last week concerning lynchings which was credited to me and widely quoted in both white and colored papers was not authorized by me or by Tuskegee Institute. The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers.

"I did not make a statement that lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December.

"Releases from Tuskegee Institute concerning lynchings, as you know, are issued without comment over the signature of the president of the institution. This custom was initiated by Dr. Booker T. Washington, continued under Dr. R. R. Moton and under Dr. F. D. Patterson.

The statement that there have been only seven lynchings this year is incorrect. The number to date is eight."

SAYS HE DID NOT SAY MOBS MORE HUMANE

Tuskegee Research Director Claims He Was Incorrectly Quoted

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE —Dr. Monroe N. Work, director of the records and research department at Tuskegee institute and editor of the Negro year book, issued a statement this week denying that he had said that lynchings were becoming "more humane" and were rare during November and December.

This statement, widely publicised last week, was attributed to Dr. Work by both the white and Negro press.

Dr. Work's statement:

This is to notify you that the release sent out last week concerning lynchings which was credited to me and widely quoted in both white and colored papers was not authorized by me or by Tuskegee Institute. The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers.

I did not make a statement that lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December.

Releases from Tuskegee institute concerning lynchings, as you know, are issued without comment over the signature of the president of the institution. This custom was initiated by Dr. Booker T. Washington, continued under Dr. R. R. Moton and under Dr. F. D. Patterson.

The statement that there have been only seven lynchings this year is incorrect. The number to date is eight.

We will appreciate it if you will give this information wide publicity.

Very sincerely yours,
Monroe N. Work, Editor
Negro Year Book
Tuskegee Institute, Ala.

Work's Letter Says Lynching Total Is 8

November 27, 1937
Managing Editor
Scott Newspaper Syndicate
Atlanta, Ga.
Dear Sir:

This is to notify you that the release sent out last week concerning lynchings which was credited to me and widely quoted in both white and colored papers was not authorized by me or by Tuskegee Institute. The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers.

I did not make a statement that lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December.

Releases from Tuskegee Institute concerning lynchings, as you know, are issued without comment over the signature of the president of the Institution. This custom was initiated by Dr. Booker T. Washington, continued under Dr. R. R. Moton and under Dr. F. D. Patterson.

The statement that there have been only seven lynchings this year is incorrect. The number to date is eight.

We will appreciate it if you will give this information wide publicity.

Very sincerely yours,
MONROE N. WORK, Editor
Negro Year Book

Editor Scores White Press Misstatement

Tuskegee Official Says Statement Did Not Come From Him

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—In a statement denying authorship of recent press releases to the effect that he declared that lynchings had become "more humane," Monroe N. Work, editor of the Negro Year Book, this week said that the statement was "not authorized by me or by Tuskegee Institute. The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers."

Mr. Work's denial was issued through the offices of Tuskegee Institute, from which releases concerning lynchings are given out without comment over the signature of the president, Dr. F. D. Patterson. This precedent was established by Booker T. Washington and there has never been a deviation.

The statement credited to Mr. Work in the white press also stated that lynchings were "rare in November and December." Mr. Work pointed out that the press gave him credit for having but little knowledge of pertinent facts about the race with which he is identified when he corrected the actual number of lynchings for 1937.

"The statement that there have been only seven lynchings this is incorrect," corrected Mr. Work. "The number to date is eight."

Because lynchings are rare during November and December, the figure is considered complete, the 1937 total is one lower than in 1936, 12 lower than in 1935. Dr. Work said that figures kept at Tuskegee since 1882 show that lynchings have declined steadily in the past 55 years. They show that 4,672 persons—3,383 Negroes and 1,289 whites—were lynched during that period.

Dr. Work also said records of his department showed that lynchings were "more humane" today than 50 years ago, explaining that then many of the victims were burned alive—this barbarous practice being replaced by burning the victims after they had been shot or hanged.

Lynchings "Humane"? Tommyrot, Says Work

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —Dr. Monroe N. Work, director of records and research of Tuskegee Institute, has issued a denial of the story carried in the press last week to the effect that "lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December."

"The first I knew about the release was when I saw it in the daily papers," he stated, adding that releases on lynchings were always sent out over the signature of the president of the institution.

The number of lynchings to date this year is 8 and not 7, as stated in the release referred to.

Tuskegee Denies Lynching Report Was Authorized

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —Monroe W. Work, editor of the Negro Year Book, denied this week that he had authorized a daily press dispatch saying that lynchings are rare in November and December and are December [illegible]

[illegible] announced at Tuskegee [illegible] that he had not [illegible] of the widely pub[illegible] until he saw it in [illegible]

Lynching Not Humane

"I DID not make a statement that lynchings were becoming more humane and were rare in November and December," writes Dr. Monroe N. Work director of records and research department of Tuskegee Institute. According to Dr. Work, he knew nothing about the statement which was alleged to have been made by him, until he saw it in the newspapers.

We are pleased to know that Dr. Work did not make the widely publicized statement. There is no such thing as a humane lynching. Lynching is a dastardly, cowardly act. It is impossible to turn any lynching into a humanitarian service.

So far this year there have been eight lynchings. While the total number has been decreased so long as there is one that is one too many.

Lynching—1937 Style

DR. MONROE N. WORK, eminent head of Tuskegee's Department of Research and Records, has given out the statistics on lynchings in the United States for 1937. The report is considered complete for the year owing to the rarity of mob murders during the month of December, and it reveals that only seven persons have met death at the hands of mobs during the period. That number, according to the Tuskegee statistician is the lowest since the Civil War. Not only has there been an abating of mob activity according to Dr. Work during the present year, but the ferocity of the mob has somewhat mitigated—mob victims have been put to death in a more humane fashion."

Notwithstanding the fact that there are those who differ with Dr. Work as to both the number and "humaneness" of lynchings—1937 style—we thank him for his work and accept his figures as both conclusive and authentic. We do not, however, hold up the small number as a hopeful sign that America is just about growing weary of indulging of its favorite pastime. And the blow-torch lynching of two young Negroes by a Mississippi mob at Duck Hill a few months ago would tend to contradict the "more humane" statement of the erudite editor of the Negro Year Book, if it were not a known fact that not so long ago mob victims were really

But even lynchings—1937 style—are occurrences too horrible for any civilized people to boast of. There is absolutely no reason why America, the vaunted land of the free and home of the brave, should be the only country on the face of the earth where men and women are ruthlessly slain by their fellow citizens in such blood-thirsty orgies as those which characterize the activities of the American mob. No crime, however dastardly, and no matter how wantonly committed justifies mob vengeance, so long as we have courts and the machinery of law enforcement in this country. Only savagery, barbarity and a depravity unknown even to the most dense bushmen could or would justify the work of the irresponsible mob. And for this reason alone, we cannot have hope for the tranquility, prosperity and perpetuity of our beloved Americaland so long as the blood of one mob victim wets the ground and stains the verdue beneath his lifeless and often mangled form.

Let America's motto for 1938 be: "No lynchings."

Augusta Ga. Herald
November 28, 1937

TUSKEGEE STATISTICIAN ANNOUNCES LYNCHING RECORD

The New York Age says: "Records of the Tuskegee Institute show a rapid disappearance in lynch law. Monroe N. Work, satistician of the Alabama College, revealed this week that in 1937 only seven persons met death through mob violence, the smallest number in any year since the War Between the States.

"This figure which, is considered complete, due to the traditional rarity of lynchings in the months of November and December, is one lower than 1936 and twelve lower than in 1935.

"Figures kept by the Department of Research and Records at the college since 1882, disclosed that lynchings have steadily declined in the past 55 years. According to the record, 4,672 persons, 1,289 whites and 2,388 negroes, had been lynched during this period.

"Night-riding mobs which terrorized negroes, reached their peak in the Reconstruction period. In 1884 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs. Of these, 160 were negroes and 51 were whites.

"Forty-two states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. Georgia reported 515, Texas, 488, Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343; and Arkansas, 286. In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey one and Delaware one.

"In 55 years only 2.5 per cent of the total lynched were put to death because of alleged rape.

"More than 10 per cent of the negroes lynched during the 55 years were slain for such minor offenses as the following:

"Being a witness at a trial, writing insulting notes to white persons, insisting on eating in a white restaurant when refused service, boasting in public, strike-breaking, insisting on voting, and discussing a lynching.

TUSKEGEE CORRECTS
LYNCHING TOTAL

Washington, Dec. 10.- Senator's from every state received this week a letter from Monroe N. Work of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., correcting the erroneous report which had been sent out over his name, without his knowledge, that there had been only 7 lynchings in 1937. Mr. Work informed the senators that Tuskegee records showed 8 lynchings. The false total which someone credited to Mr. Work was used by senators as an argument against enactment of a federal anti-lynching law.

LYNCHINGS - 1 9 3 7 REPORTS ON, SENT PRESS

5838

REGARDING NEWSPAPER RELEASES OF THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 18.

BATON ROUGE LA. STATE TIMES
NOV. 18, 1937 N23

Lynch Law Fast Disappearing in America, Tuskegee Records Show

By Thomas A. Dozier

Tuskegee, Ala., Nov. 18 (UP)—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing in America, records at Tuskegee Institute today showed.

While congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted negro college here, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil war.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure of 20 slain.

Figures kept by the department of research and records at the negro college since 1882 showed that lynchings have steadily declined during the past 55 years.

The statistics also showed that 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 negroes—were lynched during this period.

Peak Reached.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of negroes reached their height in the Reconstruction period which followed the Civil war. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs who sought to take justice in their own hands.

Of these, 160 were negroes and 51 were white.

A total of 42 states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, in the heart of the Deep South, which reported 563 deaths.

Georgia reported 515; Texas, 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343, and Arkansas, 286.

In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey, 1, and Delaware, 1. Several Western states, where lynching for horse-stealing was prevalent, reported many more.

"Records show that in 55 years, only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death for the charge of rape," Work said.

"There were 1,190 persons—97 whites and 1,093 negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,482 killings for other cities, thus refuting the assertion that a majority of lynchings are for rape."

Minor Offenses.

Work said more than ten per cent of the negroes lynched were slain for such minor offenses as the following:

Being a witness at a trial, writing insulting letters to white persons, insisting on eating in a restaurant when refused service, boasting in public, strike breaking, insisting on voting, and discussing a lynching.

Work said records of his department showed that lynchings were possibly slightly more humane today than they were 50 years ago. Then, many victims were burned alive, but few such instances have occurred recently, the favorite method being to burn the bodies of victims after shooting and hanging them.

Last year's bizarre death occurred in Marianna, Fla., when townspeople became aroused over the assault and slaying of a 15-year-old girl whose body was buried in a pig-sty.

After the negro's arrest and confession, a lynching was advertised in the local newspaper for two days. Officers fled with the negro to Pensacola and from there to Brewton, Ala. The mob, trailing the sheriff in automobiles, stormed the Brewton jail and took the negro back to Marianna.

Unprecedented action was taken by the state of Alabama this year in seeking the indictment and impeachment of a county sheriff for alleged negligence in permitting a negro to be lynched.

The sheriff was acquitted in trial before the state supreme court, however, and the county grand jury refused on two occasions to indict him.

Kingston, N. C., Free Press
November 18, 1937

LYNCH LAW FAST DISAPPEARING AS METHOD BY MOBS

Statistics Show Only Seven Persons Lynched During 1937, Lowest Number Since War Between States

Tuskegee, Ala., Nov. 18.—(U.P.)—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing, records at Tuskegee Institute showed today.

While Congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted Negro college here, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil War.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and Devember—is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure or 20 victims.

Figures kept by the Department of Research and records at the Negro college since 1882 disclosed that lynchings have steadily declined in the past 55 years. According to the record 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—were lynched during that period.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of Negroes reached a peak in the Reconstruction period after the Civil War. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs. Of those, 160 were Negroes and 51 were whites.

Forty two states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, in the deep south, which reported 563 deaths. Georgia reported 515; Texas, 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama 343, and Arkansas 286. In the North, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey, 1, and Delaware, 1.

"Records show that in 55 years only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death on charges of rape," Work said.

"There were 1,190 persons—97 whites and 1,093 Negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,482 killings for other crimes, thus refuting the assertion that a majority of lynchings are for rape."

Work said more than 10 per cent of the Negroes lynched during the 55 years were slain for such minor offenses as the following:

Being a witness at a trial, writing insulting notes to white persons, insisting on eating in a restaurant when refused service, boasting in public, strike-breaking, insisting on voting, and discussing a lynching.

Work said records of his department showed that lynchings were possibly slightly more humane today than they were 50 years ago. Then, many victims were burned alive, but few such instances have occurred recently, the favorite method being to burn the bodies of victims after shooting and hanging them.

Unprecedented action was taken by the state of Alabama this year in seeking the indictment and impeachment of a county sheriff for alleged negligence in permitting a Negro to be lynched.

'Lynch Law' Cases Drop

Only 7 Victims Reported For Year.

Tuskegee, Ala., Nov. 18.—(U.P.)—Lynch-law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing, records at Tuskegee Institute showed today.

While Congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted Negro college here, revealed that in 1937 only seven persons in the Nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the War Between the States.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and twelve lower than 1935's figure of twenty victims.

Figures kept by the Department of Research and records at the Negro college since 1882 disclosed that lynchings have steadily declined in the past fifty-five years. According to the record, 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—were lynched during that period.

Greenville, S. C. Piedmont
November 18, 1937

ANNOUNCE ONLY SEVEN SLAIN BY MOBS THIS YEAR

Is The Lowest Number Since Civil War; Statistics Over 55-Year Period Announced

TUSKAGEE, Ala., Nov. 18—(UP)—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing, records at Tuskegee Institute showed today.

While congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's negro college here, revealed that in 1937, only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil War.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure or 20 victims.

Figures kept by the department of research and records at the negro college since 1882 disclosed that lynchings have steadily declined in the past 55 years. According to the record 4,672 persons — 1,289 whites and 3,383 negroes — were lynched during that period.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of negroes reached a peak in the reconstruction period after the Civil War. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs. Of those, 160 were negroes and 51 were whites.

Forty-two states reported lynchings during the 55-year period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, in the deep South, which reported 563 deaths. Georgia reported 515; Texas, 488; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343, and Arkansas 286. In the north, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey 1, and Delaware

"Records show that in 55 years only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death on charges of rape," Work said.

"There were 1,190 persons—97 whites and 1,093 negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,482 killings for other crimes, thus refuting the assertion that a majority of lynchings are for rape."

NASHVILLE, TENN. EVE. TENN.
NOV. 18, 1937 N24

RECORDS SHOW LYNCH LAW IS DISAPPEARING

Tuskegee Statistician Says 1937 Lowest Since Civil War.

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—(UP)—Lynch law—the doctrine of swift extra-legal punishment at the hands of a mob for the law-breaker or the racial offender—is fast disappearing in America, records at Tuskegee Institute today showed.

While Congress battled over anti-lynching legislation in Washington Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted negro college here revealed that in 1937 only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence—the lowest number since the Civil War.

Decline is Steady.

The figure—considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December — is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935's figure of 20 slain.

Figures kept by the department of research and records at the negro college since 1882 showed that lynchings have steadily declined during the past 55 years.

The statistics also showed that 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 negroes—were lynched during this period.

Night-riding mobs which spread terror into the hearts of negroes reached their height in the reconstruction period which followed the Civil War. In 1884, 211 persons were illegally hanged, shot or burned to death by mobs who sought to take justice in their own hands.

Of these, 160 were negroes and 51 were whites.

A total of 42 states reported lynchings during the 55-year-period. The greatest number occurred in Mississippi, in the heart of the deep south, which reported 567 deaths.

Georgia reported 515; Texas, 493; Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343, and Arkansas, 226.

In the north, New York had two in 55 years, New Jersey, 1, and Delaware, 1. Several western states, where lynching for horse-stealing was prevalent, reported many more.

Causes Vary.

"Records show that in 55 years only 25.5 per cent of the total number of persons lynched were put to death for the charge of rape," Work said.

"There were 1,500 persons—971 whites and 1,093 negroes—put to death on that charge, compared with 3,433 killings for other crimes, thus refuting the assertion that a majority of lynchings are for rape."

Work said more than 10 per cent of the negroes lynched during the fifty-five years were slain for such minor offenses as the following:

Being a witness at a trial, writing insulting notes to white persons, insisting on eating in a restaurant when refused service, boasting in public, strikebreaking, insisting on voting, and discussing a lynching.

Work said records of his department showed that lynchings were possibly slightly more humane today than they were fifty years ago.

victims were burned
w such instances have recently, the favorite ing to burn the bodies of victim after shooting and hanging them.

Bizarre Affair

Last year's most bizarre death occurred in Marianna, Fla., when townspeople became aroused over the assault and slaying of a 15-year-old girl whose body was buried in a pig-sty.

After the negro's arrest and confession, a lynching was advertised in the local newspaper for two days. Officers fled with the negro to Pensacola and from there to Brewton, Ala. The mob, trailing the sheriff in automobiles, stormed the Brewton jail and took the negro back to Marianna.

There he was shot and stabbed and hanged from a tree on the spot where the crime occurred. His body was then strung up from a tree on the courthouse lawn in Marianna.

Unprecedented action was taken by the state of Alabama this year in seeking the indictment and impeachment of a county sheriff for alleged negligence in permitting a negro to be lynched.

The sheriff was acquitted in a trial before the state supreme court, however, and the county grand jury refused on two occasions to indict him.

NEW YORK W'S HERALD TRIBUNE
FRIDAY NOVEMBER 19 1937

Lynching Drops Rapidly, Tuskegee Survey Shows

Death Toll in 1937 Smallest Since the Civil War

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Nov. 18 (UP).—Lynch law is fast disappearing, records at Tuskegee Institute showed today. While Congress battled over national anti-lynching legislation, Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's famous Negro college, revealed that in 1937 only seven persons met death by mob violence—the smallest number in any year since the Civil War.

The figure—considered complete, as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December—is one lower than in 1936 and twelve lower than in 1935.

Figures kept by the college since 1882 disclosed that in the last fifty-five years 4,672 persons—1,289 whites and 3,383 Negroes—had been lynched. Forty-two states reported lynchings during that period. New York had two.

St. Paul, Minn., Pioneer Press

Lynching on the Wane

While Congress battles over proposed national anti-lynching legislation it is pertinent to consider the present status of lynch law in this country. Evidently it is fast disappearing.

According to a report issued by Tuskegee Institute, Alabama's famous Negro college only seven persons met death by mob violence this year, the smallest number in any year since the Civil war. Although several weeks still remain of 1937, the figure is considered complete by Tuskegee statisticians as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December. This year's lynch law record, therefore, is one less than in 1936 and twelve fewer than in 1935. It is noted in the anti-lynching bill filibuster which is now tying in the Senate that the most vigorous arguments against the proposed legislation are made on the grounds not only of alleged unconstitutionality but also on the fact that since lynchings are becoming fewer every year the subject has not suffcient importance to occupy Senate attention.

The decline of mob murders is probably the best argument of the filibusters. Obviously if there were no lynchings there would be no need for an anti-lynching bill. A few lynchless years would reduce the subject to a mere academic question. Proponents of such legislation, however, might continue to insist on it as a protection against possible mob violence but this would be tantamount to attempting to legislate against a state of civilization.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK. NEWS
NOV. 18, 1937 D3

LYNCH LAW CASES AT LOW FOR YEAR

By United Press

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Nov. 18.—Lynch law is dwindling, records at Tuskegee Institute showed today.

Monroe N. Work, statistician at Alabama's noted Negro college here revealed that in 1937 only seven persons in the nation met death by mob violence. This was the lowest number since the Civil War.

The figure, considered complete as lynchings are extremely rare in November and December, is one lower than in 1936 and 12 lower than 1935.

KANSAS CITY, MO., JR.-POST
NOV. 26, 1937 N27

Lynching Statistics.

The predominantly political flavor of the congressional arguments over the anti-lynching bill, its comparative emptiness as a law enforcement measure, is disclosed by the statistics on lynching, which show that this crime is becoming almost negligible, even in the Deep South.

Northern Democrats in the senate and house are behind the anti-lynching bill for its effect upon the Negro vote in their states; southern Democrats are opposing it for the effect upon the white vote in their states.

The facts regarding mob law are reported by the Tuskegee institute of Tuskegee, Ala. The institute has the figures on lynching in the United States for the last 55 years and, since it is the foremost Negro college in the world, it surely would not minimize the extent of this form of lawlessness.

Tuskegee's document shows that thus far in 1937 there have been seven lynchings in the United States, one less than in 1936 and 12 less than in 1935.

But the most encouraging thing is the steady decline over a long period of years. The peak of mob killings came in the '70s, when the South was driving out the carpet-baggers and "disciplining" the Negroes. The peak year in the 55 covered by Tuskegee's records was 1884, when 211 persons were hanged, shot, burned or otherwise illegally killed by self-appointed "law enforcers."

There are several erroneous notions about lynchings. One is that nearly all of the victims are Negroes, whereas 1,289 of the 4,672 victims in 55 years were whites. Another is the assumption that most of the victims were accused of rape, whereas that was true of only 25.5 per cent of them. Many of the Negroes lynched in the Deep South were guilty of mere "impudence."

But even in the cotton states there has been a steady growth of sentiment against lynching. The state of Alabama this year sought to indict and impeach a sheriff for alleged negligence in permitting a Negro to be lynched. The effort failed through the refusal of two grand juries to act, but the fact that the indictment was sought was unprecedented. Southern newspapers, societies and individuals have been fighting the lynching evil since the war with appreciable results. The seven lynchings in the United States in 1937 are not condonable, but they nevertheless reveal that this crime is on the verge of disappearing.

But the northern politicians and their southern antagonists will continue to use their most effective adjectives on this issue. Both are counting upon the public's ignorance of the improvement which has taken place without the aid of laws.

Lynchings-1937
Side Lights.

Alabama.

5839

POSSE HUNTS NEGRO IN GADSDEN MAN'S DEATH

GADSDEN, April 29.—(Special)—A posse was searching the woods near here today for Ben Moore, 58-year-old Negro farmer, who police were told shot and killed Robert Cameron, 65, while his wife looked on yesterday.

Officers said they were told that the shooting followed a quarrel in which Moore accused Mr. Cameron of shooting at his chickens.

Lynchings - 1937
Side Lights.

Arkansas.

5840

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution
May 26, 1937

LYNCHING FEARED IN ARKANSAS TRIAL

Tenant Farmers Charge Civil Liberties Denied; Ask LaFollette Aid.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 25.—(AP) J. R. Butler, president of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, wired Senator LaFollette today a request that the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee "institute a general investigation based on the hundreds of denials of civil liberties in eastern Arkansas over the past four years."

The telegram said union attorneys fear an attack when they appear at Forrest City, Ark., tomorrow to defend J. F. Hynds, national executive committee member of the union, and Melvin Swinea, a union worker, at a hearing on charges of "interfering with labor." The two were arrested yesterday after a negro road gang working on a paving job quit work.

The communication to Senator LaFollette cited what the union termed a "near lynching" when Dave Benson, a union member, was tried at Forrest City on a similar charge last year.

Butler said C. A. Standfield, a Hot Springs, Ark., attorney, will defend the men at the hearing set before Magistrate McCutcheon. The men were held in jail under bond tonight.

A second telegram was sent to Governor Bailey, of Arkansas, asking him to advise the St. Francis county (Forrest City) sheriff, "not to allow such disgraceful rioting in the Hynds-Swinea trial as occurred there under like circumstances in the trial of Dave Benson in May, 1936."

Union officials said about 200 quit but Bradford said he believed about 35 or 40 went out. He said the company paid 20 cents an hour which he said was the minimum required by the WPA. The union organizers asked 35 cents.

Florida.

Lynchings-1937
Side Lights.

5842

5842

Child Bride's Husband Flees Threats of Mob

BRADENTON, Fla., March 17.—(UP)—Police Chief S. D. Smith said tonight that a mob of citizens had gone to the home of Chandler L. Revell, 57, mill foreman at Manatee, and advised him to "leave the county and never come back."

Smith said mob violence was threatened and Revell left for an unannounced destination immediately.

Revell gained publicity this week when it was revealed that he married 12-year-old Martha Nell North last Saturday.

2 Who Vanished In Fla. Believed Lynch Victims

OCALA, Fla., July 9—(C)—Editor M. D. Potter of the Tampa Bulletin came here last week investigating the disappearance of Edward Williams, who was arrested and jailed on a charge of attacking a white woman, but was released after five days because of insufficient evidence to prosecute.

The youth was released from jail late at night, and seen to be pushed into an automobile by whites, and has not been seen or heard from since. Editor Potter says a colored teacher, a Mrs. Wiley, disappeared from Ocala about twenty years ago under similar circumstances, and nothing ever was done about it. The editor has contacted several organizations and a determined search is being made for young Williams.

POLICEMAN IS SLAIN; POSSE HUNTS NEGRO

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Aug. 7.—(UP)—A posse searched the county north of here tonight with bloodhounds for a negro who allegedly shot and killed a police man attempting to arrest him.

Louis A. Conner, veteran police officer, was fatally wounded by Will Akery, the negro, according to Detective Jack Thompson, who said the negro also fired at him. The two officers were attempting to take Avery into custody on a breaking and entering charge.

Fear For Safety Of Prisoner Removed From Florida Jail To Mystery Spot

Inhabitants Recognize Tactics Used In Claude Neal Kidnaping and Lynching.

APPALACHICOLA, Fla., May 27.—(ANP)—Although a mob was reported to have dispersed after the prisoner they sought had been supposedly removed to another jail, Negroes there this week expressed grave fears for the life of Robert Hinds, 24-year-old farm laborer, who is alleged to have "confessed" to attacking a white woman near this city. The fears were increased because of the prominence of this city in Indiana, where three years ago the "removal" dodge was used by sheriff's officers to deliver Claude Neal, another Negro, to Alabama's most sadistic recent lynch mob.

In describing the removing of Hinds to another jail, officers declare that they moved him first to Panama City, 60 odd miles away and then to another undisclosed destination. Several West Florida cities were named as possible places that the accused man may have been taken.

According to stories circulated at the time of Hind's arrest, he is supposed to have come upon two white women on the outskirts of the city, and to have frightened off one and criminally assaulted the other. That this story might contain many loopholes was brought out by old residents of the area, who pointed to a recent electrocution of a Negro in the state for a similar crime when conclusive evidence had never been presented, and the recent wave of criminal assaults by white men on their own women in sections near this one.

Whether Florida's Governor Cone, famous for his "No Negro is worth $4,000" statement, would call out adequate State forces for the protection of the suspected man was a matter of question up to Tuesday. The former governor, Dave Sholtz, refused to do so in two of the State's recent lynchings and whitewashed the third.

Posse Looks For Man Accused In Officer's Death

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—(SNS)—A posse searched the county north of this city Saturday night with bloodhounds for a man claimed to have shot and killed a policeman in an attempted arrest.

The man sought was Will Akery, who was said by Detective Jack Thompson to have fired the fatal shot into the body of Louis A. Conner, veteran police officer, and to have also fired at him. The officers were attempting to arrest the accused man on a breaking and entering charge.

Two Negroes Are Taken From Jail and Shot Dead

Florida Governor Says, 'This Was Not Lynching, It Was Murder,' and Promises Full Investigation and Prosecution of Four Unidentified Killers

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 20 (AP) Four unidentified white men took two Negro youths from the county jail, four blocks from the state capital, and riddled their bodies with bullets a short distance east of here early today.

The Negroes, Richard Hawkins and Ernest Ponder, each about 18 years old, were being held on a charge of stabbing Policeman V. F. Kelly Sunday morning when he attempted to question them about breaking into a store. Kelly is in a serious condition at a hospital here.

"This was not a lynching—it was murder," Governor Fred P. Cone said when he learned of the case. "I'm going to do everything I can to get whoever did this. It looks like a lot of fanaticism here by somebody. I'm going to prosecute anybody we get to the limit of the law."

Sheriff Frank Stoutamire said four men, wearing paper sacks over their heads, entered the police station about 3 a.m. and forced Night Sergeant Harry Fairbanks to accompany them to the county jail at pistol point.

Officer Bound and Gagged

Officer Fairbanks said the four men—"two stout men and two short men"—entered police headquarters about 3 a.m., poked a gun to his back and said:

"We want the jail keys and we don't want any—foolishness."

"I got up and gave them to them."

He said the men forced him to accompany them to the county jail, open the six doors necessary to get from the outside to the cells where the Negroes were held. Then they tied his arms and gagged him, and locked him in a cell block.

County Jailer Robert Maige slept through all this, Sheriff Stoutamire recounted, and knew nothing about it until later when he was awakened by Fairbanks' calls for help. The police department uses the county jail and has its own keys so it was not necessary for the masked men to awaken Maige, the sheriff explained.

Warning Placards Left

Stoutamire said Maige and Fairbanks notified him as soon as the jailer released the policeman. The sheriff said he and his deputies searched for hours for the Negroes and the captors but knew nothing of their whereabouts until a Negro woman telephoned she found the Negro youths' bodies under oak trees about 100 feet off the main Jacksonville-Tallahassee highway, three and a half miles out of town.

The officers found the bodies about 20 feet apart. Each was riddled with 15 to 20 bullet holes. Five crudely printed placards, with some of the letters "S" backwards, marked the scene of ehe double lynching. The signs said:

"His Last Crime;" "This is the Beginning, Who is Next;" "This is Your Warning;" "Negroes, Remember You May be Next;" "Warning, This is What Will Happen to all Negroes that Harm White People."

POLICE HALT KLAN IN 'RACE OF DEATH'

DYING MAN PLACED IN UNDERTAKER'S ESTABLISHMENT

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Oct. 21—Police of this winter resort city late Sunday night won a three-cornered "race of death" with members of the Ku Klux Klan and an armed mob of whites who threatened to lynch J. E. Moses, who allegedly shot down two officers.

Seriously wounded, Moses early today lay dying in an undertaking establishment in the Williams district here.

Meanwhile, hundreds of milling townsmen paraded by the doors of the establishment.

Cops Vowed To Kill Him

Moses was fatally wounded by two bullets, but local police had vowed to "get him like a dog" if they ever sighted him.

They dropped the shotgun fugitive hiding on the second floor of a frame building close by the city police blockade, while prisoners work out short prison sentences.

[illegible] a two-day race for the life of Moses [illegible] the strangest city and county police [illegible] to capture the slayer has been members of the Klan, who two nights ago marched down St. Petersburg's Main street in full Klan regalia, found the alleged killer.

Before the capture of Moses, Chief of Police E. D. Vaughn said: "We have asked the head of the local Klavern to refrain from any demonstrations and we have received their promise that they will not participate.

"But we have no assurance that klansmen . . . either as individuals or in the organized body will not [illegible] in St. Petersburg from nearby cities."

"We are using every precaution to fruistrate any Klan activities."

urday night for the slaying of Motorcycle Officer James A. Thornton and Patrolman William G. Newberry at a circus here.

The officers were wounded fatally by a Negro they ordered off the circus grounds.

Vaughn said Moses was shot while resisting arrest when discovered at a Negro dwelling, and that he was carried in a mortuary basket through a crowd that quickly gathered at the house.

The police chief said an effort was made to tear the cover from the basket until he told the crowd the Negro had been killed.

The wounded Negro was carried to an undertaking establishment, Vaughn said, and hundreds of persons streamed by the open basket for a look at the critically wounded prisoner, before Dr. R. E. Dicks, a white physician, arrived to give medical aid.

The crowd was excluded, Vaughn said, and Dr. Dicks worked behind locked doors for almost an hour in an unsuccessful effort to save the Negro.

The police chief said Moses was shot down by Detective J. Z. Stanley at the Negro dwelling when the fugitive sprang from a closet with a gun in his hand. The detective, he said, would be eligible for the $500 reward offered by the city for the capture of the double slayer. An anonymous tip led to his hiding place.

Earlier, deputies and a posse of deputized citizens used bloodhounds in a search of the lowlands for the Negro.

After Moses' death, officers remained on duty as a precaution against possible disturbance in the Negro section.

Killed by Posse

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Charged with slaying two white policemen who [illegible] him after ordering him from the circus grounds, J. E. Moses died on Monday from a hail of posse bullets.

DEATH CLIMAXES HUNT FOR NEGRO

Mob Action Previously Halted As Accused Slayer Is Spirited From House

10-18-31

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — (AP) — Death early today climaxed a grim manhunt for the Negro slayer of two St. Petersburg policemen after officials had saved him from possible mob action through a ruse.

Chief of Police E. D. Vaughn said the Negro was J. O. Moses, who was wounded and captured last night after he had been hunted since

Lynchings - 1937
Side Lights.

Georgia.

5841

NEGRO IS MISSING FROM JAIL CELL

Butler Authorities Unable to Say Whether Man Was Removed or Made Escape

BUTLER, Ga., Jan. 2 (AP)—A 19-year-old Negro, held for robbing and wounding a white man, was missing tonight from the Taylor county jail and authorities said they were unable to ascertain whether he escaped or was removed by unauthorized persons.

The prisoner, listed as Jim Welcher was charged with robbing Sam Swearington, station agent at Charing, Ga., recently of $3 in a night attack as the agent closed his depot.

Swearington, authorities said, suffered a skull fracture and has been intermittently unconscious since.

Sheriff J. M. Bone, who took office yesterday, said the man was missing from the jail when he assumed his official duties.

"Nothing was broken at the jail," Bone said.

R. C. McDuffie, Bone's predecessor, said the Negro disappeared New Year's eve. The former sheriff said that even though he and the town marshal held the only apparent keys to the jail, someone got "got in somehow."

McDuffie said he was told by other prisoners that some one came in and took away the Negro.

Both Bone and McDuffie reported no trace had been found of the prisoner. McDuffie said the Negro had admitted the robbery.

NO TRACE IS FOUND OF MISSING NEGRO

BUTLER, Ga., Jan. 3.—(AP)—Taylor county authorities reported no further trace had been obtained today of a young negro, whom they said mysteriously disappeared from the county jail three nights ago while being held for robbing a railway depot agent.

The situation brought an announcement from Solicitor General Hubert Calhoun, of the Chattahoochee superior court circuit, at Columbus, that he would begin an investigation tomorrow.

Sheriff J. M. Bone, who took office January 1, said he had been unable to learn anything of the prisoner's whereabouts following his disappearance on New Year's Eve.

The negro, listed as Jim Welcher was being held for robbing Sam Swearington, depot agent at Charing, Ga., who sustained a skull fracture when attacked at night just as he closed his station.

R. P. McGuffin, former sheriff, quoted prisoners as saying someone entered the jail and carried off the negro.

Negro Prisoner Is Still Missing

Taylor Grand Jury May Investigate Disappearance

COLUMBUS, Ga., Jan. 6 (AP)—The next Taylor county grand jury will be asked to investigate the disappearance of a Negro prisoner from the county jail at Butler, Solicitor General Hubert Calhoun, of the Chattahoochee circuit, announced here today.

Mr. Calhoun, who conducted a personal investigation into the mysterious disappearance of the Negro held in connection with the robbery and attack on a railway agent at Charing, Ga., said today he was not ready to make public any details of his inquiry. He stated he expects developments in the probe later in the week.

The Negro was found missing from his cell when J. M. Bone succeeded R. P. McGuffin as sheriff January 1. He reported the matter to Judge J. Frank McLaughlin, of the Chattahoochee circuit, who referred the case to Mr. Calhoun. Former Sheriff McGuffin said that other prisoners told him "someone entered the jail and carried the Negro off."

GEORGIA MAINTAINS HER TRADITION

It is recorded that Butler, Ga., a small town in the grand old state of injustice, discrimination and lynching of black folks, will enjoy the somewhat dubious distinction of having the honor of lynching the first black man in 1937. James Welcher, [illegible] was charged with robbing a white man of three dollars. Welcher was arrested and turned over to Sheriff R. C. Duffie.

The sheriff said that Welcher disappeared from the jail New Year's Eve and he cannot tell where he is. Sheriff McDuffie admits that no one except himself and the town marshal have keys to the jail. Other prisoners said "That some men came and took Welcher away." Of course the answer is easy to anyone who knows Southern conditions.

The plain truth is that the sheriff turned over Welcher to the lynchers. That is in keeping with customs and habits of many of the law-enforcing agencies of the South. Unfortunately, the politics of the South, for the most part, is controlled by men who do not represent the spirit of the New South.

The political, social and economic power of the South still rests in the hands of men who think in terms of the Vardemans Tillmans, Hoke Smiths and Tom Heflins. Improvements are being made, but large bodies move slowly. Any section of the country whose people spent 250 years in dodging honest work, in schooling their progeny in the art of slaveholding, in encouraging concubinage as an asset to the advancement of their social status, can hardly be expected to be so easily regimented into real civilization.

NEGRO IS REPORTED LYNCHED IN GEORGIA

By United Press.

MIDVILLE, Ga., April 29.—Chief Police L. W. Murphy said that a Negro, wanted for criminal assault at Blythe, Ga., was picked up by a group of men on the highway near here today and "probably was lynched."

Murphy said he had been advised the Negro was in this community and had gone to look for him when he was seized by the other men and forced into their car.

Victim's Lifeless Body Is Burned

The Lynching

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., May 25—(Special) — The proud state of Georgia, where President Franklin D. Roosevelt spends his annual winter vacation, this week took its place in the lynch parade beside that of Mississippi and Alabama when a mob of more than 500 men, women and children raided a local undertaking parlor and after seizing the lifeless body of Willie Reed, burned it amid wild cheering Monday night.

It was a new kind of lynching designed principally to show Georgia's disapproval of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill which is now up for passage before the United States senate.

Killed by Deputies

Reed, a farmer was arrested at Dothan, Ala., and charged with the slaying of two white women. He was being brought back here by Sheriff Catledge and a half dozen deputies, for safe keeping in the Albany jail.

While riding in the automobile, it was reported Reed was shot through the brain by one of the deputies, when he professed his innocence and said he knew no reason why he should be charged with a crime he had not committed.

Upon reaching the jail Sheriff Catledge made his report, declaring Reed had been slain when he tried to flee from the car in which he was riding. A local undertaker was ordered to take the body to his parlors.

Within less time than an hour after the body was in the morgue, the mob composed of some 200 or more persons raided the undertaking parlor, throwing bodies here and there until they had seized that of Reed.

Act Like Savages

With the cry of savages, the mob then began a procession along the principal streets with the body of Reed tied to the rear of an automobile. At the Public Square, the lynchers stopped and then speeches extolling the virtues of white womanhood" were made.

"We'll show Niggers how to treat white women," one speaker declared. Then someone shouted: "Let's take him out to the Nigger district and burn him." The automobiles moved into the Race baseball park at the edge of town and a pyre was made out of boards knocked off the fence. Five gallons of gasoline were poured on the man's lifeless body, after which it was set afire.

New Kind of Lynching

In the lynching of Reed, Georgia went Mississippi one better in its novel idea. The Mississippians, it will be recalled, used blow torches to torture its victims on April 13.

No action has been taken against the lynchers, despite the fact they are known to the sheriff and his corps of deputies.

Georgia Mob Faces Sheriff's Inquiry

Burned Negro's Body At Bainbridge Park

BAINBRIDGE, GA., May 25—(AP)—Sheriff W. J. Catledge began a personal investigation today of the burning of a negro's body here last night by a mob aroused by the slaying of two white women.

The sheriff said there would be no inquest into the fatal shooting of the negro earlier by officers who said he tried to escape while they were taking him to jail in Albany.

The negro, Willie Reed, 20, was captured in Dothan, Ala.

The mob, seizing the body from an undertaking parlor, dragged it through the streets and burned it in a baseball park.

Sheriff Catledge said the negro admitted killing the women, Mrs. Ruby Hurst, 30 and 16-year-old Vennie Mae Richards, and leaving their bodies in a secluded wooded section four miles north of Bainbridge.

Blood on Georgia courts Jail

All under Lynchings Pretended

Body Of Slain Negro Burned By Bainbridge Mob

TAKES CORPSE FROM UNDERTAKING PARLOR AND DRAGS IT BEHIND CAR TO BASEBALL PARK

Bainbridge, Ga., May 24—A mob estimated at more than 100 men entered an undertaking parlor here tonight, took the body of a man, identified by Sheriff W. J. Catledge as Willie Reed, 22, confessed slayer of two white women, and dragged it around the public square behind a procession of automobiles.

The automobiles then moved into the Negro district and to a Negro baseball park at the edge of town and a pyre was made out of boards knocked off the fence. The body was burned.

Sheriff Catledge a short time before announced that Reed had been shot and killed while deputies were taking him to an Albany jail.

He had been arrested earlier in the day at Dothan, Ala., where the sheriff said he confessed to the slaying of two women identified as Venie Mae Richards, 16, and Mrs. Ruby Hurst, 30. One of the bodies was found Sunday by farmers searching for lost cattle, the other yesterday.

Reed was shot, Sheriff Catledge said, when he suddenly wrenched open the door of the deputies' car with his hnadcuffed hands, and fled toward the woods. The car was traveling about 35 miles an hour, Catledge said.

Informed that the mob had taken the body from the undertaking establishment, Sheriff Catledge said:

"I'm mighty sorry to see this happen."

He said Reed's confession told of following the two victims down a lonely road in a piney woods tract near here.

He first felled the elder woman, he said, knocking her unconscious, and then pursued the girl about 400 yards when he felled her and attacked her. He attempted to mutilate the bodies to prevent identification of them, the sheriff said.

Russell Pope, a farmer, told the sheriff of seeing the Negro following the two women leading to the search for Reed.

Reed was captured without a battle in a loft at Dothan, Ala., this afternoon. Catledge said Dothan was the slayer's home.

Because there is no jail in Decatur county, deputies were taking Reed to the jail at Albany. Sheriff Catledge said he met his deputies and their prisoner outside of Bainbridge and that they did not bring him into town.

The sheriff said his deputies were circling on a by-road to reach Albany when Reed made his attempt to escape.

Catledge reported that Reed came to Decatur county Thursday from Baker county, where he had been employed as a turpentine worker.

Mobile, Ala., Press
May 27, 1937

Georgia Fugitive Fears 'Lynching'

BOSTON, May 27.—(UP)—A 37-year-old negro fugitive from a Georgia chain gang today begged authorities not to send him back "because they may lynch me."

The fugitive, James Cunningham, alias Eugene Wilson, was arrested Tuesday charged with being a number pool operator. He said he merely was writing down a number he intended to play in the pool.

Fingerprints disclosed his identity as the man that escaped from a chain gang at Atlanta, Ga., in November, 1924, after serving one year of a 29-year sentence for receiving stolen goods—two rugs valued at $15. Georgia authorities were notified of his arrest.

"My wife didn't know anything about my being on the chain gang until this happened," he told police. "I don't want to go back. They might lynch me."

KILLER OF 2 WOMEN DIES TRYING TO FLEE

Negro, Captured, Confessed He Murdered Pair Near Bainbridge.

5-25-37

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., May 25.—A negro identified by Sheriff W. J. Catledge as Willie Reed, captured in a barn loft at Dothan, Ala., and said to have confessed the murder of two south Georgia farm women, was shot to death late today when deputies taking him to an Albany jail said he attempted to escape.

A crowd of approximately 200 men and women later took the negro's body from a negro undertaking parlor here and carried it to a baseball park nearby, where is was burned on a pyre built of boards knocked from a fence.

Reed had been arrested in connection with the murder of Mrs. Ruby Hurst, 30, a farm worker living near Colquitt, several miles north of here, and Venie Mase Richards, 16, whose father worked on the same farm. Mrs. Hurst's body was found yesterday in a lonely piney woods tract near here, and that of the girl was discovered this morning, about 400 yards away. Both had been hacked to death. They had been missing since Friday.

The negro, also missing from his work since Friday, was traced to Dothan and arrested. Sheriff Catledge said Reed confessed he first knocked Mrs. Hurst unconscious, then pursued the girl and attacked her. He mutilated both bodies to prevent their identification, the negro said.

alias Eugene Wilson, was arrested Tuesday charged with being a number pool operator. He said he merely was writing down a number he intended to play in the pool.

Fingerprints disclosed his identity as the man that escaped from a chain gang at Atlanta, Ga., in November, 1924, after serving one year of a 29-year sentence for receiving stolen goods—two rugs valued at $15. Georgia authorities were notified of his arrest.

"My wife didn't know anything about my being on the chain gang until this happened," he told police. "I don't want to go back. They might lynch me."

Athens, Ga. Times
May 28, 1937

Georgia Fugitive Fears Lynching

BOSTON, May 27—(UP)—A 37-year-old negro fugitive from a Georgia chain gang today begged authorities not to send him back "because they may lynch me."

The fugitive, James Cunningham, alias Eugene Wilson, was arrested Tuesday charged with being a number pool operator. He said he merely was writing down a number he intended to play in the pool.

Fingerprints disclosed his identity as the man that escaped from a chain gang at Atlanta, Ga., in November 1924 after serving one year of a 29-year sentence for receiving stolen gods—two rugs valued at $15. Georgia authorities were notified of his arrest.

"My wife didn't know anything about my being on the chain gang until this happened," he told police. "I don't want to go back. They might lynch me."

Negro Slain By Deputies In Escape Effort

Had Confessed Murder Of Two White Women; Said He Assaulted One

BAINBRIDGE, GA., May 24.—(AP)—Sheriff W. J. Catledge said Willie Reed, 20-year-old negro and confessed slayer of two women, was shot and killed tonight while deputies were taking him to an Albany jail. Reed tried to escape from the deputies' car, Catledge said.

Reed was shot when he suddenly wrenched open the door of the deputies' car [illegible] toward the woods the sheriff said.

Sheriff Catledge said Decatur County deputies in the car were H. G. Pollock, R. A. Stephens and H. J. Rhame.

Bodies of the two women, badly hacked with a sharp instrument, were found Sunday by farmers searching for lost cattle. The women were identified by authorities as Vernie Mae Richards, 16, and Mrs. Ruby Hurst, 30.

Made Full Confession

Sheriff Catledge said the negro's confession told of following the two victims [illegible] woods tract near here.

He first felled the elder woman, he said, knocking her unconscious, and then pursued the girl about 400 yards where he felled her and attacked her. He attempted to mutilate the bodies to prevent identification of them, the sheriff said.

Russell Pope, a farmer, told the sheriff of seeing the negro following the two women, leading to the search for Reed.

Reed was captured without a battle in a loft at Dothan, Ala., this afternoon. Catledge said Dothan was the slayer's home.

Because there is no jail in Decatur County, deputies were taking Reed to the jail at Albany. Sheriff Catledge said he met his deputies and their prisoner outside of Bainbridge and that they did not bring him into town.

The sheriff said his deputies were circling on a by-road to reach Albany when Reed made his attempt to escape.

Catledge reported the negro came to Decatur County Thursday from Baker County where he had been employed as a turpentine worker.

Mrs. Hurst was a farm worker living near Colquitt, several miles north of here. The father of the Richards girl was employed on the same farm as Mrs. Hurst.

The girl was found about 400 yards from a secluded pond. The body of Mrs. Hurst was found on the shore of the pond located about four miles northwest of here on the Bainbridge-Newton road.

Lynchings - 1937
Side Lights.

Georgia.

5843

GEORGIA MOB KILLS BOY, 18, IN SHANTY

(Special to the AFRO)

ATLANTA—Eighteen-year-old Robert Smith fell before the blazing guns of a posse headed by peace officers, Sunday, after he had sought refuge from his pursuers in a shanty hotel, at Hahira, Lowndes County, about two hundred miles southeast of here.

Robert was trapped in the shanty after the posse had beaten the countryside. The search for him began when word was spread among cracker State farmers that he had attacked two white women.

Officers Lose Dogs

Crowds which gathered were spurred to the hunt with the warning that a "desperado" was loose. The officers leading the search were: Roy D. Smith, chief of police; W. F. Nixon, and H. C. Carson, all white.

Before the lynching, it had been bruited about in the colored sections that Robert would be shot on sight. The officers are reported to have explained after the incident that Robert broke and ran to get a weapon when the shanty was surrounded.

The mob victim's bullet-riddled body was shipped for burial to Valdosta, a short distance away.

Georgia's Second

This lynching marked Georgia's second for the year. On May 24, a mob of more than one hundred took the body of Willie Reed, previously slain by deputies as he "attempted to escape," and burned it in a baseball park. White women and girls mutilated Reed's body.

Eleven days prior to Robert's lynching, a mob raided a jail in Tallahassee, Fla., kadnaped two youths about 18, and lynched them alongside a much-traveled highway.

The Lynch League's standing at present is: Georgia, Florida, and Mississippi, two each; Alabama one.

NEGRO DEAD, TWO INJURED IN GUN FIGHT

Will Kirby, 75, Is Killed and Posseman and Peacemaker Are Wounded

MT. VERNON MAYOR IS HIT

Throng of White Men Hunting Attacker of a Woman in Montgomery County

MOUNT VERNON, Ga., Sept. 3 (AP)—Pistol bullets killed a 75-year-old Negro and wounded a peacemaker and a posseman today in a widespread hunt for another Negro charged with attacking a white woman.

Surrounded by a throng of white men, Will Kirby was shot to death on the porch of his home near Cedar Grove.

Mayor John W. Underwood, 25, enlisted by peace officers in a move to prevent violence, was struck in one shoulder by a bullet which ranged downward through his chest.

Ralph Grinstead, posseman, was wounded in an arm.

Reports of the details of the shooting were in conflict.

Special Deputy Sheriff Eustis Brady said, however, that Kirby had argued but did not fire when the white men sought to search his place for the fugitive Negro, named in a state warrant as Buddy Sharpe.

Prosecutor L. C. Underwood, father of the mayor, said his son was struck by a stray bullet while "trying to calm things down."

He said a band of men had been "roaming the country in an ugly mood" since a white woman was attacked by a Negro who fought off her husband in her home Saturday night.

Lynching Feared

"We'd been afraid of a lynching ever since," he said.

Investigators said the suspect was not found at the Kirby home. Officers reported, however, the home contained a loaded pistol, rifle and shotgun.

With Underwood and Deputy Brady were Sheriff T. G. Peterson and Deputy Sheriff M. A. Peterson, who also tried to "hold them in check."

Observers estimated 400 or 500 men were seeking Sharpe in this South Georgia area.

Underwood in Dublin Hospital

Mayor Underwood was rushed to a Dublin, Ga., hospital. His father said his condition was "pretty good" and physicians forecast his recovery, barring pneumonia.

The mayor was graduated from the Atlanta law school in June, 1935. His twin brother, Joe Underwood, is a member of the Washington staff of Representative Hugh Peterson (D-Ga.).

Peterson's home is at Alley, Ga., just east of Mount Vernon.

TWO ARE WOUNDED BY POSSE BULLETS

Mount Vernon Mayor Is Hit by Stray Shot

MOUNT VERNON, Ga., Sept. 3 (AP)—Mayor John W. Underwood, 25, and Ralph Grinstead, a posseman, were wounded and Will Kirby, negro, was killed in an exchange of gunfire today as a throng of men hunted another negro suspected of assaulting a white woman.

L. C. Underwood, Montgomery county prosecutor and father of the mayor, said his son was struck through the chest by a stray bullet while he was trying "to calm things down."

The county attorney said Kirby was shot and killed when he resisted efforts of the posse to search his house, where the hunted negro was suspected of hiding.

NEGROES HUNTED IN MONTGOMERY

One of Pair Routed by Woman Believed to Be Man Wanted in Attack Case

MOUNT VERNON, Ga., Sept. 4—Two Negroes who officers said may be the pair wanted in connection with an attack of a white woman were chased into the woods today at the point of a gun in the hands of Mrs. Earl McArthur, wife of a Montgomery county farmer.

Sheriff T. G. Peterson said the Negroes appeared at the farm house early this morning and demanded keys to the McArthur automobile from Mrs. McArthur, who was alone. He said the woman went into the house while the men waited outside. She returned with a pistol and the Negroes fled into the swamps.

Sheriff Peterson said county officers believed them to be Buddy Sharpe, wanted on a warrant charging assault, and a companion.

A posse has been searching for Sharpe since last Sunday. Sheriff Peterson said about 25 armed men and bloodhounds, directed by County Warden E. D. Burns were scouring the woods for the Negro today.

Underwood Hurt

At Dublin John W. Underwood, youthful mayor of Mount Vernon, lay seriously wounded because he tried futilely to intervene between an aroused posse and an aged Negro suspected of harboring the fugitive.

The Negro, 75-year-old Will Kirby, was killed and Underwood and a posseman struck by stray bullets when gunfire disrupted the mayor's efforts "to calm things down" yesterday at Kirby's farm home near Mount Vernon.

Versions of the shooting differed. Special Deputy Sheriff Eustic Brady said Kirby had argued but had not fired a gun. Others said the Negro fired a weapon.

Underwood was shot in the arm and back and Ralph Grinstead, posseman, was slightly wounded in the arm.

HOUNDS LOSE TRAIL OF ATTACK FUGITIVE

MT. VERNON, Ga., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Posse seeking a young negro accused of attacking a white woman called off a week's hunt today after bloodhounds apparently lost the fugitive's trail.

One negro was killed and a peacemaker and a posseman were wounded in the hunt at near-by Cedar Grove Friday. The peacemaker, youthful Mayor John Underwood, of Mt. Vernon, is in a Dublin hospital in serious condition from a bullet wound in the chest. Ralph Grimstead, the posseman, was wounded slightly in the arm.

The negro, Will Kirby, 75, died in a gunfire exchange when the posse arrived at his home searching for the fugitive named in a state warrant as Buddy Sharpe.

Posse Seeking Negro, Alleged Attacker, Quits

MT. VERNON, GA., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Posse seeking a young negro accused of attacking a white woman called off a week's hunt today after bloodhounds apparently lost the fugitive's trail.

One negro was killed and a peacemaker and a posseman were wounded in the hunt at nearby Cedar Grove Friday. The peacemaker, youthful Mayor John Underwood, of Mt. Vernon, is in a Dublin hospital in serious condition from a bullet wound in the chest.

Ralph Grimstead, the posseman, was wounded slightly in the arm.

The negro, Will Kirby, 75, died in a gunfire exchange when the posse arrived at his home searching for the fugitive named in a State warrant as Buddy Sharpe.

The mayor's father, County Prosecutor L. C. Underwood, said his son was struck by a stray bullet while "trying to calm things down."

Lynchings - 1937
Side Lights.

Louisiana.

5844

Mississippi Whites Threaten To Lynch Exhibitor Of Interracial Motion Pictures

Which Showed Abbott and Bishop Walls Eating With Ickes and McCoy Dictating to Whites Steno Confiscated.

BOGALUSA, La., Nov. 24—Violation of the "Etiquette of Race Relations in the South" almost cost of the life of J. D. Carr, smooth Chicago propagandist, last week when he was overtaken by a group of six white men and warned that he must show no more motion pictures in Mississippi of whites and blacks eating together or of white stenographers taking dictation from Negro officials.

One of Carr's lecture stunts has been to show the progress of his race on the screen. To that end he has been assembling film for several months in Chicago.

Ickes In One Picture

One of his pictures which he has been putting on the screen in this section showed Robert S. Abbott, publisher, and Bishop W. J. Walls of the A.M.E. Zion Church at the banquet table with Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior.

In another, W. T. McCoy, a former Mississippian, who is now assistant state's attorney of Cook County, Illinois, was shown giving dictation to a white girl typist.

Carr had just shown the pictures and given a lecture in a church in Poplarville, Miss., and was returning to Bogalusa, when a sedan bearing six white men drew up beside him on the outskirts of Poplarville. He was ordered to stop.

Demands Film

One of the white men who served as spokesman demanded the film with the objectionable scenes.

"Who gave you permission to show pictures of white people eating with 'N——rs' and white women writing for 'N——r' men?" he roughly inquired, adding: "We ought to hang you to a tree and tar and feather you. Give me them d——n pictures."

Mr. Carr was accompanied by the writer and by a local teacher. After he had cut out the objectionable scenes and turned them over to the white men, he was informed that he could show pictures of "N——rs" going to church, but that "you've got to cut that other stuff out if you know what's good for you."

Lynchings-1937
Side Lights.
6
6

Mississippi.

5845

POSSES SEEK NEGRO WHO KILLED OFFICER

By United Press

LAUREL, Miss., March 26.—Posses searched the red clay hills around Pachuta today for a Negro prisoner who killed Constable W. S. Burns and escaped. Details were not learned here immediately.

MISSISSIPPI POSSES HUNT NEGRO SLAYER

BARNETT, Miss., March 26.—(UP)—Southeastern Mississippi officers tonight spread their search for a young negro who assertedly climaxed a night of terror here by blasting Constable W. S. Burns to death with a shotgun.

Burns, 55-year-old Pachuta officer, was called here at reports that Otis Sims, 24, was threatening to shoot negro residents last night. When the constable attempted to arrest Sims, the latter opened fire.

Sims fled immediately. A posse was formed quickly and bloodhounds were brought out. The dogs trailed the negro five miles across the county line to Vossburg, where the scent was lost at a railway station. Officers believed the negro hopped on a freight train as it slowed up.

NEGRO SLAYER SOUGHT FOR OFFICER'S DEATH

Clarke County Constable Is Killed Near Meridian

POSSE OF 50 JOINS HUNT

Fugitive Believed To Have Boarded Freight At Vossburg Station Where Trail Ends Suddenly

Special to The Commercial Appeal

MERIDIAN, Miss., March 26.—One of the greatest manhunts for this area for years Friday had spread over eastern and South Mississippi in the search for Otis Sims, 24, negro, who shot and killed Constable W. S. Burns, 55, of Pachuta, at Barnett, Miss., south of Meridian, late Thursday night.

The fatal shooting occurred when the Clarke County official attempted to arrest the negro for carrying a gun and disturbing the peace.

A posse of 50 men, headed by Sheriff Virgil Miller, Clarke County, Lee Williams, Jasper official, of Bay Springs, and a large number of citizens of Pachuta, with the aid of J. S. Jenkins' bloodhounds, of Meridian, tracked the negro to Vossburg depot. It is thought Sims boarded a freight train at this point.

Search Most of Night

The search continued through most of the night, and Friday officers in surrounding towns entered the chase.

Constable Burns, accompanied by a negro, Ben Smith, came to Barnett answering a call from a negro who said that Sims was frightening the negroes of Barnett by dangerously exhibiting a gun.

Meeting the negro walking down the railroad tracks, Constable Burns asked him if he was Otis Sims. When the negro answered in the affirmative, Mr. Burns said, "I want to speak to you."

"Who, me?" inquired the negro.

Immediately after making this statement, the negro brought out a double-barrel shotgun which he was holding behind him and shot the official in the chest.

Officers Are Called

The negro, who had come with the constable, ran to the home of Mrs. W. L. Wallace, and Mrs. Wallace called the officers from Clarke and Jasper counties.

Mr. Burns, serving his second term, and former game warden, was well known.

He leaves his wife. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

LONDES MANHUNT ENDS

Negro Captured In Hay Loft After 15-Day Search—Has Been Shot

COLUMBUS, Miss., Sept. 9.—A 15-day search for Henry Perkins, negro, was ended today when a posse captured him in a hay lift on the Maxwell McCrary place east of Columbus.

Possemen, armed with pistols and sawed-off shotguns, surrounded the barn and a negro was sent into the barn to tell Perkins that he was in a trap.

Upon examination officers found the negro had been shot twice, once in the chest and in the right arm. The ball that had entered the arm was still there.

A highlight in the hunt occurred Sunday when a detachment of National Guardsmen under the direction of Maj. T. B. Birdsong, head of Governor White's law enforcement squad, aided local officers.

Authorities declared that the negro would be charged with operating a distillery and assault with intent to kill and murder.

MOB LYNCHES YOUTH AT COAHOMA, MISSISSIPPI

COAHOMA, Miss., Nov. 11.—Sheriff Lee Matthews announced last night that a young Negro who had attacked him and escaped had been lynched by an armed mob.

The Sheriff said the Negro, Jesse Turner, was arraigned on a robbery charge and attacked him on the way from Clarksdale jail, escaping into a cypress break.

A member of the mob, estimated at 300 men, said the Negro was trailed to a house here and shot when he refused to surrender. The Sheriff was not seriously hurt.

POSSE SLAYS NEGRO WHO BEAT SHERIFF

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Nov. 10. (AP)—Sheriff Lee Matthews, of Clarksdale, reported late tonight that officers shot and killed Jesse Turner, young Negro who was accused of attacking the sheriff to escape a misdemeanor charge today.

Deputy sheriffs, police officers and citizens made up a posse which was instructed to "shoot to kill" if Turner resisted.

Sheriff Matthews said the negro slugged him and fled to a wooded area after he was arrested. The officer was only slightly injured.

Missouri.

5846

Lynchings - 1937

Side Lights

6

Veteran Asks Shorter Term

3-19-37

Says He Plead Guilty in 1924 to Avoid Lynching

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — An effort has been started by W. M. Collins, an ex-soldier, to obtain his freedom from the state prison here after serving nearly 13 years of a 99-year-term on charges of shooting an officer in Clinton, Mo., back in 1924.

"Collins, who served 18 months overseas, was passing through the small Henry county town in 1924 en route to California." Attorney Silas E. Garner, St. Louis lawyer, who has been retained by Collins, states, "An officer of the little town, without any charge being made against Collins and at a time when Collins was not violating any law known to Missouri statutes, attempted to search him.

"Collins pushed the officer away and the officer drew his gun. However, before he could shoot, Collins drew his weapon and shot the officer.

"The policeman did not die. Collins was charged with assault with intent to kill. The mob spirit ran high. Collins was removed to Sedalia for safekeeping. A month later, he was advised to plead guilty to prevent a lynching. The judge sentenced him to 99 years in the state penitentiary."

Collins is still in the penitentiary.

Lynchings - 1937
6
6
Side Lights.

New York.

5847

MOB ATTACKS MAN MOLESTING WOMAN

Police Save Accused From Lynching in New York Subway Station

8-20-37

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(UP)—Public indignation against sex offenders reached a climax in a 14th street subway station today when a mob of 1,000 men and women attempted to lynch a man accused of molesting a woman.

The crowd beat and kicked the man—John Ploshay, [illegible]-year-old Queens laborer—almost unconscious before police rescued him. He was booked on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Joseph Carozza, 35, of Brooklyn, precipitated the outburst when, he said, he saw Ploshay slap the hips of a woman carrying a baby.

Woman Strikes Back.

The woman struck at Ploshay with one arm. Carozza screamed to others in the station:

"This man is a masher and a sex maniac."

Carozza grappled with Ploshay and the crowd surged forward.

Fists and feet lashed out and Ploshay went down.

"Let's hang him," someone shouted.

"Let's kill him," another voice echoed.

A woman's long nails opened a gash in the semi-conscious man's left cheek. Feet smashed down on his chest. Blood welled through his shirt.

Police Rescue Man.

Patrolman Michael Flynn entered the station and fought toward the prostrate man. He was kicked twice. He grabbed Ploshay by his coat collar and dragged him toward the wash room, fighting the mob back with fist and elbow. Two radio cars arrived with reinforcements and Ploshay was hurried to the precinct station.

Four girls, ranging in age from 4 to 9, have been killed by sex degenerates in New York city since the first of the year. A fifth died of peritonitis after a criminal at-

North Carolina.

Lynchings- 1937
6
Side Lights
8

5848

LANDLORD ARRESTED ON KIDNAPING CHARGE

Fayetteville Daily News

Harnett County Man Accused By Negro Tenant of Assault and Conspiracy to Kill.

Oct 29 1937

(Special to Daily News)

Dunn, Oct. 28.—Shep Hammond, Harnett county landlord, was released from the county jail Wednesday under $3,000 bond on a charge of kidnaping Ed Covington, negro tenant farmer. He is also charged with assault, aiding and abetting and conspiracy with intent to kill.

At a preliminary hearing before Magistrate J. A. Redfern, Hammond was bound over to the Harnett Superior court.

The trouble between the landlord and tenant started several days ago when Hammond went to the negro's home after some cottonseed stored there and allegedly was ordered off the land. An argument followed, and the negro swore out a warrant charging his landlord with forcible trespass.

Monday night, according to the negro's testimony, Covington was forcibly carried from his home by agents of Hammond, under his supervision, and threatened with his life. Hammond denied the charges.

Lynchings - 1937
6
Side Lights
6

North Carolina

5849

Whiteville, N. C., News Reporter
September 16, 1937

Denies Presence Of Mob Violence

Five Defendants In Ugly And Aggravated Case Granted An Acquittal Here Yesterday Morning

Mob spirit did not prevail at Bolton on the night of September 4th when a self-styled Indian was accosted and put to flight, the court was told here yesterday morning when five young white men were acquitted of assaulting Sylvester Freeman.

Wade Dowless, Martin Lee, Earl Little, Carl Bennett and Clayton Long were acquitted in county recorder's court after an array of witnesses had paraded before the court in one of the ugliest situations which the county has seen for a long time.

Freeman, who claims to be an Indian, was the first witness on the stand, and his story was that five young men accused, along with about 'thirty other people' stormed him, put him to flight after tearing his shirt off him on the night in question.

He said that Wade Dowless, one of the defendants, accosted him as he parked under a Bolton filling station, on return from Wilmington where he had been to carry Beaman Millican, white man of South Whiteville, his three daughters, and Charlie Hewett blind guitar player, ror a radio broadcast.

Dowless grabbed him by the arm, Freeman said, and marched him to the side of the filling station, and wanted to know what he was doing "with those white people".

yrfo marto nttwhaheo snhrndnu

"Freeman claimed before he could answer, Dowless had grabbed a stick and was chasing him, and that a mob "of thirty people" pursued him.

Several corroboratives were offered by the state, but the defense offered witnesses who said they were present and saw nothing of an assault on Freeman.

On the stand Dowless admitted calling the self-styled Indian aside and asking him about his hauling the white people around but denied that he even tried to strike him, or that he used any force whatever.

The defense offered one witness, Burley Baker, garage mechanic, who said that he had seen the 14-year-old daughter of Millican riding with Freeman with her arm around him, Freeman and put on the stand and asked by the state about it, the girl, Emory Millican, stated emphatically " That's a lie".

The girl's father however, admitted that the girl was riding on the rear seat. The child colored man and another girl friend, while he himself was riding on the rear seat. The child said that she did not know that Freeman was an "Indian", and that she had been off with him in company with her father, once before .

Millican, who is a familiar figure around Whiteville, where his daughters play and sing on the streets, was severely reprimanded by the court at the conclusion of the trial for permitting any such circumstance to arise. It was in evidence that on the return from Wilmington Millican was drunk.

Ohio.

Lynchings-1937
Side Lights.

5850

CUMMINGS ASKED TO PROBE
EXTRADITION KIDNAPPING

Press Service, The Natl. A.C.P. 7-2-37

New York, July 2. Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings has been asked to investigate the report that George Thurman, a colored man living in Akron, O., was technically kidnapped by officers of the state of Mississippi and returned to Mississippi from Ohio to face a charge of murder in connection with the death of a Cleveland, Miss., police officer nineteen years ago. New York, N.Y.

The N.A.A.C.P. was advised by its Akron branch that Thurman has lived in Akron for nine years and says he has never been in Mississippi. A habeas corpus writ was filed, but was denied. Then an extradition hearing was requested, but before the request could be acted upon, officers of Mississippi spirited Thurman out of Akron and back South. The N.A.A.C.P. declared to Attorney-General Cummings that there is precedent for action by his department.

South Carolina

Lynchings - 1937
6
Side Lights.
6

5851

F. Lynchings
Side Lights

Anderson, S. C., Independent Trib
December 30, 1937

NOT A LYNCHING!

In Bamberg county, South Carolina, last week the dead bodies of two negro men were found in the woods. They had been "ganged," allegedly killed by negroes. The affair, therefore, was not a lynching. Southern "lynchings" are not done except by white men. When the anti-lynching, or anti-Southern, bill pressed by the Northern "Democrats" and Republicans, shall be debated in congress—and passed—the Bamberg tragedy will provide no argument for the Harlem negroes at whose dictation the measure was introduced, in fear of whom the "Democrats" will vote for it and Franklin D. Roosevelt, president, will approve it. That the president will approve it we say because, if he were not favorable to it, he would long ago have killed it with a word—as Woodrow Wilson or Grover Cleveland would have killed it. They were Democrats (no quotation points necessary).—Charleston News and Courier.

Tennessee

Lynchings - 1937
6
Side Lights.

5852

5852

ARMED MEN HUNT PLANTER'S SLAYER

Tennessee Overseer Shot in Argument With Young Negro

HUNTINGDON, Tenn., March 9. (AP)—Armed men followed bloodhounds tonight on the trail of a 25-year-old negro accused by officers of slaying George Sanford, 45-year-old plantation overseer.

Chief of Police J. G. Carter said Sanford died from two pistol wounds in his back after an argument with a negro at the John Denny farm, near here, when the workers went to the fields this morning.

A crowd of 50 armed men searched for the fugitive during the day and many of them continued the hunt tonight.

"Sanford had some trouble with a negro named Bledsoe last Saturday," Chief Carter said. "When he went to the fields today he got into an argument with him again.

"Both men had pistols. Sanford was shot twice. He shot at the negro but I don't believe he hit him."

Lynchings-1937
Side Lights.

Texas.

5853

Lynch Mob Hunts Negro

[illegible]VILLE, Tex., Mar. [illegible]—Mob violence in this state [illegible] knew here when [illegible] or landlords' agents began a lynch-hunt for Archie Fuller, Negro tenant farmer, after severely beating the Negro's brother, Homer, and the latter's wife.

The mobsters [illegible] through pine woods north of Hallsville today in search of the tenant farmer, who is accused of killing Raymond Henderson, 35-year-old farm overseer. The mobsters first brutally attacked Homer Fuller and his wife because they wouldn't "talk" about the killing.

Henderson, following a prevailing landlord practice in the South, went to the Fullers' home yesterday afternoon in an effort to force them to work on a farm where he was overseer. He became angry because the Negro tenant farmers resisted his threats.

beaten because they refused to admit stealing cattle from a white man.

Mob Fulfils Threat

The report also included a threat, alleged to have been made by a deputy sheriff, a member of the mob, promising violent consequences to the two men if they told anyone about the beating.

Claiming that two of the mob stated that they were Texas Rangers, a relative of the men went to Austin, Texas, which is the Ranger headquarters and learned that there were no rangers stationed within 100 miles of the county in which the outrages occurred. He also promised to send a Ranger to the scene of the crime at once.

A few months ago in this vicinity, a white man was fatally wounded while beating a Negro woman, her son, charged and convicted for the man's death was sentenced to the state penitentiary at Richmond, Texas. It was necessary to seek a change of venue on the case because of the hostile feeling on the part of Waller county and Hempstead whites against the Negro defendant.

MOB ATTACKS, ONE DEAD TWO, BADLY BEATEN

Waller County Residents Are Victims of Mob After Reporting Violence

HEMPSTEAD, Texas. — Earnest McGowan, a World war veteran, was shot and fatally wounded last week when he was attacked by a mob of white men after he and another man had testified to authorities concerning a previous attack made upon them by what was believed to have been members of the [illegible]

William Tompkins, a carpenter, and his son were also severely beaten and since the assault neither have been heard from.

According to statements made by the two men, both residents of Waller county, their homes were entered by the mob and they were

LYNCHING THREAT MADE TO MANAGER OF CHICK WEBB

Houston, Texas Cop Riled Over White Man Serving With Colored Orchestra

Houston, Aug. 12—(By John H. Thompson for ANP) [illegible] interview here last night, [illegible] Webb and his orchestra played before a crowd of 2400 white and colored dancers, Frank Herz, white, Charlottesville, Va., road manager for Webb, charged a Houston cop with a threat to lynch him.

Stopped by the cop on a minor traffic violation, Herz stated the officer noted his New York license and asked him what he was doing so far from home. He then told the cop that he was manager for Chick Webb. Herz alleged that the officer then bluntly declared that he "ought to be lynched for traveling with that bunch of [illegible]." He was given a ticket and on going to pay it told the judge of the treatment at the hands of the cop. The judge apologized for the officer and offered to remit the fine, but his offer was refused.

Another member of the orchestra complained of unusual treatment while here. Bardu Ali, baton wielder, drives a $3,000 automobile; he drove it from his lodging place to the hall where he was to play. Noting a parking lot next door, he drove in. He was refsued permission to park by a white employe, who, incidentally gets $12 per week. He claimed the man said "Niggers are not allowed to park here unless they are driving for a white man."

The police department here has been under fire of various agencies for some time. Charges of inefficiency, lack of intelligence, and other charges have been filed. Recommendations for the establishment of a police school have been ignored by city officials.

LABOR LEADER 'TARRED' BY DALLAS MOB

Texans Ired By Film Showing Negroes and Whites In Picket Line

8-22-37

DALLAS. — (ANP) — Soon after he had shown a labor film Monday night in which Negro and white women marched together in a picket line, Herbert Harris, 47, white, Socialist party organizer, was kidnaped by a group of hoodlums who raided the labor meeting, oiled and feathered and dumped him from an automobile on a main street.

'Get Back Up North'

"Get back up North," shouted the abductors.

There were about 20 [illegible] in the mob that invaded the park where the meeting was in progress. They overturned Harris, auto, which carried a projection machine. The audience of 200 scattered as the organizer was rushed into an auto and taken into the country where his outer garments were torn off and and crude oil and feathers splashed over him.

Harris was uninjured and after being returned here, joked and talked with newsmen about the kidnaping as he posed for pictures.

Bristol, Va., Herald-Courier
August 13, 1937

Labor And The South.

There appeared on the first page of this newspaper yesterday a small picture of Herbert Harris of New Haven, Missouri, wearing a coat of tar and feathers. A mob in Dallas, Texas, stripped Harris, tarred and feathered him, and then dumped him from an automobile in a downtown section of the city after he had shown a film pleading the cause of organized labor.

Whether Harris represents the American Federation of Labor or the Committee for Industrial Organization was not explained, nor was there any statement as to who was supposed to have made up the mob. If Harris is a radical labor agitator, and his film was calculated to cause trouble, one can understand the resentment of many people of Dallas. But there could have been no justification for the mob's mistreatment of him.

People of some parts of the South suffer from a cotton-plantation complex handed down from ante-bellum days, when the plantations were worked by Negro slaves. Slaves were property, they were owned by planters and others, and of course were paid no wages. They were housed and fed and clothed by their masters, which is to say they were supported as other "livestock" was supported. And to this day in most of the South colored people are expected to work for less than white people.

Not only that, but the South has remained a low-wage section for many classes of workers, regardless of color. It is a section many of whose employers are as hostile to organized labor as Henry Ford or Tom Girdler. But the South is rapidly becoming industrialized and its workers are becoming wage-conscious, so to speak. They are beginning to demand as good wages as are paid for the same kind of work in other sections, and to insist upon the right to organize for their own protection and advancement.

Southern employers had as well recognize that fact and make up their minds to become reconciled to it. The industrial progress of the South and the bright promise for continued and increasing industrial devolopment is a boast of its newspapers. This section apparently is entering upon an era of great prosperity, and the working classes must have a fair share of the benefits. Those whose prosperity is made possible by their workers must not expect to keep all of the profits. The cotton-plantation regime, and the conditions that obtained under it, are a thing of the past. And the time will soon come when a labor representative, whatever organization he may represent, can visit any part of the South and plead the cause of organized labor without being tarred and feathered.

Lynchings- (Carried Forward.)
States,— Special Information About, Particular.

5512

Anniston, Ala. Star
April 7, 1937

Triple Lynching By Piedmont Ku Klux Prevented Massacre

ONE OF THE MOST interesting tales in the vague history of Piedmont concerns a lynching by the Ku Klux Klan to prevent a Negro insurrection.

James Luke, a carpet-bagger, was located at Piedmont in the guise of a missionary and teacher. In his classes of Negroes, it was alleged that he taught the newly freed slaves to be "uppity" with their former owners. It is further said that he planned an uprising in the summer of 1870.

While the white people were in their churches praying, according to the present version of the plot, the Negroes were to fall upon and massacre them.

One Negro, remaining faithful to the whites, carried the message to the Methodist Church. The warning spread and in a short time the Ku Klux Klan was on its way to nip the uprising before it could get under way. They caught Luke and two of his Negro aides.

The trio was hung Sunday night, July 11, 1870, to a tree that stood for many years as a warning against similar action by carpet-baggers or Negroes. Then the gallows tree was cut down to make way for the Piedmont-Gadsden Road, according to reports.

One member of the Klan that staged the lynching is reported still living at Piedmont.

The story that railroad shops located near Piedmont at place known as Patoma were moved afterward because of the Luke lynching is denied by Miss Alice Craige, teacher at the high school and an authority on Piedmont history.

Shelbyville, Tenn. Times
April 16, 1937

Lynching On Shelbyville Square 45 Years Ago

The Bedford County Times of July 1, 1892, contained a two column article describing the lynching of Wm. Bates in the court yard on Monday before, by a mob that came from the vicinity of Rowesville and from Normandy and Tullahoma that morning. Bates had brutally murdered his wife at their home near Rowesville on Friday before for refusing to shield his father, Scott Bates, then in jail here on the charge of stealing mules in Lincoln county. Mrs. Bates was assailed by her infuriated husband in a clover field near the house, having gone to the garden for vegetables for dinner, and was slashed with wounds about the shoulders, face and neck as she attempted to escape to the house, the frenzied man using a rail to finish the inhuman murder of his wife. Young Bates was brought to Shelbyville and lodged in jail following the verdict of the coroners jury fixing the guilt of murdering his wife on him.

The mob arrived in Shelbyville Monday morning on the train due here between 10 and 11 o'clock and there were a hundred or more of them as they marched directly from the depot to the jail. Sheriff Moore surrendered the prisoner, Will Bates, on demand of the mob, and they marched hurriedly from the jail up the hill to the courthouse, having Scott Bates, Will Bates father, whom the most of the mob were for hanging also. At the west gate to the court yard the men halted, under the "heaven" tree that stood close to the gate and both men had nooses fastened around their necks and were drawn up, a number of citizens protesting against the hanging of the elder Bates, and one of the men cut the rope around his neck as he was drawn up, releasing him and he fell to the ground, and after wrangling a minute or two it was decided that the hanging of young Bates, who alone did the deed of murder, was sufficient expiation for the inhuman deed.

There was great excitement about the square that day and hundreds witnessed the hanging of Bates, though no one of dozens who looked on while the mob did their work could ever be found to testify in court as to the identify of a single participant in the lynching. That long ago and most of those who witnessed the scenes enacted on the occasion have passed beyond this vale of tears.

Lynchings-1937
Total by Years.

5511

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution
January 31, 1937

Lynchings Found Declining

According to the World Almanac 4,681 persons were lynched in the United States between 1882 and 1935. The following table shows a steady decline in the number of lynchings since 1900.

Lynchings in the United States Since 1900.

1900	115	1918	64
1901	130	1919	80
1902	92	1920	60
1903	99	1921	62
1904	83	1922	57
1905	62	1923	33
1906	65	1924	16
1907	60	1925	17
1908	97	1926	30
1909	82	1927	16
1910	76	1928	11
1911	67	1929	10
1912	63	1930	21
1913	52	1931	13
1914	47	1932	8
1915	73	1933	28
1916	54	1934	15
1917	50	1935	20

Drop In U. S. Lynch Death Toll Is Noted

Advertiser

Changed Attitude Given Credit By Tuskegee President

2-27-37

Tabulation Made

Montgomery

Dr. F. D. Patterson Asserts 90 Per Cent Decline Since 1887

By LEROY A. SIMMS

TUSKEGEE, ALA., Feb. 20.—(AP)—A 90 per cent decrease in lynchings in the United States since 1887 was credited today by Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, to "growth in the humanitarian attitude of the American people."

A tabulation of lynchings by decades, from the Institute's department of records and research, listed 1,583 mob victims in the 1887-1896 period, and 181 in the 1927-1936 period.

Each decade since the first revealed a decline in mob action. Lynchings were recorded as 1,030 for the decade beginning in 1897; 670 for that beginning in 1907, and 463 for the 1917-1926 period.

Three Major Factors

Dr. Patterson listed three major factors as contributing to the decline.

The first he gave as the tendency for frontier characteristics in the South to disappear. Lynching, he said, was a special characteristic of the frontier in America, both in the West and in the South.

Second, the breaking down of isolation in the South by increased facilities, such as rural free delivery, more telegraph offices, more telephones in small towns and rural areas, and the advent of the radio and paved roads.

As the third and one of the most important, he gave "increasing agitation within the South against lynchings. This sentiment has expressed itself in the increasing efforts to prevent lynchings."

1914 To 1919

"From 1914 to 1919, the number of persons lynched was much greater than the number of persons prevented from being lynched. From 1920 to the present, the number each year prevented being lynched has greatly exceeded the number lynched."

"These facts and trends seem to indicate unquestionably that there will continue to be a decline in lynchings in the United States. Not only in these statistics but in many other ways is there implied a growth in the humanitarian attitude of the American people.

"This growth, I believe, has paralleled the development of educational and social agencies, all of which bid fair to rid this nation of the barbaric practice of lynching."

A table, from the Institute's department of records and research, lists 231 lynchings in 1892, of which 162 were negroes. Succeeding years show lower totals, with 1932, with eight, and 1936, with nine, as the lows.

Homicides Lead

Of the 4,673 lynchings recorded, homicides were blamed in 1,921 cases; felonious assault in 198; rape in 908; attempted rape in 282; robbery and theft in 227, insult to white persons in 81, and miscellaneous causes or cause unknown in 1,056.

Miscellaneous causes included being a witness, writing insulting notes, improper conduct, insisting on eating in a restaurant when refused service, discussing a lynching, misleading mob, enticing servant away, insisting on voting and gambling.

Mississippi was ranked first for 563 lynchings since records were started in 1882. Georgia ranked second with 515, and Texas third with 488, of which 143 were whites. Following came Louisiana, 389; Alabama, 343; Arkansas, 286; Florida, 272; Tennessee, 247; Kentucky, 209; South Carolina, 158; Oklahoma, 123, and Missouri, 121.

Other States

Other States, listed alphabetically, follow:

Arizona, 29; California, 43; Colorado, 68; Delaware, 1; Idaho, 20; Illinois, 31; Indiana, 47; Iowa, 19; Kansas, 54; Maryland, 29; Michigan, 8; Minnesota, 9; Montana, 84; Nebraska, 57; Nevada, 6; New Jersey, 1; New Mexico, 36; New York, 2; North Carolina, 98; North Dakota, 16; Ohio, 26; Oregon, 21; Pennsylvania, 8.

South Dakota, 27; Utah, 8; Virginia, 99; Washington, 26; West Virginia, 49; Wisconsin, 6; Wyoming, 35.

Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont were listed as having had no lynchings since 1882.